His work in the church was largely of an educational nature, being an ardent supporter of movements to establish institutions of higher learning and one of the founders of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tennessee.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he resigned his bishopric to accept appointment as a major general in the Confederate army.

He first appeared as a conspicuous soldier in 1861 when he occupied and fortified Columbus, Kentucky, the foremost line of Confederate defence on the Mississippi, which was pushed back and taken by Brigadier General U. S. Grant.

After the battle of Chickamauga General Polk was relieved of his command and placed under arrest by General Braxton Bragg on charges of losing the battle through disobedient delay.

Cleared of the charges, in the fall of 1862 he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant general and afterwards commanded one of the corps of the Army of Tennessee under Bragg.

Next he was put in command of the department of Alabama, Mississippi and eastern Lousiana as the successor of General Joseph E. Johnston.

He served with General Johnston in opposing Sherman's march on Atlanta and was killed by a cannon shot June 14, 1864, while reconnoitering on Pine Knob near Marietta, Georgia.

Pacific War Policy, Dieppe Raid Criticized

Opposition Members Cover Plenty of Ground in Discussing $3,890,000,000 War Bill

DEBATE CONTINUES

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 19 — (CP) — With a picture of the Canadian Army strength and organization set before them by Defence Minister Ralston, opposition members in the House of Commons last night questioned the government's policies on the war against Japan and operations in the Dieppe raid.

Howard C. Green (Prog. Con. Vancouver South) said the position of reinforcements for troops overseas was "not as rosy" as Col. Ralston had indicated, and the Minister had failed to give definite assurance there would be sufficient reinforcements to keep all the units of Canada's Army up to fighting strength.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn) reiterated inquiries he made previously about operations at Dieppe and their effectiveness, but said he commended the defence minister in withstanding those who would break the Canadian Army overseas into smaller units.

Capt. G. S. White (Prog. Can., Hastings-Peterboro) said the enemy had obtained valuable information in the Dieppe raid, by capturing late-model tanks and planes for the operation.

Lt.-Col. Arthur Ross (Prog. Con. Souris) said Dieppe had been of more advantage to the Germans than to the Allies.

The debate of army affairs, which is taking place under the resolution to provide for a $3,890,000,000 war appropriation bill, will continue today.

Senate Adopts Motion

The Senate adopted a motion by Senator A. K. Hugessen (Lib. Quebec) that the House view with horror the "barbarous treatment" inflicted by Germany on the oppressed peoples of Europe. It also gave first reading to the interim supply bill and the interim war appropriation bill previously passed by the commons and second and third reading to 10 divorce bills.

Col. Ralston, completing the outline he began last Thursday, estimated the manpower requirements of the armed forces in the present fiscal year as follows: Army 100,000, of whom 75,000 will be for service overseas and 25,000 for home service; Navy, 24,000, and Air Force 53,000—a total of 177,000.

With the number discharged from the forces taken into account, the net drain on the manpower pool would be about 150,000.

The Defence Minister said "this year looks like a year of action and Canadians will be in the thick of it."

He said he was not announcing any new formations. To supply adequate reinforcements and equipment and to maintain proper reserves was the program in brief.

Mr. Green said the government should take steps to see the Canadian Army units had some battle experience before being thrown into the invasion attack.

He wondered whether those, who planned the Dieppe raid deserved much praise. It was not good enough that Canadians should be "thrown away" by the hundreds unless plans had been carefully laid and carried out. The methods used at Dieppe should be examined to see that those who planned it deserved to continue as leaders of Canadian troops overseas.

No Declaration Made

Mr. Green said no declaration had been made on the government's policy on the Pacific war. That policy appeared to be to turn Canada's back on the Pacific war and fight only a holding war.

The Canadian Pacific army had been stripped of general service personnel, and evidently no troops had been sent to Australia to receive battle training.

Canada should give assurance she would fight alongside the other United Nations until Japan was conquered, and prepare the Pacific army for offensive action.

Under the present manpower policy there soon would be more home defence personnel than Can. required, and, eventually, if the army were to be reinforced, home defence men would be needed overseas.

"Why not stop this farce with regard to the use of manpower and make all the men called up available for service anywhere?" asked Mr. Green.

Mr. Douglas said he expected the Minister to hold his officers responsible for every life lost due to negligence, carelessness or stupidity.

Answers Vague is Claim

Unless there were a chain of responsibility through the Minister to the House of Commons, "we will not have responsible government, and we will have merely a military dictatorship."

The Saskatchewan member said he had asked Col. Ralston four questions about Dieppe, and the answers had been "delightfully vague and beautifully evasive."

The Minister had said it was not known whether the results would have been different had there been a preliminary air bombardment of Dieppe.

Col. Ralston interjected that he had said the air bombardment had been considered by senior British and Canadian officers, and he could not give the House the reasons for changes in plans which had occurred.

On another point, Mr. Douglas said the troops landed at high tide and were taken off at low tide, when they had to cross some 400 yards of open beach.

Col. Ralston said the hour of withdrawal was based on the fact the operation was complete.

Mr. Douglas said he had been wrong in a previous statement in saying no tanks got off the beach. Now the information was that three did get off, which was not a large number, and they were not able to effect the objective. Failure to breach the sea-wall and to remove tank obstacles constituted one of the contributing factors to inability to crown the operation with success.

Mr. Douglas said he was satisfied with the Minister's statement that the supply of small arms was as generous as the means of transport would allow.

He assumed the Minister had reports with reference to the light Sten machine gun and on mortars. He understood the number of mortars had been increased since Dieppe, where the efficient use of mortars by the Germans had been reported as "terrifying." They had a heavier weapon with longer range and a better technique than mastered by the Canadians.

Capt. White Critical

Three objectives in the Dieppe raid—to put a six-inch battery out of commission, to demolish a wireless station, and blow up an ammunition dump—could have been attained by bombers with few casualties, said Capt. White.

The enemy captured copies of Dieppe operational orders and as a result "hundreds and hundreds" of Canadian prisoners were shackled. The Germans were given an opportunity to observe invasion tactics and presumably had taken steps to deal with them.

Col Ross said he believed the Canadian Army had been over-expanded and over-organized, probably for political purposes rather than as an active army for operations.

"I am of the opinion that this (Dieppe) operation resulted in the Nazis obtaining more useful information, by the capture of operational orders and the many prisoners they took, than our authorities obtained," said Col. Ross.

Col. Ralston said the men in the forces aggregated only a little more than 700,000, a number smaller than those engaged in agriculture and in munitions work. Land armies were bound to be the final instrument for victory in this war, and the strongest and best armies possible were needed by all the United Nations.

The Canadian Women's Army Corps now had about 10,000 members of whom probably 8,000 had replaced men. Recruits were coming in at the rate of 700 a month and more were needed.

Praises Reserve Army

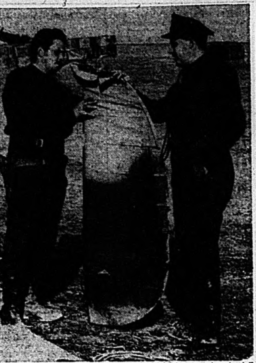
The Minister said the reserve army had a definite place in the defence plans of Canada. It now had a strength of roughly 100,000 men, and recruiting to the active force from the reserve in December, January, February and March averaged more than 700 men a month.

The Minister said the Royal Canadian Army cadets now were about 94,000 strong and were "tremendously keen."

Vocational training programs gave boys of 17 and 18 a "head start" in trades training for the army, and gave instruction which would be useful in civil life as well as in the army.

Col. Ralston said two officers selection appraisal centres had been established at Three Rivers, Que., and Chilliwack, B. C., where officer candidates were under the observation of senior officers.

The first special service force, with both United States and Canadian officers in command, now was at Helena, Mont. it was formed of picked men who are skilled in parachute and marine landings and in mountain and desert warfare and was being trained for special work. The Canadian troops in it included officers and men.



Flying Officer Bill Draper, of 8 Humewood Avenue, Toronto, tells Flight Lieutenant John Clare, Royal Canadian Air Force Public Relations Officer, how he shot down a FW 190 in a head-on attack in North Africa. Both aircraft dived but Flying Officer Draper's Spitfire dived a little sharper than the Hun whose propeller struck the Spit's rudder and shed a blade. This was the second score of the afternoon for this R.C.A.F. pilot serving with an R.A.F. fighter squadron in North Africa. Earlier in the same sortie he shot down another FW 190 with his cannon. — (R.C.A.F. Photo.)

Stories of Heroism Of Canadians In Dieppe Operation

(By The Canadian Press)

New stories of Canadian heroism are told in "combined operations," the story of the Commandos, which outlines in detail the Dieppe operation of August, 1942, and is published today. Based on official reports available to the author, Hilary St. George Saunders, numerous references are made to Canadians who were not included in the list of decorations for meritorious service.

Here are some of them:

Calgary Regiment (Tank)

Lieut. A. B. Patterson (taken prisoner) of Cannington, Ont., commanding a tank, refused to be halted by the tank blocks at the foot of Dieppe's narow streets. He smashed through a house and got into the town, followed by probably two more tanks.

South Saskatchewan Regiment

Pte. Charles E. Sawden (killed) of Vancouver, rushed a pillbox singlehanded and killed its garrison of six when A-company was unable to outflank a road block.

Major John C. MacTavish of Moose Jaw organized an attack on the pillboxes surrounding Les-Quatre-Vents farm, a battalion objective.

Major David A. Orme (taken prisoner) of Weyburn, Sask., together with Lt.-Col. Merritt whose heroism won him the V.C., attacked some machine guns hampering re-embarkation from the beach and silenced their fire.

R.H.L.I.

Capt. A. C. Hill (missing) of Toronto, lead a party which stormed the Casino. After its residence had been quelled, he pressed on into Dieppe with a small party of men. He was followed by two parties, one led by Sgt. G. A. Hickson, who won the D.C.M., and another led by Lieut. L. C Bell (killed) of Toronto They eventually reached the church of St. Remy, but, being unsupported, could go no further.

Capt. J. M. Currie (taken prisoner) of Toronto and Major H. F. Lazier (taken prisoner) of Hamilton were in command of the withdrawal of the R.H.L.I. from the Casino to the seashore. They held the Casino to the last.

Royal Regiment of Canada

Capt. G. G Sinclair (missing) and Lieuts. W. G. Wedd and W. C. Patterson (missing), all of Toronto, are mentioned for their efforts to blow the wire off the top of the seawall on the main beach with bangalore torpedoes. Lieut. Wedd rushed a pillbox, threw a grenade through its fire-slit, which killed all the garrison, and then fell wounded.

R.C.A.M.C.

When medical supplies ran short on the beach and the number of wounded was increasing, many of the wounded, according to Mr. Saunders, owed their lives to the work of Capt. D. W. Clare (missing), Cpl. A. W. Comfort (taken prisoner), of Hamilton, and Hon. Capt. J. W. Foote (taken prisoner) of Port Hope, Ont, Chaplain of the R.H.L.I.

London Letter

By ALLAN NICKELSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, England, May 19. (CP)—It was drizzling on the cobblestones and we sheltered against the Henry VIII gateway of Windsor Castle and chatted of raids and royalty, dentists and dogs, pubs and palaces.

Constable Bob pointed to the sign barring castle visitors as we stopped at the 19-foot-thick gate built by the King whose name it bears. We replied with a smile and the facetious remark that we had come to see the King and Queen. We knew they were there because the Royal Standard was flying. from the round tower inside the grounds.

"They haven't been asking for you", Bob grinned, but before we left we had seen the Queen and Princess Margaret Rose, attended the daily five o'clock service in St. George's Chapel, which is inside the castle walls, and watched the Changing of the Guard.

It was really just a glimpse of the Queen but there was that same smile and graciousness of appearance that took Canada by storm on the royal tour just before the war. It carried me back to a way-station near Brantford, Ont., where, just as the royal train pulled out, a Scotsman put out his hands and cried, "will ye no come back again?"

The reply of the Queen, standing on the back platform of the slowly-moving train, was all but lost in the cheering. But it went something like "be sure I will. My laddie!"

The glimpse, perhaps 40 seconds, came just as Bob finished telling of his "dig-for-victory vegetable garden". Suddenly, he went stiff and his arm shot up to the salute. From outside a sentry box on the other side of the gate, a battle-dressed member of the Grenadier Guards stamped a foot to the pavement and presented arms.

The royal car passed slowly with the queen and princess in the rear seat. It stopped at another gate nearby. The queen, dressed in a light blue coat, said something to the princess as the car was admitted.

• • •

It developed they had visited a gift shop in Windsor to purchase a present or two for Princess Elizabeth.

"You're lucky," Bob said. "You drop into town for a couple of hours and see the queen and the princess. Lots of people NEVER see them. Now you might as well wait and go into the chapel service".

We did, entering through a door where have passed funeral corteges of many sovereigns. The historic decorations included the badges of the kings who built the chapel—Edward IV and Henry VII. In the choir room, high up to the right and left, were the stalls of the Knights of the Garter, over each hanging the Knight's banner, surcoat, helmet and sword. A brass plate at the back of the stall indicated the Knight's name and titles. Some of the plates dated back centuries.

As for Bob, he's a member of the London Metropolitan Police and has been stationed at Windsor Castle for 12 years. He explained that the Metropolitan Police have a detachment in all royal residences.

• • •

He knows every one of the palace staff from scullery maid to governor. He greeted them by name as they passed back and forth through the gate. The sentry stood at ease, never speaking, and moving only to salute passing officers by slapping the butt of his bayonet-mounted rifle.

The guardsmen's own private air raid shelter, looking like a grey steel buoy out of water, stood a few feet away.

"I wouldn't want that job", Bob said. "We can relax a little more than they. Stick around, they'll change the guard shortly".

Bob told of such palace treasures as pieces of arms and armor dating from the 15th to the 18th Century and decorating the walls of the grand staircase in the state apartments; an Italian cabinet which belonged to Charles I and which still contains his nightgown and cap; and, in the guard chamber, the musket ball that ended Lord Nelson's career at Trafalgar in 1805. He spoke of scores of priceless pictures that decorate the various buildings and of a carved chair made from an elm tree that stood in the centre of the British battle line at Waterloo.

Then came the Changing of the Guard. A sergeant and a private marched briskly to within a few steps of the guardsman on duty. The new sentry stepped beside the old one and moved into position as the relieved guardsman marched away with the sergeant.

"That", said Bob, "is all there is to it".

New Guinea Base Of Allies Hit

Allied Headquarters in Australia, May 19 (CP)—Indicating alarm over the Allied ground menace to New Guinea's Huon Gulf, the Japanese have sent 102 planes since Saturday against the little mountain of Wau, nearest Allied supply and air base to the scene of the jungle fighting.

Wau is only 35 miles southwest of Salamaua, important Japanese air and shipping base on the gulf toward which the Allies have been infiltrating from the south since the conquest of the Papuan peninsula. From it over a jungle track move men and supplies to the Mubo area, 12 miles from Salamaua.

Yesterday, 25 bomb-carrying Zeros came over Wau at 15,000 to 18,000 feet, dropped 18 bombs, then swept down through bursts of anti-aircraft fire to machine-gun installations. Today's communique admitted some damage, but there were no casualties.

Other damage was caused Monday by 43 raiders. Last Saturday, 34 planes struck at Wau at the same time that 64 others attacked the Allies' most advanced position at Bobdubi, only five miles from Salamaua.

JUDGE NOT IMPRESSED

Denver, May 19 (AP)—William E. Bolton, 32, was charged in police court with driving an automobile which hit two parked cars and several filling station pumps. "My doctor told me to drink a beef-iron-wine mixture to cure a nervous disorder. I guess I got the formula little too strong," explained Bolton. "Thirty days and $20 fine," said the Judge.

BICYCLES ARE PRECIOUS TOO, LOOK AFTER YOURS

A C.C.M. bicycle, always a possession of which to be proud, may now be your precious and indispensable means of transportation. Look after it just as you do other possessions war has taught us to treasure.

1. Keep the front hub bearings properly adjusted so that the wheel will revolve freely. Oil frequently with machine oil.
2. Oil the pedals frequently.
3. Keep the brake cleaned, lubricated and adjusted so it will function quickly and smoothly. This should be done by your bicycle dealer.
4. Oil and keep freely adjusted your steering column.
5. Use special chain lubricant to keep this mass of moving parts in easy-running form.
6. Oil frequently the main hanger, to which the pedal cranks are attached, as this is the power plant of the bicycle.
7. Always keep your tires inflated hard. Avoid wheel skidding and hitting curbs and stones. Check wheel alignment frequently to save tire wear.
8. The above servicing can be done best by your experienced C.C.M. dealer who has the proper lubricants and tools for the job.

Give your bicycle this care or better still, take it now to your C.C.M. dealer for a check-up and for a thorough cleaning, and it will last much longer and give you more enjoyable and easier riding.

If you have an inactive bicycle in your home, get it out and sell it to your C.C.M. dealer. He will give you a good price for it and then sell it to a war worker or other qualified purchaser.

Bicycle Purchase Application form may be filled in at any bicycle dealer's store.

GLOVER—KEAYS

In the vestry of Bridge St. Church, Helen Rhoda Keays, Campbellton, N.B., became the bride of John Robert Glover, Point La Nim, N.B., on May 18th with Dr. J. Semple as the officiating clergyman.

PHILLIPS—URCH

On May 15th, in the vestry of Bridge St. Church, Dr. J. Semple united in marriage Bernice Frances Urch, Cannifton, and Gordon Reginald Phillips, Ameliasburg. They were attended by Thos. S. Leaven and Olive Irene Urch.

MORTON—HOWARD

Stirling—A quiet but pretty wedding took place in Victoria, British Columbia, on Saturday, April 24th, when Dorothy Marie Howard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Freeland, of Calgary, became the bride of Sgt. Donald H. Morton, No. 31 Reconnaissance, son of Mrs. Hugh Morton and the late Mr. Morton, of Stirling, Ont.

NIVEN—KENNEDY

Bridge St. Church was the scene of a quiet wedding on Thursday evening last at 8.30 when Dr. James Semple united in marriage Miss Greta Ellen Kennedy and LAC. David G. Niven. The bride was charming in a heavenly blue crepe suit with a becoming broad-brimmed hat of navy felt and bouquet of Talisman roses and ferns. Their attendants were Mrs. J. P. Smith, Saskatoon and Sgt. Spencer, Belleville. Following a delightful reception the happy couple left on a short honeymoon to Toronto. Both the young people's homes are in New Brunswick. The groom is at present stationed at No. 5 I.T.S.

YOUMANS—McFAUL

Marmora — The marriage took place in St. Paul's Church, Marmora, at 2 p.m., on Monday of Lavina Margaret McFaul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McFaul, Marmora Township and Corporal Eleazar Edward Youmans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Youmans, Belmont Township. Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell performed the ceremony. The contracting parties were attended by Lorraine McFaul, sister of the bride and Percy C. Downs of Trenton.

McDONALD—PROCTOR

On Saturday evening, May 15th, at the United Church parsonage, Picton, by the Rev. J. F. Lane, the wedding was solemnized between Bruce Rolfe McDonald, son of Mrs. Rowena McDonald and the late Clare McDonald, and Miss Doris Audrey Proctor, L.A.W., R.C.A.F., (W.D.), Trenton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Proctor.

The bride was attended by Miss Annetta McDonald and the groom by Mr. Eddie Everall. The bride wore a blue gown and her accessories were black. The groom is in the navy and wore his navy uniform. The young couple will spend a few days in Wellington.

FOWLER—McUEN

St. Paul's Anglican Church, Kingston, was the scene of a pretty spring wedding at 3 p.m. Monday afternoon, May 17th, when the Rev. E. Teskey united in marriage Gertrude Mae McUen, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McUen, Kingston, and Sgt. Roy E. Fowler, Mountain View, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fowler, Birks Falls, Ont. Miss Grace Taft played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her eldest brother, Mr. William McUen, wore a lovely frock of tropical blue mousseline de sole over taffeta, a French model hat of matching blue with shoulder-length veil and white accessories. She wore the groom's gift, a two strand string of pearls, and carried an arm bouquet of pale pink Butterfly roses, tied with blue ribbon.

The bride was attended by her niece, Miss Audrey McUen, as bridesmaid, wearing a dainty frock of pale pink sheer over taffeta, a small French model matching hat with shoulder-length veil and white accessories. She carried a colonial bouquet tied with blue ribbon. Flt. Sgt. Arthur MacDonald, of Mountain View, was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception and buffet luncheon was held at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Jamieson. Mrs. Jamieson received the guests wearing a handsome navy blue ensemble with navy accessories and a shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses. The table was effectively arranged in pink and white and centred with the wedding cake, while spring flowers and ferns adorned the house.

Later the bride and groom left for Birks Falls, the bride travelling in a smart brown suit with yellow and brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Upon their return they will reside at 55 Ridley Avenue in Belleville.

HARNDEN—DAW

The Free Methodist Church, Kingston, was the setting for an interesting spring wedding at 5 p.m., Friday afternoon, May 14, when Joanna Marjorie, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Daw, Kingston, was united in marriage to L. Cpl. Kenneth Lyle Harnden, R.C.C.S., Debert, N.S., son of Mrs. E. McWade, Niagara Falls, Ont., and the late W. Harnden.

The Rev. F. A. Daw, the bride's father, performed the ceremony. During the signing of the register Miss Dorothy W. Elkins and Miss Wilma Clark sang two delightful duets, "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" and "O Perfect Love."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Alfred Daw, wore a lovely floor-length gown of white satin with a finger-tip veil and carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marion Daw, as bridesmaid, wearing an effective floor-length gown of pink sheer and carrying a bouquet of deep pink carnations.

Mr. Eldon Harnden, of Niagara Falls, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Milbourne Silver of Cataraqui and Glenn Snider of Harrowsmith.

Following the ceremony a reception and buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Daw received the guests wearing a pretty gown of light blue crepe and Mrs. McWade of Niagara Falls, mother of the groom, who also received, wore a handsome gown of navy blue crepe.

Mrs. G. Goodberry, Miss Iona Gowdy and Miss Rita Goodberry served the guests.

Out-of-town guests present included Mrs. E. McWade and Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Harnden, Niagara Falls, Ont.; Mrs. W. H. Richmyre, Chesterville; Mrs. R. Winters, Prescott; Mr. and Mrs. H. Daw and son, Alfred, Cardinal; Mrs. B. Snider and daughter, Nadene, Harrowsmith; Mr. and Mrs. E. Card and daughter, Jennoe, Verona and Mr. and Mrs. D. MacGregor, Marmora.

NOTHING can efface the enduring popularity of polka dotted fabrics for Summer wear. As attuned to Spring as a flowered hat or a tailored suit is this frock of white dotted Celanese crepe. The straight silhouette is softened by ruchings placed at the hemline and also at the breast pockets. The wonderfully flattering line on the skirt is achieved by means of tucks.

Largest Class Of Nurses Will Be Graduated

Thursday will be a big day in the life of 23 nurses at the Belleville General Hospital. That evening, what is claimed to be the largest class ever to graduate from the local institution, will receive their nursing diplomas and the lucky ones, special prizes and medals at graduation exercises to be held at the Collegiate auditorium.

Guest speaker at the graduating exercises will be Rev. W. J. (Bill) Johnston, D.D., minister of Eglinton United Church, Toronto, while invocation will be given by Rev. Ralph E. Spencer, of Tabernacle United Church with Rev. G. G. Wright, of Christ Church saying the benediction.

Members of the Women's Christian Association, who own the Belleville General Hospital, are expected to take part in the graduation ceremonies, while presentation of the gold and silver medals and other prizes will be made by Dr. E. A. MacDonald, president of the medical staff. Although it will be graduation night for the girls, many of them will continue on at the hospital for various periods, putting in lost time.

Mr. Johnston, who will speak to the graduating class, is widely travelled and is an outstanding lecturer. He has had many years' experience as a minister in Canada and is certain to have an inspiring message for the nursing class. The public is cordially invited to attend the exercises.

IF YOU LIKE softness in a suit then you'll like a new softly tailored model in black bengaline. The jacket is cut for waist slimness and is hip-length. A foamy frill is brought out from under the tailored revers and there is an upstanding gilet with lacy borders and a bright pink bow tie.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

The Tyendinaga East Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. C. J. Akey May 14, for their monthly meeting. There were several members and visitors present. As the treasurer, Mrs. F. Husband had resigned, Mrs. P. Kimmerley was elected. Mrs. R. Tucker was appointed delegate to the annual meeting May 20, at Melrose Hall. It was decided to have a card shower for two sick friends, Mrs. A. Waddingham and Mrs. J. Barnes. Mrs. R. Tucker had charge of the program, which consisted of an interesting talk on "Happiness" by Mrs. Harrison, the district president; current events prepared by Ellene Stafford and read by Mrs. P. Kimmerley; community singing with Mrs. Harrison accompanist; readings by Mrs. Delbert Harvey, Misses Irene and Geraldine Mowers. Mrs. R. Tucker conducted two contests, the prizes being won by Geraldine Mowers and Mrs. Harrison. Mrs. Akey thanked Mrs. Harrison for her splendid talk. The meeting was brought to a close with the National Anthem, after which a dainty lunch was served. Mrs. M. Schammerhorn moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Akey for the use of her home.

Fashion Flashes

SOMETHING ELSE in the way of a topper for Spring is a boxy, knee-length model of navy blue dyed mole made with notched revers, slit pockets and double-breasted fastening.

FRESH LOOKING for house wear is the checked negligee or hostess gown. A nice model is in black and white checked taffeta, a wrap-around model with self fabric ruffles outlining the neckline, the sleeves, the pockets.

ONE WAY to use those little caps and berets that seem to accumulate in most wardrobes is to dress them up with flowers. A clump of red carnations will give a new look to a navy blue beret.

ALL SET for Spring and on with a well tailored silk suit. A smart costume is in brown silk with a clover cluster print, the jacket fastened with green plastic clover buttons. Worn as a two-piece suit dress or as a suit with a green chiffon blouse printed in brown.

EXPENSIVE ABSENT MINDEDNESS

Richmond, Cal., May 19 (AP)—The cost of food has really skyrocketed for William Ashe. He ate a piece of pie, strolled over to the cashier's counter and pulled out a $71 roll of bills. Peeling off one dollar, he tossed the rest away and carefully put his paper napkin into his pocket. He discovered the error when he tried to deposit the napkin at his bank. The money is still missing.

BOMBERS RANGE OVER 1,000 MILES FROM BASE TO ATTACK JAPS

Washington, May 18 —(AP)— United States army heavy bombers, ranging more than 1,000 miles from their base, attacked Japanese installations on Wake Island Saturday, the navy reported today. Of 22 Japanese fighters engaged by the attackers two were destroyed and one probably destroyed.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mother May Give Her Daughter in Marriage at Formal Ceremony

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

Like so many other girls I am planning a "furlough wedding," and one question is bothering me very much. My father is dead, and I would like to have my mother give me in marriage. I have never seen this done, but it seems to me that I remember reading in your column some time ago that it is proper for the bride's mother when the clergyman asks the question "Who giveth this woman to be married?", to rise and go forward to reply "I do." This is what I would like to have done, if you tell me it is correct.

If this is proper, should I walk down the aisle alone? Or would it be better for me to ask my uncle, my father's brother, to walk down the aisle with me and to give me in marriage?

Janette

Yes, it is proper, and a beautiful plan, too, I think, for you to have your mother give you in mariage. I suggest that you ask your uncle to walk down the aisle with you or you may, of course, walk alone, if you prefer. Then, at the clergyman's question, your mother rises from her seat at the end of the first pew on the left. You turn toward your mother, give her your right hand, and she puts your hand into the clergyman's hand, replying, or signifying her reply, "I do." Then your mother returns to her seat in the first pew.

What to do With Present

1. I have received an invitation to a formal wedding and reception to be held next month in a city three hours by train from my home. Knowing that I was to be invited, I bought the wedding present some time ago. But I don't know whether I should send it or take it with me when I go to the wedding. If you tell me I should take it with me, when should I give it to the bride?

2. Also, at the reception, what should I say to the bride's mother and dad? Do I congratulate them too?

N. E.

1. By all means send the wedding present at once...addressed to the bride-to-be at her house address. I suggest that you take it to the store where you bought it, if this is possible, and have them pack it and send it. Most stores send wedding present wrapped festively. Take your card or note to be enclosed.

A very important reason for sending wedding presents as soon as possible before the wedding date is so that the bride-to-be may have her thank-you notes written before she starts on her wedding trip. And a very important reason for not taking your present with you to the wedding is the answer to your other question...that the bride will naturally be so busy at her formal wedding reception that it won't be convenient for her to receive and take care of belated wedding presents.

2. No, you don't congratulate the bride's mother and father. As they greet you in the receiving-line, make some gracious remarks about what a "beautiful wedding" it was, what a "lovely bride" their daughter is, and whatever other words of courtesy and appreciation you have time to say.

Courtesy Tip

A pest is the hostess who insists on having her guests play games she particularly likes and so thinks they should like. A joy is the hostess who senses what games some guests like and to provide alternative, and who has the understanding and the grace to let the guests who hate games, "just talk" or form a group for singing or dancing or whatever they would find vastly more enjoyable than playing games.

HP RATION-GRAM

Toasted Smørrebrød

The Danes call them "SMØRREBRØD". We'd just call them "sandwiches". But here is a NEW ration-time sandwich that's delicious.

Melt 1 tablespoon shortening in a double boiler. Add 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 tablespoon flour, ¼ teaspoon of salt and blend well. Stir in ½ cup of milk and cook over hot water until thick, stirring constantly. Add 1 tablespoon H.P. Sauce and 1 chopped, hard-cooked egg, also ½ pound grated Canadian cheese and 1 tablespoon minced onion. Spread on open sandwiches and toast under a broiler.

Known the world over, H.P.—that fine old English type sauce—makes ordinary food good and good food better. Serve H.P. with meats, fish, fowl, stews and salads.

Men in the armed services are buying large quantities of Pepsodent. Naturally they come first—even if the rest of us have to use Pepsodent more sparingly for a while. If you help save enough for others ... there will be enough for you.

The biggest number of civilian users in history want Pepsodent, too. But wartime restrictions limit the amount of Pepsodent we can make—so there's a temporary shortage. If you can't get Pepsodent right away—don't blame your druggist. Try again in a few days.

MEASURE out only as much Pepsodent Paste as you need—about ¾ inch is enough. Squeeze end or roll tube from bottom. Save Pepsodent from washing down the drain by moistening brush before applying paste.

DENTAL science knows no more effective, safe ingredients than those in Pepsodent. They are so safe, so effective, in fact, that only a little Pepsodent is needed to make your smile far brighter.

COMMANDO-TYPE RAID IN WEST BURMA SUCCESS

BAYONET BATTLE

New Delhi, May 18. (CP)—British troops made a successful commando-type raid on a jetty at the Japanese-occupied Port of Maungdaw in Western Burma Sunday night and inflicted casualties on the enemy in fierce hand-to-hand fighting, a British communique announced today.

The raid was carried out by two small detachments, which effected a landing despite bitter Japanese resistance, the bulletin said.

A force of twenty Japanese was said to have charged one of the detachments at bayonet point, and in the resulting struggle at close quarters all but two of the enemy were reported killed. British casualties were listed as two killed.

The British Command announced last week a withdrawal from Maungdaw to meet a Japanese infiltration threat.

Attack Near Akyab

Yesterday, the communique said, R.A.F. bombers continued their attack on Japanese positions in Western Burma by attacking Japanese radoi installations near Akyab. Other Blenheims were reported to have bombed the village of Gudanyin.

Hurricane fighters shot up enemy transportation on the Mayu River, sinking three barges and four supply sampans.

(Imperial Japanese headquarters said that Japanese troops had occupied Maungdaw, according to a Tokyo broadcast recorded by The Associated Press.

(The communique claimed the Japanese had buried 6,404 enemy dead on the Arakan front from the latter part of December to May 10, had destroyed 552 planes, and had taken 574 prisoners.

(These Japanese figures were without confirmation.)

Russians Repulse German Efforts To Regain Ground

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, May 18 — (AP) — The Kuban front flared into action again today when German troops stole through the forested hills and sprang upon the Russians in a violent effort to regain important positions lost weeks ago.

Latest Russian reports said that German infantry which attacked several times supported by tanks, planes and artillery, was thrown back with heavy losses. The German counter-attacks are aimed at driving the Russians back from the inner positions of the Black Sea port of Novorossisk.

From the figures mentioned in dispatches it seemed obvious that the Kuban activity is hardly the prelude to the expected German summer offensive, but it is the most vivid action on the long Russian front in several days.

The exact extent of German losses in the new Kuban drive was not stated, but 200 were known to have been killed and several tanks were destroyed.

Sharp fighting also was in progress at Lisichansk on the Donets River front where recent tank and infantry engagements gave way to artillery duels. The big German guns were firing almost non-stop in an effort to prevent the Russians from consolidating newly-occupied positions on the west bank of the river below Kharkov.

Three hundred Germans were reported killed or wounded when an infantry battalion and six tanks butted against the Russians on the front northwest of Moscow.

In air attacks, the Nazis lost 27 planes during a two-day raid on the Schigry district between Kursk and Voronezh, northeast of Kharkov, it was reported. Military observers consider the attacks may indicate a possible point where the Germans intend to loose an offensive.

(A German broadcast heard by Reuters in London said the Russians were moving large striking forces into position in the Kuban, near Leningrad and southwest of Moscow.)

Provost Marshal Wins Appeal

London, May 18—(CP) — Maj.-Gen. Sir Percy Laurie, Provost Marshal General of England and a former Lord Mayor of London, ended up two pounds to the good today on his appeal from a fine and costs of 585 pounds imposed upon him April 3 for alleged ration book offences.

The Appeals Committee in London sessions quashed the earlier court conviction on the charge that he had supplied false information. The committee wiped out 85 pounds in fines and costs and awarded him 52 pounds costs. Penalties of 250 pounds each in two other counts were reduced to 25 pounds each.

Gen. Laurie was suspended from his post pending the appeal.

Frequent Rains Reduce Prospects Of Increased Grain Production

Prospects of an increased grain production this season are being substantially lessened with each passing day that farmers are kept off their rain soaked fields according to a consensus of district agriculturists.

With less than one week to go before May 24th., generally considered the latest date which oats or barley can be sown with assurance of reaching maturity, a great majority of farmers in the Bay of Quinte district have yet not had their seed drills out of the barn.

Intermittent heavy rains have kept farmers off their low-lying land while only on high land have seeding operations shown any progress. In the Shannonville and Melrose districts only in isolated cases have farmers done any seeding, while the same claim is made in other district areas. Low-lying fields which appeared ready for the cultivator two weeks ago are again lying under water as the result of heavy rains during the past week.

Extremely Late Season

In the memory of some of the oldest farmers in the district seeding has never been as late as this year. One farmer was heard to say he could not remember within the past fifty years of being held up in a manner such as this season.

With May 24th. only a few days away farmers in many cases have given up hope their fields will be dry in time to sow oats or barley. This will seriously lessen the amount of hard grains to be threshed next autumn as buckwheat is generally not considered a sure crop.

Hay Looks Good

Hay crops in general are looking good and prospects are for a bumper crop, but hogs and cattle cannot be fattened without a certain quantity of grain. First cut alfalfa hay will be ready for the mower before seeding operations are completed, according to farmers.

Heavy rains are also affecting production in another manner, it is stated. Pasture fields now showing a lush growth of green feed are still like a quagmire underneath and cattle cannot be turned out for fear of being mired. This means cattle must still be barn-fed and this has an adverse effect on cheese production as many farmers have not the grain for adequate stable feeding to keep up milk production.

Marmora and Deloro Dis. Has Fine Record in Number Blood Donors

Marmora — Nineteen blood donors made up the sixth semi-monthly contingent which left for Belleville. Blood Donors Clinic on Sunday. This number brought the total donations made from the Marmora and Deloro district up to 123. Fourteen donors having made a second donation, the number of different donors has reached the total of 109. Since the community has a poulation of approximately 1300 it follows that one person out of every twelve, including men, women and children, have already made a donation. There have been 85 men and 24 women donors. Names of prospective donors in this district are being submitted to Wally Hilton, who is in charge of local arangements, F. R. Wells, W. Brown, R. E. Neal and W. J. Cottrell. The bus leaves the Memorial Hall on alternate Sundays at 9 a.m. and no charge is made for transportation. It is hoped that eventually one out of every five of the population will have come forward to assist in this humanitarian cause.

Germany Promises To Assist Italy

London, May 18 — (CP) — Germany officially recognized the gravity of Italy's position today with assurances to her invasion-conscious junior partner that she would not be deserted and left to fight alone.

The campaign of reassurance, obviously intended to bolster weakened Italian morale, disclosed in dispatches from Berne which quoted Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz, German foreign office organ, as saying the European southern front would be defended jointly. It came as an answer to speculation in the London press that Italy, her usefulness to Hitler exhausted, was about to be deserted and left to her fate.

But even as the Axis prepared the Italian populace to meet the threat of invasion London observers speculated that Italy may be knocked from the war quickly by a minimum of force and a maximum of psychology.

Evidence of the psychology campaign was seen in the slow advance of bombing raids toward Rome and R.A.F. flights over the Eternal City itself, designed to impress Mussolini and his people with the fact that the capital is highly vulnerable.

Sicily might be stormed by Allied land and air forces from Africa as a show of strength and to secure the Sicilian Channel, these observers speculated. Then an ultimatum could be delivered to Mussolini to surrender the Italian peninsula or have it pounded to pieces and then occupied forcibly.

Portfolio for Campbell When He Returns If He Desires It

Toronto, May 18. (CP) —There's a place waiting in Premier Nixon's new Ontario government for Lt.-Col. Colin Campbell, who left politics to go overseas with the Royal Canadian Engineers, if Col. Campbell wants to rejoin on his return from overseas, Mr. Nixon said today.

Recalling that Mr. Campbell, then Minister of Public Works, has resigned from the government to join the army, Mr. Nixon said "My plan is that when he comes back if he wants to come back into the government every possible thing will be done to facilitate it".

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE

Second Compulsory Employment Transfer Order

Notice to Certain Employers and Employees

Notice is hereby given that men employed in certain specified lines of civilian employment, who are in age and marital classes already designated under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, must report for interview not later than June 15th, 1943, to an Employment and Selective Service Office.

A. Objective:

This Second Order makes available for essential employments the services of men in age and marital classes designated as callable for Military Training under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, who are presently employed in the non-essential employments now specified.

B. EMPLOYMENTS COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

(1) Any occupation in or associated with retail stores; (2) any occupation in or associated with the manufacturing of feathers, plumes and artificial flowers; chewing gum; wine; lace goods; greeting cards; jewelry; (3) any occupation in or associated with distilling alcohol for beverage; (4) any occupation in or associated with the factory production of statuary and art goods; (5) any occupation in the operation of ice cream parlours and soda fountains; (6) any of the following occupations: bus boys; charmen and cleaners; custom furriers; dancing teachers; dish washers; doormen and starters; greens keepers; grounds keepers; porters (other than in railway train service); private chauffeurs.

C. AGE AND MARITAL CLASSES OF MEN COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

(a) Every man born in any year from 1917 to 1924 (inclusive) who has reached age 19.

(b) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, at July 15th, 1940, was: (i) unmarried; or (ii) divorced or judicially separated; or (iii) a widower without child or children.

(c) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who has, since July 15, 1940, become a widower without child or children now living.

(d) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, since July 15, 1940, has been divorced or judicially separated.

D. Procedure to be Followed:

All men as defined above must report to an Employment and Selective Service Office not later than June 15th, 1943. Men resident outside a city or town having an Employment and Selective Service Office, who are too far removed to call personally, may write to the nearest office in the first instance, and await further directions.

E. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEES:

When directed to accept employment, subsequent to the interview referred to, men described in Paragraphs B and C above are required by the Regulations to follow the direction given.

F. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYERS:

It will be illegal for an employer to retain in his employ after June 15th, 1943, any men referred to in Paragraph C above, at any of the employments set forth in Paragraph B above, unless a special permit has been obtained from a National Selective Service Officer, permitting such action.

G. Transportation:

Special provisions will be made for the transportation of men moved to work at a new place of residence.

H. Appeals:

If directed to transfer to employment subsequent to interview, a man may, if he objects, enter appeal with a Court of Referees, within 7 days of receiving such direction.

I. Penalties in Case of Employers:

Penalties are provided for any employer who retains in, or takes into, his employ after June 15th, 1943, any man covered by the Order, except under special permit.

J. Penalties in Case of Employees:

Penalties are provided for failure on the part of any employed man affected, to register under this Order, or to follow a subsequent direction to employment, and in addition to other penalties, refusal to comply renders a man liable to compulsory labour service in an Alternative Service Work Camp.

K. Special Request to Employers:

Each employer with three or more men covered by this Order in his employ is requested to co-operate by getting in touch with the Employment and Selective Service Office, to arrange a time for the interviews of his employees.

L. Authority:

This Order is issued under authority conferred on the Minister of Labour by National Selective Service Civilian Regulations (P.C. 246 of January 19th, 1943, and amending Orders in Council).

M. This Second Order is Additional to First Order:

Employments listed in Paragraph B above, declared non-essential in this Second Order, are additional to the non-essential employments contained in the First Order. The First Order, issued May 4th, 1943, required compliance by May 19th on the part of employees designated under Mobilization Regulations, and also of their employers, in the following lines of work:—

(1) taverns or liquor, wine and beer stores; (2) retail sale of candy, confectionery, tobacco, books, stationery, news; (3) barber shops and beauty parlours; (4) retail and wholesale florists; (5) service stations (gasoline-filling stations); (6) retail sale of motor vehicles or accessories; (7) retail sale of sporting goods or musical instruments; (8) waiter, taxi driver, elevator operator, hotel bell boy, domestic servant; (9) any occupation in or directly associated with entertainment including but not restricted to theatres, film agencies, motion picture companies, clubs, bowling alleys, pool rooms; (10) any occupation in or directly associated with dyeing, cleaning, and pressing (not including laundry work); baths; guide service; shoe shining.

Dodgers Leading National League But Cards Probably Best Team Experts Declare

St. Louis Beats Brooklyn to Even Series but Gain No Ground

PHILLIES WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

A thumbnail description of the National League goings-on can be given in one paragraph—the leaders are Brooklyn Dodgers, the best team probably is St. Louis Cardinals, the most surprising is Boston Braves and the most publicized, Philadelphia Phillies.

If anybody wants to extend this survey to a call-over of the entire field, we might add that Cincinnati Reds are a first division team still having growing pains, Pittsburgh is running true to form, New York are groggy and Chicago Cubs are the biggest disappointment.

Cardinals came surging back at Brooklyn yesterday to retailiate for the 1-0 loss of their series opener by overpowering the Dodgers 7-1.

The tussle between the two rivals for the National League Pennant was entirely one-sided. The Redbirds raided three Brooklyn pitchers for 11 hits, half a dozen being divided equally between Walker Cooper and Stan Musial, while two southpaws, Ernie White and Harry Brecheen, smothered the Dodgers on three hits. The game was in the fifth inning before the Dodgers ever got a man to first base.

It was entirely a top-flight baseball display of the Cardinals, who have two more games to go in their present series with the Dodgers. Manager Billy Southworth chose another lefthander, Max Lanier, to face the Dodgers today with Lefty Max Macon taking the mound for Brooklyn.

Unable to Gain Ground

Although the Cardinals won impressively at Brooklyn, they were unable to regain second place in the standings because the bumptious Braves battered Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0. Al Javery pitched five-hit ball to shade R. Sewell, even though the latter allowed only five safeties in absorbing his first defeat of the season. The tide of victory was a pair of home runs by rookie Charley Workman and Johnny McCarthy, each with a man on base, for all of Boston's runs.

The Phillies pounced on Chicago Cubs 5-4 in a night game viewed by 20,820 fans for their third straight success and eighth in 12 games. Si Johnson was tight in the pinches, although allowing 11 hits to his teammates six, and Babe Dahlgren batted in three runs. In addition Ron Northey hit a homer, although he later slipped in right field and cut his knee so badly he may be out of action a week.

The victory raised the Phillies into a tie with Cincinnati for fourth place and also sent the Cubs staggering to their seventh straight loss.

The Reds nipped New York Giants again 3-1 in 10 innings with a pair of errors by Manager Mel Ott and Dick Bartell of the Giants contributing to Cincinnati's two deciding runs in the overtime frame.

For the second successive day all American League clubs were kept idle by weather conditions.

HARTNETT SORRY TO LOSE REYES

Manager States the Deal Cost Jersey City Club $75,000

Toronto, May 19—(CP)—Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett says his Jersey City Giants were nicked for "mucho pesos" — $75,000 to be exact —when New York Giants recalled Cuban infielder Napoleon Reyes from their International League farm club.

"I call it the $75,000 deal," said Hartnett, now in his freshman year as Jersey City manager. "I lose a $50,000 ball player and a $25,000 interpreter."

Reyes carried an English-Spanish dictionary around with him, Hartnett explained, and has been teaching signals to catcher Andres Fleitas, another Cuban, who joined the Little Giants this spring.

"It took Fleitas three weeks to learn our signals with Reyes working that Spanish dictionary overtime," Hartnett said. "So when Reyes is heading for the train to New York I say: 'Look, Nap, leave that dictionary behind, I'll need it with Fleitas.' "

"STEWED" PIGEONS

Glassboro, N.J., May 19 (AP) — Pigeons may be stewed in more ways than one, reports Edward John, President of the borough council. Several birds picked up after careening into chimneys and the sides of houses smelled strongly of liquor, he said. Police investigated a suggestion that they had been feeding on mash from a secret still.

TRENTON ROTARY TO HOLD ATHLETIC MEET SATURDAY

Held in connection with their "Youths' Service Week," the Trenton Rotary Club will hold its annual track and field meet for school-age boys and girls on Saturday afternoon. Invitations for Belleville's youthful athletes to compete were received through J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here and who is in possession of entry blanks to be filled out by aspiring school-age competitors, both girls and boys. Further information pertaining to the meet can be obtained from the Y. M. C. A.

Two groups, junior and intermediate of both boys and girls, will be included on the Trenton Rotary athletic meet. Junior groups will take in boys and girls 15 years and under, while the intermediate group will permit boys and girls 17 years and under competition.

The conventional track and field events will be featured in the form of the various track events from the 50 yard dash to the half mile run along with such field events as are necessary in the juvenile bracket.

Valuable trophies are given by the Trenton Rotary Club to the champion athletes in all classes, while replicas are presented to be the permanent possessions of the winners. Contesting youthful athletes must be attested by their school teachers. Entry forms are now available at the Belleville "Y".

GABBY HARTNETT UNABLE TO SMILE SO FAR THIS YEAR

Jersey City Giants Not Playing Better Than .500 Baseball

3 GOOD HURLERS

Gabby Hartnett, manager of Jersey City Giants in the International League, hasn't had many excuses this year to unveil that famous grin of his.

His club has staggered along at a pace below the .500 mark most of the season, the weatherman hasn't treated the Little Giants too kindly, the parent New York Giants have just called up one of his better hitters and today the weakened nine tangles with league leading Toronto Maple Leafs in a doubleheader.

Only when Hartnett takes a glimpse at his "big three" moundsmen does he give an inkling that he can smile at all.

Hugh East, Bill Voiselle and Crip Polli have given the club the little success it has enjoyed this season and it is likely that at least one of them will start today as the Giants get a double chance to cut down the Leafs' lead. The trio has won nine of the team's 10 victories.

The schedule gave the two teams a rest yesterday but the weather was the reason for the lay-off endured by Baltimore at Rochester and Syracuse at Buffalo. Montreal trimmed Newark, 7-4, in the day's only game.

Jack Graham's sixth inning homer with two mates on the base paths gave the Royals their deciding margin. Royals quickly built up a 3-0 advantage in the first three frames, lost it when the Bears registered four times in the fourth. A pair of walks and Dixie Howell's hit tied it up in the fifth and set the stage for Graham.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Judge, to Irishman charged with petty offense: "Have you anybody here who can vouch for your character?"

Irishman; "Yes, your honor; the Sheriff there can."

Sheriff: "Why, I do not even know the man!"

Irishman: "Observe, your honor, that I've lived twelve years in the county and the Sheriff doesn't even know me."

Softball Simmers

There's bound to be a scurry for players in the men's softball realm of this community before the regular schedule sends the seven affiliated squads on their way in about a week's time.

With seven clubs in the fold and assuming a double schedule is adopted by the league executive, it means a total of 42 games will be scheduled before even the resemblance of play-offs can be discussed. With the Exhibition Park diamond little less than a quagmire, it is doubtful if the league will get under way much before the first of June. Facing a 42-game schedule and presuming four games are played weekly this means eleven weeks, or nearly three months of softball before play-offs can be so much as discussed. And that's a lotta softball, taking into consideration the girls adopted a 30-game schedule also.

Matter of Play-offs

Incidentally the question of play-offs in the men's Softball League was not discussed at the annual meeting but no doubt the league executive will propose the same system as employed in other years.

With seven teams in the fold no less than four should be included in the post-schedule play-off. In other years it has been the softball practice to have the first-place club meet the fourth-placed team in a best-in-three series, while the second and third-placed teams battle it out in a similar series. At the conclusion of these semi-final rounds the ultimate wniners then meet in a best-in-five series for the Bank of Commerce Trophy, the league championship and the right to enter the O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Incidentally Parks Board officials promised the softballers that the Exhibition Park diamond would be reconditioned, rolled and in perfect playing condition as soon as possible.

Juniors Look Strong

Red Townsend, coach of the Army and Navy Juniors, claims he has the nucleus of the strongest junior softball team in many years. For the past fortnight the Vets' junior squad has been holding tri-weekly practices at the Collegiate campus with between 20 and 25 ambitious teen-aged lads battling tenaciously for positions.

"With so many sparkling players trying out for nearly every position our junior team will be tough to beat even in the city league where the rest are of intermediate quality," predicted Coach Townsend after watching his proteges practice Monday night.

Around the Compass

When the rasslers take over at the Hume Arena tonight, muscle benders from all points of the compass will centre their activities at the local palace de sport. For instance Yvon Robert, claimant to the world's championship, will ride in from the east to meet "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, who hails from the south, Cape Town, South Africa to be exact. Then Earl McCready has a farm near Regina in Western Canada, so all Promoter Tunney needs to round out his "compass show" is an Eskimo. Maybe Referee Cligg Fox will wish he was in Eskimoland before the night's over trying to keep McCready and the pugnacious Al Dunlop in tow.

Remember When—?

Sunday baseball was inaugurated in Washington, D.C., 24 years ago today when 15,000 lovers of the diamond game turned out to see the American League Senators defeat the Cleveland Indians 1-0 in a 12-inning contest. Strangely enough despite the closeness of the score each team made six errors.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON

London, May 19 — (CP) — Sport shorts from Britain: A referee making his first ring appearance since before the war gave a boxer from Eire a decision over the British welterweight champion and London Casino fans were so taken aback they just laughed out loud.

The champion, Ernie Roderick of Liverpool, joined in the laughter while the winner, Pat O'Connor, rushed across the ring and lifted Ernie's hand high over his head. Every London newspaper covering the fight agreed with that sporting gesture.

It was only Roderick's second defeat since he fought Homicide Henry Armstrong for the world title in 1939.

Up in Bristol, a city that likes boxing and Canadians, Cpl. Arnold Hayes of Montreal and George Muir, champion of the New Zealand forces in Britain, met once again and Muir reversed a decision the Canadian negro took at a London heavyweight tournament a few weeks back. Muir won because he never stopped punching over the 10-round route.

LESSON NO. 60

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

If you had eggs, you could have acon and eggs, if you had bacon. lva Tyme uses that as a reminder r bridge. It helps her to remem- r the needs for a responding bid.

An opening bid of one needs ve tricks, four high cards, two re tricks. A responding bid needs, mong other things, more than o tricks.

A trick is an ace or a king or a hort card. So, it is possible to ave three tricks that are all short ards. That kind of a hand would ok sick, indeed.

Naturally, such a hand should ot be bid freely. To bid a hand oluntarily, it needs some body. By ody, I mean strength in high ards; aces, kings, queens.

A responding hand does not eed much high card strength. wo high cards are enough. It may ave more. But it must not have ss. Let me tell you why.

There are 12 high cards in a ack. A bidding pair should have t least half of them; six. The opener promises four of them. So, the responder should have the other two, at least.

When a pair is bidding, they may start by showing suits. But they may end in no-trump. High cards are no-trump tricks. By having two high cards, responder has a basis for no-trump bids, too.

So we come to lesson number 20 in Horse Sense Bridge. It reads: In answer to an opening bid of one, a responding bid by partner shows more than two tricks with two high cards among them.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart. You have this hand:

♠A J 8 6
♦8 4
♣Q 9 4 2

Your response is one spade. That tells your partner, among other things, that you have at least three tricks with two high cards.

If you have more than two tricks, you have enough for a responding bid, if you have two high cards.

"Something to Shout About"

With Don Ameche, Janet Blair nd Jack Oakie holding down the najor roles and an exceptional upporting cast headed by such amous Broadway personalities as William Gaxton, Corbina Wright, r., and Hazel Scott, Columbia's pectacular new musical film comng next to the McCarthy.

It should be stated here—and often!—that "Something to Shout About," as produced and directed y Gregory Ratoff, is really somehing to shout about. Serving up he best of Cole Porter's latest mash song hits, brimming over with light romance, eye-catching dance routines and genuine comdy, the new film provides comlete and delightful diversion. The Porter tunes include: "You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To," "I Alays Knew," "Hasta Luego," "Something to Shout About," "Through Thick and Thin" and "Lotus Bloom."

"Something to Shout About," Miss Blair's first since her refreshng comedy portrayal as "My Sister ileen," presents the lovely young star as a would-be song-writer from Altoona, Pa., who finds herelf defeated b Broadway until she s "adopted" by a smooth-talking press agent and an improvished exvaudevillian turned boarding house keeper. They bring her to the attention of a theatrical producer, who becomes more interested in her possibilities as a stage star than he is in her abilities as a songwriter.

The new film is a sparkling, estful combination of all that is good in light entertainment, from impressive ballet to the hilarious antics of the sensational canine vaudeville troupe known as "The Bricklayers," a dozen dogs who build a house.

AT THE CAPITOL

"WAKE ISLAND"

"Wake Island," Paramount's story depicting the courage of the Marines in their fourteen-day stand against the Japs, was filmed with the active cooperation and help of the United States Marine Corps.

Leading players in the film went through a preliminary training period to prepare them for their Marine roles. Featured in the film coming next to the Capitol Theatre, are Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, Macdonald Carey, Albert Dekker and Walter Abel.

"THE LONE STAR VIGILANTES"

"The Lone Star Vigilantes," exciting new Columbia western, costarring Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter, thunders its way into the Capitol Theatre next as the added attraction. Third in the series of thrillers co-starring the two western heroes, the new film is said to be the most action-packed of the lot, telling the story of the wild and woolly west during the days of the Texas Vigilantes!

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Code" complete the weekend bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Star Spangled Rhythm"

Rochester, one of more than forty famous movie stars in Paramount's super-musical comedy, "Star Spangled Rhythm" now in its 4th day at the Belle Theatre, has the distinction of wearing in that picture what is probably the last zoot suit to appear in films for the duration. He wears one for the number he does with dancing star Katherine Dunham.

"Chetnicks" The Fighting Guerrillas'.

Sabotaging by day, raiding by night and striking the enemy in a thousand places "Chetnicks!" The Fighting Guerrillas, 20th Century-Fox's thrilling new film, is slated for exhibition at the Belle Theatre.

Featuring Philip Dorn, Anna Sten, John Sheppard, Virginia Gilmore and Martin Kosleck, the action is set in the Balkan mountains. But the film might well be the death-defying story of guerrillas everywhere, for the patriotism and daring methods of these heroic men are present wherever men fight for freedom and the women they love.

Dorn is cast as the Chetnick leader and it is upon his orders that the men move silently down from the hills to prey on enemy contingents, derailing trains and blasting ammunition dumps. They disrupt enemy communications, immobilize Axis troops and provide the invader with a constant headache.

Romance and drama vie with the action of the film. Unable to stop the Chetniks, the invader attempts to capture their leader through his wife and children. All food stores are closed to the people of Kotar, until they inform on the whereabouts of the chief's family. The Chetniks break this starvation threat by kidnapping important enemy personages and holding them hostage, until the stores are reopened.

The invader, though foiled, eventually finds the guerrilla leader's wife and children. When they refuse to betray the Chetniks to the enemy, the occupying forces promise to erase Kotar just as they did Lidice. But, in a stirring climax, the Chetnicks descend on the city and wipe out the enemy garrison. Free for the moment, the townsfolk gather on the steps of the church, to cheer the Chetnik leader's declaration that they will soon be free forever.

Toronto, May 19—(CP)—Six-man lacrosse will be played in the Quebec Associaton this year. Player shortage was partly responsible for the decision to drop one man but officials hope the six-man game will result in less body contact and faster play. Hockey was speeded up by the six-man game and lacrosse should get the same results. If the streamlined game is unsatisfactory, the Quebec group will revert to seven men for the second half the season which opens May 23.

Bye, Bye, Rugger:

British Columbia and the Maritimes were Canada's last strongholds of English rugby. Now rugger is reported giving way to Canadian football in the Maritimes. Ken Chisholm of the Halifax Herald says English rugby seems to be on the way out as far as Halifax is concerned. "There wasn't a school in the city playing the English game last season, while from the common to the high schools, either tough rugby or Canadian football was the style. Then, too, when the football season opened last year, English rugby and Canadian football games were carded the same day. There was a big turnout for the latter but the former hardly drew peanuts."

War-time Wisdom:

Many sports organizations are showing discretion in spending their funds. Surplus moneys can be put to better use in war-time than extravagant banquets or unnecessary equipment. The Quebec Junior Hockey Association cancelled its annual spring banquet this year for that reason. The Port Arthur curling club members voted to purchase victory bonds valued at $500 instead of adding new women's dressing rooms to the present club building.

New York, May 19 — (AP) — Last year a number of people (including this columnist) came up with the suggestion that major league baseball clubs should confine their activities to week-ends during 1943 and give their athletes a chance to work at something more useful from Monday to Friday ... Naturally, that implied scrapping the two big leagues in favor of groupings that would eliminate east-west travel, and baseball men refused even to think of it...such a move, they claimed, would be a fate worse than death ... just for curiosity, we've been checking up on attendance figures to see if it has been worth while to continue on the old plan.

Even Stephen

Looking at the standings, as of yesterday, we can't see where an east-west division would have done any harm from a competitive standpoint ... the American League had two eastern and two western clubs in the first division and the National was the same except for ties, so their strength appeared about evenly divided.

Fanciful Figures

As nearly as we can figure it out, it takes about 3 1-2 week-day crowds to make one Sunday turnout this season ... the American League played 53 week-day bills up through Monday before 241,378 customers for an average of 4,554 and 16 Sunday affairs (mostly doubleheaders) drew 241,616 for an average of 15,101 ... the National League's 56 week-day shows drew 284,396, averaging 5,078 and 16 Sundays drew 299,640, averaging 18,728 ... Dipping a little deeper into the figures, we find individual crowds ranging from 350 for a Saturday game between the Indians and Browns at St. Louis to 47,086 for a Giants-Dodgers Sunday doubleheader at the Polo Grounds...twilight and night games are far ahead of mid-week afternoon games in attendance and Saturday crowds, generally speaking, aren't much bigger than other week days.

In Conclusion

We don't know what all this proves, unless it's that there should be more Sundays every week ... our conclusion is that the ball clubs are getting along all right and that we writers might be in a tough spot for material if the club owners accepted all our suggestions.

AT THE CAPITOL

Let 'Em Come! Marine heroes raised this war cry and then blasted Jap attackers attempting to storm Wake Island. Paramount thrillingly re-enacts the glorious Marine stand in "Wake Island", coming next to the Capital. The added western "The Lone Star Vigilantes" stars Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter.

Y. M. C. A. BOWLING

The final game in the playoffs of the Ladies Bowling League was played last night with the Alerts, last year's winners, taking first place. In the playoffs the first and second teams, the Alerts and Pickups respectively played the best two out of the three, the Alerts taking the first two games. The third and fourth teams, the Happy Gang and the Just Us played the three games before the Happy Gang finally won out. The Alerts and Happy Gang also had to play three games before the Alerts won out by the narrow margin of 27 pins. Following are the scores:-

Happy Gang, A. Peets, 427; P. Johnston, 564; D. Peets, 564; E. Warham, 586; G. Carscallen, 489. Total—2630.

GARDENING HAZARD

Tulsa, Okla., May 19 (AP)—Mrs. H. Blain Lacy went out to pick a few onions. Her feet started sinking in the muddy soil. She screamed for help. When a neighbor finally heard her, Mrs. Lacy was in knee-deep in her garden—and still sinking. Mr. Lacy was summoned and succeeded in pulling her out.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop and I said. Here comes Mr. Hagger, pop, dont forget you claimed you'd never talk politics with him again.

Meaning on account of Mr. Hagger always getting so mad, and pop said, I said it and I meant it and by gollies I'll stick to it. No reasonable man would waste time trying to discuss anything with a fellow who is only interested in putting over his own argument. The only sensible proceedure is to try to get his viewpoint, if any, and let it go at that, pop said.

And Mr. Hagger stopped going passed and started to talk to pop, saying, Well, those blockheads who are suppose to be running the country are making a fine mess of things under cover of their emergency laws.

A lot of people are dissatisfied with them, that's a fact, pop said, and Mr. Hagger, said, They ought to be stood up against a wall and shot every last one of them, and that's just the medecine they'd get if they pulled that raw stuff in any country where things get done instead of just talked about. You hear a lot of namby pamby talk about dictators, but that's just what we need, a good dictator to make us toe the mark, he said.

There are millions of people living under dictators and some of them are apparently quite satisfied, that's a fact pop said, and Mr. Hagger said, What's the idea of talking like that when you cant deny you think this government is perfect? That's the trouble with these so called democracies, there's too many soft people like you that wont speak up till it's too late to speak up, he said.

And he kept on going mad again, and I said, What's that prove, pop? and pop said, It proves there wont be any way out for a reasonable man for at least another 300 years.

Being the end of the subject.

PASSING DREAM

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 19

At 4 o'clock she would be there. At 3 she went to the dressing-room and saw in the full-length mirror the girl Jud was going to meet . . . a tall, slim girl in a sheer navy frock and a small navy turban. Jud's wife—not the boss' daughter, but the girl he chose. She looked more poised than she felt. Inside she felt as though she were breaking into little pieces. Happiness like grief is sometimes too much. The two are closely akin because there is fear in both.

Her thoughts went around in circles.

Temple saw Jud the moment she stepped from the train. He was not in uniform. He was wearing light trousers and a brown sport coat and a sport shirt open at the neck and brown and white sport shoes. He was thinner but very sunburned. He looked lean and fit and well, younger, more boyish than he had in Washington. Somehow, too, he looked so extraordinarily and frighteningly strange that she wondered for an incredible second whether any of the things that had happened to them and between them had actually happened. The earth seemed to give away beneath her.

"Jud!" It was a cry, an urgent cry for him to make it real again.

"Temple, darling," he said calmly, smiling.

It was real again. It was all right now. The sound of his voice, his arms around her, his kiss, too much a railroad station sort of kiss, but his.

He was smiling at her happily. "Hi!" he said gaily. "Didn't I tell you once I'd take you into strange places. There's nothing particularly strange about palm trees and oranges growing in your back yard but they do thrill you the first time you see them." His next look was warm and, in time, the look she knew so well. "You're still the same, aren't you, Temple?"

"Don't you want me to be? It hasn't been that long for me to be different."

He shook his head, his eyes narrowing. "You'll never be different. But—hey—this is no place to talk! These your bags? You're traveling lightly! I borrowed a station wagon."

She wanted to tell him but did not that the brightness and purity of the day reminded her of the day when they had been married. She thought, "He's happy here. He doesn't look moody or resentful. . . How could anyone be other than happy in a climate like this? But somehow I thought he wouldn't like regimentation. Why must I think these things now?"

She laughed quietly. "I see so much all at once, Jud! I see you and everything is different here, the houses and shrubs."

The station wagon was very new, very smart, very expensive. He seemed familiar with it as one is always with a car one drives a great deal.

When they were sitting side by side he leaned forward and kissed her warm cheek tenderly. "Take off your hat; darling. Girls down here never wear hats."

She pulled off her hat with a gay, reckless gesture. "I don't know where you're taking me. I don't care. Let it be strange. Let it be anywhere." She looked at him, her long, candid, sweet look. "From Paula's in May to Florida in October."

He looked at her quickly as though her words had shocked him. "Um . . We have traveled far, haven't we? When I said that you were still the same, I meant that I knew you still loved me."

"And you?" For a second she felt a pain stab her. Suppose he didn't."

With surprising seriousness he said, "I love you more than anyone in the world, Temple. Your letters have been a real inspiration. I didn't know anyone could have such beautiful thoughts." He smiled again and took her hand. "Let's go, shall we. We'll ride around a bit. I'll tell you what plans I've been able to make for you. You don't have to accept them. That's why we'll talk about them before we do anything. Happy?"

"I'm so happy it hurts."

As she rose the passing scene was blurred to her. Only Jud was alive and real and clear and close.

He said, "I wish I didn't have to go into a long explanation but I—well, I'm not exactly a free agent here. Nor am I, to my mother's regret, more than a mere private in this man's army. The situation is precisely this: I am on night duty from midnight until 8 in the morning. That means I have to sleep in the morning and that I'm free the rest of the time until midnight again.

"The housing situation here is pretty bad. The rooming-houses are terrible and, of course, the big hotels haven't opened for the winter season. But I have friends here and they've invited you to stay with them. They are friends of every man at the base, in fact. This car belongs to them. The husband is in Washington on a big defence job and his wife has stayed on here through the summer mainly to keep her house open for the men at the base. She's a perfectly swell person and you'll be more than welcome. The house is big and she lives very informally. People do down here. At the moment only the wife is there. Mrs. Santos, we call her Molly, all the men do. But your coming and going will be your own affair. You and I will be at the beach most of the time."

His proposal came as a distinct and rather unpleasant shock. She was disappointed because she had not thought it would be this way when she came. She had thought she would stay in a hotel and be free when Jud was not with her. She had thought that her days would be free and her evenings would be spent with him. Having been a house guest of Fran's, she knew all too well the obligations of a guest in the homes of rich people and heartily disliked the role. But it was all too clear that Jud wanted her to be the guest of Molly Santos, and any plan she would suggest would probably not fit in with the schedule he had planned during her visit.

Probably because she was quiet for a few minutes he said gently. "Temple, there is no way we can live together. I have tried in every possible way to think of something but there is no way. I couldn't write that. I don't belong to myself here. I can't then belong to you."

She said quickly, "I know. I thought of that, too. I'll go to Mrs Santos' Jud."

He turned his head and smiled. "That's great! She's lovely and charming, old enough to be my mother, but just about the best friend I have here. A really generous and unselfish person. We'll be there in a few minutes. I'll go back to the base and change and come back for cocktails with you and Molly. Then you and I will go out to dinner."

"Then she's expecting me?"

"In a way, yes, I knew you'd agree with me that it's all around the best idea. I can keep the station wagon and get over to you in a jiffy. And you'll have every comfort and luxury."

She thought, "You always think of luxury, Jud. I never do. I came to be with you. I'm a wife coming to see her husband. I'm an army wife. You haven't said anything about my being your wife."

The Santos' residence was a rambling white house with a red tiled roof set in a paradise of palms and exotic flowers. A Negro house boy came out when the station wagon stopped and took Temple's bags. Jud called to him with familiarity and the boy grinned back.

The house inside was cool and spacious, the furniture tastefully modern, the colors beige and green predominating. Flowers were everywhere in tall vases and small colorful bowls. Everywhere, too, there was comfort and there was luxury.

Molly Santos, wearing cool white silk, came in to meet them and Temple saw at once that she was a woman of beauty and dignity and friendliness. Tall, with close-cropped white hair, she had a young smile and a young voice. She was the kind of woman, Temple thought with sudden shame, that she had hoped Jud's mother would be.

"Why, Temple, hello, my dear! We've heard so much about you." She looked into Temple's eyes and smiled. "Jud has a talent for understatement, I'm afraid." She laughed; hers was warm, rich laughter. "I know that you feel you are an intruder, but you are not. I shall love having you here and I want you to feel as free as if you were staying at a hotel."

Jud was smiling. "What did I tell you, Temple?"

Temple said, "You understated again, I'm afraid." She was glad now that she had come.

Molly Santos said, "Well, I'll let you two decide about that as well as the other things you probably want to decide. In the meantime I'm sure that Temple would love a shower and some lighter clothing."

She saw Jud leave reluctantly.

Then Molly said, "I'll show you to your room, Temple. If you have never been here before, it does seem very strange at first. This is the first time I've ever stayed on through the summer, but as perhaps Jud has told you my husband is in Washington and my presence there would necessitate a social life he has not time for now. There are army and navy wives and also defence wives. I do fly up to see him occasionally to give him a wifely lecture on all work and no play and he flies down to see Thalia and me."

"Thalia?" Temple asked.

"My daughter . . Didn't Jud?" She smiled. "Obviously not. He hasn't had time to tell you everything, has he? But Thalia is in New York. She flew up for some parties and to do some shopping and she was particularly sorry to miss you. You see, we've come to know quite a lot about the boys at the base, their families and their sweethearts and the jobs they had before they went into the service. Jud has become like a new member of my family. But it does mean so much to them to eat away from the base and to come here and play the phonograph and dance and relax. I'm not the only woman who keeps open house. Almost everyone does. Oh, but how thoughtless of me! I am talking m[illegible] too much and you've had a long trip."

IMMEDIATE

"There is no doubt the Allies vastly out-number the air forces of the hostile forces of Germany, Italy and Japan."

Britain's air offensive, he continued, is forcing Germany to withdraw more and more planes from the fighting fronts to assign them to purely defensive operations at the expense of loss of aggression and initiative.

That, he said, will prove a "major factor in bringing victory."

Enemy Shows First Mortal Weakness

Mr. Churchill said, the Allied air war has begun to "show the first mortal weakness" of the European enemy.

The more this is carried on, he said, the better for the Allies because they can replace planes quicker and in greater numbers than the Axis.

Declaring opinion is divided over whether air power alone can bring Germany and Italy to collapse, he said the "experiment is well worth trying".

"Certainly", he remarked amid laughter, "there is no harm in finding out".

Anyhow, he said, all are agreed that damage done to German industry by the air raids, including the recent ones destroying power dams, has been an 'unparalleled devastation".

"It is our settled policy", he went on, "to make it impossible for Germany and Italy to carry on any war industry on a large scale either in Germany or Italy or occupied nations".

As for the hoped-for meeting with Stalin and Chiang, Mr. Churchill said that "how, when and where" the meeting might come off was something about which he could shed "no clear ray of light" at this time.

There was laughter when he added he wouldn't disclose such facts if he knew them.

Air Offensive Against Japan

The Prime Minister drew cheers when he declared that at the earliest possible moment an air offensive must be launched at military targets in Japan.

He struck out at the "cold-blooded execution" of American aviators by Japan but said it indicated Japanese "dread" of the possibility of future aerial attacks.

A responsive House chuckled when he said that "lots of good people can lay good plans if they do not have to carry them out."

Referring to his conferences with Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill said that the "supreme objective" of all planning is to come to grips with the enemy on the largest possible scale at the earliest possible moment "wherever that is profitable and — I may say — wherever it is possible."

Presence of Canada's Premier

Noting that Prime Minister Mackenzie King "is here with us today," Mr. Churchill, while the House cheered, paid tribute to Canada's "massive" contributions to the war effort.

And Britain's war leader had words of praise, too, for America's war production as he told of the parts its weapons played in the defeat of Rommel at El Alamein and his long retreat across Africa.

Reviewing the African campaign, Mr. Churchill said the Allies' success there "gives the lie to Nazi and Fascist claims that parliamentary democracies were incapable of waging effective warfare."

No one can measure the results of the African victory, he said, but its opening of the Mediterranean is "worth several hundreds ships".

The victory there was a blow to the enemy equal to the one he suffered at Stalingrad, Mr. Churchill said, with the Axis losing a quarter-million of its best troops and "vast masses of material".

Hitler's Obstinacy

He said that while the African campaign was well planned "the unexpected came to the aid of design"—and the Allies could attribute a part of their smashing victory "to the military genius of Corporal Hitler".

It was the "insensate obstinacy" of Hitler, he declared, that caused the Axis to lose so heavily in men and equipment in Africa.

At one point Mr. Churchill said Britain had suffered more than double the United States losses in merchant tonnage but added that ship construction exceeded losses.

The Prime Minister said the operations in Africa had relieved the whole African continent from Axis tyranny and proved the wisdom of one supreme commander for such a campaign waged by British, United States and French forces.

African Drive Cost Axis 950,000 Men

The entire African drive, he said, cost the Axis 950,000 soldiers, 2,000,000 gross tons of shipping and over 8,000 planes, exclusive of a large number of ships and planes damaged.

In addition, the enemy lost 6,200 guns, 2,550 tanks and 70,000 trucks he added.

Mr. Churchill had high praise for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of the United Nations fighting forces in North Africa, saying while the House cheered its accord, "I do not think you could have chosen any man more capable than Gen. Eisenhower."

He said the American general had kept his hetrogenous forces together, "working in close harmony and co-operation which were essential to victory."

The Prime Minister cautioned that thanksgiving over the African victory must be short, declaring: "Heavier work lies ahead not only in Europe but in the Pacific and Indian theatres."

To carry this out, he said, plans must be laid that are well conceived and thrust forward without losing a day.

"We must not for a moment forget that the main burden of the war on land is still being borne by the Russian armies."

Hitler Will Not Succeed

Russia has inflicted injuries on the German war machine that may in time prove mortal, he declared, but he added that there is no doubt that Hitler will make a third and supreme gamble in an attempt to knock Russia out.

"He will not succeed," the Prime Minister said grimly to thunderous applause.

Britain and the United States, he added, intend to "do everything in our power" to take the weight off Russia.

"Only by singleness of purpose, tenacity and endurance, can we discharge our duty to the future of the world, and the destiny of man," Churchill declared in concluding his address.

As he ended at 1:25 p.m. the House rose and cheered, and cheered again as he stepped down from the rostrum, his hand upraised with his fingers waving his "V-for-Victory" salute.

As he left the House, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor rose from the diplomatic gallery above the House floor, and members of Congress, turning toward the former king and his American-born wife, gave them an ovation as well.

CHURCHILL'S SPEECH TO BE REBROADCAST

Toronto, May 19 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill's speech before the United States Congress today will be rebroadcast tonight over the CBC Mid-East, network at 11 p.m. E.D.T., it was announced this afternoon.

Speaker Praises Kiwanis Blood Donor Clinic

Members of the City Council were guests of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday, when Russell T. Kelly of Hamilton gave a most interesting talk on "We Fight for Victory and What?" and highly praised the Kiwanis Club for the excellent record being established at the Blood Donor Clinic. Mr. Kelly is chairman for Canada of the Blood Donors division of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Bruce Lattimer was in the chair with Harold Seldon as sergeant-at-arms and Harold Carruthers as song leader, Alec Gordon presiding at the piano.

Mayor Rollins spoke for the members of his council who were all present with the exception of Aldermen Butler and Marshall, introducing each member in turn. The Mayor promised co-operation with the several service clubs of the city, due to the wonderful work they are performing for the betterment of mankind. The speaker was introduced by Jim Barclay and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Clarence Jewell. Mr. Kelly told the club how the present Kiwanis Centre was purchased and how the Blood Donors Clinic came into being. The Red Cross asked for 2,000 donors per week with 1,200 from Ontario and this quota has been far exceeded. At the present time there are 24 clinics in Canada with many more being in the process of formation and there are six mobile units operating in the outlying district. Mr. Kelly told of the urgent need for plasma in the next few months and urges each clinic to step up its production if possible.

The speaker asked each member to ask himself the question "What can I do personally to assist the war effort? and showed how little prepared this country was for the struggle that is now upon us. He reviewed the depression period before the outbreak of war and submitted that this should not happen in our time because the money that would be used to nourish the unemployed should be used to give each an equal chance in life and a steady job where he or she could be independent. He showed that through improper food in the depression that of 130,000 early enlistments nearly 10 per cent were turned down because they were ill fed.

"When this war started our greatest assest was our youths" said the speaker, and if we do not properly look after them when they return, they will acquire leadership and something will have to be done. All our boys are asking "what kind of a world are we coming back to?" The speaker said we need a revitalizing of our Christian life and practically all the post-war world needs is an understanding and practice of the Ten Commandments. We must have freer enterprise after the war "said the speaker and a closer adaption of the Golden Rule."

GOOD RECORD BY NEWSMEN

London, May 19. (CP)—Minister of Information Brendan Bracken told the House of Commons today that British censors had found it necessary to delete only one word in every 10,000 sent abroad by foreign correspondents in Britain. "Even then amendations have nearly always been achieved by friendly agreement with the correspondents concerned", Mr. Bracken said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 19 (CP)—Better prices were posted this afternoon for industrials, base metals and western oils. Golds were narrowly lower. Volume was small at 157,000 shares.

The senior oils, steel and utilities were up moderately and the foods lower. In base metals Steep Rock sold back to 1.55 for a loss of 5. Waite-Amulet and Jack Waite were stronger.

Ajax featured the junior oils, advancing 9 cents to 98. Gains appeared for Home, Calgary-Edmonton, Anglo-Canadian, South End Pete and East Crest.

Kerr-Addison, East Malartic, San Antonio, Chesterville and Lake Shore were moderately weak golds.

WALL STREET

New York, May 19. (AP)— The Stock Market recorded another quiet advance today under the leadership of an assortment of Blue Chip industrials.

Some buying was inspired, brokers reported, by the accelerated upturn in the final hour Tuesday, although speculative forces continued to talk of the advisability of conservative action pending the next decisive war moves and final settlement of the soft coal labor dispute.

Prices stiffened after early irregularity and near the fourth hour gains of fractions to around a point were well distributed in industrial and rail divisions. A few stocks climbed 2 or more. Transactions topped the average of yesterday and the day before despite occasional slow periods.

Prominent on the rise were Chrysler, Goodyear, U.S. Steel, Harvester, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, J. C. Penney, Standard Oil (N.J.), Loew's, Air Reduction, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific. Nickel Plate Pfd. pushed up nearly three points and Case was bid up more than 3.

Bonds and Commodities had fair support.

Canadian issues were steady, Canadian Pacific rising 38 and Canada 4s 1-8. Lake Shore was unchanged.

East Crest and Davies Petroleums Drilling Athabaska Oil Wells

Toronto—The first aggressive attempt in ten years to prove the oil producing possibilities of the Athabasca fields by the drilling of wells will get under way this week following weeks of aggravating delay owing to weather conditions.

The first of a proposed series of wells, to be financed jointly by East Crest Oil Company and Davies Petroleums, will be started on Wednesday, May 19th, at a site selected by Dr. J. O. G. Sanderson, the company's geologist.

Presidents H. S. Price of East Crest Oil Company and Leonard Phillips, of Davies Petroleums Ltd., are now at the drilling site, located about 100 miles north of Edmonton and on the Alaska Highway, and they have advised that all the material necessary to drill the well to completion is on the ground. The derick is up, machinery installed and pipe line for water installed.

A site has been chosen approximately a mile west of the discovery well, Athadome No. 2. The Athadome well, drilled in 1933, found oil in a 50-foot sand at a depth of 1,651 feet, the sand being described by Geologist Sanderson as one of the best looking oil sands found in Alberta and thick enough to contain abundant oil.

Since the wells are to be shallow, drilling of each well should not take longer than 10 or 12 days, although the initial wells may require a little longer due to coring, electro-logging and tests to determine the most satisfactory means of production.

Leases cover 54,000 acres in one block, through which passes the Alaska Highway and the Canadian National Railway. Under the Alberta Department of Lands and Resources regulations, wells can be drilled on every ten acres.

Flt.-Sgt. C. Spencer Is Promoted W.O. In R.A.F. at Picton

Flight Sergeant Carman Spencer of Shannonville, now an instructor at Picton R.A.F. Station, has been promoted to Warrant Officer. He came back last September after a long service in the Mediterranean area, including the Malta and Egyptian theatres of war. He has been with the R.A.F. at Picton since his return.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE

Kansas City, May 19. (AP)—Frank J. Engleman wanted to talk to Charles Cannady at Lake City, Kansas City suburb. "Get me Cannady", he instructed his telephone operator hurriedly. Shortly his phone rang—he avows it's true — and a girl's voice chirped cherrily: "This is Edmonton, Canada. What number in Edmonton do you wish please?"

AWARDED V. C. POSTHUMOUSLY

London, May 19 — (CP) — Capt. Frederick Thornton Peters of the Royal Navy was awarded the Victoria Cross posthumously Tuesday for leading two cutters in a suicidal charge against the boom guarding Oran harbor during the North African landings.

The 53-year-old skipper led the Walney and Hartland to their objectives through point-blank fire of shore batteries, a destroyer and cruiser. He was the lone man of 17 on the bridge of his flagship who survived and he was blinded in one eye. He was killed a month later in an airplane crash.

His ship, the Walney, rammed the boom, sank a destroyer, attacked the cruiser, and reached the jetty, but was disabled and ablaze and went down with colors flying.

Short Session Of Commission Held Tuesday

The members of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission will inspect the coal conveyer at the Gas Plant before acting on the recommendation of the Stephens-Adamson engineer that the machine be lifted from the ground about nine inches at a cost of $1,300 for the repairs. Action will be taken when the Commission holds a special meeting at a later date. The conveyor is used to take the coal from the piles to a pit, from where it is transferred to the top of the plant by buckets. When the conveyer was laid, it was placed on the ground and it has become rusted and certain repairs have been made from time to time but the engineer states in his letter no further repairs can be made. At first the matter was laid over when the Mayor was unable to be present at the meeting Tuesday afternoon but he arrived later, the matter was explained and the above action taken.

The C.N.R. accepted the offer of the Commission for a piece of land, which formerly composed the old C.N.R. right of way and a quick claim deed will be given. This land will be used to erect the reservoir thereon. A bill for a debenture of $2,600 and interest of $8.45 was received from the City Treasurer and the Commission not having the available funds on hand ordered that bonds held by the Treasurer of the City to the value of $4,000 be sold to meet the indebtedness and other bills that are outstanding.

A report was received from the Board of Health in Toronto on the sample of raw water taken from the intake and sent to Toronto for analysis. The water was classified as "D" a class of having bacteria of intestinal origin present in numbers usually considered unsafe for drinking water supply unless water is previously treated by boiling, chlorinating or other recognized methods. The report showed that the raw water in the Bay of Quinte was unfit for drinking purposes unless thoroughly treated. The manager, Mr. O. H. Scott was instructed to take up with a resident a matter of water consumption and report back to the commission.

Storage space on the upper floor of the Hydro building on Front Street was rented to a merchant in the city at $5 monthly.

Tiredness, Laziness, May Be Caused by Lack of Vitamin B Complex

When a healthy man or woman begins to feel lazy, tire easily, lack ambition or desire for work or play, there is something wrong and the first thought may be that a mental and physical rest is necessary. Thoughtful patients in estimating the amount of work they do daily feel that it cannot be work that is causing the symptoms because they have done the same amount and kind of work for years.

The next thought is infection. Infection of teeth, tonsils, sinuses, intestine, gall bladder, will cause laziness sleepiness, and lack of ambition. A search for infection is made yet many of these tired, lazy individuals are found free of infection.

When work on infection is not the cause of the symptoms a group of Boston physicians (Drs. E. Egana, R. E. Johnson, R. Bloomfield, L. Broucha, A. P. Meiklejohn, J. Whittenberger, R. C. Darling, C. Heath, A. Graybiel and F. Conzolario) in the American Journal of Physiology show that a diet very low in the vitamin B complex causes individuals to become deficient (mentally and physically) within three or four weeks. Adding Brewers' yeast to the diet is sufficient to cause the symptoms to disappear. Seven physicians, all in good health, allowed themselves to be investigated as to the results of a deficient and then an abundant supply of the vitamin B complex.

The symptoms caused by an insufficient amount of B complex in the diet were mild and not always clear cut but usual symptoms were getting tired easily, loss of ambition, and loss of some of their ability to do their regular everyday work. They found that when they did hard work, they became tired sooner than usual and it took longer for them to recover their strength than before they were deprived of some of their daily vitamin B complex. By adding Brewers' yeast to their diet, their former strength returned and they recovered from the effects of the work as rapidly as before they were deprived of their B complex.

The various organs and the body processes—blood pressure, heart rate, digestion and respiration—showed little or no change from less vitamin B complex in diet but the physical and mental vigor were definitely less.

As some healthy individuals may find Brewer's yeast does not agree with them, this vitamin may be obtained in other forms or by eating more foods rich in B complex. Some of these foods are beef liver, malted milk, ham, bacon, whole wheat bread, asparagus, butter, corn, greens.

Screech Owl At Peterboro Roosts on Door

A small screech owl about ten inches high has adopted a family on Inverlea Street, in Peterboro. Early Sunday morning it made a perch on the storm door of the house and all efforts to dislodge it have met with failure as it simply returns. Members of the family have been able to go right up to it and the bird sits there calmly. During Monday morning it was keeping watch over the baby as it played on the verandah.

Safebreakers Grab Almost $10,000 In Bonds, Cash, Stamps

Grimsby, Ont., May 18 —(CP)— Safebreakers last night escaped with almost $10,000 in bonds, cash and stamps after forcing open the safe of A. Hewson and Sons, basket manufacturers, police reported today. Some of the bonds are negotiable and police in other sections of the Niagara Peninsula are watching for them.

Chief Constable William Turner said the safe, five feet high, had been moved from the office to the factory at the rear of the building. The door of the safe had been drilled and pried open with crow bars.

AXIS AIR SQUADRONS 'RIPPED TO PIECES' MOSQUITO BOMBERS RAID BERLIN WITHOUT LOSS

73 Planes Downed In Dogfights Over Sicily, Sardinia

Greatest Air Blow Since Collapse of German Forces in North Africa

AIRFIELDS SMASHED

(By NOLAND NORGAARD)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 20. (AP)—Allied fighters and bombers, in mighty smashes at Axis air power, destroyed 73 planes yesterday in the greatest aerial blow they have inflicted since the collapse of the German ground forces in North Africa, it was announced today.

Twenty-nine planes were shot down in fierce dogfights off Sicily and Sardinia in an area where the German and Italian air forces have concentrated hundreds of aircraft in an attempt to stem the great and continuing Allied onslaught, and at least 44 others were destroyed on the ground.

For the first time since the fall of Tunisia enemy aircraft rose in large numbers of challenge Allied domination of the skies over Sardinia and Sicily and their squadrons were ripped to pieces in what official sources described as "several long and gruelling dogfights".

Fifty Axis fighters jumped on United States heavy bombers which bombed the Milo Air Field near Trapani, Sicily, and more than 30 fighters attacked medium bombers and fighters when the Americans bombed Monserrato, Elmas Air Field and the harbor of Cagliari, in Southern Sardinia.

37 Destroyed on One Field

Thirty-seven of the Axis planes destroyed on the ground were on the Milo field. At Milas airfield, in Central Sardinia, medium bombers scored direct hits on at least six grounded planes and at Villacidro, where approximately 50 planes were parked, hits were seen all over the dispersal area and several explosions were observed in fuel dumps.

(The dispatch did not bring out where the 44th grounded plane was destroyed, but presumably it was one of those at Villacidro, 25 miles northwest of Cagliari.)

A lone Beaufighter patrolling the eastern Sardinian coast encountered five torpedo-carrying Junkers 88's. It destroyed one, probably destroyed a second and damaged a third.

The 28 others shot down in combat were bagged by American bombers and their fighter escorts in raids during which tons of bombs were dropped on Italy's island outposts.

The biggest fight of the day occurred between the Sicilian coast and the Egadi islands when 50 enemy fighters attacked bombers which had just bombed Milo Field.

The bombers shot down 10 and fighters which were escorting damaged three more in a spectacular running battle which continued 20 minutes, with the opposing forces flying at heights ranging from sea level to 24,000 feet.

German Communique

(Fourteen Allied aircraft were claimed by the German high command to have been destroyed in the coastal regions of Sardinia and Sicily.

The Italian high command claimed in a communique broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press that Axis planes had torpedoed and probably sank two medium-sized Allied steamships off the Algerian coast and heavily damaged a third vessel of 10,000 tons.

(The Italian bulletin said the ports of Sfax, Tunisian and Oran, Algeria, were "efficiently attacked by Axis bombers."

("Some casualties and small damage were caused at Trapani (Sicily), inthe region of Campidano (Sardinia) and in Cagliari Province by enemy aircraft which were strongly engaged by Italian and German fighters and suffered a total loss of 13 machines," the communique said. "A four-engined bomber also was destroyed over Sicily by anti-aircraft defences.")

THIEVES CHARGE HIGH FOR TIRES

Toronto, May 20—(CP)—Police said today that thieves stealing automobile tires were selling them at 100 per cent. more than their original value. Tires selling slightly under $17 were being sold at $35.

Tire thefts are well planned and service stations not varying tires have escaped robbery, police added.

Formidable Fleet Reported at Gibraltar

New York, May 20 (AP) — Berlin radio reported today that 72 ships, including the British aircraft carriers Argus and Formidable and the battleships Nelson and King George V. were in the port of Gibraltar today. The broadcast claims, which had no Allied confirmation, were recorded by The Associated Press.

New Treatment For Trench Mouth

Atlanta, May 20 — (AP)—A new method of treatment for Vincent's infection (trench mouth), described as making a cure possible in one-third of the time formerly required and termed "more certain and more efficient" than older methods, was reported to the Georgia Dental Association.

The method, through use of nicotinamide, was described by Capt. John C. Bergmann, former Chicago dentist, now a military dentist stationed at Warner Robins Air Depot, near Macon, Ga.

Formerly dentists treated trench mouth principally by direct application of dyes and drugs to the gums or infected parts of the mouth, he said, while his method calls for systematic treatment, with no local applications.

Three tablets of nicotinamide, a drug in use since 1941, are administered every four waking hours for four days, and smaller doses are given for two days, Capt. Bergmann said.

He explained that formerly most cases required three weeks or longer for cure but under the new method cures are effected in some cases in four days, with an average of six days for acute infections, and ten days for chronic infections.

Nicotinamide is a white crystalline, odorless powder, of a mildly bitter taste, it was explained, and in nature is found in the liver and adrenals.

Capt. Bergmann related the results of eight months' research carried on at the army air base dental clinics. Cures were effected in each of 130 cases in which the new drug was used, he declared.

DISTINGUISHED OFFICER HOME

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Col. John Begg, 44, of Calgary, who won the Distinguished Service Order at Dieppe, has arived from overseas to take over command of an armored corps training regiment at Camp Borden, Ont., Defence Headquarters announced today.

Col. Begg fought at Dieppe with the Calgary tank regiment and now will direct advanced training methods in the principal armored corps training establishments in the Dominion.

Germans May Pass Up Summer Drive Against Russia to Bolster Defences

By FRANK J. O'BRIEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Turkey, May 20—(AP)—Travellers recently returned from Europe reported today there are indications the Germans may forego their expected Russian offensive this summer in order to keep large reserves of men and equipment ready for quick movement to the west or south in event of an Allied invasion.

At present, these sources said, the Germans appear more concerned over the possibility of an Allied thrust through the Balkans than an attack on their Atlantic wall, and consequently are speeding defence preparations in southeastern Europe.

Reports from the Balkans declared that while the Axis defences there are not complete the Allies nevertheless would find them a tough — but not impossible—nut to crack.

Rumors concerning Allied plans for a Balkan invasion are ripe in Turkey, and there is considerable speculation as to what the summer may bring forth.

Expert observers, however, predict that an Allied attempt to crack Hitler's defences in southeastern Europe is not likely to involve Turkey in the war unless she is threatened with German counter-offensive through Thrace and the Dardanelles region.

The general opinion here is that the Allies delivered the knockout blow to the Axis forces in North Africa about two weeks sooner than had been expected in Berlin or Rome, and that this surprise is responsible for the current hasty preparations in the Balkans.

At present less than one full German division is reported in Bulgaria, although the Nazis recently have thoroughly overhauled communications and supply systems and prepared advance base sites for quick movement of troops if this proves necessary.

Greece currently is believed to have the largest Axis garrison in the Balkans, with more than 20 Italian divisions, three German divisions and possibly a Croat division based there.

AMERICAN TROOPS CIRCLE REMNANT OF JAPS ON ATTU

Success Comes After Partially-Completed Airfield Has Been Captured

BACKS TO SEA

Washington, May 20—(AP)—American troops have completed encirclement of the remnant of Japanese forces on Attu Island in the Western Aleutians after capturing the partially completed enemy airfield there.

The Japanese, the Navy Department announced today, were caught in the Chicagof Harbor area at the Northeastern extremity of Attu after United States forces captured Sarana Pass flanking the enemy's positions from the southeast. The Japanese were fighting with their backs to the sea and the sea was commanded by American warships, which, it was officially disclosed, have already assisted in smashing Japanese resistance.

New York, May 20 (AP)—The Tokyo radio has admitted heavy Japanese casualties in the fighting for Attu Island at the western tip of the Aleutians and has acknowledged that United States troops are making steady progress, the office of War Information reported today.

The Tokyo broadcast said the United States surface force fired "salvo after salvo in a wild effort to blow the island out of the sea."

The United States troops landed at points along both Holtz and Massacre Bays and later "succeeded in landing strong reinforcements," the Tokyo radio said.

Made Brief Stand

The broadcast dispatch, the O.W.I. said, advanced typical Japanese claims of enemy losses and told how one Japanese force made a brief stand on an important ridge, but added:-

"However, after continuous warship and aircraft bombardment of their positions had resulted in their losing more than two-thirds of their strength, our commanding officer ordered them to take up new positions in the ridges. This operation was undertaken at night (on May 14) and with enemy patrols on all sides . . ."

The Tokyo broadcast made clear that the Japanese defence effort was futile.

The broadcast was beamed to the western United States and Latin America.

8-Hour Bombing

The broadcast account claimed that one American warship, described as a battleship or a cruiser, suffered a "tremendous explosion".

The Japanese account said American planes began an eight-hour

Churchill's Speech Hints Aerial Attacks on Germany Test of "Softening" Process

(By WILLIAM FRYE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 20. (AP)—The possibility that Allied military leaders are trying to shatter Axis Europe by aerial bombardment so that when invasion is attempted it will meet resistance only by a demoralized foe was read into Prime Minister Churchill's speech today by some observers here.

A flurry of speculation was stirred by two remarks made by Mr. Churchill, who omitted any direct reference to the long-discussed invasion. He said (1) it was "worth trying" to bring about a collapse in Germany and Italy by air power alone, and (2) the Allies must do everything "sensible and practicable" to divert Axis strength from the Russian front.

In view of the devastation wrought in Germany and occupied Europe by recent round-the-clock bombings, chief interest in Washington centred around what seemed to be a hint that the cherished theory of "pure air power" enthusiasts—a victory by air alone—was being put to the test.

Says Experiment Worth Trying

"Opinion is divided", Churchill said, "as to whether the use of air power could by itself bring about a collapse in Germany or Italy.

"The experiment is well worth trying, so long as other means are not excluded".

While informed persons agreed that this might seem to bode an even greater scale of bombing than anything yet seen, and to reflect a generally heightened estimate of the value of strategic bombing, they were sceptical of any deduction that invasion by ground troops would be withheld or even delayed.

Destruction Would Imply Problems.

More likely, they suggested, the Allied High Command knows that the problems of invasion will be enormously simplified by calculated destruction beforehand, and may hope that the ground forces, when they do invade the continent, will find a demoralized foe.

Observers were reluctant to infer from the Prime Minister's cautious phrasing of "sensible and practicable" moves to divert German attention from Russia by "hedging" on Second Front plans. Two possible explanations were suggested for avoiding discussion of an invasion—a desire to "keep the enemy guessing", and the possibility that large operations are so near that Churchill thought it wiser not to give out any hints.

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 20. (CP Cable) —Prime Minister Churchill's statement that the possibility of bombing the Axis out of the war is worth the experiment generally was treated in Britain today as a simple forecast of heavier Allied air blows at the enemy.

The enthusiastic comment on the Prime Minister's speech to the United States Congress yesterday was devoted mostly to the broader aspects of the speech and few got the idea that Mr. Churchill, an early advocate of aviation as a weapon of war, had revealed himself to be of the "bomb-the-Axis-out-of-the-war" school.

A spokesman at the Air Ministry, whose Bomber Chief, Air Marshal Sir Arthur T. Harris, declared a year ago that 30 1,000-plane raids on consecutive nights would knock out Germany, was non-committal.

The R.A.F. policy of pounding Germany with method and relentlessness now is paying handsomely. The destructive raid on the Ruhr dams was said by William Halcrow, British engineer and world authority on dam design, to be a miracle of precision attack, the damage of which is irreparable for two years. A British correspondent recently returned from Stockholm listed air raids as one of the prime causes for the 1918 spirit returning to the German people.

However, one comment on Mr. Churchill's bombing views was that "only Churchill knows".

COUNTER-ATTACKS IN KUBAN VALLEY SMASHED BY REDS

Both Air and Land Action Increases Along the Entire Russian Front

MAJOR AIR BATTLES

Moscow, May 20 (AP)—New German counter-attacks in the Kuban Valley, fed by fresh reserves of men and tanks, have been smashed by Red Army artillery and planes, the Russians announced today, with heavy losses inflicted on the Nazis as they made their second unsuccessful effort in two days to cross a river in the Kuban delta.

There was constant air and land action all along the Russian-German front from the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad, where the Finns were reported to have manned their forward lines with more heavy guns, to the northeast of Novorossisk, where the Germans still held their positions in the Black Sea port.

(There was no confirmation from Russian sources of claims voiced by circles as saying the Russians troops had launched sharp attacks on German lines in the Staraya Russa sector near Lake Ilmen, south of Volkhovo, and near Orel and Belgorod.

(The Tribune De Geneve, in Switzerland, also caried a Berlin dispatch quoting German military circles as saying the Rupssians were developing big troop movements in the Taman peninsula of the Caucasus, above Kursk and south of Leningrad.)

The fiercest fighting, the Russians said authoritatively, was in the Kuban and around Izyum, on the Donets River 70 miles southeast of Kharkov.

CONGRESS PRAISES PLEDGES GIVEN BY CHURCHILL

Complete Answer as to Whether Britain Would Assist in Japan's Defeat

CHANDLER CRITICAL

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 20—(AP)—From the halls of the United States congress which recently rang with criticism of Britain's war intentions there arose today a hallelujah for Prime Minister Churchill's pledge that the British Empire will battle side by side with the United States until Japan and all other enemies are crushed.

Most senators saw in Mr. Churchill's 50-minute review of the war before a great United Nations gathering—including Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada—in the House of Representatives yesterday a complete answer to those who have urged making Japan the No. 1 enemy and who have doubted whether Britain would help the United States beat Japan once the Nazis are punched out of the war.

But Senator Albert Chandler (Dem.-Ky.) who, took the lead in criticising British intentions in Monday's senate debate, declared the Prime Minister left several major questions unanswered. Mr. Churchill, he said, had failed to convince him that Japan should be left as the last of the Axis to beat.

He contended moreover that Mr. Churchill did not explain why Britain's forces in India had not made a "more effective attempt" to open the Burma Road, what help either Britain or the United States can hope to get from Russia, or what Russia's intentions are with respect to world peace.

On the other hand, a large majority of legislators interviewed were reassured by the speech. Senator Charles McNary, the Republican Leader, said it "was measurably satisfying," and Senator Walter George (Dem.-Gam), regarded it as a "magnificent and helpful speech which gave reassurance to those people who thought the war was not being prosecuted with sufficient vigor in the Pacific."

DEFENCE MINISTER RALSTON GOES TO WASHINGTON

Will Attend Current War Conferences With Heads of 3 Fighting Services

MR. KING PRESENT

By J. F. SANDERSON

Washington, May 20 (CP) — It was announced here today that Defence Minister J. L. Ralston and the heads of Canada's three fighting services left Ottawa today by air for Washington to take part in current Anglo-American war conferences.

Those accompanying Mr. Ralston are Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of the General Staff; Vice Admiral Percy W. Nelles, Chief of the Naval Staff, and Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Mackenzie King who spent the night at the White House as guest of President Roosevelt and conferred with the President and Prime Minister Churchill, prepared to attend at noon a conference of the Pacific War Council.

Mr. Ralston and his party were due to land at Bolling Field, Washington at 3 p.m., when they were to go to the White House for a conference with Mr. Mackenzie King and British and American military figures. It was probable Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt would also attend this discussion.

An Ottawa dispatch said: "Col. Ralston's decision to go to Washington took Ottawa by surprise. Mr. King left Ottawa alone and it was not thought any other member of the government would attend the Anglo-American talks. The Defence Minister and his party arranged to fly in an R.C.A.F. aircraft."

At 5:45 p.m. Mr. Mackenzie King will attend a conference which Mr. Churchill will hold with all representatives in Washington of the British Commonwealth.

The Canadian Prime Minister will dine tonight with State Secretary Cordell Hull.

Huge Bear Mauls Man at Thessalon

Thessalon, Ont., May 20—(CP)—Badly mauled by a 600-pound bear near a camp 85 miles north of Thessalon, Walter Paquet, Green Bay, Wis., was in hospital here today. It required 60 stitches to close his lacerations.

Paquet might have been even more seriously hurt, had not the attention of the bear been drawn away by a companion, Louis Feix, also of Green Bay, who shot and killed the animal. Paquet came upon the animal on the trail and was attacked after he had emptied his rifle into its body without killing it.

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Battered unconscious and robbed of $350 near his home in the northwest section of the city today, John Taylor, an insurance agent, is in hospital in a critical condition with a possible fractured skull, broken nose, split lip and cuts to the face and neck.

Aerial Offensive Of Allies Rolls On in High Gear

Tens of Thousands Of Incendiaries and Explosives Dumped On Kiel, Flensburg

SHIPPING ATTACKED

London, May 20 (CP).—Taking up where last night's raiders left off, large formations of Allied planes swarmed over the channel by daylight today in the direction of Northern France. They flew so high it was impossible to tell whether they were fighters or bombers.

German planes, meanwhile, approached a south coast town but were driven out to sea by an anti-aircraft barrage before they were able to drop their bombs.

London, May 20 — (CP)—Speedy R.A.F. Mosquito bombers attacked targets in Berlin last night, the air ministry announced today.

It was the third attack on the German capital since May 13. Berlin also was bombed Sunday when the Mohne and Eder dams were breached.

Results of the overnight raid were not announced immediately, an air ministry communique saying merely that targets in Berlin were attacked. All bombers returned safely.

Meanwhile other R.A.F. heavy sluggers were ranging over Western Europe, blasting Axis airfields, railways and canals as the Allied aerial offensive rolled on through its eighth successive night.

Not a Cascade Raid

Last night's attack on Berlin had the character of repayment in kind of the series of German Air Force attacks on the London area. It apparently was the same sort of raid—a swift brief stab by high-flying fast planes.

Berlin has not had a cascade raid from heavy bombers since March 29.

In night operations extending along the coast of Europe from the Netherlands to Southern France, R.A.F. Whirlwind bombers attacked enemy air bases at Poix, Amiens-Glisy and Crecy en Penthieu and raided rail targets at Gamaches and Eu.

Speedy Mosquitos strafed a concentration of barges in the Ghent area and shot up a Tangerbrugge factory, while Beaufighters set off a traffic explosion on five barges in the Lys River and shot up three trains near Poisy, Sens and Bonnieres.

Enemy fighter opposition was stiff, and six of the big American bombers failed to return to their bases. A number of Nazi aircraft were reported knocked down in the two-hour running fight.

Intruding German planes struck last night at southeast England, Essex and the London area, causing two brief alerts in the capital, but it was authoritatively reported that bombs dropped at widely separated points caused little damage. A small number of persons were injured.

Foresee Air Offensive Against Japan As Ultimate Objective in Aleutians

(By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, May 20. (AP)—Development of a sustained aerial offensive against Japan was foreseen here today as the ultimate objective of the current United States campaign in the Aleutians.

No other area of the Pacific theatre where military operations are now underway offers sites for bases so threateningly close to the heart of the enemy's empire.

From those bases, as strategists here see the picture, bombers of the United States army air force may strike across the North Pacific sometime this summer at Tokyo itself.

United States reconquest of the Western Aleutians, therefore, may be taken as evidence that the goal of laying waste Japanese cities from the air, mentioned by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday, already has reached the stage of preparatory action.

The preparations would be greatly speeded up should Russia decide to make available air bases in Siberia and the Kamchatka Peninsula. That such a decision may be possible despite Russia's aloofness from the Pacific war so far was suggested when Mr. Churchill asserted that Allied chieftains are seeking to solve the military, geographical and political difficulties which now lie in the way of bombing Japan.

At present the most advanced United States base is on Amchitka Island, 233 nautical miles southwest of Attu.

The battle for control of Attu appeared to be moving toward a swift conclusion with United States ground forces, supported by naval guns, driving the outnumbered enemy troops into a pocket around Chichagof Harbor at the northeastern extremity of the island.

DROWNED

Late Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P. for Hastings East

Dr. H. Welsh Drowned In Opeongo Lake

Toronto, May 20 —(CP)— Dr. Harold E. Welsh, 47-year-old Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Hastings East, today was drowned in Lake Opeongo, Algonquin Park, it was learned here.

Dr. Welsh, first elected to the Legislature in a 1936 by-election, was fishing in Annie's Bay in the Lake with Daniel Goodwin of Bancroft. It was learned they had shut the motor off in their boat and were caught in the swift water and carried into a sluiceway. The boat overturned and while Mr. Goodwin managed to reach shore no sign was seen of Dr. Welsh.

A resident of Roslin, Dr. Welsh is survived by his widow and two children, Helen Barbara, at school in Toronto, and a son, Charles, Edmund, at home.

Dr. Welsh's victory in the Hastings East By-election in 1936 ended one of the most bitter election battles in the history of Eastern Ontario, an election which brought out the heaviest poll in the history of the riding. The defeated Liberal candidate at the time was Dr. Harold A. Boyce. Dr. Welsh was re-elected at the provincial general election in 1937.

Dr. Welsh once taught school to get enough money to put himself through medical college.

He was born May 5, 1896, at Moira, Ont., and was educated at Moira Public School, Stirling and Belleville Collegiates and the University of Toronto. In 1924 he married Mabel Annie Brown, daughter of Dr. W. E. Brown of Peterboro.

DELEGATES ATTEND WELFARE COUNCIL

Mr. H. B. Fetterly, Rev. Dr. Semple, Mr. T. D. Ruston, Mr. Wm. Lockyer and Miss Robins are in Toronto attending the Annual meeting of the Canadian Welfare Council being held at the Royal York Hotel. Also the Annual Meeting of the Association of Children's Aid Societies. This is the 50th anniversary of passing of the Children's Protection Act.

BATTERY STOLEN FROM PARKED CAR

Twice within three days motor vehicle batteries have been reported stolen to city police. Shortly after midnight Wednesday R. B. Carmen, in charge of the City Service parking lot off Front St., discovered that a battery had been stolen from a motor car left parked in the lot. The battery had apparently been taken earlier in the night and under the cover of darkness. Previously a battery had been removed from the truck operated by Ed. F. Dickens and Son earlier in the week.

CIGARETTES ARRIVE ELEVEN MONTHS AFTER SHIPMENT

Indicative of the fact that parcels to boys overseas almost invariably arrive at their respective destinations although in some instances a trifle late, the local C.N.R. War Veterans' Association recently received a card of acknowledgment for ciargettes received exactly eleven months after shipment.

The card of thanks was addressed to Mr. Albert Jones, chairman of the "Cigs" fund and came from the husband of a Belleville girl, LAC. L. R. Graziadei, of the Royal Canadian Air Force in Ceylon. The cigarettes for which the Vets were thanked were shipped from Belleville in April, 1942, and arrived in Ceylon in March of this year. A trifle late perhaps but they eventually "got there."

CAR RUG STOLEN

Sneak thieves stole a motor car rug from out of a parked car on Pinnacle Street some time Thursday night. The rug was in an automobile owned and operated by Lee Grills, R.R. No. 5 Trenton and the rug is valued as a keepsake, Mr. Grills assured police.

Car and Cash Are Stolen From Vivian's Garage

While nearby residents slumbered, robbers entered Vivian's garage in Shannonville early Thursday morning and after ransacking the premises and looting the cash register, stole a 1941 model sedan to effect their get-away.

Entrance was gained through a side window and once inside the robbers had easy access to the garage office and cash register. Some $10 in petty cash was taken, Mr. Vivian stated to investigating Provincial Police today. The motor car was apparently rolled out of the garage to the slope leading to the highway where it was started with little difficulty and the least amount of noise. The vehicle was a 1941 model Ford sedan bearing Ontario licence plates number 5-L-798.

Mr. Vivian personally checked the premises before retiring about 12.30 o'clock Thursday morning and everything was in order, he assured Provincial Police authorities.

However, found abandoned nearby was a 1930 model Oldsmobile sedan, which had been reported stolen at Kingston Wednesday night. Police are of the opinion that the gasoline supply in the Oldsmobile had become exhausted and the thieves merely drove it into the ditch and then broke into Vivian's garage to steal the Ford to continue their journey.

(Cannifton)

The funeral of John Morrison White, late residence, Cannifton, took place Wednesday afternoon, May 19th, from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, to the United Church in Cannifton where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. W. J. Davis, who also conducted the service at the graveside in Elmwood Cemetery.

THE LATE HIRAM IBEY

The funeral of Hiram Ibey, late residence 26 Strachan Street, took place Wednesday afternoon, May 19th, from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, and was largely attended. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Stirling Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Spencer of the Tabernacle United Church.

MRS. WILLIAM HAWKINS
(Girvin, Sask.)

Mrs. B. Morton, West Bridge St., Belleville, has received word that her mother, Mrs. William Hawkins, died suddenly at the home of her son, Mr. Wesley Hawkins at Girvin, Sask., on Friday, May 14th.

The late Mrs. Hawkins was in her 84th year and was enjoying good health when she was taken suddenly with a heart seizure.

Dual Celebration For Mr., Mrs. Kerr On Monday Next

May 24th of this year will be an occasion for a dual celebration in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kerr, 107 Station St., Belleville.

That day will not only mark the birthday of the Queen Mother, Queen Victoria, but will also be the 50th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Kerr's wedding, celebrated in Thomasburg on the 24th May, 1893.

Both residents of the Thomasburg district, the couple who on Monday will celebrate a half century of happily married life, were childhood sweethearts. Mrs. Kerr was formerly Miss Bertha Hawley.

Following their marriage the happy couple took up residence on the young groom's farm in Thomasburg district where for the next 36 years they followed the vocation of agriculture. Fourteen years ago Mr. and Mrs. Kerr and their family moved to Belleville.

Members of Tabernacle United Church where they attend regularly, Mr. and Mrs. Kerr now live comparatively retired lives. Mr. Kerr still attends meetings of the Loyal Orange Lodge of which organization he is a member, but his wife confines her interests to her home.

Two sons and two daughters will celebrate with their parents on their 50th anniversary Monday. They are Percy Kerr and Clarence Kerr of this city and Mrs. Mary Broad of Belleville and Mrs. Gordon Webb of Bonarlaw. There are six grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

EXECUTE TEN NORWEGIANS

Stockholm, May 20 (AP) — Ten Norwegians who allegedly were making preparations to join the Allies in the event of an invasion were executed by the Nazis yesterday, it was announced in Oslo today.

Swedish press reports from Norway said the Germans had seized seven other Norwegians as hostages because relative had escaped from the country. The arrests, said to be the first of this case, were made under a new decree providing that Norwegian men between 16 and 60 will be subject to seizure should any of their relatives flee.

Cadet Commanding Officer Reviews History of Corps

The history and organization of the Belleville corps of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets was reviewed before the members of the Canadian National Railways War Veterans' Association, when at their regular monthly meeting held at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday evening they were addressed by Mr. Arthur Wesley, cadet commanding officer.

Organized through the efforts of the Navy League of Canada, the local corps of sea cadets was formed to build better citizenship through training and discipline. They depend entirely upon the generosity of voluntary contributions for their support, their officers performing their duties without remuneration of any kind.

The Belleville corps was formed in August of 1942 and to date has a membership of 74, according to Commanding Officer Wesley. Instructors are William Crerar, Aubrey Coe, Jack Motty and Elburn Zeran, Medical officer is Dr. R. W. Tennent.

With the occasion being combined with Ladies' Night, many of the wives of the C.N.R. veterans were in attendance at the meeting during which a varied program was enjoyed. Madeline Walden and Barbara Diment teamed up in several delightful singing and dancing numbers, while also present were Danny Boy Smith and Piper Jamie Clarke.

Ladies' committee convener, Mr. Gardner, advised that twenty-two boxes were now being sent to navy boys from Belleville every month while assistance had also been rendered to the Veterans' cigarette fund which up to date has sent over three quarters of a million "cigs" overseas. Able Seaman Billy Spring and Coder Billy Morton, now home on furlough expressed their appreciation to the association for the good work.

The two sailor boys also gave a running commentary of slides shown of naval life and sailors which was thrown on the screen by Albert Jones. President of the association, Mr. Larry Amo acted as chairman with master-of-ceremonies being J. T. Walden.

POLICE COURT

Gambling Charge Follows Raid At Trenton

OTHER CASES

The Provincial Police anti-gambling squad moved quietly into the town of Trenton Wednesday night and following investigations arrested Albert Cowan, of Toronto, on a charge of inducing persons to gamble, to wit by playing a wheel of fortune.

Today in County Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House, Cowan pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs, while all of his wheel of fortune paraphernalia was ordered confiscated. Constable K. Collins, of the Provincial anti-gambling squad, told the court he had played the wheel of fortune on several occasions when certain combinations shown on the wheel resulted in his receiving cash rewards for his investment. Twenty-nine packets of cigarettes were also seized as the O.P.P. closed the game down.

"What shall we do with these cigarettes?" Crown Attorney B.C. Donnan, K.C., asked of the court.

"It is the usual practice of the department to give all confiscated cigarettes to the patients at the Christie Street Hospital in Toronto," replied Constable Tomlison, chief of the squad. Magistrate Lloyd ordered the smokes given as suggested.

Convicted on H.T.A. Count

Thos. E. Walton, Norham, pleaded guilty to two charges of infractions of the H.T.A. The accused was fined $10 and costs after being convicted of driving without a permit and the same amount on a careless driving count.

"The police must have been lenient in your case," remarked Mr. Donnan after G. M. Knox of Marmora had admitted to a charge of careless driving. Evidence revealed Knox's car had continued a distance of 72 feet down an embankment along Highway No. 14 south of Marmora recently. Knox was fined $29.75, which included $14.75 in costs.

Held for Examination

Chas. Bulpit, Thurlow, and Wm. Landry, Belleville, appeared on multiple charges of breaking, entering and theft of various cottages along the shores of the Bay of Quinte west of Belleville. Landry entered pleas of guilty last week and is awaiting mental examination. Today Mr. E. E. Follwell, local barrister, appearing for Bulpit, requested his client also be examined by Dr. McGregor, the Provincial Psychiatrist. The request was granted.

Fined in Liquor Charge

Morley Tanner, Campbellford, paid $17.50, including costs, after admitting to a charge of having liquor in a place other than his residence. A charge of vagrancy preferred against Sylvester Tobin, no address, saw the accused dismissed from custody. Tobin had been on remand in the county jail for the past 21 days and was given that number of days to date from his incarceration.

TWO PRISONERS RECAPTURED

Cornwall, Ont., May 20—(CP)—Henry Seguin and Joseph Martin, Cornwall, who escaped from the city jail early yesterday morning, were caught today in a barn two miles north of the city. Acting on a tip local police visited the barn and made the arrest. The men made no resistance. They will face a charge of breaking jail, in addition to the shopbreaking count they faced when originally arrested.

Hastings Surpasses Objective And All Previous Records

Subscriptions Placed in This County To Canada's Fourth Victory Loan Will Exceed $3,832,000

The magnificent effort of the workers and the magnificent response of the people provide stern warning to the enemies of freedom that "the folks back home", are backing to the limit, the boys in our armed forces, the greatest fighting force in the world because of their determination that their homes and families shall remain free.

Residents of Hastings County exceeded the objective and the total of the subscriptions will be over $3,825,000.

In providing this glorious victory the citizens of Hastings have again upheld the highest traditions of a great county.

To all those whose efforts and self denials contributed to this remarkable achievement the Hastings Unit of the National War Finance Committee extend WARMEST THANKS and HEARTIEST CONGRATULATIONS.

J. B. Boyce,
General Chairman.

Lt.-Col. Merritt V.C. Receives Canadian Cigarettes While In German Prison Camp

Acknowledgment that Canadian cigarettes are being received even in German prison camps through the Belleville Kinsmen Club "Fag Fund" was in evidence this week when Chairman Matt Currie received a card from Lieut.-Col. Cecil Merritt V.C., hero of the Dieppe raid and who has been a prisoner of war in Germany ever since.

"Naturally the Germans would not permit Lieut.-Col. Merritt to correspond freely, but an enclosed card was signed by him and returned by mail," Chairman Currie revealed after receiving the mail.

The individual shipment of 300 Canadian cigarettes was shipped through the Kinsmen "fag fund" on November 9th, 1942, since when Lieut.-Col. Merritt has been sent additional shipments regularly and in the same sequence as others on the Kinsmen's growing list. The post card acknowledging the receipt of the smokes was postmarked Feb. 25th, 1943, and has taken nearly three months to arrive in Canada through Switzerland. It was with much satisfaction the Kinsmen were able to announce that Canadian cigarettes are getting through to prisoners of war in Germany.

Largest Shipment

This week the largest consignment of cigarettes ever attempted by the Kinsmen "fag fund" was sent out when a total of 20,100 cigarettes were shipped in individual packets of 300 each to 67 Belleville boys serving overseas. Several voluntary contributions were received into the fund recently, but the Kinsmen list of Belleville boys serving in the armed services overseas increasing with rapidity the need for donations to keep the fund functioning is becoming more acute.

The list of Belleville boys serving overseas who were sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes each this week included:

W. Argue, R. W. Armitage, Leonard Bellis, W. C. Bellis, J. Bly, L. A. Boyle, A. C. Broad, J. Browning, E. J. Clarke, R. W. Clarke, H. Cooney, C. R. Crosby, D. Curlette, Jack Dracup, Douglas L. Enemy Aerial Stabs in London May Be Germany's Final Punch At Great Britain From Air

London, May 20 — (CP) — Sober judgment in London held to the view today that enemy aerial stabs at this city the past four nights, although ineffectual in themselves, might be a prelude to Germany's final punch at Britain from the air.

Civil defence units accordingly have taken up the slack that has been allowed to develop since the mass Nazi raids of 1940 and 1941 were broken up by the R.A.F.

Although taking with a grain of salt a Berlin radio boast that the raids were merely reconnaissance flights preparatory to a determined attack on Britain, air observers acknowledged that the German air force undoubtedly still has sufficient strength to cause plenty of damage here.

The quick, hit-and-run attacks beginning Sunday night were made by only a few planes, however.

"Lord Haw-Haw" said in a Berlin broadcast that the German raids were preparatory to an "all-out" air attack on Britain and that almost every German plane carried a high officer of the German air force to spot targets and observe British defences.

The German operations of the last few nights have differed greatly from the attacks of 1940 and 1941, when the enemy raids sometimes lasted from dusk to dawn and high explosives and incendiaries were dropped from many planes over broad areas.

In the assaults on London this week, the Germans have not used incendiaries and have employed fighter-bombers rather than bombers. The visits have been short and the enemy bombs have been dropped seemingly at random, particularly in the London area.

The technique of this new phase has been similar to that followed in attacks on Algiers and other North African ports, which frequently were under alert two or three times a night during the Tunisian campaign. Britain has been bathed in bright moonlight since Sunday.

MR. JACK HAIG

Well known in this city and conversant with insurance problems in the Belleville district, Mr. Jack Haig has been added to the staff at the local office of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company it was announced today by Mr. Gilbert Stackhouse, supervisor, Belleville Division.

A veteran of the present Great War, Mr. Haig enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and proceeded overseas with the first contingent in 1939. After serving overseas for almost three years he returned to Canada in the spring of 1942 as a sergeant instructor and in October of the same year was discharged from the army as medically unfit.

Mr. Haig's association with the insurance business dates back to shortly after his leaving Queen's University where he took a Trade And Commerce course. In the Toronto office of the Manufacturers Life he served as assistant secretary for two years following which he and his brother Squadron Leader "Mac" Haig co-founded the Belleville insurance firm Haig Bros. This firm is now known as Haig, McDougall and Bateman.

In his present position with the Belleville office of the Manufacturers Life, Mr. Haig will specialize in the field of estate analysis and insurance consultant, it was stated by Mr. Stackhouse.

A native of Campbellford, Mr. Haig is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Haig. He, therefore, is well acquainted with the Bay of Quinte district. "Jack", as he is known to a wide circle of Belleville friends, married a Brockville girl, Miss Irene Seymour, and has one son.

Carelessness Of Smokers Chief Cause of Fires

Seigniory Club, Que., May 20 (CP)—Carelessness of smokers continues to be the top-ranking cause of fires in Canada, W. L. Clairmont of Ottawa, Dominion Fire Commissioner, said today in reporting to the Dominion Fire Prevention Association that Canadian property losses from fire increased $3,139,331 last year to $31,182,238.

Four provinces—Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Alberta—showed decreases in property loss from 1941 but the other five reported "substantial" increases, Mr. Clairmont told delegates to the annual meeting.

The proportion of dwelling house fires still is around 75 per cent, Mr. Clairmont said.

Fires of known incendiary origin totalled 158 last year, involving a loss of about $325,000 he said, adding that it was "gratifying to note a decrease in this cause, which decrease is no doubt due to the effect produced by the growing efficiency of investigating authorities."

Although smokers' carelessness remained the principal cause of fires, Mr. Clairmont said the number of fires from defective heating equipment, including chimney blazes, was "altogether too great" and he expressed belief the association should concentrate on that problem.

AIRMAN PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Brockville, Ont., May 20—(CP)—Flight Sergeant Grant said to be from an Ottawa air training station, is in military hospital here today, suffering from exposure when a plane he was piloting crashed and submerged in 150 feet of water in the St. Lawrence River 20 miles west of Brockville yesterday.

Grant extricated himself and was picked up in a small boat when he attempted to swim ashore.

Col. Drew Favors Immigration Policy

Toronto, May 20—(CP)—An immigration policy aimed at bringing skilled hands and brains to Ontario would be one of the main planks in the platform of the Progressive Conservative Party if a general election comes to Ontario, Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said last night.

He was addressing a meeting of the Beaches Progressive Conservative Association at which T. A. Murphy, present legislature member for Toronto Beaches riding, was chosen as candidate.

"When the time comes for an election in Ontario, it will be my undertaking and the undertaking of those who support me," Col. Drew said, "that this province is going to be the sheet anchor of the British connection and that this province is going to welcome skilled hands and brains to Ontario.

"Here in Ontario we have an opportunity to build as never before in our history by welcoming into the province the best of our own flesh and blood from the British Isles. The only thing that can prevent the greatest expansion in our history is lack of faith in ourselves and tying ourselves up with socialistic bands that prevent us using the hands and brains God gave us.

Kingston, Ont., May 20—(CP)—Cheese production in Eastern Ontario factories showed a decline in April—2,736,157 pounds produced in April, 1943, as against 4,655,097 pounds in April of last year. Butter production for the same period of 1,004,930 pounds was almost double April, 1942's figure, 546,140 pounds.

Figures for the four-month period, released by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, were, for cheese: four months, 1943, 5,164,645 pounds; four months, 1942, 9,086,980 pounds. Provincial figures for cheese production in comparable periods were: April, 1943, 4,833,000 pounds; April, 1942, 8,160,804 pounds; four months, 1943, 8,951,933 pounds; four months, 1942, 18,039,139.

Eastern Ontario butter production, four months, 1943, 2,242,564 pounds; four months, 1942, 1,320,866 pounds. Ontario butter production: April, 1943, 7,106,807 pounds; April, 1942, 5,914,875 pounds; four months, 1943, 20,740,356 pounds; four months, 1942, 18,515,022 pounds.

Churchill Greatest Englishman Of Our Time—Eden

London, May 20. (CP)—Describing Winston Churchill as "the greatest Englishman of our time", Foreign Secretary Eden declared today he had no doubt the Prime Minister's visit to the United States "will, like his previous travels, bring lasting gain to the Allied cause".

Addressing a Conservative Party conference, Mr. Eden struck a keynote of confidence that the coming months would see an ever-increasing Allied air offensive against Europe—an objective that Mr. Churchill indicated yesterday in his Washington statement that it would be worthy of experiment to attempt to bomb the Axis out of the war.

Declaring that Germany already is being bombed 'not only around the clock but around the map, Mr. Eden said:—

"Let me assure Germany that despite what Hitler and Goebbels are saying the Bomber Command still is gathering strength.

"As the months pass our enemies will feel its blow even more heavily.

"We know what is best for Germany—bombing by day and night ceaselessly and continuously, hour by hour, until the war is won.

"That is the program we have prepared for Germany".

Turning to Italy, he said: "Nor will Mussolini be forgotten".

Commenting on the turning tide in the battle of the Atlantic, another factor mentioned by Mr. Churchill in his address to Congress, Mr. Eden said: "Our ship construction is mounting, our merchant shipping losses are decreasing, and sinking of U-boats is increasing".

The Conservative Party conference, told by Mr. Eden that "we are met at a time in our National Affairs when it's proper to rejoice", sent a message to Mr. Churchill expressing "loyal and unabated support".

Salem, Ore., May 20 — (AP) — A day in the life of Mrs. Georgia Ramage McCornak, whose husband is in the South Pacific: She works all day in the state agriculture department office; spent her lunch hour donating a pint of blood to the Red Cross; hurried home and did all her housework; reported for her second full night's work at a cannery which was threatened with closure because of lack of help. Then she fainted.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DE WITT MACKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Prime Minister Churchill in his address at the joint session of Congress yesterday made a couple of statements which give rise to the question of whether he has signalled any fundamental change in Allied strategy, and they are these:

1.—"I regard the bringing of effective and immediate aid to China as one of the most urgent of our common tasks"

2.—"Opinion, Mr. President, is divided as to whether the use of air power could by itself bring about the collapse of Germany and Italy. The experiment is well worth trying, so long as other measures are not excluded".

These striking passages naturally make one wonder whether the High Common has abandoned the program of regarding Hitler as enemy No. 1, and has given up the idea of invading the continent at the earliest feasible moment. As a matter of fact it's quite likely that Mr. Churchill has deliberately invited speculation with the idea of causing the enemy to burn midniht oil over the problem.

No Change of Basic Policy Seen

However, search of his speech fails to reveal to me any change in the basic policy laid down at the beginning of 1942. The welcome indication that "effective and immediate aid" is to be given to hard-pressed China, thus throwing more weight into the war on Japan, doesn't mean that the Allies are easing up in their attack on Hitler and are moving all their war equipment into the Pacific. It does mean that the Allies now have amassed sufficient striking power so that they can devote more energy to both jobs at once.

We seem to get plenty of substantiation for that thought in this important statement by the Prime Minister:—

"In our conferences in January, 1942, between the president and myself, and between our high expert advisers, it was evident that while the defeat of Japan would not mean the defeat of Germany, the defeat of Germany would infallibly mean the ruin of Japan. The realization of this simple truth does not mean that both sides should not proceed together".

Take More Of Weight Off Russia.

Another indication of the Allied determination not to slacken in the European campaign is seen in Churchill's statement that "we must do everything in our power that is sensible and practical to take more of the weight off Russia in 1943".

Still, doing everything "sensible and practical" for the Russians wouldn't necessarily include invasion and establishment of that second front which they are so anxious to see in France. Here we come up against the Prime Minister's suggestion about trying to knock Italy and Germany out by bombing. Does this mean that invasion has been abandoned?

It's hard to believe so. Mr. Churchill is a great believer in the efficacy of air power. However, he is a military expert of long standing, and nobody ever heard him say that you could occupy an enemy country and mop up its army with warplanes. Somewhere along the line a big Allied army has got to be put ashore on the continent to deal with Hitler's powerful land forces.

Bombing Necessary.

It's true, however, that you've got to bomb hell out of Italy and Germany before it will be feasible to invade with troops. We are in process of doing exactly this, and one suspects that the shrewd Mr. Churchill has the idea that maybe we might be lucky enough to kill two birds with one stone.

If either Italy or Germany, or both of 'em, should crack up under the bombing—why so much the better. Certainly Italy might succumb to air pressure, since she already is in the frame of mind to quit.

CONGRESS PRAISES

Points Brought Out

1. Britain will wage war against Japan "side by side with you in accordance with the best strategic employment of our forces while there is breath in our bodies and while blood flows in our veins."

2. Effective and immediate aid to China is "one of the most urgent of our common tasks."

3. "I repudiate . . . the slightest suspicion that we (the British) should hold anything back that can be usefully employed" in the Pacific.

4. The U-boat danger is "still the greatest we have to face, but "I have a good and sober confidence that it will not only be met and contained but overcome."

5. Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt earnestly hope soon to meet with Premier Stalin of Russia and Gen. Chiang Kia-Shek of China.

6. It is the settled policy of the Anglo-American staffs to continue the all-out air offensive over Europe and "at the earliest possible moment" duplicate it over Japan.

7. The laying of Japanese cities and munitions centres in ashes holds a high place on the list of objectives at the present conference with President Roosevelt.

Must Carry Fight

8. With creation of armies and production of munitions and planes in full swing, the prime air of the Allies now must be carrying the fight to the enemy on the "largest possible scale."

9. The Allies must "do everything in our power that is sensible and practicable to take more of the weight off Russia in 1943." Hitler is reserving his "supreme gambler's throw for a third attempt to break the heart and spilt" of Russia, but will fail.

10. "I do not intend to be responsible for any suggestion that the war is won or will soon be over. That it will be won by us I am sure. But how and when cannot be foreseen still less foretold."

11. One grave danger facing the Allies to the end is the "undue prolongation of the war." He said it is the dragging out of the conflict at enormous expense "till the democracies are tired or bored or split that the main hopes of Germany and Japan must now reside."

COUNTER-ATTACKS

Eight Nazi Planes Downed

Fighters and bombers, with the Red air force holding superiority, continued major scale battles in the sky. The German air fleet made repeated efforts to raid Leningrad. At least eight German craft were brought down in air duels and by anti - aircraft on the city's approaches, the noon communique said.

The Germans attempted to land on the Soviet-held bank of the Kuban Valley's lower reaches and were ambushed. The hidden Soviet troops allowed the boats to approach, in some cases to make a landing. Then rapid fire rifles were turned on the enemy, killing about 200.

Northeast of Novorossisk last night's action was restricted to artillery bombardment and the bombing and strafing of German positions by Russian airmen.

A dispatch to Red Star, the army newspaper, said the Germans were counter-attacking in numerous sectors and that the strength of their blows indicate the enemy is getting plenty of reinforcements into their Kuban bridgehead.

With the terrain rapidly drying the Germans are pushing more tanks into several sectors of this battlefront, it was reported.

Feeding Pullets the FUL-O-PEP Way saved me enough to buy another VICTORY BOND!

NOTE: It's sound common sense to make substantial savings on feed costs, feeding new pullets the Ful-O-Pep Way! Some have asked why a commercial feed manufacturer advocates a plan of restricted feeding. But the answer is simple. By advocating this basic principle in the Ful-O-Pep Rearing Plan . . . substantial economies are possible on a national scale, as well as to the alert poultryman who can raise stronger, healthier birds than by unlimited feeding. With Ful-O-Pep Chick Starter* and Growing Mash*—feeds of vast VITAMIN RICHNESS and nutritive value—as a foundation of the Ful-O-Pep Plan, poultrymen may complete the growing ration with greater quantities of whole oats and scratch grains . . . thus saving considerably.

Axis Shows Mortal Weakness

"The first mortal weakness" of the European enemy has been shown by the Allied air war. The drawing of German planes from the fighting fronts to purely defensive operations is costing Germany loss of aggression and initiative—something which will "prove a major factor in victory for the United Nations."

Prime Minister Churchill so spoke before the Congress of the United States on Wednesday and added that "it is well worth finding out" if air power alone can cause the collapse of Germany and Italy, about which opinion is divided.

Ceaseless bomb raids will make it impossible for these Axis nations to carry on any war industry on a large scale anywhere in the enemy countries or in dominated Europe.

A thunderbolt was hurled ot Japan by Mr. Churchill when he prophesied the utter destruction of enemy power on the Pacific until their war industries and their cities lie in ashes; and that Britain would fight to the finish alongside the United States in destroying Japanese tyranny and aggression "while there is breath in our bodies and blood flows in our veins."

Of Japanese cities and industries these were his words, "in ashes they must surely lie before peace comes to the world." Immediate and effective aid to China was forecast. Mr. Churchill painted a picture of the Allied interests in the Pacific which must be restored and retrieved to the Allied powers at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Churchill struck the note of solidarity of the American and British peoples and the other United Nations in a righteous war and in peace.

His praise of Russia which is still bearing, he said, the burden of the war on land led him to state that Britain and the United Nations must do everything to take the weight of the enemy off Russia and against whom Hitler, he prophesied, would make a third and supreme gamble in an attempt to knock Russia out and again would fail.

Before the United Nations the British leader held out the lofty ideal of democracy. Only by singleness of purpose, tenacity and endurance can we discharge our duty to the future of the world and the destiny of man.

Mr. Churchill spoke under the inspiration of the great Allied victory in North Africa and of his visit in the great throbbing Republic of the United States.

Why Meat Will Be Rationed

Canadians have now before them the meat rationing program which is to come into effect on Thursday, May 27th., and they have had information as to the cuts and the amount of each cut rationed.

There has appeared in Canadian newspapers "the story behind the rationing of meat." In this the people are informed that meat is a weapon of war and that after all the special wartime demands are provided for, there will be only one half of the meat produced in Canada which will be available for ordinary domestic consumption at home.

This is not unnatural. Members of the armed forces must have ample meat supplies guaranteed for it is one of the most potent of foods. Then too the people of Canada are pleased to help supply the people of Britain with meat. The Motherland has now to depend more and more on Canada for food supplies to keep up its weekly meat ration of 28 cents worth of meat per person.

Other demands on the meat supply connected with war work include added consumption of meats by civilians engaged in defence projects such as the Alaska Highway and the Shipshaw Power undertaking.

There are three other cases where meat must be provided. The Red Cross needs canned meat in large quantities to send to prisoners of war in enemy lands. Besides there are many more ships under Allied flags now calling at Canadian ports and these are engaged in war work and must be provided with meats. And as other sources of meats have been closed to usual customers, Newfoundland and the West Indies have to a large degree depend on Canada.

All these are justifiable demands, which Canadians in honor must satisfy. Even with that there remains ample under the new rations for fortunately the production of meat in this country has been increased. Accordingly while production available for civilian use has been cut in two, the reduction will actually mean only about 15 to 20 per cent in the average household. Food and nutrition experts have approved of the amount of ration which is to be applied and find it ample to maintain the nutrition needs of young and old.

There still remain portions of meat which are not to be rationed, namely oxtail, liver, heart, tongue, kidney, wieners, bologna and other smoked sausages, cooked meat loaves and spareribs, as well as fowl and fish.

Rationing as has been explained is a means to equal sharing for civilians, all getting alike and with a wide range of cuts of different types of meat available. Undoubtedly many persons did not hitherto realize how many cuts there are available in a beef, a calf, a hog, a lamb or a sheep. The Prices Board will distribute charts so that the people will be made familiar with the various types of meat. To many undoubtedly these will open a new experience of values in meats which they had not dreamed of.

Nature's Process

("Our Dumb Animals")

There is nothing so refreshing to horses' feet as the damp coolness of grass into which they are turned in May; and nothing so calculated to remove every enlargement and sprain as the gentle exercise which the animal voluntarily takes while his legs are exposed to the cooling process of evaporation, which is taking place from the herbage he treads. The experience of ages has shown that it is superior to all the embrocations and bandages of the skilful veterinarian. It is renovating process of Nature, where the art of man fails.

"I'll Take Vanilla"

(Christian Science Monitor)

First he walks, then he talks, and the first two words he puts together are ice cream. That is if he's an American youngster. From then on, it's his favorite dessert. And now he thinks of it — mountains of it — when he's fighting in Africa, or building airfields in the jungles.

The story is told of a Marine in Guadalcanal who discovered an ice cream freezer. There was high excitement in the camp. Someone rushed for ice which he found in an ice-house abandoned by the Japanese. Everyone fought for a chance to turn the freezer.

There was a gallon and a half to be divided between 85 Marines. It wasn't much. It wasn't frozen very stiff, "but it was the best thing we ate on the island," vowed one Marine.

American fliers in Britain have discovered an ingenious way to make their favorite dessert. They mix the ice cream in a large tin can and anchor it in the gunner's compartment of a Flying Fortress. Soaring high over enemy territory, it is well shaken and frozen to perfection. Upon return to base, a successful raid is celebrated in true American style.

Ice cream on the home front is a bit on the scarce side now, with heavy whipping cream off the menu for the duration. But wars don't last forever. Someday again there'll be plenty of strawberry-chocolate and vanilla, or what have you, in all those wonderful varieties that stagger imagination and memory and tease the palate. Not that it's important at all. It's just pleasant to think about.

Letter To The Editor

CHEESE PRICES

To Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

Your issue of May 18th reports part of the discussions in the House of Commons for the previous day, and deals with questions and answers regarding the cheese industry.

As secretary-manager of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association I feel that it is my place to say something about the discussion that took place, and I hope that you will consider what I have to say of sufficient interest for publication.

Mr. Gardiner, in answering a question from Mark Senn, M.P., made the following comparisons: present cheese prices with prices of 1920; the 1942 April price with the estimated April price for 1943; this year's price and the price paid in 1939, pointing out in this instance that the price today is more than double that of 1939.

These comparisons may be interesting, but they have no bearing whatever upon the question as to whether or not the price of cheese today is an adequate price to the producer. The increase over the 1942 price, as announced by the Government is only ¾ cent per pound for Eastern Ontario production and one cent for Western Ontario production.

There has been representation made by producers to Mr. Gardiner, pointing out that under the increased costs of production this year cheese prices should be increased three cents per pound over the 1942 price. This same recommendation was made by other dairy organizations and agricultural committees, and now it has been brought up on the floor of the House of Commons.

The Cheese Industry is under Government control. All export contracts with the United Kingdom are made by our Government, and all domestic sales are under Government price control. The producers' efforts are confined entirely to production. Such regulations make it necessary for the producer to look to the Government for a price that would cover his costs and allow a fair margin of profit. This is what is being asked for, and although there have been many comparisons made with prices of other years, I know of no instance where anyone has stated definitely that the price as announced for this year is an adequate price.

Many articles have been written about the cost of producing a hundred pounds of milk and a great deal of investigational work has been carried out in trying to arrive at such information. So far there seems to be a great division of opinion on the matter, but here is a practical farmer's opinion which I believe is worth something:

A hundred acre farm, all tillable land, should produce in a year 100,000 pounds of milk from a herd of 12 cows. This farm will grow all the feed necessary for the herd. The average price of cheese milk at $1.75 a hundred pounds, (which was the average return under the 1942 price) will return that farmer $1,750.00 in a year. The revenue from other sources such as hogs, chickens, etc., will no more than pay interest on investment, therefore from the $1,750.00 all expenses must be met. A farmer who can do this is far above the average; he is a good farmer, with good cows, a good farm and good equipment. Is $1,750.00 gross an adequate year's return for such a man?

These are the reasons why the producers of Ontario are asking the Government, under these wartime conditions of control and higher expenses, to increase the price of cheese three cents per pound over what it was in 1942, and all the comparisons in the world will not alter the fact that such an increase is warranted.

Of the cheese producers of the Dominion it is those in Ontario who are the most concerned in cheese prices, because in 1939 we produced 72 percent of Canada's production; in 1940, 69 percent; in 1941, 69 percent, and in 1942, 62 percent. In 1943 we will be again expected to produce between 60 and 70 percent of the total requirements.

Yours very truly,
S. L. Joss,
Secretary-Manager.

SEAMAN'S COMPASS

Nobody knows who invented the seaman's or mariner's compass.

It was a product of the necessities of navigation and its early history is lost in the obscurity of the past.

That the invention of an instrument so important to commerce and civilization should be claimed by many people is only natural.

Volumes have been written to prove the claim of one nation or another to the invention of the device that made the open seas highways of commerce.

Different writers have ascribed it to the Chinese, Hindus, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, Etruscans, Finns and Italians.

It is possible that the compass, in its crudest form, developed independently in different parts of the world.

Chinese writers say there is a legend that their people employed compasses as early as 2364 B.C. There is positive evidence that Chinese mariners used some sort of direction-finding device between 300 and 800 A.D. Apparently the Hindus, Persians and Arabs also had compasses at a very early date.

The magnetic properties of magnetite or lodestone were observed in ancient times and the earliest compasses consisted of a magnetized needle attached to a splinter of wood floating in water.

Once mariners learned that one end of the needle would invariably point in the direction of the pole-star, the ultimate development of the compass was assured.

In all probability the floating compass was developed in China or India and was carried from there through Persia to the ports of Arabia and the Levant, whence it readily found its way to Europe.

The earliest reference to the pivot-needle compass, consisting of a magnetized needle turning on a pivot instead of being attached to a floating splinter, was made in Europe in the 12th century. Another reference made in 1217 indicates that such compasses were in general use at that time.

This fact disposes of the stories that the pivot-needle compass was invented in 1302 by an Italian named Flavio Gioia, that it was introduced into Europe from China by Marco Polo, and that it was either invented or introduced into Europe by the English monk and philosopher Roger Bacon.

The Italians were early improvers of the pivot-needle compass, if they did not actually invent it, and in the 14th and 15 centuries Venice, Genoa and other Italian cities were manufacturing these instruments for sale.

As a matter of fact, the Chinese were still using the floating needle compass after Europeans had developed the pivot-needle instrument to a considerable degree of perfection.

Pleads for Consecrating Spirit Of Crusade, Which War Requires, In Building Post-War Order

Toronto, May 19 — (CP) — "Canada has no need to be ashamed of its war effort," said Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Archbishop of Toronto and Primate of all Canada, in his charge to the Anglican Synod of Toronto Diocese yesterday.

Archbishop Owen returned last week from a seven weeks' visit to Britain, most of it spent with the armed forces. He was enthusiastic in his praise for the spirit of the men.

The Archbishop told of the concern expressed by the men overseas with post-war problems and called for the application of Christian principles to social reconstruction.

"I do not profess to understand money," he said. "But I do know that there are two phases to this awful upheaval in which we have been called to live — that the first is the war, and the second phase is the building of the social order after the war. I do plead that this phase will require the same kind of sacrifice, of effort, of concentration — the consecrating spirit of a great crusade, which the war requires.

"The great danger will be the danger of exhaustion, of going to the opposite of effort, and letting go, seeking distraction and pleasure in the throes of a great reaction. Let us now realize these things, prepare, so far as possible for these things, and be ready to take our full part in making a better Canada for our sons and daughters."

What the Jungle Does To Those Who Fight The Japs

A young Melbourne University student who interrupted his course to join the army, wrote to his professor a letter which the Melbourne Argus, in reproducing, described as one of the most remarkable human documents to come from the fighting zones.

From a Student's Letter in the Melbourne Argus

"The Jap," wrote the student, "plays a very small part in our fight; most of our energy is spent in fighting fever, weather, and mountains. Most people have no idea of the amount of patrolling that is done without ever seeing a Jap. Reports seem to indicate that life is one long succession of fighting. If only people would realize the months of mind-killing, soul-destroying searching and waiting, they would have a clearer picture of affairs. The country finally conquered me, not the Japs, and I have been in hospital on and off for the last month.

"For a start, everything was interesting, nothing a trouble, for I was fit, and the scenery and natives, conditions and difficulties were all so novel as to be absorbingly interesting and beautiful.

"But those impressions were short lived; soon the disease called 'troppo' started to close our minds. What was formerly beautiful became drab, what was interesting commonplace. The jungle began to have its effect. Nature became an enemy.

"The sun is no longer life giving; it burns down so that even a man's soul seems to be parched. The moon is no longer a friend; it provides light for enemy bombers or for a sniper.

"Night's blanket no longer comforts; it means endless sentry duty, patrols, and cover for the enemy. Streams of crystal clear water are no longer refreshing; they mean crocodiles, and soaked boots from continuous fording.

"Rain is no longer cleansing; it turns native pads, the only means of travel, into stinking, clinging, slippery, knee-deep mud. Butterflies of every hue are no longer entrancing; their loveliness infuriates, as does their blundering into the sweat of one's face.

"Native villages are no longer places of interest: they mean ulcers and diseases, for one must live in them to escape the untiring sun and rain.

"Mountains are no longer citadels of grandeur: they mean breaking backs and aching legs and scorn, for we alone passed what was formerly an impassable barrier in three places.

"The ocean is no longer cooling: it is always warm with the tropical heat.

"Natives are the only welcome sight, for their untiring devotion and efforts to keep us supplied, and give a much-needed boost to morale.

"At first while one can still think, minds are far away, recalling school day, studies, food—and occasional quotations in French, Latin or German for me. Occasionally I even found myself thinking in French.

"But a man's worst enemies are the trees. They hold continual mists, stand dejected and dripping, covered in moss and creepers, while the undergrowth, never touched by the sun, is dank. The tangle of the jungle seems to press down on one, and brings on a perpetual monotony. It is always there, holding out the light of day, and shutting in any inhabitants, until they are all turned in on themselves in an offensive solitude, the jungle seeming to cut off the company of even their best friends.

"And finally the jungle accomplishes its task and closes every man's mind, so that he becomes an unthinking automaton, his brain a void, content to drift where the jungle dictates.

"Occasionally, however, one is rescued from its smothering clasp by the sight of a view which would be too irresistibly and entrancingly fragile for even an iconoclast to break. Then the whole process starts again, until the jungle is reinstated as the mind's dictator.

"Now that I have leisure to think again my studies keep recurring, and I find plenty in my course over which to chew. In fact, the break between second and final year may prove beneficial . . . by allowing my own ideas to germinate.

"When I think of ancient Rome and its mythology, I have to smile at the thought of Jean Giraudoux and his fantasies. Modern history is a constantly recurring thought provoker, and I find Virgil, Caesar, Rousseau, Montesquieu, Diderot, and the rest invaluable. When I read the banal books and magazines which constitute our reading material, I am reminded of Mauriac. The poets of Rome, Germany and France supply plenty of themes for thoughts.

"But the study which has remained the most in my mind has been the study of Jean Giono. Giraudoux and Mauriac have not left nearly the impression left by Giono, for, up here, a man's instincts are all pantheistic. Nature is ruler, and still remains adamant. The struggles of man interest her little, for she scorns man's weakness and knows that eventually she will conquer him. Nature is too interested in her own struggle, of the sky against the earth, of mountains against river, of trees against rain . . . the struggle of life. So at any rate, it seems to an individual whose mind has been taught pantheism by Giono.

"Although by this account it would seem that life is a misery, it is far from it. Discomforts seem to provide a sort of relish to season a humdrum life. And though a man grows to hate the oppression of the jungle, he learns to love this land.

"Perhaps the natives have something to do with it, for they prove great friends, always cheerful with a joy from a source too deep to comprehend. I had a bit to do at one time and another with food trains and the natives would never let me carry anything but my tommy-gun. They called me 'Tabita,' and my word was cheerfully accepted as law."

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE

Freedom's Fires Must Be Fed Our COAL!

CANADIANS must dig and deliver coal that we may sail convoys, power vital war plants, keep our railroads rolling, preserve the nation's health!

The coal mining industry—miners and management alike—have done wonders to provide coal, but they need help. More workers must be provided, or we falter—possibly fail—in this grim hour. Nature has been generous but we must help ourselves. Our mines are rich, but undermanned.

By Proclamation, His Excellency the Governor General in Council has declared that labour supply for coal mines ranks as a national emergency. Further, in order to provide manpower for coal, the Governor in Council has issued an Order in Council aimed at swelling the flow of coal from mine to firepot.

This Order is of vital interest to everyone in Canada. Every Canadian should read and study its provisions, to see whether it demands any action on his part:

1. EVERY EMPLOYER, REGARDLESS OF HIS INDUSTRY, must advise his employees of these Regulations, and he must assist in discovering whether any of his employees have had previous experience as coal mine workers.
2. EVERY EMPLOYEE, REGARDLESS OF HIS INDUSTRY, who has had previous experience as a coal mine worker, must report that fact to his employer not later than Tuesday, May 25th, 1943.
3. A "COAL MINE WORKER" FOR THESE PURPOSES is anyone who, since January 1st, 1935, has worked under provincial certificate or license in or around a coal mine, or who, since the same date, has been employed for a total of at least 24 months in the production of coal (except at office work).
4. EVERY EMPLOYER, NOT A COAL MINE OPERATOR, must report in writing to a Selective Service Officer not later than Tuesday, June 1st, 1943, full details on any of his employees who are ex-coal mine workers.
5. SELECTIVE SERVICE OFFICERS ARE AUTHORIZED to require ex-coal mine workers to report for interview and to accept work at a coal mine.
6. SELECTIVE SERVICE OFFICERS MAY REQUIRE any man in any employment, if subject to Mobilization Regulations but rejected for Military Training, and certain others excused from Military Training, to accept employment at a coal mine.
7. NO COAL MINE OPERATOR may terminate the services of any coal mine worker without written permission from a Selective Service Officer.
8. NO COAL MINE WORKER may leave employment at a coal mine without written permission from a Selective Service Officer.
9. EVERY EX-COAL MINE WORKER, returning to the industry under these Regulations, will be paid wages at the established rate for the job at which he is placed; and the Government will pay wages of 40 cents an hour, 8 hours a day and 48 hours a week, to any ex-coal mine worker required to leave his present employment under these provisions, but not placed immediately at coal mining.
10. A BOARD ALLOWANCE of not more than $7.50 a week may be paid an ex-coal mine worker now returning to a coal mine, if required to live away from the residence of his dependents.
11. PRESENT AND FUTURE COAL MINE WORKERS will be granted postponement from Military Training to February 1st, 1944, by virtue of their occupation; and no coal mine worker will be accepted for voluntary enlistment in the Armed Forces of Canada, prior to February 1st, 1944, except under permit to enlist from a Selective Service Officer.
12. NO EMPLOYER IN CANADA, EXCEPT A COAL MINE OPERATOR, may solicit for employment or hire any ex-coal mine worker.
13. REGARDLESS OF ANY DOMINION OR PROVINCIAL LAW, male persons at least 16 years old may be employed as coal mine workers, and female persons at least 18 years old may be employed as surface coal mine workers.
14. WAR EMERGENCY TRAINING CLASSES will be available for training men as coal mine workers.

Such is the substance of the new regulations. Full details may be had at any Employment and Selective Service Office. If these provisions require action on your part, you are urged in the national interest to act immediately. Severe penalties are provided for non-compliance, but the Government relies on the co-operation of the citizens of Canada to make prosecution unnecessary by prompt action as required. This is a grave emergency. Assist if you can.

WEDDINGS

DENIKE—FARNHAM

On Saturday morning, May 15, the United Church parsonage, Cannifton, was the scene of a quiet wedding when Ruth Jean, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farnham, Cannifton, was united in marriage to Mr. Harold Aiken Denike, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Denike, of Corbyville.

The bride's costume was a dark grey tailored suit with navy accessories and corsage of red roses. She was attended by her sister, Claudia attired in a tweed suit with brown accessories and corsage of pink roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Clayton Ritz. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. Davis of Cannifton, in the presence of immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

After the ceremony the wedding party motored to Belleville for dinner at Ye Old Tavern. The bride and groom took an afternoon train for Toronto and points west and on their return plan to make their home in the township of Thurlow.

BETHANY W.M.S.

The regular meeting was held at the home of Mrs. P. Osland on May 12th. The president, Mrs. W. Yateman, was in the chair. The offering amounted to $4.66 and was dedicated by Mrs. W. Clarke. The topic of the month was "The Youth of Canada in the Armed Forces and War Factories." This was very capably handled by Mrs. Yateman and Miss H. Walker. A short play pertaining to the topic was given by Mesdames W. Bradshaw, G. Sills, W. Casey, H. Walker, R. Ritz and C. Eggleton.

Mrs. H. Casey took over the meeting. Mrs. B. Hollinger read a poem and a Mother's Day reading was given by Mrs. O. Burr. Miss Joy Osland delighted all with an instrumental solo. A report on the Prebyterial was made very interesting by Mrs. P. Osland and Mrs. C. Eggleton. A short temperance reading was given by Hazel Walker. There were 19 ladies present.

Complexion Packs at Home

Fay Emerson recommends a thorough facial cleansing before applying a pack.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SHOULD IT happen that you are tearing around like mad every day and can't find time for the restful sessions at the beauty shop as you did of yore, you can get in some good work at home.

When the skin carries an oily film and the texture isn't as fine as you might wish it, give yourself a rousing face scouring, then apply this mask. Fluff up an egg white until it is firm, add the strained juice of one lemon and enough almond meal to form a paste the consistency of whipped cream. Spread it on smoothly.

Get yourself a cozy resting place, pick up your mystery story, read four or five chapters. By that time the paste will be drying somewhat. Dip a heavy wash cloth in hot water, hold close to the flesh; the combination of pack and moist heat will rejuvenate the complexion, put it on its toes again. Repeat the hot compresses half a dozen times. Wring out the cloth, remove meal and egg white.

This is the time for an invigorating massage treatment. Have the flesh as dry as a bone. Spread on the cream with upward sweeps, do brisk slapping and tapping movements.

To help clear skin of blackheads, get a few ounces of kaolin from your druggist. This substance is our old friend Fuller's Earth that has been sterilized. If the skin is oily, mix the kaolin to a paste with witch hazel. If the skin is dry, use mineral oil instead of witch hazel.

Spread on a fairly heavy application. Let it remain on until the mask starts to flake. Remove with warm water, dry, give the flesh a gentle creamy massage.

How to Start a Controversy; Compare Today's Woman With Her Grandma

About fifty-fifty were the orchids and brick-bats hurled at this column after its little homily on the housewife's demand to buy her bread already sliced.

The little homily referred to consisted of a discussion between the present day matron and her grandmother, concerning things the modern housekeeper had to do without, owing to the war.

She threw so many tantrums, did our housewife, about the bread not being sliced. The Little Woman didn't think much of the curtailing of diaper service, and compelling that lady to look after Junior's three-cornered pants herself. Another source of sorrow was the rationing which put a crimp in can-opener housekeeping. Lack of tires and gasoline prevented the running of the family car, cutting down the chance of shopping 'round and looking for bargains — what was the world coming to?

Grandma didn't know what the world was coming to, either, with all the fussing and fuming over a few inconveniences. She not only baked her bread. She sliced it too. Grandma put up her own fruits and vegetables, and had no use for a can-opener. Sliced bread for lunches would have been a luxury. She had to cook tremendous meals for men working on the farm. She washed diapers for big families of kids and never complained about it—in fact, she thought diapers were no fit discussion for polite ears.

Too bad there isn't space to give more than a sentence from a few of many letters on the subject.

"Orchids to you for your column on grandma and her granddaughter. I'm an Army wife and pretty green about housekeeping, but the fuss women made over sliced bread disgusted me. When one thinks of people dying of hunger — like the heroic Greeks — and the pampered Housewife making such a howl over a few inconveniences, the only thing to bring them to their senses would be a few of those much discussed token bombs dropped."

Another letter:

"Grandma didn't have a can-opener but did she spend forty-eight hours a week in a war plant rivetting, etc.? If you wish to put women back to grandma's day, why expect them to do war work? And why should any sensible person want the machinery built to slice bread, go to waste?"

Sorry, lady, we haven't space to print any more of your letter. You dared us to print this; we've humbly complied.

Another letter:

"Please let's have a few more shots in your column at the housewife who weeps over a few inconveniences when so many women in Europe are starving."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

How to Handle Beau Who is Popular With All the Girls

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

One of my boy friends has a habit that makes me cross . . . and makes my mother and father furious! He's really a very nice boy, and in most things very well-bred and considerate. All the girls are very keen about him, and jump at the possibility of a date with him. I guess this has spoiled him a bit, and he never takes the trouble to come for me at my house, but always suggests I meet him at the movies or wherever we are going. My parents like him, don't object to my going out with him, but definitely . . . and I mean definitely . . . object to his not calling for me. What can I do to change this habit he has? I must admit I like him too much to do something to end our friendship.

Marie.

Well, Marie, since you say he's a mannerly young man in most respects, and considerate, put your trust in the fact that you can make him realize that you are the kind of girl who is accustomed to consideration. Men (of any age) have more respect for the girl who shows them, tactfully and graciously, that she is to be respected, that her wishes are to be regarded. I certainly agree with your parents that this beau of yours should call for you at your home. So the next time he suggests your meeting him at the movies or wherever, turn on your best personality — smile and say, for example, "I'd love to have you call for me at my house, Bob. How about seven-thirty? . . . then we can make the eight o'clock show. Mother and Father haven't seen you for a long time, and they'd love to say 'Hello' to you." This "direct appeal" will, I'm sure, click with his sense of breeding and consideration.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

PAINFUL SCIATICA DUE TO NERVE INFLAMMATION

Sciatica, a painful affliction of the lower back and leg, is due to an inflammation of the sciatic nerve and its branches. Many things can cause this nerve to be inflamed. For example, poisoning with drugs such as arsenic or lead; excessive use of alcohol, or exposure to severe wet and cold climate. Then, too, sciatica may be caused by infections in the teeth, tonsils, kidneys, bladder or prostrate gland. Such diseases as gout, in which an excess of uric acid collects in the blood, as well as a deficiency of vitamins, and diseases such as diabetes and syphilis, add to the list of disorders that can lead to sciatica.

The way in which these various conditions cause the afflicition is either to produce an inflammation of the nerve or the tissues around the nerve, or, indirectly, to have some effect on the muscles, ligaments and joints in the lower part of the back and hip. Then this effect spreads to the nerves and its sheath.

Among the conditions limited to the area of the nerve itself are inflammations of the muscles, of the joints in the lower part of the spine.

When sciatica occurs, the first thing that is necessary is for the patient to have a thorough examination, including an X-ray of the lower part of the spine. The blood pressure should be taken and the teeth, tonsils and other parts of the body examined to make sure that no infection can be detected. The diet should be studied to determine if it is lacking in any particular respect.

If the cause of sciatica can be found, efforts to remove it should be made. Of course, this is not always possible. The chief thing that the patient desires is to have some relief from the pain, which is severe and is usually located in the lower part of the back and in the upper part of the leg. Occasionally, the pain may be so severe that some pain-deadening drug must be administered.

In all instances, the patient should be put to bed at complete rest. Now and then it may be advisable to put a cast on the leg to be sure that movement of the sciatic nerve does not occur. After the severe symptoms have passed, gradual stretching of the leg may be required. Then the patient is allowed to be up and exercises are employed.

Another form of treatment which has been found to give relief is the injection into the painful area of a local anaesthetic, a drug which overcomes pain sensation. At times it may be found that the condition producing sciatica can be relieved only by means of an operation.

Women's Hospital Auxiliary Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. H. Stobie, with Mrs. Stobie, the president in the chair.

The reports of the various association committees were given. Interest was centred on the forthcoming rummage sale and band concert, the proceeds of which will be devoted to various activities of the Hospital Auxiliary.

Miss Ruth Thompson, director of nurses at the Belleville General Hospital, reported on the social work during the month. Fruit, magazines, tobacco, wash dresses, shoes and stockings were purchased for those patients unable to buy them.

CHATTERTON W. I.

The Chatterton Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Ben Bleeker on May 13, under the direction of the new president, Mrs. Claude MacInnis. A letter was read from Mrs. C. Holmes, provincial president, thanking the institute for their kind thoughts during her recent bereavement.

Mrs. Bert Finkle was appointed delegate for the district annual. Mrs. Berson Mitts, district director, gave a report on the directors' meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. in Belleville. Mrs. MacInnis gave an interesting talk on current events. Poems were read by Mrs. H. Reid, Mrs. E. Demille and Mrs. B. Finkle appropriate for Mother's Day. The meeting was closed with the benediction. All enjoyed a dainty lunch served by Mrs. Bleeker and Mrs. G. Frederick.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Here's To The Bride!

A great many people are worrying and predicting the worst for those hasty war-marriages that are being entered into every day. And their anxiety is well-founded in some cases.

Still, these are war-days when everything is streamlined and done in a hurry; and many young couples are marrying in haste, who would not ordinarily, rush headlong over the deep-end. Many a hesitant swain whose proposal was long overdue is now marrying the girl, in a frantic desire to tie her to him, and have a few days of happiness before he sails.

Besides, even if they haven't known each other very long, our modern young men and women are mentally alert, and on such frank terms of comradeship that they are usually quite capable of sizing each other up on short acquaintance.

Never before have brides and grooms started on the journey of matrimony with such a clear and accurate road-map, and such a complete knowledge of where they are heading. The war has removed the last vestige of camouflage and misunderstanding between the sexes.

Only a few short years ago, the average girl was completely at sea about men. She couldn't decide whether they wanted her to be subtle and sophisticated — or to be frank and friendly and casual. She didn't know whether to be sweet and feminine and old-fashioned—or to be wild and gay and full of whoopee.

She didn't know whether to rush into a man's arms, respond eagerly to his kisses, and run the risk of frightening him off. Or to snub his overtures and refuse to accept his casual love-making — and run the risk of losing a date.

And men were equally hazy about girls. They suspected all women—but were never quite sure of what. A man never could make up his mind whether a girl would be indignant if he played the heavy lover on the way home in the car—or insulted if he didn't. He could never be certain whether she was playing him for a wedding-ring or just playing him for a good thing.

But the war has changed all that! It has sobered us up and brought us out of the fog of mutual misunderstanding. It has made men and women of us, who see and comprehend each other clearly.

Girls have dropped their poses and men have shed their doubts and cynicism. For the first time in many years, when a man and a woman look into each other's eyes at the altar, they can read each other's meaning, by the light of sincerity between them.

Not all war-marriages are mistakes. Here's to the thousands of sincere and worthy young couples, who are marrying today, in order that each may have someone to love and dream about — someone to fight for and work for—while he is overseas!

PRACTISE MAKES PERFECT

Practise at home to perfect your dancing. Basic steps and smart variations of popular dances will be at finger-tips with just a little trouble.

If you have acquired the habit of walking correctly with free, easy carriage, you've already taken the first step toward grace and proficiency in ballroom dancing.

Good dancing requires the ability to walk backward as easily and smoothly as forward. Once you have become skilful in this you will find that most dance steps are just variations of walking, such as stepping sidewise, turning, pausing or changing rhythm.

A woman's contribution to the success of any dance is learning to follow a variety of partners gracefully by cultivating a sense of balance and keeping herself always relaxed and pliable when dancing.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "HOME COURSE IN NEW BALLROOM DANCES" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front St. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Boots! Boots! It's Not Kipling, It's Army Salvage Depot

BOOTS! BOOTS! ITS NOT elc .. .. ewtoef a th —fu .. .. "Keep your feet happy" says the sign on the wall. Privates A. Gaudes P.E.I. and J. V. Murphy of Halifax make old army boots like new.

Corporal J. Sarner of Bale Verte, N.B., works in the Army salvage depot repairing shoes with material supplied by the Dept. of Munitions and Supply.

Private E. V. Seaton tests repaired boots by dipping them in a pail of water. They must be watertight before they go back to the troops.

Canada's armed forces are putting their best foot forward, and that foot is shod in the best boot that money can buy.

Men in the Munitions and Supply Department who buy the boots for the men and women in the services are responsible for the purchase of nearly 50 types of footwear, from the small 2½ shoes of AW1 Sally Littletoe to a big size 13 for Private Suitcase Simpson. They let contracts to Indian tribes to make moccasins, and to rubber goods factories for knee boots worn by the members of the forestry corps.

From coast to coast, more than 50 Canadian shoe and rubber factories are turning out first class leather boots and shoes, rubber boots, overshoes and special footwear for the men and women in uniform. The industry employs over 15,000 people and production of all types of military footwear is now more than 100,000 pairs a week. Since the beginning of the war, about 10,000,000 pairs have been purchased.

The boot repair department of the Army Salvage and Disposal Depot in each military district saves the government a huge sum of money every year. These departments turn out an average of 300 boots a day and have cut the use of boots per man from 3½ pairs a year ago to 2¼ pairs now.

Shoes with good uppers but with soles ruined, are softened by a special method which renews the leather and sent back to be rebuilt. A lot of boots were condemned before because the shops could not get them repaired in time, but Captain H. T. MacKenzie of Bridgetown, N.S., in charge of the Disposal Depot in Military District No. 6, says repair production has been speeded and now there is no waste. The saving in this district through repairs has been between $125,000 and $150,000 a year.

The boot repair department is only part of this large establishment whose function is to save all the various trappings of war which in other days might have found their way to the junk pile.

An average of 140,000 articles a month are taken to the Halifax plant and from these about 113,000 are repaired and put back into use immediately. It takes about 120 men and women to operate the depot; of these about 75 are civilians and the rest are army personnel. Each military district does work like this in a similar depot.

Increases in the personnel of the three services mean corresponding increases in the size and number of orders for footwear. The various types purchased direct from the factories include regulation army boots, high leather boots, walking out drdess shoes, canvas rest shoes, hip rubber boots for sailors, special boots for motor-cyclists and members of the armoured corps, high altitude boots for airmen, hospital slippers, and summer and winter shoes, rubbers and overshoes for the girls in uniform.

The Department of Munitions and Supply has also placed orders in Canada for other United Nations.

The quality of military shoes is indicated by their cost. A pair of regulation ankle militia boots, bought in tremendous bulk at the lowest possible wholesale price, costs the government about $5.50. They would sell at $10 in retail stores. Sturdy high leather boots for paratroopers, which would make any backwoods hunter green with envy, cost as much as $8.50 a pair. Motorcyclists' shoes cost $9.25 a pair.

The very best upper and sole material is reserved for military requirement. Heel and counters are made of solid leather. Heavy linen thread is used throughout, and the manufacture of military footwear calls for the highest type of workmanship.

An army may march on its stomach, but if its feet hurt it won't go far!

BLANCHED VEGETABLES
(New York Times)

The Campden Research Station of the University of Bristol, England, has been studying blanched vegetables, which, before they are canned, are scalded for a few minutes. The process has been used for many years, because the flavor seems to be improved and space is saved by shrinking. But what are the losses? It turned out that the flavor is really improved in some cases, but that there is a loss in sugar, proteins, minerals and vitamin C. These losses are not serious. Hence Campden recommends that the time of blanching be adjusted to the physical state of the vegetable.

Says Neutrality Is Sucking The Life-Blood From Eire

That neutrality is slowly sucking the life-blood from Erie, and that many thousands of people there are living on the verge of starvation, are the statements made in the following article depicting life beneath the surface in neutral Eire.

By the Special Correspondent in Ireland of the Leeds Yorkshire Post

During the past eighteen months many English and Scottish business men have visited Eire. Some have stayed only a few days, others several weeks. The majority have returned to their homes convinced that Dublin is the gayest and most exciting city in the British Isles.

They have seen the shops of Eire's capital overflowing with choice delicacies which in England are either non-existent or to be had only in small quantities and then on production of a ration book.

Each day during their stay they have had two eggs for breakfast, cream cakes with tea and perhaps a nice juicy steak to round off the entertainments of the evening. In fact, they have had a wonderful time.

I do not blame those people for obtaining as much as possible of what Dublin has to offer, but I do think they are doing their country a great injustice when they say that this Irish city is a wonderful place compared with the cities of their homeland, where life bears the mark of austerity and where self-denial is in these days an essential characteristic.

With their views of Dublin I cannot agree. Having lived there until recently I feel qualified to describe accurately the real conditions in the capital of Southern Ireland.

It is true that Dublin has much to offer the visitor from across the channel, and after living for three years in a country at war the Englishman must be excused if he waxes enthusiastic on the charms of the Eire capital. As he motors from the boat to his hotel he feels that time has slipped back and he is living again in the piping days of peace. Here he will find peace time quality and quantity. If he has a well-filled wallet he will find that Dublin has much to offer in the way of expensive entertainment and food.

But, on the other hand, if his means are limited he will as surely discover that a good time in this neutral city is the prerogative of the rich.

Recently Mr. Sean Lemass, the Eire Minister of Supplies, warned the country that the outlook for the present year is very grave. "Up to now," he said, "we have escaped most of the hardships of the war, but conditions are worsening . . . Our dangers are not becoming less." That is the other side of the Dublin picture — the side which the visitor rarely sees unless he determines to ascertain the real facts for himself.

I am not exaggerating when I say that thousands of people in Dublin are living today on the verge of starvation. It is a sweeping statement, but it is true nevertheless.

Not far away from the brilliant shopping thoroughfares will be found the real Dublin. Here, within a radius of one mile from Nelson's Pillar, and amid conditions of extreme poverty and misery, live the bulk of the working classes.

Many of these unfortunate people are often denied the necessities of life. Within 300 yards of wealthy O'Connell street I have seen a family of five sitting in darkness before a fire composed of a single turf. One brown loaf and a pint of milk represented the only food in the house. This is but one example of conditions in Dublin today. I could quote hundreds more.

In a little two-roomed dwelling near the Liffey I spoke to a middle-aged docker whose views were interesting. "I know men and women," he said, "who are starving themselves to give their children food." He added that the Government was aware of the position but seemed unable to improve the conditions.

Unemployment is rife in Dublin. This in spite of the fact that thousands of young men have left the city to work in Great Britain.

A clergyman in one of the poorer districts informed me that Eire would have collapsed long ago had her workers not been absorbed by war industries in England. "Only a few people are aware," he said, "of the true conditions which exist here today."

In these slum areas men and women are praying daily for an early British victory. When our forces invaded North Africa I saw one old Dublin woman make the Sign of the Cross and say: "With God's help, it won't be long now." Only peace or the abandonment of neutrality with full support for the Allies will bring happiness to these stricken people.

That, briefly, is the other side of the Dublin picture and one seldom seen by the casual visitor to this city of contrasts.

The conditions described are not confined to Dublin. They will be found in all parts of Eire, for neutrality is slowly sucking the life-blood from the country, which is becoming weaker and weaker as a result.

British Premier Still Fascinated by Flying

By A. C. CUMMINGS

(In the Vancouver Daily Province)

Flying fascinates Premier Churchill, who has just been awarded his "honorary wings," the flying badge of the world's greatest body of airmen, the Royal Air Force.

He made his first flight as long ago as 1912 when aeroplanes were called "flying stringbags" and similar disrespectful names. The pilot, in those days, sat perched in a sort of open gondola in front of the engine.

Mr. Churchill took a trial flight on a Summer's day and wrote later about it: "I was fascinated by the idea of flying; and yet side by side with desire, was also a dread of going into the air for the first time."

He learned quickly at the naval and military schools and in December, 1913, made his first long flight of nearly an hour in a dual control Short biplane. When they had climbed to 500 feet, the pilot handed over charge of the machine to his passenger, and Mr. Churchill remained at the controls for three-quarters of an hour, covering a distance of 35 miles.

By May, 1914, the First Lord of the Admiralty, as he then was, had made sufficient progress to try handling a machine solo. He was the first member of the Cabinet, I believe, to qualify as an airman.

He ran risks, however. Soon after the Great War ended he was taking off with his pilot from an aerodrome near Paris, when the aeroplane struck a bump on the ground, turned somersault, and broke in half. Mr. Churchill found himself hanging head downwards, but escaped unhurt.

Another experience was not so lucky. It happened a few months later and put him off flying for a while. He had motored to Croydon airport, near London, after his day's work at the War Office and, accompanied by Colonel Scott, his pilot, set off on a short evening flight.

While turning, 90 feet above ground, the aircraft failed to respond to the controls and dived earthwards.

"This is very likely death," was the thought which flashed through Mr. Churchill's mind, as he afterwards related. Two or three seconds later the aircraft struck the ground with tremendous force.

Though suffering from shock and bruises, Mr. Churchill took Colonel Scott to hospital and then went back to the House of Commons to make a speech and answer questions.

"I reproached myself with having been the cause of Colonel Scott's sufferings, and from that day to this I have rarely been in the air," he wrote in 1932.

But the present war changed his reluctance about flying. He is now one of the greatest of air travellers among statesmen. And he delights in it.

"I am honored," he said to the Air Council, and he sincerely means it, "to be accorded a place, albeit out of kindness, in that comradeship of the air which guards the life of our island and carries doom to tyrants, whether they flaunt themselves or burrow deep."

Presentation To Bridal Couple

Wallbridge. —A most happy event was the gathering at Sidney Town Hall on Friday evening, last, when neighbors, friends and relatives met to honor Mr. and Mrs. Blake Johnston (nee Catherine Moore), who were recently married.

After a short social visit Mr. S. M. Nicolson called order and a short program was given, consisting of community singing, a reading by Mrs. Clarence Woods, a piano solo by Miss Gwennie Ketcheson and vocal music by intermediate girls.

Mr. H. Ketcheson then read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Johnston expressing the high esteem in which they are held by the community; the curtains were then drawn back and a table, decorated with many beautiful and useful gifts was presented to the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston both expressed their heartiest thanks and a short time was spent in dancing.

Spectre of 1918 In Germany Is Very Real

London, May 19.— (CP Cable)— Denis Weaver, Daily Chronicle correspondent here on leave after 18 months in Stockholm, said today there are definite signs from Germany that "the spectre of 1918 is very real".

In a special article on his impressions of Germany, he said this feeling of depression is due to these factors: the Russian campaign is regarded as a disastrous failure; Allied air raids are expected to get steadily worse; the threat of a second front which Germans thoroughly fear; the realization they're hated "from Narvik to Matapan".

Weaver said sabotage is growing in German-occupied countries and the importation of foreign labor "is the most important factor making for disruption".

He admitted that Germans have a tendency to tell foreigners matters are worse than they really are.

High Water Floods Dock of C.S.L.

Picton —(Special)— The water in the Bay of Quinte is at an unusually high level. The gale on Sunday which did much damage to wharves elsewhere did none here since it was blowing down bay and more protection is offered by the high banks.

The C.S.L. dock has been under water for some days and this necessitated the laying of planks from the warehouse to the freighters. The water came more than half up the warehouse and cases of canned goods had to be moved.

It is thirteen years since a similar condition prevailed.

At Glenora, whereas it was usual to drive on the ferry on a level with the dock, it is now necessary to drive up a steep incline, the ferry riding high in the water.

Boat houses along the bay shore show an almost record high water mark. The highest level it not expected until the middle of June.

Miss Louise Coleman is in Toronto this week.

Mrs. P. A. Vanderwater has returned from Toronto where she spent the winter.

Dr. A. H. Walton spent the weekend in Toronto.

Victory Loan Record

Victory Loan totals yesterday were general canvass, $1,087,000 ($37,000 over the quota); special names, $90,400, a total of $1,177,400. The objective was $1,150,000. Returns will not be complete until Thursday night. The record of the armed forces was outstanding. The R.A.F., Picton, raised $46,500 or 775 per cent of its quota; the R.C.A.F., Mountain View, $53,900 or 108 per cent of its quota; the 13th Canadian General Hospital, R.C.A.M.C., Picton, $2,250, or 225 per cent of its quota. In seven months the county has loaned the sum of $2,081,000 in bonds.

Draw Winners

There were 1,050 persons who placed dimes in the Dimes for Victory envelopes during the past week and Monday night at the Regent Theatre 24 more winners of War Savings Certificates were announced. There were as follows:

Ten Pounds Sugar Allotted for Canning

Picton (Special) — The Local Rationing Board, at a meeting yesterday, decided upon an allocation of ten pounds of sugar per person for canning purposes. The Board recommended that additional sugar be made available for use with fresh fruit. The announcement has caused housewives, especially those on farms, to complain that the amount is far from adequate that it will be impossible to preserve even the usual amount of fruit.

On the opening night, the patrons and patronesses included His Honour the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Albert Matthews, Mayor and Mrs. Fred Conboy. The audience included many distinguished persons including Hon. and Mrs. G. Howard Ferguson, Lady Kemp, Sir Ellsworth and Lady Flavelle, Col. and Mrs. R. Y. Eaton, Col. and Mrs. George Drew. The proceeds of the three presentations are for charitable purposes. Capacity crowds attended the four presentations given here.

Toronto—(CP)—Miss Winnifred Darke today is the first woman to serve as secretary to a Premier of Ontario. Miss Darke was appointed shortly after Premier Nixon was sworn in as premier yesterday. She served as his secretary when he was Provincial secretary. She was born at Lindsay, Ont., and attended Peterborough Normal School.

Burma Supply Bases Pounded By RAF Bombers

New Delhi, May 19—(AP)—R.A.F. bombers and fighters attacked enemy supply concentrations, warehouses, and water and motor transport in wide-ranging operations over Burma yesterday without loss, a British headquarters communique said today.

In two small scale conflicts with Japanese ground troops meanwhile, British forces killed 23 of the foe and took two prisoner.

Beaufighters, Hurricanes and Mohawks, on offensive patrols over enemy water transport along the coastal area of Burma from the Mayu River to Sandoway, destroyed at least 12 supply Sampans and damaged many others, the bulletin said.

Blenheim bombers escorted by fighters blasted enemy supply concentrations east of Taungup during the day and long-range Wellingtons bombed objectives in Taungup itself last night, leaving several large fires burning in both forays.

Warehouses were hit by bombers along Satyoga Creek near Akyab.

A British patrol surprised a party of 42 Japanese on reconnaissance in the Taung Bazaar area, killing 15, taking two prisoners, and forcing the remainder, of whom at least half were wounded, to flee in disorder.

SCOTLAND YARD TOP WAR POLICE

Famous British Force Maintains Its Place in Criminal Investigation

London, May 19 —(CP)— Battlefront exploits of men in uniform have eclipsed the peacetime fame of Scotland Yard but the soft-footed men of the criminal investigation force are still the backbone of Britain's law-enforcement organization.

They still keep their bags packed 24 hours a day, sleep with one ear open for the telephone bell and travel all over the country to untie the strings of crime baffling local authorities.

Local police forces all over Britain call on Scotland Yard when they're in difficulty. On such occasions the Yard sends out Senior Chief Inspector Hatherhill, or perhaps Salisbury, Beveridge, Greeno, Thorp, Davis, Barratt or McDonald, its other top-notch ferrets, all Chief Inspectors.

They belong to the Criminal Investigation Department whose chief, a barrister, Sir Norman Kendal, is credited with having built around him a virtually fool-proof, crime-beating machine.

The inspectors who have to know something about medicine as well as law, including wartime defence regulations, come and go from offices in Whitehall. The highest-paid of the inspectors gets only the equivalent of $2,400, plus a $5 weekly rent allowance and a 30-cent weekly boot allowance that dates back to the "flat-foot" days of policing.

Five per cent of the inspectors' pay is knocked off for pension. On an out-of-town job, their expense allowance is $1.90 for one night away and $4 for 24 hours. Allowances as well as salaries have recently been criticized as out of keeping with the expertness required of the inspectors.

Rawdon

The Anson ladies quilted a Red Cross quilt at the home of Mrs. Don Campbell last week.

Mr. John Reid had the misfortune to run a fork tine into his foot.

Mr. William Henry Scott won the quilt sponsored by Wellman's L.O.L. and R.B.P. A large number attended the bingo game.

Mount Pleasant Rawdon Young People's Union met on May 12 at the William's School with a fair attendance.

Miss Esma Cole presided and Mr. Douglas Campbell read the Bible lesson. Mrs. Bert Jeffs presented the devotional in the form of poetry.

Plans were made to visit Burnbrae and to close the season at Oak Lake in June.

Miss Muriel Welbourn read a story and Mrs. Cyrus Summers gave a reading. The president conducted a number of games.

Decrease Predicted For Potato Acreage

Toronto, May 19. (CP)—Although the Dominion government has asked a 10 per cent increase in potato acreage in Ontario, there will likely be a decrease of 20 per cent compared with the acreage sown last year, the Ontario Department of Agriculture reported today.

Crop officials gave as a reason for this reduction, the difference in price between certified seed and ordinary table stock, with growers believing that ceiling prices should have been set for certified seed. The labor shortage and difficulty in obtaining machinery also are factors affecting production.

Moira

Moira — The postponed meeting of the Red Cross met at the home of Mrs. J. F. Herity on Tuesday. One quilt was quilted and ten dresses cut out and distributed. The annual report was read and further means of raising funds discussed. It was decided that at the next meeting each member would donate material.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Scott and family had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bailey, Stirling, on Sunday.

Mrs. Garrance Bird and daughter of Sarnia are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morland.

A very welcome visitor to the community is Miss Carrie Hazzard, pastor of Wesleyan Methodist church Camden, N. J., who is spending a week with her mother, Mrs. A. Hazzard. Miss Hazzard has been giving Sunday evening broadcasts over the Philadelphia station, but owing to interference caused by the hydro power line, they cannot be received here.

Mrs. Wm. Scott and Mrs. Leon Wilson have gone to Owen Sound to attend the funeral of Mr. Graham, Mrs. Scott's uncle.

Mr. Blake Ketcheson is working at Batawa.

Mr. Harry Vanderwater, who has been seriously ill, is slightly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. George Foster spent a day with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell of Foxboro recently.

A large number attended the funeral of Mr. Wesley Maynes on Tuesday. His sudden death came as a great shock to his many friends.

Mr. Russell Maxwell is under the doctor's care.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Ketcheson, with Lyle and June Williams spent Sunday with Mrs. J. Williams, Plain Settlement.

Thomasburg

W.M.S. Meets

Thomasburg — The Women's Missionary Society of Thomasburg United Church held their May meeting at the home of Mrs. J. E. Bateman on May 11th.

The theme of the worship service was "Canada's Youth in the Armed Forces and the Factories."

The collection was dedicated by Mrs. Wm. Yateman, a former member of the society, and a guest at the meeting. Mrs. J. E. Bateman was in charge of the program. A playlet "Asleep or Awake to Our Missionary Task," was a unique feature of the meeting. A poem was read by Mrs. Bateman.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the hostess, Mrs. Bateman for the use of her home and the meeting closed with a hymn and the Mizpah Benediction.

Cemetery Board Holds Meeting

A meeting of the Thomasburg Cemetery Board was held recently and the following officers were named: Secretary-Treasurer, J. E. Bateman; Stewards, J. H. Blakely, Earl Jones and A. C. Porter along with Lorne Carleton and W. A. Morton, the Secretary-Treasurer for last year; Caretaker of the cemetery for the year 1943, Geo. H. Walker.

Whitehall Notebook

By SCOTT YOUNG

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 20 —(CP)— Financial plans of the Common Wealth Party came in for a spot of good-natured ribbing from political observers after the party's recent conference at Manchester.

Such quips as "Un-common Wealth" headed newspaper stories from the conference after one of its main decisions was to set up an enlarged political organization with a budget of about £20,000, the funds to be guaranteed by Sir Richard Acland, M.P., the movement's founder, and Alan Good, one of its principal supporters.

Each agreed to provide funds up to £500 a month to the treasury, but in announcing this Mr. Good the party's honorary treasurer and director of about 25 companies in Britain, said he hoped "we won't be called upon to meet the guarantee."

"Then the criticism could be made that this is not a movement of the people, but a movement of a group of rich men and that would be a damned bad thing," he said. "I hope the branches and members can find the money themselves."

Mr. Good, who is chairman of 17 of the 25 directing boards he serves, was supported in this statement by Sir Richard.

With Warrant Officer John Loverseed its only elected member in parliament (Sir Richard was elected as a Liberal), the party is going in for publicity campaigning in a big way, by tube-station posters, signboards and other means. Under the new financial set-up, managers of the sections into which the party has divided the country for promotion purposes will receive from £400 to £600 annually.

Bob Edwards, new chairman of the Independent Labor Party and at 38 one of the youngest men to hold that office in the party's 50-years existence, has had a colorful career.

He is a full-time official of the Chemical Workers' Union, and has been active in British Socialism since his youth: In 1937 he fought in Spain as leader of the I.L.P. contingent in the Republican army, and once during that war travelled from Spain to the I.L.P. conference in Glasgow to plead for further assistance for the Republicans.

Travelling was difficult in those days (one of the accepted ways of getting to Spain, since passports were issued only under extraordinary circumstances, was to buy a weekend ticket to Paris and skip across the border) but when Edwards returned to Spain he made it even harder, travelling by way of Holland to try to arrange food shipments for the starving populace of Bilbao.

Crossing the Holland - Belgium Frontier, he dressed as an artisan and mixed with a crowd of laborers who crossed daily to their work in Belgium. Reaching France wasn't so easy, but he made it eventually through Sedan, on the Maginot Line, after a Belgian miner hid him for several days. On the last lap of his journey he had to climb the Pyrenees from France to reach Spain.

Another colorful character, one whose only political connection now is his association with the Fighting French here, is Capt. Alain Savary, 35-year-old former governor of St. Pierre - Miquelon. He is training with the Fighting French commandos.

Capt. Savary headed the light naval force which seized the islands from Vichy control on Christmas Eve, 1941, arresting the Vichy governor, M. G. De Bournat. Capt. Savary served there as governor until March of last year, when he asked to be relieved of the governorship and assigned to active duty.

Meanwhile, M. De Bournat returned to Occupied France and later was assigned to the governorship of the island of Corsica. And now, as Capt. Savary trains in commando tactics, he says his desire is to meet M. De Bournat again — to repeat the arrest.

"I can just imagine De Bournat looking up from his desk in his office saying: 'What! you again!"

Lobby Notes: Viscount Halifax's son and heir, Capt. Charles Wood, M.P., received a warm welcome when he made his first Commons appearance in three years . . . He had been serving in the Middle East, but has been posted near London . . . The war has been tragic for his family . . . His younger brother, Capt. Peter Wood, was killed in action last October and the youngest, Lieut. Richard Wood, lost both legs recently as a result of wounds.

The treasury is working on a plan to hit at black marketeers by curtailing drastically the number of pound and ten-shilling notes issued . . . If it is given effect all deals but payments for wages and a few other certified purposes will have to be carried out by cheques which are easier to trace.

Brigadier Now Serving As Pte. In Army Overseas

Montreal May 20 —(CP)— The Montreal Star reported yesterday in a newspage story that J. A. LeClair, formerly Officer Commanding Military District No. 5 at Quebec with the rank of Brigadier, now is serving overseas as a private in Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal.

The Star said it was "presumed" Brig. LeClaire resigned his commission in order to get back overseas.

He served overseas in the First Great War with the Black Watch and the 79th Field Battery, R.C.A., rising through the non-commissioned ranks to emerge at the end of hostilities as a lieutenant. He re-enlisted in the army in 1930.

Five Families Marooned 3 Days In Their Homes

Minden, Ont., May 20 —(CP)— Five families in this county seat of Haliburton have been marooned in their homes since Monday following record-breaking rains in the northern lakes region, it was reported yesterday.

Gull River, which drains Horseshoe Lake and Twelve-Mile Lake, and which passes through the village, has risen to flood proportions. Already one bridge has been carried downstream.

The highway linking Lindsay and Huntsville, remains open, but within the village the flood waters have reached the highway. Present conditions indicate even greater swellings of the river.

"It's common to see boats, canoes and punts tied to veranda posts," County Constable Lorne Pritchard said.

Water craft are used to get to the highway. Basements in the business section have been flooded, as have cellars in many homes. The school on the top of a hill remains open.

Livestock have been driven to the hills, but chickens, their coops made into ponds by the flood, have been removed to haylofts and many farmers are using boats to tend their flocks. Rubber boots are in demand, but are of little protection, in some spots where the water is from four to eight feet deep.

An all-time high for water in the Murray Canal, part of the Trent Canal system, which joins the Bay of Quinte and Brighton Bay, was set Tuesday, when the water reached a depth of 16½ feet. The last time the water passed the 16-foot mark was in June, 1929, when it rose to 16 feet 2 inches.

Canadian Gunner's Courage Praised

Somewhere in England, May 20—(CP Cable)— Gnr. Jack Kustre, a farmer's son from Dauphin, Man., was being praised today by Canadian army artillerymen for his courage and quick thinking in driving a blazing truck of high-explosive ammunition out of a vehicle park during manoeuvres.

By this action, Kustre probably prevented some casaulties and saved other equipment from being lost.

He leaped into the blazing truck's cab and drove it several hundred yards, then ran for cover. A few minutes later ammunition for small arms and 40 rounds of highly-sensitive Bofors shells exploded, without damaging anything other than the truck.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

The Emotions And High Blood Pressure

I have spoken before of the professional boxer who, in avoiding a car that had "cut in" ahead of him, turned off the road to avoid an accident and his car overturned. While uninjured, the delay meant driving the rest of the journey at top speed to be at the scales at 2 p.m. the day of the bout.

The examining physician stated that his blood pressure was so high he could not pass him for the bout. The boxer, still excited and upset, explained that he was nervous from the accident and had fought for years, amateur and professional. The physician called in a colleague who likewise was not inclined to allow him to box. However it was decided to make a further examination just before the bout in the evening. The physicians were still doubtful that evening but finally allowed him to box.

He returned home still upset in mind, visited his own physician who explained that these other physicians did not know him personally or they would have permitted him to box without hesitation. To ease the boxer's mind, his physician sent him to a heart specialist who reported that the great rise in blood pressure was entirely due to his natural nervousness, the accident, and the refusal of the examining physician to allow him to box. With this reassurance, the blood pressure returned to normal.

In an article on how the emotions affect blood pressure, Dr. Edward Weiss, Philadelphia, in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that allowance must be made for the emotional element in individual blood pressure readings. "It is also well known that rest and reassurance play a large part in the medical management of patients with high blood pressure, both in the relief of symptoms and in the reduction of blood pressure level".

Further, the early symptoms of high blood pressure are often exactly those of early mental disturbances in that emotional stress seems to be present before the onset of high blood pressure; anxiety bears a close relationship to the aggravation of the symptoms present in high blood pressure.

Dr. Weiss reports findings in a study of 200 consecutive patients with high blood pressure of whom 144 seemed to be of the type where the high blood pressure was due to the emotions and not to changes in the bloodvessels. Anxiety, anger, and repressed rage are the commonest causes of this type of high blood pressure.

The treatment is to endeavour to change, insofar as it is possible, the personality of the patient. Relaxation of mind and body is the aim.

Make Belleville More Beautiful

PROPERTY OWNERS AND TENANTS ARE URGED TO IMPROVE THEIR HOMES THIS SPRING.

(By Belleville Chamber of Commerce)

A city or town can be beautiful and attractive only to the degree that its residents take pride in its appearance. In some such well-phrased thought a sage of yesteryear demonstrated what is only too evident in many centres across the Dominion.

The above thought is only too true and is one which should be emphasized to every home owner and tenant in the city of Belleville.

For many years this city has been termed "Belleville the Beautiful." And not without reason. For in past years Belleville residents have taken pride in their surroundings as has been reflected in the state of repair on homes and other property in the city.

The stress of present trying times, has, however, begun to take its toll in the appearance of many homes in this city. Busied in war production jobs and other important tasks, residents have in some cases noticeably begun to show neglect of their properties and this is reflected in once spotless white paint turning grey and with lawns and shrubbery possibly not kept as well as in pre-war years.

Some Exceptions

A city of contrasts might well be the term used to describe this city. Admittedly the great majority of Belleville citizens take a zealous pride in the appearance of their homes and property, but there are exceptions. And it is to those exceptional cases that this message is directed.

Pride of appearance ascribes to the vanity of the human being, and likewise a city can only be as beautiful as its garb. Peeled dirty paint, dusty streets, shoddy lawns and unkempt buildings are surely a sign of carelessness in the community. Appearance must be maintained if a city, town or village is to continue to aspire to the adjective "beautiful."

Many Rural Buildings Need Paint

What has been said of urban centres goes also for the rural districts here dull and grey weather beaten barns and drivesheds, disarray fences and untidy yards reflect the neglect of the owner. Such homes loom up in striking contrast to the neat and tidy premises of the next-door neighbor where buildings, trim in their coat of red paint, are a picture of attractiveness and repair.

And then there is a dual reason for the "Clean up, Paint up," program this year. The joy of accomplishment and feeling of pride attained through brightening up the home surroundings will do much toward relieving that feeling of monotony caused by long hours at work in war production.

The second reason is one of conservation. Too many housewives and home owners are prone to put off until tomorrow that which should be done this year. But when proscrastination means neglecting to paint when needed, the delay is costly. Ask any builder or paint dealer and learn the facts. A coat of paint affords full protection against the elements while neglect shortens the life of the home.

Conservation Order of Day

In these days of shortages the conservation of building materials is of paramount importance to the home owner. And this year there is little excuse for neglect of the home surroundings. Truly, with gasoline shortages, more time will be spent in the home. Therefore more reason to take pride in appearance.

And the same thing applies to business and industrial life. On the main business thoroughfares and industrial sections of the city are seen the signs of neglect and need for repair.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and while the poet who coined the phrase possibly had something else in mind, it could very well apply to home, residence, barn, factory or business place.

And there is no use beating around the bush. If a city is to become "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," it will take the co-operation of industry, business and the private citizen in remodelling, repainting, rebuilding and repairing the places in which they live and work.

The Chamber of Commerce, with a natural pride in its city is sponsoring a "Paint up, Clean up and Fix up" campaign. They are hoping that every resident, business man and industrialist who takes pride in Belleville will give their co-operation.

It is their earnest endeavor to make Belleville more beautiful, and it is up to its citizens to co-operate. By doing just that, people of this city can take justifiable pride in their home town, as well as prolonging the useful life of their home, factory and shop.

Canadian Garden Service

(By GORDON LINDSAY SMITH)

"If you want to make sure of your vitamins this year, grow them." That is the advice of the authorities in both Canada and the United States this year. That is the reason for the Victory Garden campaign.

Normally Canada imports great quantities of early vegetables from the United States, in addition to huge crops grown here. Those who have been studying the situation say that conditions are likely to be different this year. In the first place Uncle Sam is going to buy up every bunch of vegetables he will be able to get his hands on. These he will dehydrate, pack in tight containers, and send them to his and our troops Overseas. There will also be some of this dehydration in Canada.

But that is not the whole story. There is going to be very little tin for canning vegetables this year and that means another abundant source of supply restricted. Finally, the market gardeners are not going to be able to grow as many vegetables as usual because of the shortage of labor. And all these restrictions come at the very time our consumption of vegetables is sharply increasing. The whole thing adds up to the slogan—"Grow your own."

THEY WILL BE FRESH

And when one does grow his own vegetables right at the door there is more than the reward of garden freshness. One will get all the vitamins, many more than when we depend on vegetables harvested perhaps two or three days before we buy them. Vitamins, the scientists state, are rather delicate little chaps, they only last a short time. The only sure way of getting them all, along with real freshness, is to have a garden full of them within a few yards of the kitchen, and pop them into the pot or into a salad just a few minutes before they are eaten.

THINNING

One can save onesself a lot of stooping and bother by proper spacing of seed when sowing. With beans, peas and such seed, from three to five inches apart is about right. With fine seeds like those of carrots, lettuce and such it is difficult to space evenly and thinly, but with a little care one can prevent bunching. This care in sowing will be repaid later when the plants start to grow, as much thinning will be saved.

But even with this careful sowing, some thinning is inevitable with beets, onions, parsnips and similar fine seed plants. The object is to give room for early growth. It is not necessary to thin, say, beets and carrots, to more than an inch or so apart. Long before they have reached full maturity a lot of the beets and carrots will have been pulled and used. When the plants are half grown one can start using every other one in the row.

IMPORTANCE OF CULTIVATION

Killing weeds is only one function of cultivation. In the well cared for garden where weeds never make much growth anyway, the main job is to improve the soil by maintaining moisture, letting in air and keeping soil fine. One or two thorough cultivations of vegetable or flower gardens after planting, and then a little stirring up lightly with a cultivator—preferably once a week until the middle of summer—and growth will come along almost regardless of dry weather.

Practical Hints on Home Gardening Will Bring Tyro Best Results

(By GEORGE RUSH)

Unless conditions are reasonably favourable, a vegetable garden should not be undertaken; we cannot afford to waste seed, fertilizer, equipment and energy, unless location and soil are suitable and the gardener is determined to follow through to harvest and use.

This article is intended primarily for amateurs desiring to grow vegetables in their small back yards.

Soil Preparation

All plants thrive best in full sunshine, so avoid planting under trees. Spread barnyard manure over the soil and dig thoroughly. Rake down until a good tilth is obtained. Do not sow seeds or set out plants until the soil is free. Use a bright hoe or spade, and when the soil leaves the hoe freely, then plant early crops.

Under war conditions, conservation of vegetable seeds is imperative, as many are difficult to obtain. Follow the directions laid down for each crop; this will prevent waste. Spacing of plants is stated for each variety. To save seed, empty package into a saucer and sow by hand.

Cultivation

In cultivating the garden, a fork hoe, and a five-tooth hand cultivator are the most suitable tools to use. Cultivate often to destroy weeds, maintain moisture, and allow air circulation of the root system. Use care when cultivating, so as not to cause injury to the plants, as injury produces diseases.

Tomatoes, celery, cauliflower, cabbage, onions and squash do not require hoeing when near maturity, as roots may be injured. Remove any weeds by hand-pulling.

Individual Crops

Beans. May be planted in continuous rows, 20" apart in the row. Plant to a depth of 3". Use the corner of a hoe to open the furrows.

Early Varieties — Golden Wax, Round Pod Wax or Green. Sow early varieties May 5.

Do not cultivate or pick beans when vines are wet.

If preferred, Detroit Dark Red may be used for early sowing.

Carrots. Sow seeds 1" deep, using seeds carefully. When plants are 1" high, for early crop, thin to ½" apart.

Early crop, sow in late April or early May.

Varieties—Scarlet Nantes, Coreless Chautenay, Danvers Half Long. Any of these varieties may be planted for early or late crop.

Corn. Plant in hills 2' by 2', and place seed 2" deep; 6 seeds to a hill.

Cucumber. On light sand soil, plant seed on the level of the ground. On heavy soil, it is advisable to raise the seed bed a few inches above the level. This allows drainage and warms earth quicker in Spring. Space hills 5' apart, and when plants are 3" high remove the weakest, leaving three plants to a hill. Sow 6 seeds to a hill, allowing for poor germination.

Varieties—White Spine, Straight 8, Early Fortune.

Lettuce. Sow seed 8" apart for head lettuce; make a shallow hole ¼" deep and cover over and firm soil on the seeds. When 2" high, remove all but one plant; this enables the plant to obtain food to make a proper head.

Variety of Head Lettuce—New York 12. Sow when soil is ready in Spring, and at intervals of 30 days until August 20th.

Onions. Sow seed 1" deep in rows, and thin to 2". Use all surplus onions for table use as salads. Clay or black loam are best suited for onion culture. Sow seeds from April 25th. to May 5th. Space rows 18" apart.

For Early Use — Sow Silver King.

For Late Crop or Winter Use — Sow Yellow Globe Danvers.

Peas. May be sown very early in rows 3" deep, and the rows 15" apart.

Early Varieties — Little Gem, Little Marvel.

Peas may be sown every month until August 5th.

Late Varieties—Laxtonia, Peter Pan, Telephone.

Potatoes. Plant sets 4" deep, 12" apart in rows, 24" between rows. Best weight for sets—2 ozs.

Radish. Sow in rows, or broadcast, 1" deep and firm the soil after planting. Sow every two weeks for sweet and tender radishes.

Tomatoes. Secure plants from grower or the store when possible. When planting, make a hole deep enough to cover the roots. Do not plant deep.

If tomatoes are grown on stakes, use a stake 1¼" diameter, 5½' long. Drive in ground 10", and space 2' by 2' apart.

Pruning—Tie plants to stake, which will require attention every seven days. Cut or pinch off all side shoots, leaving only the main stem. When five sets of fruit are on the plant, cut off the terminal bud, but do not cut off the leaves. This advances maturity.

Plant June 1 to 5.

Choice Varieties for Staking — Suttons Best of All, Harkness, Bonnie Best.

For Trailing — Bonnie Best, John Baer, Pritchard.

SYMBOLS OF ITALY SOFTENING

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, LEFT, would be put at the head of Italian affairs, according to an unconfirmed report out of Berne, Switzerland, which stated that King Victor Emmanuel of Italy had abdicated. A broadcast from Algiers stated, however, the Italian monarch would abdicate in favor of his son, Crown Prince Umberto, RIGHT. In either case, this would mean that Mussolini's power on the altar of Hitler's ego is rapidly diminishing. Badoglio has often been linked with anti-Fascist elements.

Opposition Seeks Probe of Gov't Publicity Expenses

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 20—(CP) — In a three-hour debate on the Wartime Information Board in the House of Commons yesterday, the government stood by its position that if investigation of the board's expenditures was undertaken it should be done by the House War Expenditures Committee, yet to be established this year.

The Opposition urged investigation by the Public Accounts Committee and the issue was not settled at adjournment.

The debate occupied the entire short sitting. Speaker Glen ruled out-of-order an amendment by Howard Green (Prog. Con. Vancouver South) urging that instead of a public accounts committee report being accepted it be referred back with instructions to investigate publicity expenditures by government departments or boards.

When the Speaker's ruling was challenged, the House upheld him by a vote of 119 to 47. Immediately afterwards another amendment was moved by Capt. George Black (Prog. Con. Yukon), that the committee be instructed and empowered to amend its report so that it would request authority of the House to investigate expenditures for publicity.

This amendment was being discussed when the House rose at 6 p.m. Debate was adjourned by J. G. Diefenbaker (Prog. Con. Lake Centre) who said the attitude taken by the government illustrated the Opposition's point that full opportunity was not being given to examine government expenditures.

Will be Allowed to Finish

At close of the sitting, Resources Minister Crerar, acting Government leader, said Mr. Diefenbaker would have an opportunity to finish his speech today. Then the House would proceed to the War Appropriation Bill.

Mr. Green said W.I.B. expenditures had been just under $580,000 in six months. It appeared a very expensive set-up for publicity. One would think the government could rely on the newspapers of the country to handle this mass of publicity.

"They do practically all of it anyway in a thoroughly efficient and unbiased way."

Mr. Crerar said all were conscious of the "excellent publicity" given by the press, but the Opposition early in the war had accused the government of a lack of attention to the dissemination of information. He believed any investigation of the W.I.B. should be undertaken by the War Expenditures Committee as its expenditures were war outlays.

Lt.-Col. J. A. Ross (Prog. Con. Souris) said there had been a consistent attempt to carry on all War Expenditures Committee investigations in secret, and even if this committee sat every day it could scarcely properly follow the various war expenditures contracts.

T. L. Church (Prog. Con. Toronto Broadview) said the appointment of publicity boards showed the government had lost confidence in the press and its ability to disseminate information.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn) supported Mr. Green and said there was the danger bureaucracy would take unto itself a propaganda or publicity branch to prolong its own life.

Asked to Keep Promise

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said the government should withdraw from its position as the public would not understand its objections to the public accounts committee undertaking the examination.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) said Prime Minister Mackenzie King had promised that any member not receiving satisfaction on any matter brought before the public accounts committee could bring it up in the House, and have his support.

P. E. Cote (Lib. Verdun) said Mr. Green had cast reflections on government members by suggesting the accounts committee had failed to investigate W.I.B. because the government did not wish to look into such outlays.

Capt. Black said he did not suggest the government had anything to conceal, "but if there is nothing to conceal why attempt to cover it up?"

"I want to make it clear to the House that the position of the government on the matter is that the public accounts committee is not the right committee to which to send an investigation of the expenditures of the W.I.B.", said Mr. Crerar.

Designed To Deal

The accounts Committee was set up to consider accounts and matters referred to it by the auditor-general. The war expenditures committee was designed to deal with matters such as W.I.B. expenditures.

Answering Mr. Green, the Minister said he could not give the assurance that any W.I.B. inquiry before the war expenditures committee would be open.

When the Prime Ministers had said he would support a member bringing a question from the accounts committee to the House, he was referring to matters now appearing in the public accounts.

R. M. Warren (Lib. Renfrew North) said the opposition appeared to be looking for material to use in an election. The W.I.B. had made a contribution in bettering understanding between Canada and the United States.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the W.I.B. represented a government department "engaged in an orgy of spending". Over-expenditure could be prevented by publicity.

NORWAY—COMPULSORY LABOR

London — (CP) — Thousands of Norwegians have been ordered to do compulsory labor on fortifications and roads in northern Norway. The quislings were told to supply 10,000 men, and Norwegians fear the next step will be mass deportation to Germany.

SAILOR MUNITION WORKERS

Liverpool—(CP)—Instead of idling about while on the "pool" waiting for ships, merchant seamen and ships' officers now are working in munition plants making guns and shells which they may later use against enemy submarines or dive-bombers.

INVALIDS' MOBILE CANTEEN

London—(CP)—An experimental mobile service has been inaugurated in suburban Finchley under which hot meals are taken each day to the aged and invalids. The canteen was provided by the Church Army, the driver by the Women's Voluntary Service and the cooking by a civic restaurant.

Tips for the Amateur Gardener

1 After the first strenuous spring gardening rush there is apt to be a slackening down of work. Don't let this happen to you. Schedule your work and fill every minute.

2. First off this month get at the weeds and keep at them. A few hours' work at the first of the week will grow into a day's task in just a very few days.

3. As soon as the vegetable seeds sprout and you are able to distinguish the rows, take out the weeds that are apt to crowd them. This won't disturb plants.

4. Weeds between the rows should be taken care of with the hoe or wheel-hoe. At this time plan to keep this work going on a regular basis. It's the only way.

5. The first weeks are the important ones in the life of a vegetable. Thin out the rows as soon as the first set of true leaves has formed. Keep them cultivated.

6. Early this month succession crops of carrots, beets, lettuce, peas and radishes can be planted. Figure out your space well so that you make every inch count.

7. Lima beans should be sown with the eye down. The two halves of the bean are the first leaves and find difficulty reaching the surface unless planted this way.

8. After all danger of late frost, and not before, seeds of beans, corn, cucumber, melons, squash and okra can be sown. Also set out plants of tomatoes, cabbage and melons.

9. Plants, newly set out, should be protected from cutworms. One way is to cover spot with poison bait before setting plant. Small paper bands about the stem is another.

10. Cut worm bait can be bought or make your own from one pound bran or corn weal, one ounce arsenate of lead, half cup molasses, juice of a half lemon, two pints of water.

11. The early growth of vegetables can be stimulated by feeding a balanced plant food. Don't give them too much, as this will force an unnatural growth in young plants.

12. Peas should be given brush on which to climb as soon as they are a few inches high. Poles should also be placed for pole beans. Stake tomatoes as they start to grow.

13. At the first signs of insects, get out the equipment and start a blitzkrieg. Don't let them get a start. Use a stomach spray for chewers and contact for others.

14. By this season the greenhouse should be pretty well cleared out. Put into frames everything that needs to be hardened off before planting out. Ventilate abundantly.

15. Cleared space in the greenhouse can be utilized by planting cucumbers, tomatoes or other vegetables to force them into early bearing when set in the garden later.

16. Spray or fumigate the greenhouse each week to keep all manner of insect life in check. It is important to keep these pests out; otherwise you'll have them all Winter.

17. Make your seed bed in a sunny, sheltered spot away from the drip of eaves. This is much better than planting in the open where the plants are to grow.

18. You can sow outdoors now African daisy, ageratum(alyssum, snapdragon, asters, candytuft, cosmos, dianthus, larkspur lobelia, marigolds, nasturtium and petunias.

18. Flowers need the same cultivation as vegetables. Keep the soil worked about them and free of weeds. The perennial border can be given a top dressing of plant food.

20. Thin out the flowing stalks on perennials, allowing only a few good strong shoots to bloom. This will give you lots of better flowers and fine display.

21. It is not too late to transplant perennials. Take them up with plenty of soil and keep them well watered. It's a good idea to hold off moving early bloomers.

23. Any reseeding and sodding jobs should be taken care of as early as possible. New grass should be given every chance to sink its roots deep into the soil before Summer.

24. Garden paths and walks should be put into shape before the soil becomes too dried out. Build up and even all edgings. Cinders make a good base for any garden path.

25. It is a little late to set out doormant roses but if there are still a few empty spots in your garden the nurseryman will be able to supply you with potted plants.

26. Spraying and dusting schedules for the rose bed should be planned now. Good, healthy roses depend on proper and consistent care. Be constantly on your guard.

27. Roses should be pruned back by this time, but if you haven't already done this, cut away two-thirds of last year's growth. Flowers are borne only on new wood.

28. Fruit trees should be sprayed this month. The first spray goes on just before the buds open. The second spraying should be when the blossoms start to fall.

29. House plants can be carried out of doors as soon as danger of light frosts has passed. Try repotting and sinking pot in the ground to be lifted next Fall.

30. Cuttings of favorite house plants should be made now. Root them in damp sand and then pot in a good soil mixture. This will give strong blooming plants for Winter.

31. Bulbs of anemone, tuberous begonias, tube-roses, caladiums, and dahlias should go into the ground now. Gladiolus should be planted every ten days up to July 4th.

Bombing Runs Stepped Up In Burma Sector

New Delhi, India, May 20. (CP)—Sharply stepping up the bombing of Japanese positions in Burma, the 10th United States Army Air Force has announced that a record-breaking total of more than 100 tons of explosives were rained on enemy supply stocks, fuel depots and railroad facilities in a 175-mile stretch of the Irrawaddy River Valley Tuesday.

Prelude to the blistering attacks levelled against the Japanese Tuesday was a Monday raid by medium bombers on railway trains and buildings at Monywa on the Chiniwin River 50 miles northwest of Mandalay. Raids also were made last week-end on Japanese headquarters at Myitkyina, where 14 tons of bombs were dropped squarely on the target area, and on Prome which got a single load of 18 tons of bombs.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was at her desk studying her checkbook and she said to pop, William, I suppose nothing would please you more than to hear that I finely seem to of succeeded in making my household budget stretch for the entire week.

My pleasure would be exceeded only by my surprise, slightly complicated by the fact that the week still has a couple of days to go, pop said, and ma said, I know, I've counted on that, naturally.

Do you mean you've got it all figured out to Saturday? pop said, and ma said, Exactly, or at least with a little helpful cheerful coopertion on your part.

Just name it and I'm your man, pop said. In a cause like that I'll gladly tighten my belt and put my shoulders to the wheel and give you benefit of my years of financial experience gained amidst the buffetings of trial and error. Tell me what ou want me to do. Tell me what you want me to do. Tell he said, and ma said, Well, here's the point in a nutshell. Of course I admit the week still has 2 more days to run, but if we dont eat home either of those days, why naturally the expense cant logically apply to the household budget, so my idea is for us all to eat in a nayborhood resterant tomorrow evening and Saturday and with that cooperation I'll scrape through the week with flying colors on my original allowance, that is if you'll give me a small check for 20 dollars to cover a few unavoidable incidentals, she said.

Yee gods, resterants 2 nights in a row, nothing doing, pop said, I've got a better idea than that. We'll eat home as usual like law abiding citizens and assume that the week ends today instead of Saturday. That way you can start a clean slate tomorrow without any subterfuge, he said, and ma said, Why William how brilliant, you really are a financial wizard.

Never hesitate to ask me anything you want to know, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and blew smoke over.

CAR FOUND MINUS WHEELS

Leamington, Ont., May 20—(CP)—Tire thieves are no respectors of persons, Constable W. M. Chute, of Wheatley, eight miles northeast of here near Lake Erie, learned Wednesday night. He left his car parked in front of his home with the keys invitingly attached. In the morning the car was gone, but was later located in Mersea township, minus four wheels and tires.

Labor Circles Stunned By Lewis' Proposal

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 20 (AP)—John L. Lewis' proposed return to the American Federation of Labor stunned all but a few insiders in labor circles today and left them groping for an explanation.

The unpredictable President of the United Mine Workers, who defied the A.F.L. in 1935 and was suspended for organizing the rival C.I.O., formally petitioned on behalf of the miners for re-admission. An A.F.L. statement yesterday said the application was "welcomed" and was being considered in "an orderly and sympathetic way."

Lewis' friends said his action was evidence of his desire for a unified labor movement. However, critics believed he made the jump because he had no other place to go, while still seeking the top spot in the American labor movement.

When Lewis lost control of the C.I.O. and left it last year he virtually burned his bridges behind him. He tried a third movement under the banner of district 50, a catch-all unit of the U.M.W., with results less than spectacular.

As the leader of a single union, the United Mine Workers, his influence in politics has its limitations. By rejoining a federation of unions whose membership soon may aggregate 7,000,000 he could be seeking a potent alliance in political councils, perhaps starting with the 1944 presidential campaigns.

What effect the miners' reaffiliation with the A.F.L. would have upon the C.I.O. is speculative. The respective membership claims make the C.I.O. numerically inferior now. The miners, who have been independent since last October, would add 500,000 to 600,000 to the 6,225,000 members who now pay per capita tax to the A.F.L.

The aggregate membership of the C.I.O. unions is believed to be less than 5,000,000.

FORTY CARS PASS OVER

Downey, Calif., May 20 (CP).—Forty cars of a freight train passed over him. Then Glen Robertson, 19, got up and shook his fist at the receding caboose. Robertson said a companion pushed him and he fell from the depot platform in the path of a train. He flattened himself between rails, and suffered only a scratched leg.

Lionel Conacher Resigns Post As Athletic Director

Ottawa, May 20 (CP). — The R.C.A.F. has accepted the resignation of Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher, its athletic director, Air Force headquarters announced today.

"A letter of resignation was received from Sqdn. Ldr. Conacher and the resignation has been accepted," a spokesman said.

(In Toronto today, Sqdn. Ldr. Conacher said he offered to resign because "there is nothing for me to do now.")

Conacher, 43 years old next Monday, chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission and one-time hockey and football star, was appointed director of recreation and entertainment in the R.C.A.F. last July 12. His rank of squadron leader was honorary.

Conacher's successor in the R.C.A.F. post—if there is to be any—was not named immediately.

Willing to Advise

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Sqdn.-Ldr. Lionel Conacher announced today he had sent in his resignation to the R.C.A.F. as director of Recreation and Entertainment but he said he had offered to devote any time that was necessary in an advisory capacity. Sqdn.-Ldr. Conacher is Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto-Bracondale.

He said that when he went to Ottawa he was asked by Air Minister Power to take a trip across Canada and write a report on the athletic facilities at the different stations. Through this report, there was unification in the types of buildings to be used for recreation.

He added that the football and hockey programs set up by him had created hundreds of hours of entertainment for the services at no cost to the government.

"I travelled some 30,000 miles from Halifax to Alaska at my own expense and found the recreational facilities of the air force in excellent condition and so reported upon my return.

"I thought it unnecessary to walk around in a uniform when any assistance that I could give was purely in an advisory capacity and this I am more than willing to do."

25 Applicants Interviewed To Enter R.C.A.F.

Belleville and district young men and women still show a preference for air force blue as was revealed here this week when approximately 25 applicants were interviewed by officers heading an R.C.A.F. mobile recruiting unit which completed a two-day stand in Belleville Wednesday evening.

"Our stay was highly satisfactory with our visit to Belleville being really worth while," stated Flight Lieutenant Pryde as the recruiting stay was concluded shortly after nine o'clock last evening.

Although the entire 25 who were interviewed by recruiting officers will not be taken into the air force immediately, a number of the applicants will reappear when the recruiting unit again visits this city next month. According to Flt.-Lieut. Pryde, who was in charge of the unit, the R.C.A.F. will hold a recruiting stand every month in Belleville in the future.

District young men and women seem to like the idea of the mobile recruiting unit according to officers. Complete medicals are given with the exception of chest X-ray, while final attestation into the air force is postponed pending this examination.

Many Levees May Be Wiped Out

Chicago, May 20 (AP)—Belief that all levees along the Mississippi River between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau, Mo., "will be wiped out" was expressed by Federal Engineer Vern Alexander, today as emergency relief crews and military troops worked to check the flood waters from turbulent rivers and streams which covered a wide area of the midwest. The levees protect thousands of acres of rich farm lands.

There was only slight measure of relief today in the flooded area in a six-state mid-continent section where surging waters have drowned 10, driven 22,000 persons from their homes; covered millions of acres of farm lands; caused disruption of rail and motor traffic, and halted work in many war plants and factories.

Many persons were evacuated from homes in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas. Property damage was extensive while damage to crops was expected to be severe although no official estimates were given.

JAPANESE ADMIT

bombing at 2 a.m. May 12. At 10 a.m. American warships appeared outside Holtz Bay in the heavy fog and opened fire.

"Advance Japanese positions on shore returned the fire", the broadcast said, "and kept the American warships at a respectable distance, but during this heavy exchange a force of American troops managed to make a landing after Japanese mortar and machine-gun fire had blasted away most of the landing barges that come into Holtz Bay.

The Japanese said that under cover of this fire "27 and possibly 28 large landing craft drove into the Bay" but that concentrated fire from shore defences drove them back.

"However, late in the morning, the weather cleared up sufficiently to permit enemy aircraft to add their support to the landing forces and finally in the afternoon the Americans were able to put ashore a party of troops", the broadcast continued.

Took Up New Positions

"The following day heavy fighting continued along the shores of Holtz and Massacre bays," the report continued. "The Japanese maintained their positions in the ridges overlooking the beaches and the Americans driving in to attack were repulsed repeatedly with costly losses."

The enemy account said that a surprise attack by a Japanese force that night caused an American retreat of 600 yards almost to the beach of Holtz bay.

The broadcast went on:

"The Japanese on May 14 continued to exact a heavy toll on the enemy's landing attempts and accounted for from 700 to 800 Americans during the day.

"However, after continuous warship and aircraft bombardment of their positions had resulted in their losing more than two-thirds of their strength, the Japanese commanding officer ordered his men to take up new positions in the ridges. This operation was carried out at night."

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Scabies, Skin Disorder, Highly Contagious

Tiny animal parasites cause contagious disease. One of these causes scabies, a persistent disorder of the skin which may be easily passed from one person to another.

The doctor who is called to relieve a very annoying itching looks for little grayish-thread-like lines varying in length from the smallest fraction of an inch up to one-fourth of an inch. These tiny lines are produced by the female parasite which causes the disease, and are due to the depositing of the eggs in the skin. These tiny lines, which are known as burrows, may be hard to find in an adult but in children, as a rule, they are easily seen.

The most outstanding symptom of scabies is severe itching, which is worse at night, shortly after the affected person goes to bed. It usually begins about five o'clock in the evening. As soon as a person becomes warmed by the bed-clothing, the itching becomes almost unbearable.

Scabies may affect the skin on almost any part of the body. However, the condition is found most often on the spaces between the fingers, on the wrists, the elbows and armpits and the abdomen. As a result of scratching, infection with germs may occur so that pimples and blisters form on the palms of the hands and soles of the feet especially. In grownups, scabies does not affect the face and scalp and very seldom is found on the neck, back of the shoulders or on the back.

Because scabies is so easily passed from one person to another, it usually is found that several members of the family are effected at one time. It would appear probable that the disease is spread because the parasites get on bed linen and clothing used by several members of the family.

It is fortunate that scabies can be easily and quickly cleared up if the proper treatment is thoroughly employed and is started without delay. However, reinfection may easily take place unless care is used.

In treating the condition, as a rule, the patient is told to take a bath using ordinary mild soap and warm water, scrubbing the skin thoroughly and then drying it completely. Then, the preparation selected for getting rid of the parasites is spread over the body from the point of the chin to the tips of the toes. Not one single inch of the skin should be missed. The preparations prescribed by the physician include sulphur, betanaphthol, balsam of Peru and benzyl benzoate. In infants a mixture of sulphur, zinc oxide and petrolatum is employed.

A sulphur soap paste has been prepared which simplifies the treatment of this condition. This is made up of a bland soap paste which contains sulphur. This mixture is applied to the skin for three successive days and then is allowed to dry. Each day the underwear is changed. According to Dr. John W. Barr and Warren F. White, this method of treatment is clean, inexpensive and simple.

It is suggested that any members of the family who have been in contact with the person who has scabies should be treated in the same way, if a permanent cure is to be obtained and reinfection prevented.

Dodgers Appear About to Lose Lease on National Loop Lead As Boston Crowds Leader

GIANTS WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

Brooklyn Dodgers are in the position of the noisy tenants who are going to get kicked out of their top floor apartment as soon as the lease expires.

The bums have been occupying the penthouse of the National League since the season started, but two consecutive defeats by St. Louis Cardinals have placed them in jeopardy of losing their first place—not to the world champions but to Boston Braves.

Boston, with good pitching and a surprisingly well-balanced attack, has won seven straight games, including a double header yesterday from Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 in 11 innings and 5-3.

If the Braves should win again today and the Dodgers lose, Boston would move into top place by a percentage margin of .652 to .630.

Brooklyn were smothered by southpaw pitching again yesterday 3-2 as Max Lanier and Rookie Harry Brecheen combined to hold them to six hits. Cardinals counted a run in the first inning when Stan Musial scored all the way from first base on a terrific single by Walker Cooper and they cinched the game on Coaker Triplett's two-run homer in the sixth.

At this stage Lanier showed signs of weakening as Brooklyn bagged runs in the sixth and seventh, but Brecheen rushed to his rescue and allowed no hits the remainder of the way.

Cooper to Pitch

Brooklyn's hopes for today's final game rested chiefly in the fact that they would be facing a righthanded pitcher for the first time in the series — but the righthander happened to be Mort Cooper, the league's leading pitcher last year. In a move of desperation, manager Leo Durocher planned to call on Rube Melton to pitch for the Dodgers on two days rest.

The Braves had difficulty downing the Pirates in their first game, although Nate Andrews kept nine hits well spaced and allowed no runs after the first however, the Braves weren't able to score against rookie Xavier Rescigno from the third till the 11th, when Johnny McCarthy singled, stole second and sped home on a single by Whitey Wizelmann. McCarthy made four of the Braves' eight hits.

Knocked Out in First

In the second game the first four Braves who came to bat against Hank Gornicki hit singles and knocked him out of the box in the midst of a three-run rally. George Jeffcoat, pitching five-hit ball, muzzled the Pirates on one run till the ninth, when they tallied twice and forced Jeffcoat to have help.

In the day's only other game Mel Ott hit a two-run homer off Johnny Vander Meer in the first inning to lead New York Giants to a 3-2 conquest of Cincinnati Reds. New York was outhit 12 to 5, but the Reds were unable to take advantage of their opportunities till the ninth, when a two-run rally fell short.

Robert Substantiates Claim To World's Wrestling Title By Defeating 'Jack' Claybourne

Colored Grappler Wins Second Fall in Quick Time of 11 Seconds

GOOD PRELIMS

Just why Yvon Robert, the pride of Montreal's wrestling circles, is claimant to the world's championship was substantiated before 2,000 rabid grunt and groan patrons at the Hume Arena last night when the French-Canadian took the odd fall in a best-in-three decision over "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the Cape Town colored titlist.

Actually the colored lad, who the patrons dubbed as Rochester of Jack Benny radio fame, gave away considerable avoirdupois in meeting the title claimant and had "Gentlemen Jack" triumphed (and the fans were hoping so judging from their vocal encouragements) there would have been somewhat of an upset in Promoter Tunney's pachyderm circus.

However, the addicts of this muscle-bending business were treated to two of the fastest and most agile grapplers in the business and had "Whipper Billie" Watson been included in the picture doubtless the three speediest and most lithe grapplers on earth would have been our lot.

Registers Fast Fall

Actually Claybourne registered the fastest fall ever witnessed in the local palace de sport when he droppped kicked Robert into submission in the second round with four rapid drop kicks in a little less than 11 seconds. And if you don't think that's getting things over in a speedy manner, try it on your piano some sunny day.

The entire show was perhaps the best balanced yet tossed into Walt Gerow's Arena ring by Promoter Tunney and this was a proven fact by the hand-clapping applause afforded by the paying public. Early in the main scrap both Claybourne and Robert gained reverse armlocks simultaneously until it became a picture of "rock-a-by-baby" on the mat. Like the proverbial bolt from the blue, however, Robert applied two flying mares reverted to a series of rolling figure-fours and it was all over in something like 17.09 minutes.

A Quick Round

The bell rang to commence the second round, Robert tried two flying mares, Claybourne wiggled out raced across the squared circle, dropped Robert with three high-jumping drop kicks and that round was over in less than 11 seconds. Chagrined Robert refused to leave the ring and signed autographs during the recess and when the boys went back to work "Gentleman Jack" gained several thrilling flying head scissors and looked like a winner, when he finally missed one leap into the ozone and fell prostrate upon his back to the canvas, where he was an easy victim for a press and today Robert's claim to the world's championship is secure, that is as far as the Belleville wrestling clientele is concerned. With two such classed rasslers as Claybourne and Robert in action, Referee Phil Lawson should have sat in a chesterfield chair and enjoyed an evening's rest.

The Arena populace gave Maurice Robert, a younger brother of the title claimant, and Joe Maich of Brantford, a big hand for their clean strong wrestling efforts in the curtain-raiser, that saw the boys exemplify fine holds, stay to the mat in a 30-minute draw.

Fun For All

There was fun for all in the semi-final as Referee Cliff Fox found his hands full prying apart some 500 pounds of human flesh when finally the official awarded the bout to Earl McCready over Al Dunlop, as the Aurora farmer gave the pugnacious "Bunny" a going over with a punishing back-breaker hold, that possessed glee for the patrons, who Dunlop incited to near riot Naturally "Bunny" was sore and the fans howled when he protested, but then the boys will be back again next Wednesday night with more tricks of their trade and to miss these Wednesday night haul-and-pull exhibitions at the Hume Arena is little short of folly.

HEAVY TRACK EXPECTED FOR KING'S PLATE

Grey Syngo, Who Pulled a Sleigh All Winter, is 'Sleeper' in Race

TWELVE TO GO

Toronto, May 20 — (CP) — A grey gelding which spent the winter hauling a sleigh through the snows at Maitland, Ont., shoots for the moon Saturday in the 84th running of the King's plate at Woodbine Park.

One of 12 probable starters in the nine-furlong classic for an $8,000 added pot and the 50 guineas donated by the King, Grey Syngo would hardly have drawn peanuts in any future book on Canada's oldest horse race because of his lustreless juvenile record. If he should win, it would create the greatest upset since Maternal Pride rocked the talent at odds of close to 100-to-1 in 1924.

Yet there are several reasons why competent horsemen refuse to discount the son of Synorix-Ugo II as a factor in Saturday's running. Grey Syngo has trained well and trainer Harry E. Brown believes the "legging-up" he received during the winter will give him an edge in condition on his rivals, all handicapped by unusually severe weather conditions during the spring training grind.

Mrs. R. E. Webster of Maitland, Grey Syngo's owner, used the gelding as a driving horse all winter, travelling seven or eight miles a day. Mrs. Webster's Syngo Bay was fourth in the 1939 Plate with Johnny Longden in the saddle.

No Outstanding Favorite

Because a heavy track is expected Saturday, no one contender looms as an outstanding favorite. W. F. (Willie) Morrissey's Arbor Vita, winter book favorite and winner of a little more than $10,000 as a two-year-old, shares pre-race spotlight about equally with Riverdale stable's hard-hitting filly Gallant Foe and W. E. MacDonald's Tulachmore. MacDonald, a Toronto lawyer, says Tulachmore would have been the outstanding juvenile of 1942 if he had stayed sound.

The potential starting field of the 45 originally nominated some weeks ago was reduced to an estimated dozen this week when "coughing" sickness, usual scourge of the spring season, removed Parkwood stable's Raglan and Cosgrave stable's Appas Tappas from the list of eligibles. Parkwood likely will be represented by Gyntaf, Astrometer and Talipat, the latter one of the top juveniles in 1942.

Grandpal and Sweepgold, training less sharply than expected, will represent H. C. Hatch, who won the King's Plate in 1936, 1937 and 1941.

Three fillies all more or less in the longshot category, are expected to round out the field. They are W. T. Northgrave's Pacific Isle, whigh trained well at Thorncliffe; Charlie Hemstead's Paolita, promising at two; and Mrs. Grace MacKay's Hemjoy, which has demonstrated a fondness for a distance of ground but whose workouts have drawn little publicity.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Two men at a "talking movie" were sitting just in front of two women whose continuous chatter they stood as long as they could. One of them turned around and said:

Man—Pardon me, madam, but my friend and I can't hear.

Woman—You're not supposed to. This is a private conversation.

Holiday Sports Out

Annually for these many decades back the 24th of May has been symbolic of the official opening of out-of-doors sports in Belleville. However, with the exception of girls' softball which opens Friday night at the Armouries Lawn, lawn bowling Victoria Day will be rather quiet. The expected opening tournaments at the Bay of Quinte Country and Golf Club has to be postponed owing to the recent continued games, while the men's softball hasn't even so much as drafted a schedule. Club Captain Billie Steer had a fine program of open competition lined up for the holiday, but it's all off now.

Parting was Sweet Sorrow

ever got out of baseball?" asked
"What was the biggest thrill you
Daley.

"Well, I had many thrilling experiences since taking over the management of the Philadelphia Athletics over 40 years ago. However, there was one outstanding feature that I recall back in 1929," replied Mr. Mack as he continued: "By September of that season we had practically clinched the pennant and were about to leave on our last western trip. I approached Ehmke in the clubhouse one day and said, 'Howard, the time has come when we must part.' He stared at me unbelievingly and answered: 'For sixteen years my mind has been set on pitching and winning a world series game.' I asked, 'Could you?' He raised his right arm high and told me: 'There's one good game left in it.' That's all I wanted to hear. I left him behind to scout the Cubs and, by golly, he set a world series record by striking out thirteen of them. That was one of the biggest thrills I ever got from baseball."

Why Run at All

Everybody knows Count Fleet can run—and how. But they say he is an even faster walker, comparatively speaking.

Old Zeke walks so fast when he is being cooled out that it takes three grooms to handle the job. And the Count has 'em all puffing like fat men at a church picnic when it's all over.

Did you Know—

Earl Combs has been on the baselines coaching for the New York Yankees for seven years and has never been ousted. . . After all, Marse Joe McCarthy doesn't hire his coaches to arouse the ire of the umpires and get the heave-to. . . Joe wants 'em on the job. . . In case any of the local men's softball teams are shopping around for a pitcher, Steve Hook's back in town. . . Steve is railroading and has been transferred to the Belleville divisional point. . . . Heard from Cpl. Frank Sedore this week and the former Point Anne softball mentor is up to his old tricks overseas. . . Sure enough, he's dabbling in softball with an army team in England and enjoying fine health. . . King George saw his horse Tipstaff run last at the Ascot last weekend. . . Eddie Shrieder and Joe Kelleher, Jr., have been named umpires for the opening girls' softball game at the Armouries tomorrow night.

Remember When—?

Hilton Belyea, of Saint John, N.B., one of Canada's most promising scullers, sailed for England 20 years ago today to compete in the Diamond Sculls. Unlucky, he lost the race, but started out for another attempt in 1924. On the way to England he was taken ill and subsequently retired from active competition.

No Balls, No Game

Last week in Kingston they had a disastrous fire in the business section of the city. After the fire it was discovered that six dozen baseballs, which had been carefully stored away by Cec Cornelius, treasurer of the Kingston Baseball League, had been prey to the flames. Mr. Cornelius had ordered the spheriods last fall and was carefully keeping them for us this summer as there is a shortage of baseballs. Now the Kingston league is ready to commence operations this week, but have no baseballs available.

Speed Personified

With the possible exception of "Whipper Billie" Watson, Belleville wrestling fans saw two of the speediest and most agile rasslers in the business last night in Yvon Robert and "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne. There was none of that old hauling, pulling and pugnacious business with these exponents, but on the contrary both were out for as rapid victory as possible, which was proven in the colored boy's ten second fall in the second round.

Proving that Belleville wrestling patrons appreciate named wrestlers upwards of 2,000 saw last night's show, perhaps the best balanced yet, presented by Frank Tunney. The boys will be back next week and Marse Tunney has promised the bestest of the best, now that Belleville and the Hume Arena has proven to be wrestling conscious, that is as long as the named grapplers continue to flow into town.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 61

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There is one guy I hate, though he's not a bad skate. He is even as honest as I. Yes, you know him by name. For he plays in your game. He's the partner who starts with a lie.

You start with an opening bid of one. You know what it takes. So, you would not lie. You know what it takes for your partner to respond with a bid. You do not expect him to lie.

A responding partner should pass unless he has more than two tricks. So, if he responds with a bid, he says he has three tricks or more.

If he bids a suit, he counts a trick for each ace, each king, each queen, and each short card. If he bids no-trump, he counts a trick only for each ace, each king, each queen.

Suppose you start with an opening bid of one heart. Partner has this hand:

♠K 8
♥7 5 4
♣Q 8 4 3

He has a king and a queen and a short card in spades. They are three tricks in a suit. But only two tricks in no-trump.

Therefore, if partner has a bid in some suit, he has enough tricks for a responding bid. But if he wants to bid no-trump, he has not the number of tricks it takes for a responding bid.

Partner has no suit of his to bid. Nor has he enough for an assist in your heart suit. In that case, he has no suit bid of any kind.

With no suit to bid, the only kind of bid left would be a no-trump. But he has only two no-trump tricks. So he must not respond with any kind of a bid. Unless he tells a lie.

It is possible to tell a lie and still keep out of trouble. But only when partner has what you are missing. Some players are lucky that way.

Do not lie to a partner. That is as good horse sense in life or business as it is in bridge.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Wake Island"

Belching cannon, the shriek of diving planes, the roar of anti-aircraft and the staccato hammering of machine guns, the symphony of battle accompanying the deeds of our heroic American fighting Marines, will thunder out from the screen of the Capitol Theatre, when Paramount's "Wake Island" arrives tonight.

Paramount has taken the epic story of the fourteen-day siege of our Pacific outpost, one of the most inspiring stands of this war, and made a screen drama of it, from the veiwpoint of the men who fought the battle. Four hundred and forty-six Marines fought an invading force of more than 20 times their number. Among the players in this thrilling story of Marine heroism are such outstanding performers as Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, Macdonald Carey, Albert Dekke, Walter Abel, Barbara Britton and William Bendix.

John Farow, a Lieutenant Commander in the Canadin Nvy until he was recently invalided out of service because of wounds, directed the epic new film. Credit for the original story is given to the United States Marine Corps.

"The Lone Star Vigilantes"

Flaming frontiers blaze with fury ...as Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter gang up on the Texas outlaws... to thrill you with roaring action and rousing songs! In a two-gun blast of fiery excitement...the screen's mightiest western heroes join the Lone Star Vigilantes ... on the trail of desperate badmen! When Elliott and Ritter join forces ...action fans are assured of the wildest, rootin'-tootin', rip-roaring outdoor drama of the season!

Thrill to their daring deeds at the Capitol theatre tonight when Columbia's "The Lone Star Vigilontes" makes its first local appearance with Ritter and Elliott in the leading roles.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Code" complete the big program.

AT THE BELLE

'Chetniks! The Fighting Guerrillas'

Charging the screen with high-voltage action and suspense, "Chetniks! The Fighting Guerrillas" is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Thrill follows thrill, as the daring Balkan patriots fight to destroy the conqueror's dream of conquest. An enemy troop train is destroyed; an ammunition dump blown sky-high; an enemy patrol ambushed. That's the handiwork of the death-defying men whose story is the story of bold people everywhere fighting the invader on their native soil.

While stirring action high-lights the film, there is a full share of romance and drama, too, as the guerrilla leader, played by Philip Dorn, and his men fight against staggering odds for the women, as well as the freedom, they love.

Featured with Dorn are Anna Sten, John Shepperd, Virginia Gilmore and Martin Kosleck.

"Time to Kill" Thrilling

Crackling with the same electric that sparkled through the preceding Michael Shayne detective films, "Time to Kill" now enlivening the screen of the Belle Theatre as a fast-moving, mystery film, full of wise cracks and crack shots.

Lloyd Nolan, again starred as the breezy sleuth, is smooth and debonair as ever. In this story, he walks into a veritable snake's nest of trouble when he is hired to trace the theft of a rare and valuable coin, known as the "brasher doubloon".

The coin has been stolen from the collection of a wealthy old dowager. Mike's search leads him to three murders and two beautiful girls—which, of course, delights him.

The murders—well, they'll have to be seen—but the girls are Doris Merrick and Heather Angel—both of whom play their roles exceptionally well.

"Donald's Tire Trouble" is the title of a funny Donald Duck cartoon to be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Something to Shout About"

Uproarious stars to tickle your ribs! Beautiful girls to tickle your fancy! Cole Porter songs to tickle your ears! Grand entertainment to tickle you pink! No wonder it's one picture in a hundred . . it's a which opens today at the McCarhundred pictures in one!

"Something to Shout About," thy Theatre, is a fast and furious fun frolic of stars, girls and delightful surprises set to some of the grandest tunes you ever shuffled a foot to and packing the added thrills of vaudeville entertainment at its best! With a cast headed by Don Ameche, Janet Blair and Jack Oakie, "Something to Shout About" features such Broadway-famous personalities as William Gaxton, Cobina Wright, Jr., and Hazel Scott, the solo swing sensation of Cafe Society and the air waves!

Cole Porter penned the new hit tunes for "Something to Shout About," which was produced and directed by Gregory Ratoff. The tunes include "Something to Shout About," "You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To," "Lotus Bloom," "I Always Knew," "Hasta Luego," and "Through Thick and Thin."

TORONTO LEAFS SPLIT TWIN BILL WITH THE GIANTS

Jersey City Wins First Game 6-3 and Leafs the Second by Same Score

STILL ON TOP

By The Associated Press

The first month of the International League baseball season has shown that Toronto Maple Leafs have it all over the four southern division clubs in the circuit and that Newark Bears are one short jump ahead of the northern teams. Now they'll have a chance for a couple of weeks to show what they can do against their own neighbors.

The long double round of intersectional play came to an end last night as Maple Leafs split a double-header with Jersey City Giants, each turning in a 6-3 decision. Two other scheduled games were postponed.

Today members of the two divisions begin their first tussles among themselves with Buffalo playing at Montreal in the only northern contest while Jersey City goes to Syracuse and Baltimore visits Newark for a twilight game.

Toronto shouldn't have much trouble with its northern neighbors. The Leafs suffered only their sixth defeat last night when Rube Fischer checked them in the twilight tilt and they came right back behind Nick Strincevich for their 18th victory.

Montreal Moving Up

Montreal, second best in that sector, has a .500 average for 20 games and is just a game behind second-place Newark. Buffalo and Rochester are at the bottom of the heap, Red Wings trailing the Royals by two and a half games.

The Little Giants accounted for its third victory of the year over the Leafs with a five run batting splurge in the third inning last night. They banged Jim Hopper for six hits, including a homer by Howard Moss with one aboard, and had the game wrapped up before manager Burleigh Grimes could get him off the slab. The outburst overcame the Leafs' three run lead and gave Fischer his first victory in six starts.

The Jerseys apparently couldn't stand prosperity, for they committed five errors in the floodlight game to offset their nine hits off Strincevich, who hung up his fifth straight victory. Hugh East, Jersey City starter, was belted for eleven hits in six innings and handed out five passes to make the Leafs' task easier.

AT THE CAPITOL

Looks like a hit! Marine machine gun bullets ripped many Jap planes in battle for Wake Island. Gripping story of the two weeks' stand of the Marines against overwhelming odds is dramatized in "Wake Island" now at the Capitol. The added western "The Lone Star Vigil" stars Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter.

AT THE BELLE

Philip Dorn and Anna Sten face a perilous moment in "Chetniks!" The Fighting Guerillas, 20th. Century Fox's stirring and romantic story, featuring John Shepperd and Virginia Gilmore, now at the Belle. Lloyd Nolan in "Time to Kill", is the second feature.

AT THE McCARTHY

Don Ameche and Janet Blair are starred with Jack Oakie in Columbia's new musical film, "Something to Shout About," which opens today at the McCarthy Theatre, with William Gaxton, Cobina Wright, Jr., and Hazel Scott.

Mel Ott, Giants—Hit two-run homer in first inning to pave way for victory over Reds.

Johnny McCarthy and George Jeffcoat, Braves—Former made four hits in first game, scoring winning run in 11th inning, and latter pitched five-hit ball in nightcap, although needing help in final inning.

Sportpourri

The Reds are using an extra-lively ball in batting practice and nearly knocking it out of the lot. So far they haven't been able to do the same to the revised Balata ball. . . The knoll, a New Jersey Golf Club which once charged nearly $5,000 initiation fee, now collects from $10 to $20 a month, according to the season, from its members.

GIRLS SOFTBALL OPENS FRIDAY AT ARMOURIES

EXPECT BIG YEAR

Two of the older clubs in the loop will move the Belleville Ladies' Softball League into initial operation at the Armouries lawn on Friday evening to open a 30-game league schedule when Deacons and the SWACO girls clash.

Veteran and rookie players are included on the roster of both opening-day clubs. Coach Bill Van Tassel has two rookie hurlers in Pauline Schrieder and Doreen McPherson to throw in against the McDonald Ave. industry plant lassies. Coach Tommy Colden will doubtless pin his hopes on his veteran pitcher, Norma Corneal, for the important task of trying to grab off an early-season victory by winning that opening game.

Sisters in Battle

Deacons have several seasoned players such as Joyce Woodhouse for the catching department, Jean Corneal to patrol the outer gardens and incidentally Jean is a sister to Pitcher Norma of the SWACO nine and there's little softball love between these two veterans when facing each other. Tommy Colden says he'll be using Lela (Empey) Nelson at first base this year, moving Dot Rowbotham into the outer field. Irene Colden will be back to plug up the hot corner while Madeline Kelleher is slated to patrol the middle field.

With the Belleville Ladies Softball League operating as purely a war charity loop with all net profits going to such worthy causes the patrons can "dig down," knowing full well the receipts will find a worthy war charity. The usual opening ceremonies will precede the league opener at seven o'clock.

A Long Story, Mates

The point of the yelp is that the New York commission's plan was for Bartolo to face ex-champion Chalky Wright and for the winner to fight Pep. . .But instead Willie and Sal signed for the Boston bout, so the commission refused to recognize it as a title scrap and picked Phil Terranova for the elimination. . . A lot of things seem to call for explanations, including now Massachusetts, a N. B. A. State, can recognize Pep-Bartolo as a title scrap while Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., is N. B. A. champ. . .But Mack's holler is that Uncle Mike told the commission to say "no" because he wanted the fight for himself—or at least a good piece of the profits . . .

PASSING DREAM

by MARGARET GORHAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 20

She left Temple upstairs in a room furnished with modern walnut pieces, a room as impersonal as a hotel room. Temple removed the short jacket of her dress, realizing suddenly that her physical discomfort was due to the change in the climate.

She walked to the window and gazed down at the paradise of flowers and palms, she looked puzzled as little beads of perspiration formed on her upper lip and a flood of new thoughts rushed through her mind. . . Jud had been having a good time. He was happy here. Not lonely at all. He'd been having fun with the kind of people who brought out the best in him, rich people living in grace and comfort and plenty. He had new friends. He had not written her any of this and she had wrongly imagined that he was lonely and unhappy and had not made friends.

Why did it frighten her? Why wasn't she glad for him? Why did little fears begin a taunting chant? And jealousy was like a germ that had been injected in her, a most prolific and dangerous germ. Had Thalia Santos gone to New York in order to avoid her? Who and what was Thalia Santos? Was she in love with Jud?. The germ could multiply a thousand times if she would let it.

She thought, "I'll take a shower and unpack and put on my new white suit. I'll be happy until I'm sure there's reason to be unhappy. Jud is my husband. I love him and he loves me. I mustn't doubt him. I won't be petty and suspicious. If only they knew I was his wife and I could wear my wedding ring."

When Temple came downstairs wearing the white suit and new white pumps, her face fresh and tinted, her hair smooth and dark and shining, she felt infinitely better and more certain of herself.

Molly Santos and Jud, the latter wearing immaculate white linen, were sitting around a small table in the long, cool living-room. Although Jud's smile was the warm, intimate one she knew so well, there was something new in the same smile, a gayety, an irresponsibility.

Jud said, "Little sunburn and she'll look like the rest of us, won't she, Molly?"

Temple thought, "Then I'm not like you any more. I'm different because I live and work in Washington. Oh, but this separation has made me too sensitive. I won't be like that!"

She said, "One morning in the sun and I won't be a pale face any longer. I tan quickly."

Molly nodded and smiled.

The house boy brought in cocktails. Jud talked more than usual. He said amusing things and made them laugh. They did not speak of the war. Jud and Molly talked, trying to include Temple in a conversation about things and places of which she knew nothing. They looked at her occasionally, Jud telling her by his look that they would be alone soon and how much he wanted to be alone with her, Molly telling her that she liked her and understood her strangeness. But they did not leave until the cocktail shaker was empty. To Temple they stayed an incredibly long time. When they left to go outside to the station wagon, Molly gave Temple a key.

In the station wagon Jud put his arms around her and kissed her, a long, deep kiss.

"I've been thinking about that, missing it, wanting it," he said. "Oh it's wonderful to feel you close again; Temple. The most inspired letters aren't as satisfying as the touch of your hand."

Somehow . . somehow they were just so many words he was saying, so many hollow, empty words. She put her arms around him.

"What's the matter, darling?" he asked.

She was shaking. Her voice trembled. "Oh, nothing. Nothing, Jud."

"Climate, excitement, hunger. We'll do something about the last immediately."

She felt better as they rode into town and he pointed out places of interest, though her face still burned with shame that for a horrible moment Jud's words had been empty and meaningless. Climate, excitement, hunger, of course. She was happy. That was it. She was so terribly happy. She could see Jud and feel his nearness.

"Mrs. Santos is charming, Jud. I'm sorry I'm not going to meet her daughter."

"Oh, Thalia. I'm sorry, too. She is a grand gal, an all around grand gal. She's the neighborhood tomboy who grew up. She's divorced by the way. I don't know the details. She refers jokingly to her late-lamented husband. She's a good sport. How is everything in Washington? Is everyone still tearing around?"

"Yes. More so. Abby sent her love."

"Oh, yes, Abby. How is she?"

"Fine. You wouldn't know her. She's developed an interest in herself and she's pretty."

"I don't believe it. And Paula . . How's the old girl?"

Paula, the old girl. Temple did not quite like that. She said quietly, "She's restless these days. I don't know her well enough to know where her restlessness will take her."

"Some screwy new idea, probably. She's a little nuts." He laughed. "That just about covers our mutual acquaintances, doesn't it, darling?"

She nodded, thinking, "Paula's little farmhouse is also a mutual acquaintance, Jud. But we didn't meet many people, it's true. We were too busy falling quickly in love and getting married . . getting married quickly, too and secretly."

Jud took her to a night club where the motif was Spanish. It was crowded with "boys from the base," Jud explained as he and Temple ordered dinner. Several of the young men had spoken to him as he and Temple sought an isolated corner. The girls, knowing her for a stranger and a girl "back home" eyed her critically.

"You like it here, don't you, Jud?"

"I love it. I've had the cobwebs swept from my business man's brain. I feel like a kid again. Maybe it's because most of the boys are younger than I and I've taken their slant on things."

"An optimistic slant. I can see that."

He smiled. "But I keep my fingers crossed that I won't be shipped away. I'm happier than I've ever—" He stopped as though he had bitten in two the words he had intended to add . . "Happier than I've ever been in my life except when I've been with you."

"I'm awfully glad. But this is only a preparation, a training."

"Aren't you a bit premature?"

"Yes, I am. I'm sorry."

"Still my serious Temple, aren't you?"

She looked at him. "I haven't changed, Jud."

"You think I have? But I've changed for the better. Believe me, it's for the better."

"The better for me?" she thought. "The better for me, your wife? You haven't called me your wife, Jud. Are you afraid someone will hear you say it? In the car no one could hear."

They looked at each other across the table.

Then he said, "I know what you are thinking and feeling. I'm pretty good at knowing your moods. You feel—well, let down. The set-up is entirely different, isn't it, Temple? We're back where we sit in restaurants again and duty calls me back at 12. That's why I'll look at my watch now and then. You see, I want to understand your point of view. I want to try to explain away anything that bothers you. I think I understand. All these months you've been writing to the Jud you knew in Washington, not to a soldier in Florida."

"No. I've been writing to the Jud I knew in Virginia. I knew him best."

He colored a little. Then, smiling he said, "That was a dream. That was a beautiful dream, darling. I wish you'd—you'd try to think of it as that—now."

She thought, "I can't. It was the realest experience of my life, the highest and yet somehow the simplest when I was your wife. We think of it differently. Do we think of it differently because you are a man and I'm a girl, or because you think of yourself now as a soldier and I think of you both as a soldier and as my husband? I'm confused. Maybe I'm terribly tired and won't give up to my tiredness. After I sleep all night—"

Jud said, "There's the music. But I wouldn't think of asking you to dance until after you've had food. Then we'll dance and talk about tomorrow and tomorrow. Temple, your face is still that same sensitive, delicate, beautiful face."

The excitement on which she had lived since she had first known Jud and which had died a violent, puzzling little death earlier in the evening lived again when she danced with him. That which for a terrible little while had been unreal was real again and no less intense and no less true than it had been from the beginning with her. She and Jud were in unison again and she bitterly blamed herself for the brief disunity.

He told her about the base and his work. He told her stories, some extremely amusing, of the men with whom he was associated.

They made plans for tomorrow before they drove slowly back to the Santos' house where Jud kissed her and left, humming as he walked back to the car.

Temple went in, telling herself how happy she was and what a wonderful holiday it was going to be.

She slept soundly and in the morning woke with a start, wondering where she was.

She had breakfast on the patio with Molly Santos who had been reading her mail when Temple joined her.

"Thalia is going to run down to Washington to see her father. Obviously she didn't have as good a time in New York as she anticipated. She's divorced. Perhaps Jud told you."

"Yes, he did. We were talking about her last night. He said she was a grand person."

"She is a grand person. She's humorous and honest and handsome. Not pretty. No one has ever called her pretty, but she is handsome. And she married a splendid boy. We were more than pleased with the marriage. But I'm afraid it was one of those cases where the girl had too much and the boy is too proud to take from the girl in order for them to live in the style in which she had been accustomed. Ned expected Thalia to live within his salary and to live in a small western city the year round except on his annual vacation. She couldn't do it. She's lived all over the world with her father and me and she has never learned the value of money.

"I don't think she's ever been really in love with anyone. The usual young man is intimidated by her and the superior men are smart enough to know that docile women make the best wives. There is probably some special niche for a girl like Thalia and perhaps a special sort of man." She looked at her watch. "Jud won't be here for you until about 2. Would you like to drive into town with me while I do a little shopping?"

Ontario On Eve Of Election Says Premier Nixon

Toronto, May 20 — (CP) — Ontario is daily coming closer to an election but the zero hour for issuance of the writs is uncertain, Premier Harry Nixon said today. He said he favored an election being held as soon as possible.

The Premier was commenting on an editorial in the Windsor Star stating an election "should be held as quickly as possible."

"I agree with that 100 per cent," Mr. Nixon declared. "But I still say the overseas vote has to be given every opportunity under the law to register their franchise. That was the intention of the legislature when they passed the act providing for taking the overseas vote by proxy. I have to satisfy myself that every possible provision has been made for those in the armed forces overseas to exercise their franchise under the law."

Mr. Nixon said the election machinery is being got ready, and he added: "I don't see any advantage in long drawn campaigns and I have no intention of initiating such.

"I believe the people should have opportunity of selecting the government they want with a minimum of disturbance."

It was shown at the Liberal convention April 29-30, Mr. Nixon said that people are not likely to be swayed from a course determined on in advance by publicity, or forms of propaganda.

Will Carry On.

Mr. Nixon said that if he calls an election and Canadian troops spearhead an invasion after the writs are issued the election will have to be gone through with.

"Only the war council can say about an invasion". Mr. Nixon declared. "They are not advising this province".

"Do you think a definite decision may be ready by next week?" Mr. Nixon was asked.

"I can't tell the zero hour," he replied.

Mr. Nixon also said former Premier Gordon Conant will be appointed Master in Chambers at Osgoode Hall soon. The appointment had not been dealt with at yesterday's cabinet meeting but will be passed later.

M. M. Hood, who was secretary to Mr. Conant, is being transferred to the Department of Agriculture as statistician. He will continue as secretary of the Ontario Defence Committee.

Hitler Decides To 'Do a Tunis' In Norway

Montreal, May 20 — (CP)—Underground reports to the Norwegian government press Attache here today say that Hitler has decided to "do a Tunis" in Norway.

The reports declare German High Command plans for a military campaign envisage the loss of Norway to the United Nations.

German orders are that their occupation forces must "fight to the last man" — reminiscent of orders Hitler gave his ill-fated African Korps.

Nazi plans are said to take it for granted the Allies will be able to occupy all of Northern Norway and that they will have the full co-operation of the populace. However, the Nazis are counting on defence lines established in Central Norway to hold up the expected United Nations' advance.

Red, White, Blue Badges Distributed To Reserve Army

Christian Church Faces Great Opportunity Today States Bishop Seager

Toronto, May 20 —(CP)— Rt. Rev. C. E. Seager, Bishop of Huron, said last night that the Christian Church "faces a great opportunity today and in the post war years in getting the great mass of people who have no affiliation with any Christian body to give their support to some organized Christian Church." Bishop Seager was guest preacher at the annual service of the Toronto Synod of the Church of England in Canada.

"The church in the days of our forefathers united Britain," he said. "Nowhere is a united effort along Christian lines needed more than in Canada where division is sharper than in any other part of the Empire.

"As a unifying force in the world, no body can accomplish as much as the Christian Church. We must put forth every effort now and prepare for the post-war era when our oportunities will grow."

At a business meeting yesterday, the Synod gave approval to proposal that men and women desiring to marry should have a health certificate.

Navy League to Hold Tag Day Saturday

In an effort to raise money for the many branches of work accomplished by the Navy League of Canada, the Belleville branch of the above organization will hold a tag day in Belleville this Saturday, it has been announced by Mrs. J. Ingram, under whose direction the appeal is being made.

Since the war began the Navy League of Canada has been engaged in a tremendous task. New commodious buildings for the use of Merchant Marine sailors have been erected at the principal ports while other buildings have been taken over and renovated. All told such buildings now number 20 and are on each coast and comforts afforded sailors at these centres at the end of long and hazardous ocean voyages are truly appreciated.

Included also in the work of the Navy League of Canada is the sponsorship of Sea Cadets in many centres throughout Canada. Officials of the Belleville branch trust that district citizens will be as generous as possible in their donations on Saturday.

TESTING PILOT KILLED

Los Angeles, May 20 (AP)—Max Constant, internationally - known racing and testing pilot, has been killed in the crash of a plane on an experimental flight.

Constant, born in France, became interested in aviation in Britain after the first Great War, and came to the United States in 1935 to fly Jasqueline Cochrane's plane in the ninth annual New York City-Miami race. He won the race, in five hours, 43 minutes and 39 seconds.

15,775 Persons in County Participate in Victory Loan; Total of $3,832,250 Raised

This week a humble "Thanks" to every last man, woman and child in Hastings County best expresses the nation's gratitude and appreciation of a job well and truly done.

As was indicated during the latter part of last week when Canada's Fourth Victory Loan campaign was drawing near to its close this county went flying "over the top" Final figures released today by Hastings loan committee headquarters revealed that the $3,300,000 had been subscribed 116 per cent.

This indeed was a remarkable achievement and the $3,832,250 subscribed during the three weeks' campaign represents the greatest amount of money ever raised in any Victory Loan campaign in the history of the county. All of this money was in cash dollars or in pledged earnings as there were no bonds available for conversion. So why shouldn't it be congratulations —"Well done Citizens of Hastings".

Needed Much Ground Work

While the citizens in general freely subscribed of their money to put the Victory Loan over the top, this was not achieved without a great deal of ground work on the part of the many workers on the various committees who gave unselfishly of their time and effort to stimulate the drive. These persons really did a marvelous job and are worthy of any and all expressions of appreciation tendered.

In breaking down the county figures, committee headquarters announced that 15,775 persons in Hastings had participated in the Victory Loan through subscription of their dollars. Therefore one person out of every four in the County bought bonds and taking the County total of $3,832,250 subscribed an average of almost $250.

Excellent Record by Air Stations

With all returns completed County headquarters' figures revealed that personnel of the various Hastings air stations responded nobly to the call of their country and subscribed 167 per cent of their cumulative objective of $205,000. This division led all other units in over-subscription.

Outside of special names division which subscribed 148 per cent of its $500,000 objective, there were five units which surpassed their respective objectives, it has been announced. These were the County air stations, Deloro village with 120 per cent; Belleville with 116 per cent the average of the County; Stirling district with 107 per cent and Trenton with 102 per cent. Other units just failed to reach their objective by a few per centage points.

Of the units which failed to exceed their quotas, Deseronto district led with subscriptions totalling 98.7 of their objective, while Sidney and Thurlow district was second with 98 per cent. Tweed district attained 90.8 per cent, Bancroft district 86 per cent and Madoc district 83.5 per cent.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, May 20 (AP)—Leading stocks got another foot up on recovery in today's market but early gains ranging from fractions to a point or more eventually were reduced by profit taking in many cases.

Canadian issues were steady, Dome Mines, Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore standing unchanged while McIntyre rose 1-4. Hiram Walker and Canada 4s dropped fractions of a point.

The initial swing was accompanied by considerable activity and, at the best, numerous favorites touched peaks for the year or longer. While realizing the pact, plus marks were widespread near the fourth hour.

Revived investment demand, particularly in prime-rated issues of companies may not be handicapped by post-war reconversion problems, served as the principal trend prop. News from virtually all battle fronts remained encouraging.

Bonds exhibited selective strength. Commodities were steady.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 20—(CP) — The small cattle offering sold at steady prices in trade on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Butcher steers traded at $11.25-$12, heifers $11.50-$11.75, butcher cows $8-$9.75 and fed yearlings $11.85-$12.50.

Veal calves brought steady prices at $15-$15.50 for choice. Other grades were downward to $10.

Hogs sold steady at $16.75 dressedweight.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 20 (CP). — Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight—Chatham $12.

Dressedweight—Hamilton $16.65 delivered, London and Stratford $16.50 delivered, Hull and Peterborough $16.10 plus transportation.

PACIFIC WAR COUNCIL MEETS

Prime Minister Churchill Invited by President Roosevelt to Attend

Washington, May 20—(AP)—Underscoring Prime Minister Churchill's pronouncements to Congress that Britain would fight Japan to the end and help reduce her munition centres and cities to ashes, President Roosevelt called a meeting of the Pacific War Council today and invited Mr. Churchill to attend.

The council, members of which represent all the countries actively engaged in the Pacific war operations, meets regularly at the White House.

Later in the day, the Prime Minister was to meet all the representatives in Washington of the British Dominions as well as his own chiefs-of-staff.

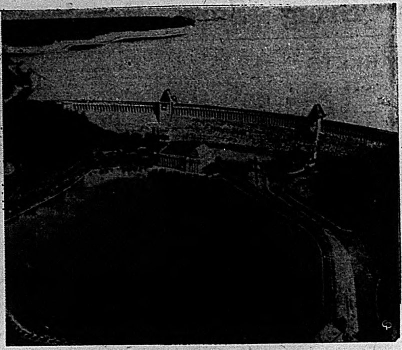
DESTRUCTION OF GERMAN DAM CRIPPLING BLOW TO NAZIS



Here is the great Mohne dam, which supplied power to the German war industry in the Ruhr valley, now destroyed by the R.A.F. The dam backed up a lake four square miles in area and 125 feet deep in the district east of Essen. Its destruction flooded the valley and caused untold damage to the German war machine.

DELEGATION ASKS FOR INFORMATION FROM MINISTERS

Assured No Major Lay-Offs Anticipated in Plants Referred To

SENIORITY QUESTION

Ottawa, May 20—(CP)—A delegation representing the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (C.I.O.) Wednesday interviewed Munition Minister Howe and Labor Minister Mitchell seeking information on the possibility of lay-offs at plants in Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, Ont., and Pickering, Ont.,

Clarence S. Jackson of Toronto, District President of the Union, said at the conclusion of the conference that the delegation received assurance no major lay-offs were anticipated at the plants in which the Union was interested. The delegation, however, was "not satisfied" that it had the assurance necessary for the workers, Mr. Jackson said.

In addition to Mr. Jackson the delegation included George Harris, District Secretary and Harry Hunter, Hamilton, and Bert Sturland, Peterborough, district representatives. The plants on which they sought information were small arms and York Arensal, Toronto; Otis Fenson and Hamilton Munition Works, Hamilton; Defence Industries Ltd., Pickering; and Genelco Ltd., Peterborough. The plants employ a total of 18,500 workers.

No Major Dislocation Anticipated

"We were told that plans are still incomplete but no major dislocation is anticipated at these plants," Mr. Jackson said. "We were also told that there will be plenty of jobs available to take up any who are dislocated and that it is not the government's intention to allow any downgrading of wages."

The delegation asked that the Union should be notified as well as the management and workers when lay-offs were anticipated and said the Minister said they say no reason why this could not be done. The ministers also agreed that seniority should be a primary factor in determining which employees were to be laid off.

On a request that following lay-offs there should be consultation between the management, selective service and the Union the ministers gave no assurance.

Jackson's Comment

"We are not satisfied that we got the right type of assurance that is needed or the co-operation that we asked for," Mr. Jackson said. "Unless this co-operation we ask for is brought into being and the place of the unions recognized there will be considerable consternation existing among the workers to the detriment of production and the whole war effort."

The delegation said they informed the ministers that in some cases there was a tendency on the part of management to use the disturbed production situation to discriminate against workers active in organization.

St. Mark's Y.P.S. Meets

Bonarlaw — The regular meeting of St. Mark's Young Peoples' Society was held on Tuesday evening in the Parish Hall, Carl Heath presiding. In the absence of Miss Freda McLaren, Miss Marion Richardson acted as secretary.

The Association voted the sum of $30 to the Church Wardens' Fund and adopted a resolution to finance the cost of all Gold Cross and Crown pins by Sunday School pupils.

After the business session was closed the meeting was turned over to Mrs. W. J. Barlow and Ray McLaren who were in charge of the program. As the program had been announced as "Patriotic" practically all numbers were along this line, and included a talk on "Our Flag" by Miss Mariorf Richardson, a humorous reading by Glyn Eastwood, a talk on "Empire Day" by Mrs. W. J. Barlow and a contest. A number of patriotic songs were sung by the entire group led by Mr. Baker, Mrs. Jason Baker accompanying on the piano.

Mr. Bert McCoy has been quite ill for the past week.

Mrs. Thos. Caldwell is convalescing but will be confined to her bed for several weeks. Her daughter, Mrs. Lou Henry of Hamilton, has been with her for several days and her son, Gerald, and Mrs. Gerald her son, Gerald, and Mrs. Gerald Caldwell visited her over the week-end.

STILL IN THE ARSENAL

Lincoln, Neb., May 20 (AP).—State Guardsmen who discovered a skunk in their arsenal conferred on the best methdd to get the animal out—without offending it. Sgt. John Peck's idea was followed: A ramp was built near the arsenal window and some meat placed on the end of the ramp to lure out the animal. The bait wasn't very tempting—the skunk still is in the arsenal.

R.C.A.F. Fliers Regard German Pilots Impersonally

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 20 (CP).—You might expect these young Canadians who fly by night deep into Germany to have a deep-seated hatred for their opposite numbers in the German Air Force but they have not.

Most of them know somebody who went out one night and didn't come home. Still they appear to have only two views about Nazi aircraft and airmen even in these times when night fighters are said to be more numerous than ever over Germany.

1. A German plane is something to be avoided in the interests of getting on with the job at hand.

2. A German plane, once it moves to the attack, is an impersonal thing despite its human cargo, something to be shot down before it does the shooting.

On point one, many bomber men returned home to report sighting German night fighters either on their way in to bomb or on the way home but that the fighters showed no inclination to give battle. That's O.K. with the bomber boys.

On point two, Sgt. Wilf King of Gravenhurst, Ont., an air gunner, says, "You never think of a night fighter as anything except a target. You just try to pour bullets into him."

If you watch these crews go out and come back and listen to them talk there comes the realization that death in the air, whether it is a bomber or a fighter, may be democratic but it looks almost casual to the men who fly.

Much of Blame Put on Shoulders Of Factory Foremen

Brockville, Ont., May 20 (CP).—Much of the blame for factory accidents was placed on the shoulders of shop foremen by W. Sutherland, of Ottawa, field representative of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence division of the Ontario Industrial Accident Prevention Association at a dinner meeting here last night.

It is the responsibility of foremen, Mr. Sutherland said, to see that the proper kind of equipment is used. Conservation of manpower for war production was the keynote of an address by W. H. Munro, general manager of the Ottawa Light, Heat and Power Company, second vice-president of the provincial association.

CHANGED MIND

Mrs. Madalyn Wineland, 41, bought a gun for the purpose of killing herself. She changed her mind, and when police came she told them she shot her husband instead.

"My Father Gave Me Herbs Something Like Syntona"

That is Why I Decided to Take This Medicine for Recent Gas and Other Stomach Suffering, Headaches, Nervousness, Tired, Run-down Feeling and It's Been Wonderful for Me, Says a Well-Known Woman.

No one can dispute the true medicinal value of some of Nature's best known Herbs and Roots, which for centuries have been used so successfully. No less than 12 of these Herbs, Roots and Barks are skilfully blended in the "Syntona" medicine and that is why it is so good for you and has been so highly praised by an overwhelming majority of men and women everywhere.

"When I was just a little girl my father used to give me a mixture of herbs and roots and, while I didn't always like it, I can remember how good they made me feel. So, when I recently began suffering from indigestion, gas and nervous upset stomach, I decided to try Syntona because it seemed to be something like those herbs I used to take. At that time I was also suffering from severe headaches, a bladder irritation that disturbed my sleep often at night and generally I had no energy and felt tired and rundown. I had no appetite and was so nervous I couldn't even sit down and do my knitting.

Anyhow, the herbs in Syntona having appealed to me, I started taking it and it has been wonderful for me. Now I enjoy eating again and am rid of that awful gas and indigestion that used to distress me so. I am free from headaches, that bladder irritation does not trouble me and my nerves have quieted down so that I can do my work so much more easily and without tiring as I used to do. Syntona is a lot more pleasant to take than the herbs we took and I can truthfully say it has done me more good than anything I've ever taken before. I certainly recommend it to others."

Get yourself a treatment of Syntona today at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time.

113 AXIS PLANES DESTROYED IN WIDE RAIDS BERLIN, BREMEN, ESSEN ON RAF CALLING CARDS

Greatest Victory Day in History Of Allied Air Force

3 Bombs Dropped On Dam Near Gulf Of Asinara But Details Lacking

7 TRANSPORTS DOWNED

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 21 — (AP) — United States fighters and bombers destroyed 113 enemy planes in widespread and devastating raids yesterday against Italy and Sardinia during what was officially called "One of the greatest victory days in the history of the strategic air force."

The Strategical Air Force, under command of Maj.-Gen. James H. Doolittle, is made up of R.A.F. medium bombers and U. S. heavy and medium bombers.

Its formation was announced April 15.

Allied Headquarters spokesmen said that, in a swift hit and run sweep over northwestern Sardinia, American fighter-bombers, dropped three bombs on a dam 10 miles east of Sassari near the Gulf of Asinara. Results were not announced.

Aircraft of half a dozen types participated in the whirlwind aerial action in which 91 Axis planes were shattered on the ground and 22 Axis pilots engaged in air combat were sent crashing in flames.

The Allied communique announced that seven of the planes shot down were Merseburg-323s, the huge German transports which are capable of carrying 120 men each or about 10 tons of freight.

186 Planes In Two Days

The roll call of enemy aerial disaster thus was brought to 186 planes in two days. Allied aircraft destroyed 73 Axis planes aloft or on the ground the day before in similar heavy smashes at Italian Mediterranean bases.

The R.A.F. and U.S. A.A.F. disclosed in a joint communique that they had destroyed 5,172 Axis planes in air combats in the Mediterranean area between the entrance of Italy into the war on June 10, 1940, and the collapse of Axis resistance in Tunisia this month.

Of these 3,415 were shot down by the Middle East command squadrons, including Malta-based units, and 1,757 in the Northwest African campaign.

Since the German and Italian ground forces tossed in the sponge, however, Allied airmen have brought down 89 more planes, swelling the North African total to 1,846 and the list in all the Mediterranean area to 5,261. This figure does not include hundreds of enemy planes blasted on the ground.

Planes Set Afire

Twelve of 25 Savoia-Marchetti-79s, three-engined Italian bombers, were set afire on the Milas airdrome of Sardinia in attacks without a pause to give the reeling Axis Air Force any rest.

The communique said Wellington bombers of the R. A. F. attacked an enemy air field in Sardinia Wednesday night and that this attack was followed up in daylight yesterday by fighter-escorted American medium bombers.

U. S. heavy bombers again raided Grossetto airdrome, 90 miles north of Rome, and a spokesman said "some of the finest precision bombing of the war took place" over its hangers, administration buildings and runways.

Fifty-eight of 59 aircraft parked on the ground there were destroyed during the high-altitude attack, reconnaissance photographs showed.

The fortified island of Pantelleria, 45 miles east of Cap Bon, was raided again.

Fighters outfitted with bombs ranged from one end of Sardinia to the other, blasting bridges, trains and barracks. Bombers with fighter escorts, bombed the Villacidro airdrome northwest of Cagaliari while other bombs attacked the nearby Decimomannu airdrome. A spokesman said they caused "tremendous damage to planes on the ground and in the air."

Cause Large Fires

R. A. F. Wellington bombers had attacked both Villacidro and Decimomannu the preceding night, causing large fires which illuminated the targets after the enemy had blacked out lights which the bomber crews saw still burning.

U. S. airmen achieved their most impressive triumph of the day at Grosseto. Of 58 planes destroyed there, 53 were of bomber or transport types, one was a four-engined bomber and four were single-seater fighters.

Interpreters who scanned reconnaissance pictures taken later described the raid as probably the most successful of its kind ever attempted.

The Grosseto airdrome buildings received many hits. At least nine fires were started. The smoke was visible 90 miles, crewmen said.

Almost equally impressive was the raid on Decimomannu, where the 13 enemy planes, including the seven six-engined Merseburgs were shot down in two separate engagements.

Photo reconnaissance showed 13 destroyed aircraft on the ground at Decimomannu and hits on the administration buildings and barracks.

FASCIST SHAKEUP ELEVATES SCORZA

Six Officials Expelled by Mussolini From Party

London, May 21 — (CP) — A new shakeup in Italy's Fascist party was reported today by the Berlin radio, with Carlo Scorza, party secretary and Mussolini's right-hand man, taking over leadership of the party's "organization of combatants."

D.N.B., German news agency, said also in a Rome dispatch heard by The Associated Press that Col. Alesandro Scala had been named Chief of Staff-of-the Fascist youth organizations of which many members have recently been reported in violent opposition to policies of the party leadership.

The combatant organization, over which Scorza assumed personal command, trains war veterans for administrative jobs in the party so they can gradually replace those who have not yet seen service in the army.

The Rome radio reported last week that six Fascist officials had been expelled from the party by Mussolini.

GIVEN PRISON TERMS

Napanee, Ont., May 21 —(CP)— Two men were given prison terms and a third was remanded indefinitely in court yesterday for attempting to commit theft and entering a home on Highway No. 2 May 14th.

Jos. Egochen, Montreal was sentenced to two years in Kingston Penitentiary, Armand Madiere, Montreal, will spend 18 months in Ontario Reformatory, and Roger Garieby, Toronto, was given a chance as it was his first serious offence. All three men pleaded guilty.

Japanese Base on Kiska Island Is Threatened With Blockade

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 21 — (AP) — The Japanese base on Kiska Island was threatened with blockade today as a result of the imminent collapse of enemy resistance on Attu.

United States authorities said the fall of Attu, westernmost of the Aleutians, was definitely expected within the next day or so. Enemy forces are bottled up around Chichagof Harbor at the island's north eastern extremity.

They have been under attack since early yesterday by ground troops and warships, and, weather permitting, by bombers also. Their situation was considered hopeless.

In the circumstances the Japanese on Kiska could only look forward to the same fate, although it may befall them much more slowly and only after the noose of blockading ships and planes has been drawn tight around the bleak and barren United States island they have held since last June.

Kiska is 172 nautical miles southeast of Attu and 63 miles northwest of the United States base on Amchitka. With Attu in United States hands and U. S. planes operating from there Kiska will be caught between two hostile bastions.

Kiska is much more strongly held than Attu was. Estimates by competent authorities put the enemy force on Kiska at upwards of 10,000 men whereas there probably were only 2,000 to 3,500 on Attu.

London, May 21 — (CP) — The Vichy radio in a broadcast recorded by Reuters announced today that "the Japanese have begun to evacuate Attu.

(There were no details and no explanation of how evacuation could be executed after Washington had announced that all Japanese on Attu were confined to the Chichagof area and U. S. naval forces were offshore.)

CHIEFS-OF-STAFF WILL PRESENT TENTATIVE REPORT

Decision on Their Recommendations Likely Next Week Roosevelt Says

TALKS WITH DR. SOONG

Washington, May 21 (AP) — President Roosevelt disclosed today that the Anglo-American chiefs-of-staff would submit some preliminary recommendations tonight to him and Prime Minister Churchill and he said probably final decisions on them would be made next week.

At the same time, the President told a press conference it is absolutely true that a large majority of American forces outside the United States are in the Pacific.

Mr. Churchill had mentioned this in a speech to Congress Wednesday, and the President said it is particularly true of the army and navy. About half of the United States air force is in the Pacific, he said.

Asked if he could give a progress report on his conferences with Mr. Churchill, the President replied that so far most of the work has been done by the combined chiefs-of-staffs—the top military, naval and air advisers who flank the two consultants.

Final Decisions

Tentative recommendations are expected to be made at a meeting tonight, he said, and these will be considered by the Prime Minister and the President during the week end. They will take them up next week, he said, and the kinks will be ironed out and a final decision made on them.

In his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated the Allies' unconditional surrender stand when asked whether any consideration is being given to the political future of Italy. He did not elaborate on that point.

The President had no specific information to divulge on the primary topics under discussion in his conferences with Mr. Churchill, as well as with Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada. He said he was talking with Mr. King about the problems involved in winning the war.

Questions on China

When it was noted by reporters that he has had a number of conferences, since Mr. Churchill's arrival here, with Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, Mr. Roosevelt said he had taken up nothing special with the Minister and supposed the principal thing related to getting war materials of all kinds, including medicines, into China. That is going along pretty well, he remarked.

China definitely has figured in his talks with Mr. Churchill, the President agreed, but he said, so have a lot of other places.

Asked whether he had any information regarding a statement by a Chinese spokesman that a large, well-equipped Japanese force was marching westward toward Chungking and was only 186 miles away, the President said he had not heard of it.

Intensive Search Continues For Body of Dr. H. Welsh

An intensive aerial and ground search carried out until dark Thursday evening failed to recover the body of Dr. Harold E. Welsh of Roslin, member of the Legislature for East Hastings who was drowned in the swift running current of Opeongo River in Algonquin Park.

Accompanied by Dan Goodwin, station agent from Maynooth, Dr. Welsh was fishing from an outboard motor boat which was swept over the dam at the foot of Opeongo Lake. Goodwin managed to crawl ashore in the rapids below but Dr. Welsh was swept far downstream where he was drowned in the raging current.

Four in Party

The tragedy which claimed the life of one of the most popular men in Hastings county was the climax of a four-man fishing expedition to Opeongo Lake in Algonquin Park. Other members of the party were Elmer Sandercock, superintendent of Hastings County Home, and Mr. Norman Welsh, Toronto, a brother of Dr. Welsh.

According to fishermen familiar with Opeongo Lake the usual practice to follow when fishing for speckled trout is to tie boats to a boom of logs which runs at right angles to the dam built across the foot of the lake. From the position directly at the head of the dam lines are cast into the pool below.

"Overshot" Boom

Operating an outboard motorboat Dr. Welsh apparently ran his boat to the boom but "overshot" it and the craft was caught in the sluiceway current and swept over the dam. Goodwin, with terrific effort, managed to reach the shore but Dr. Welsh was carried downstream.

Ordinarily the water in the river is not more than two feet deep below the dam but with the season's high water level and the fact stop logs had been taken out of the dam to permit logging operations, the depth is now 12 to 15 feet.

Mr. Sandercock telephoned his wife in Belleville early yesterday afternoon informing her of the accident and giving assurance of his own safety but did not give any details as to exactly what happened.

The search for Dr. Welsh's body which continued this morning is being conducted by Mr. Taylor, park superintendent, and provincial police from Haileybury headquarters. It is feared the body may have been swept several miles downstream.

6 SELF-PROPELLED GERMAN BARGES SUNK BY RUSSIANS

Filled With Troops and Probably Lost Trying to Reinforce Garrison

BITTER FIGHTING

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, May 21—(AP) — The movement of German self-propelled barges across the Black Sea and attempts of a Nazi infantry force to fight its way through the Russian attack arc northeast of Novorossisk have been smashed by Soviet artillery and planes, reports from the front said today.

The Soviet midnight communique said that ships of the Red fleet and planes patrolling the Black Sea sank six of the enemy barges filled with troops, near the port of Anapa and near Kerch. Anapa lies below the Taman Peninsula, northwest of Novorossisk, and Kerch is at the tip of the peninsula that juts out of the Crimea.

There was no immediate indication whether the boats were attempting to bring more reinforcements to the Axis troops now compressed into four districts in the Taman Peninsula, or whether this marked the beginning of an Axis attempt at an evacuation.

Four German infantry regiments attempted to storm the Red lines northwest of Novorossisk after laying down a heavy barrage, but were met with volleys of Soviet gunfire, the midnight war bulletin said, and thrown back with heavy losses.

Hit on Flanks

In one sector, a Russian unit was hit on the flanks by superior enemy forces. The right flank managed to hold, but on the left flank the Germans were reported to have come on until the Red Army men were fighting them off with fists, bayonets and point-blank pistol fire.

Reinforcements which moved in swiftly under cover of night arrived in time to turn the tide of battle, front advices said.

(The noon communique, recorded by the London Soviet radio Monitor from a Moscow broadcast, said that Russian artillery pounded more German blockhouses out of commission during the night, that four German planes were shot down and that Nazi gun positions were silenced.

(It also announced 200 Germans were killed on the Smolensk front and that Russian artillery punished the Germans severely on the Leningrad front and west of Rostov. A German troop and ammunition train was blown up by Red fliers in the Sevsk area, the war bulletin said.)

BRITISH GUERILLA FORCE HAMPERS JAP OFFENSIVE

Three-Month Mission in Burma Wrecks Many Supply Lines, Bases

PENETRATE 200 MILES

New Delhi, India, May 21.—(CP)—A force of British and native troops that wrecked Japanese rail lines in Northern Burma and hampered a Japanese offensive against India has completed its mission after three months of bitter jungle guerilla warfare, a special British Communique announced today.

Rivalling the exploits of Lawrence of Arabia, the forces were led by Brig. Charles Orde Wingate, 39, kin to the legendary T. E. Lawrence.

The size of his force was not disclosed, but eight columns, with nearly 1,000 supply bearing mules, moved into Burma in mid-February to smash at the Japanese rail lines on a 300-mile front between Mandalay and Myitkyina.

(Including in this force, according to Reuters News Agency, was a small number of Canadian and Australian volunteers, one being identified as in a London dispatch as Capt. Roy Mackenzie of Windsor, Ont. The Canadian captain said he helped blow up a railway line and once was swept nearly two miles down the Irrawaddy River.)

"Certain columns penetrated more than 200 miles into Burma", the communique said "Early in March they put out of action the railway line running from Mandalay through Katha to Myitkyina. Demolition charges destroyed tracks and bridges in 75 places and rendered further operation of this vital line of communication impossible for many months.

YAMAMOTO, HEAD OF JAPAN'S NAVY, REPORTED KILLED

Reported He Once Boasted He Would Dictate Peace Terms In Washington

ABLE STRATEGIST

New York, May 21 — (AP) — The Tokyo radio announced today that Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, Commander-in-Chief of the combined Japanese fleet, who was reported to have boasted he would dictate peace terms in the White House, has been killed in action on a warplane in April.

A domestic broadcast recorded by the United States federal communications commission said that Yamamoto had met death aboard a warplane "while directing general strategy on the front line," but gave no details.

Yamamoto was Japan's foremost advocate of combined sea and air power and was known as one of the most able Japanese naval strategists.

As spokesman for the Tokyo naval command he torpedoed the London naval conference of 1934, smashing the whole structure of naval limitations and ending the building truce that gave the Pacific Ocean two decades of peace.

Only a few months after the attack on Pearl Harbor he was reported to have written to a friend. "I am looking forward to dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington."

Terse Japanese Communique

The broadcast added that Admiral Mineichi Koga had been named Yamamoto's successor and "already was in command." Koga formerly was commander of the Japanese fleet in Chinese waters.

Yamamoto had served as Commander-in-Chief of the combined fleet since Aug. 30, 1939.

F.C.G. Monitors who heard the Tokyo broadcast said the announcer appeared overcome with the import of the news and that his voice was choked with emotion as he finished reading the communique reporting Yamamoto's death.

Washington, May 21—(AP)—Here is President Roosevelt's comment, which he authorized for direct quotation, on the reported death of Japanese Admiral Yamamoto:-

Some Skepticism

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — News of the death of Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese fleet, came as a surprise today to United States naval men who said they were unaware of any sea-air combat in April sufficiently important to have claimed the attention of Japan's ranking officer.

No American sources confirmed the death and reaction ranged from calm expressions of interest to frankly skeptical comment on Tokyo's account of how the admiral died.

Some authorities said he had been identified with so many Japanese reverses in the last year that he might have committed Hara-Kiri or he might have died a natural death of some organic ailment.

'Prolonged Banshee Howlings' Of London Sirens May Be Muffled

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 21 — (CP Cable)— Five nights of air raid alerts in London caused by fast Nazi fighter bombers darting singly through the city's defences have raised the old question of changing the mournful tune of the sirens which Prime Minister Churchill once called "prolonged banshee howlings."

The sirens which nearly everyone agrees produce one of the war's weirdest sounds are blamed for waking all but the soundest sleepers and keeping them awake by howling 11 alerts and shrieking all-clears in those five nights.

Criticism is concentrated on the sirens rather than on either the sneak raiders which are the cause of it all, or the deafening anti-aircraft barrage which, however, roars at the sky only when enemy aircraft are overhead and only as long as they remain.

Basil Cardew, Daily Express air reporter, said that while the Nazis only hope to create maximum sleeplessness by the sneak raids, the authorities "are playing their game by sticking to the ghoulish siren."

He urged investigation of other methods, arguing the sirens' present effect is disproportionate to the raiders' efforts.

Cardew said that if the sirens must be maintained then at least they should be adapted to "emit [illegible]

Maj. Philip Gribble, the Daily Chronicle's [illegible] to his news editor invoked the 'interests of national health.'

Enemy Transport System Is Given Terrific Pounding

Despite Extensive Operations All But One of Planes Used Return

FACTORIES SHELLED

London, May 21 — (CP) — Swift Mosquito bombers of the R. A. F. bombed Berlin last night for the second successive night and the 5th time since May 13.

Simultaneously other British bombers and fighters struck at enemy industries and communications at widespread places in both France and Germany, including Bremen and Essen.

Mines also were laid in enemy waters, an air ministry communique said.

The Berlin radio acknowledged that British planes had been over Germany again but characteristically made light of the raids, describing them as "ineffective nuisance attacks. The daily communique of the German High Command, broadcast from Berlin, made no mention of the latest attack on the Nazi capital.

Details of the R.A.F. attacks on enemy transport were given by the air ministry news service.

Near Bremen, the announcement said, one speedy Mosquito set fire to a factory with cannon shells, shot up a freight yard and strafed a train, bringing it to a halt.

Seven other trains, four locomotives and a number of anti-aircraft searchlight batteries were targets for other Mosquitoes in the Bremen area.

In France a Beaufighter shot down a Heinkel 111 over a German airfield, while others damaged locomotives, barges, freight cars, canal jetties and motor transport.

Enemy raders rumbled over a coastal district of southeast England just before midnight, but an official announcement said no bombs were dropped.

London had an alert for the fifth consecutive night, but there was no gunfire and no planes were reporter over the city.

Need Not Take Full Value of Coupon On One Variety of Meat

Toronto, May 21 — (CP) — A Prices Board spokesman today said that when meat rationing starts May 27 householders would not be required to use the full value of a ration coupon on any one variety of meat or in any one group.

"Shoppers may buy less than a coupon's worth of any meat and take the rest of the coupon value in meat from the same or any other coupon group," he said. "If both parties are willing, housewives may leave their ration books with their butchers." The latter are being instructed in the methods of providing variety in restricted purchase."

Yesterday, Earl Smith, Field representative of the Prices Board, said vegetarians could not purchase meat rations for others but must turn in their coupons.

190,000 MEN IN CANADIAN ARMY NOW OVERSEAS

Over-All Strength of Army at End of March is 440,000 Says Ralston

THREE HOME ZONES

(By FRANK FLAHERTY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 21. (CP)—A new and more detailed picture of the role of the Canadian Army in the defence of North America and its outposts is before the public as a result of Defence Minister Ralston's recent statement on the army in the House of Commons.

While the composition and function of the army overseas has been described before the minister in a statement spread over three days threw new light on the employment of the 250,000 men serving in Canada and the outposts of the continent such as Newfoundland, Labrador, Alaska and the West Indies.

The over-all strength of the army as of March 31 last was given by Col. Ralston as 440,000, of whom 190,000 are overseas.

Divided in Three Parts

Col. Ralston said the home force can be divided roughly into three equal parts of 80,000 each—operational troops; home war establishment and men in the training stream.

Operational troops consist of (1) garrisons at ports, fortresses and vital areas in Canada and the outposts and (2) reserve at inland points ready for rapid movement to any area attacked. These reserves included the 6th and 7th divisions and the brigade groups of the 8th division.

Giving an idea of the extent of the garrison duty undertaken by the army he said coastal artillery were stationed in six east coast areas, four areas in Newfoundland, one subdivided area in Labrador.

Operational troops are located in 19 areas in the Pacific Command, 17 areas in the Atlantic Command, 10 inland areas and four areas outside Canada.

For the first time the minister lifted the curtain of secrecy on the airdrome defence units of the army which has been in progress of development since Pearl Harbor brought the possibility of air attack closer to Canada. He said they are strung from Alaska to Sydney, NS., and from Yukon to Labrador.

ATTEMPT TO SALVAGE LOAD

Bewdley, Ont., May 21—(CP)—A salvage crew began operations here today to recover a trailer loaded with 13½ tons of steel which was lost in Rice Lake last night. Bewdley about 15 miles northwest of Port Hope, Ont.

Police said the load of steel shifted as the transport was rounding a curve on the highway and the trailer broke away from the tractor and dropped into the lake. Steve Small of Toronto, driver of the vehicle, escaped uninjured.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

PARTIES AMICABLY SETTLE DAMAGE

Property damage to motor car fenders resulted when an automobile driven by T. Ferguson, Trenton, was in collision with another automobile, driven by Wm. McKenna, 149 Burnham St., Belleville, at the intersection of Pinnacle and Bridge Sts. early Thursday evening. Acting Sergeant Arnott investigated and was informed that Mr. Ferguson had apparently failed to observe the 'stop street' sign while proceeding north on Pinnacle St. The fenders of the vehicles were damaged. The matter of the damage to Mr. McKenna's car was amicably settled.

BLANKET STOLEN FROM PARKED CAR

For the second time within 24 hours sneak thieves stole a blanket from a parked motor car in Belleville. Last night Gardiner Post, 153½ Pinnacle St., parked his automobile on the Belle Theatre parking lot and when he later returned a motor rug was found to be missing. The evening previous a similar theft was reported to police when a rug was taken from a parked car on Pinnacle St.

BELIEVE THEFTS MADE FOR SHEER MISCHIEF

Stealing for the sheer mischief of taking things that did not belong to them was discovered by city police on Thursday night, when nine packages of cigarettes and an alarm clock were found abandoned in a driveway off Victoria Ave. late last night.

Police had been called to the Radio Cafe earlier in the night where it was reported several packages of cigarettes had been stolen from the cafe showcase. The culprits vanished before police authorities arrived, however.

Sometime later Mrs. (Dr.) R. Bird, Victoria Ave., telephoned police headquarters to report she had found several packages of cigarettes in the driveway east of her home. Investigations revealed the packages of smokes were those stolen from the Radio Cafe, but where the alarm clock fits into the pilferings is still a mystery.

MRS. F. B. UPPER ATTENDS MEETING

Mrs. F. B. Upper, chairman of the Belleville Consumer Committee has returned from the Eastern Ontario Regional Conference at Brockville. Prominent guest speakers were Miss Byrne Sanders, Ottawa, director of Consumer Branch for Canada, Mrs. Ella Webb, Editor Consumer News, Miss Harriett Parsons, Co-ordinator for Ontario, Mrs. Irena Gougeon, Ottawa, and the Mayor of Brockville. Delegates were present from Ottawa, Smiths Falls, Arnprior, Pembroke, Kingston, Napanee, Brockville, Cornwall, Prescott and Toronto.

MISSED OPPORTUNITY TO COLLECT $145

Failure to attend the McCarthy Theatre "Foto-Nite" on Thursday evening resulted in Mrs. C. A. Haight, 77 Pine Street losing the opportunity to collect the sum of $145 next week. Mrs. Haight's name was selected by the theatre management for the above offer but there was no response and the money automatically went back into the theatre exchequer with another $15 added for next week.

55 LOW CATEGORY WORKERS REGISTER

A considerably greater number of workers now employed in industry of a low category rating will be affected by the second compulsory labor transfer order than in the first, it was stated today by Mr. H. H. Reed of the Belleville National Selective Service.

Under the initial labor transfer order only a comparatively small number of workers in Belleville and district registered, it was reported while since the second proclamation was made covering a wider range of non-essential industries increased numbers of men have registered. To-date 55 workers have registered under the two orders with employees having until June 15th to report to their nearest Selective Service office.

Retail establishments in Belleville will be most seriously affected under the new order, it was stated by Mr. Reed.

MISCHIEVOUS BOYS RUIN TULIP BEDS

One of the most despicable forms of petty thieving was reported to city police last night when a Queen St. resident informed the authorities that mischievous children were stealing tulips from the premises.

"We try to beautify our property and thus make the city one to be proud of. But when these hoodlums with malice aforethought, deliberately steal flowers and trample down the young shoots of other floral designs it makes one wonder if it is all worthwhile," commented the irritated Queen St. resident in making his complaints. Although police hastened to the scene the guilty culprits had naturally beat a hasty retreat.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR MISSING YOUTH

City police were asked to assist in the possible locating of 17-year-old William Navin, 86 Station St., who left home early Thursday morning and had not returned at midnight. Young Navin had been attending classes at the War Emergency School at the Belleville Collegiate, his mother told police. He also possessed a coupe of ancient vintage, which also disappeared with its owner, police learned.

Our Sailors Need YOUR Support Give Generously

Although the now famous words "Never have so many owed so much to so few" were said by Prime Minister Churchill in glorious tribute to the men of the R.A.F. who fought off England's destruction from the skies by the German Luftwaffe, the same words might well be said in tribute to the glorious deeds of the men in the navy and merchant marine.

They are the lifeline stretching from Canada to all parts of the Empire. They brave untold dangers, they face fire, shell, starvation and shipwreck as they deliver the guns and ammunition, food, planes and tanks to the men of our fighting forces on the battle fronts.

They are men, judged by any standards and yet they ask so little.

The Navy League of Canada has done a wonderful service in providing comforts for these heroes and they are greatly appreciated. It takes money, however, to keep these comforts flowing in the necessary volume. On Saturday the Belleville branch of this worthy organization is holding a tag day to help raise fund to supply these comforts.

And Belleville won't let the heroes of Canada's navy and merchant marine down! Be generous when buying a tag Saturday.

TICKS AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Dundalk, Ont., May 21 — (CP)— A watch, lost 20 years ago on the farm now owned by Mrs. George Love, Egremont Township, West of here, turned up the other day in a field which Andrew Dingwall was plowing. He picked it up, wound it, and it began to tick.

WILL SEND WOOD EAST

Port Arthur, Ont., May 21—(CP) —Arrangements are being made to cut 150,000 cords of fuel wood in this district to be shipped to the Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara, Belleville and Cornwall areas, it was reported here last night.

Many Expressions of Regret Voiced at Loss of Dr. Welsh

County-wide regret in the loss of a much-respected and well loved physician and community worker was expressed today following the tragic death of Dr. Harold Welsh of Roslin, legislature member for Hastings East.

Medical associates with whom he had consulted as practising physician in the Roslin district and business and professional men joined in expression of tribute to a native county son who worked hard both in his own community and at Queen's Park for the betterment of health conditions in the province. Following are verbal tributes from city and county men to the late Dr. Welsh:

J. O. Herity

Mr. J. O. Herity, Secretary-Manager of Belleville Chamber of Commerce and a native of Moira where the late Dr. Welsh was born said today: "The hearts of all of us have been profoundly moved by the deplorable accident which has taken from us one of the most brilliant of our professional men and one of the ablest of those in our public life.

It was my privilege to know Doctor Harold E. Welsh more intimately than almost any other of my friends. I happened to be the principal of Moira public school when as a sturdy five-year-old boy he first came to acquire the rudiments of academic education. Even at that early age, he gave evidence of the intellectual acumen which brought him increasing distinction as he pressed forward from accomplishment to accomplishment.

Had he so chosen, he could have risen to eminence if he had gone to practice his profession in any of our great cities. But he deliberately decided that his life-work lay among the farm-folk where he had been reared and whom he knew so well.

And so Harold Welsh, who might become a specialist of nation-wide reputation in some great metropolitan centre, chose instead to unspectacular life of a country doctor.

But when all is said and done, it is our firm conviction that there is no more useful and essential service to humanity being performed today than is carried out so modestly and unostentatiously by these same rural practitioners. In fair weather and in foul, over snow-blocked roads and through forest trails, they willingly pursue their way in order that they may relieve suffering and save human life.

When therefore he was nominated for political honors, he, the unheralded and inexperienced country doctor, won a triumph at the polls that was noted from ocean to ocean. Had the fates so decreed, and had his party assumed power at some later date, it is beyond question of doubt that Harold Welsh would have been selected for an important post in an government that might be formed.

Doctor Welsh was popular in an extraordinary way, not because he sought popularity but from a native kindliness of heart which sought expression in friendly greeting, in unassuming thoughtfulness for others and in deeds of friendship and sympathy.

Now he is gone from us while life was still in its morning, when there were so many tasks to be performed and with a future, magnificent in promise, only realised in part."

"But his name," concluded Mr. Herity, will none the less be cherished and held in grateful remembrance by the multitude to whom he so graciously ministered and by the host of friends who will ever hold him in reverent regard."

President of Medical Association

"The Belleville Medical Association learned with deepest regret of the passing of Dr. Harold E. Welsh, one of its most valued members", stated Dr. E. M. MacDonald, president of the Belleville Medical Association in tribute today.

"Dr. Welsh, although in ill health for some years past, had been improving and we were looking forward eagerly to his complete recovery in the near future. A respected member of the medical profession, Dr. Welsh practised in a community in and around Roslin where he was highly respected and his death removes from us a valued practitioner who was held in the highest esteem by all of his associates", said Dr. MacDonald. He expressed sympathy to the family on behalf of the Association which he heads.

Dr. Welsh's associate member of Provincial Parliament, Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., representing Hastings West commented:

"It was with profound shock and the deepest regret that I learned yesterday of the unfortunate accident that removed from our midst a close personal friend, a political colleague whom I admired and an outstanding character in the county; Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.L.A.

"For some ten years now I have been closely associated with Harold. His early and untimely death will be an undoubted loss to this County of Hastings and the Province of Ontario. He was an outstanding success in his chosen profession of medicine, an able legislator and a good friend. We can ill-afford to lose a man of his calibre.

"I am sure the sympathy of everyone is extended to Mrs. Welsh, Helen and Ted", was the comment of tribute.

Clerk of County

Mr. Erle Denyes, clerk of the County of Hastings, in paying tribute to his friend the late Dr. Welsh, said,

"I have known the late Dr. Welsh most of my lifetime, and also was in close contact with him while serving in the Township Council, he being our Medical Health Officer. I feel that the County of Hastings has lost a native son who never spared himself at any time to promote the health of our children in our schools a typical family doctor whose manner was inspiring. He never allowed political affiliations to interfere when serving the welfare of the community.

As Clerk of the County for the past number of years, I can say that the late Dr. Welsh co-operated with the County in important matters pertaining to legislation affecting the County. He also has given a lead in such legislation.

His address in February at the Ontario Association of rural municipalities on Future Medical Care in our province was commented on very favorably by the delegates and the press.

Premier Nixon

Toronto.—Premier Nixon said Dr. Welsh was well liked by both opposition and government and that his death was a great loss to public life of the province. He considered Dr. Welsh a close personal friend. During the East Hastings by-election in 1936 Mr. Nixon said he had formed the greatest admiration for Dr. Welsh realizing why it was impossible for the Hepburn government to win. Had Dr. Welsh been the Liberal candidate he said it would have been a walk-over for the Liberals.

Lt.-Col. Geo. Drew

Toronto.—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Opposition Leader, said:

"To me and those of whom Dr. Welsh was associated in the Legislature there will be a deep feeling of personal loss. His warm personal qualities made him popular with everyone. He had already made a great contribution to the medical development in the province through his constructive suggestions in parliament and elsewhere. Because of early experience in teaching he was deeply interested in education and made many valuable contributions in debate on that subject. There is no man in the legislature whose loss will be so deeply felt".

Belleville Cheese Board Concurs in Motion For Cheese Price of 23 Cents

Shipping Point Defined in Communication Received From Ottawa

BUTTER COUPONS

Unanimous concurrence of a Kingston and Napanee resolution calling for the price of cheese to be increased to 23 cents per pound f. o. b. at shipping point was voted by members of the Belleville Cheese Board at their regular bi-monthly meeting Thursday evening.

The motion to concur with the Kingston resolution was moved by Mr. H. Swan of Corbyville with W. R. McCreary, cheese buyer, claiming that to increase the price was the only way to get increased production of cheese this year.

"We are already 16,000,000 pounds of cheese behind last year's production record," stated Mr. McCreary, "and many farmers are not yet sending milk to cheese factories because of various reasons."

He claimed that the voice of cheese boards across the province should be considered, when prices were set for cheese, but as it was, they are utterly ignored.

Cheese board members had a point of discussion brought up at the last meeting clarified when Secretary Fred Mallory read a communication from the dairy products branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board defining the price of cheese at various shipping points. Cheese boarded at the last meeting were sold with the understanding price adjustments would be made when the factory shipping point was clarified.

According to the communication the factory shipping point was interpreted to mean the railroad point, when cheese are loaded on cars; the steamship dock, when shipment is by boats; the grading station when shipment is made from the grading station; the cheese factory, when cheese are picked up by truck at the factory and delivered without transhipment, while the shipping point is the point of transhipment when cheese picked up by truck at the factory are transhipped to another truck.

According to Mr. Swan no butter coupons should be collected from farmers purchasing whey butter from their cheese factories and moved a recommendation to this effect, which was carried unanimously. Unles the practice of collecting coupons for whey butter returned to the patrons was discontinued it was held farmers would keep their milk home to churn for their own requirements.

Glass of Beer Quite Expensive

Samuel Schell, Marlbank hotel-keeper, was convicted of selling beer in his hotel on Good Friday when the case was presented before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here on Thursday afternoon. The charge was preferred by Provincial Constable James McKenzie after Chief J. C. Hayes, of Tweed, had apprehended Schell in the act of selling beer on one of the two legal holidays set aside by the Ontario Government and during which no hotel beverage room is supposed to operate. Namely Good Friday. The other similar date is Christmas Day.

Schell was fined $212.00, including costs, while George Cox, also of Marlbank, was fined $22.00, including costs, upon being convicted of the illegal consumption of beer. Chief Hayes told the court that Cox was the party to whom Schell sold a glass of beer on Good Friday at the Marlbank hotel.

SERIOUSLY ILL

Hon. William Aberhart, premier of Alberta, who may be forced out of public life due to illness. The leader of the Social Credit party is seriously ill in Vancouver General Hospital and it is said that even if he recovers, he will not be able to lead his government.

Sqdn.-Ldr. Ruttan, Leader in Attack On Convoy, Married to Belleville Girl

The husband of a Belleville girl, Squadron Leader Charles G. Ruttan, formerly of Hamiota, Manitoba, took a leading part in the successful R.C.A.F. attack on an enemy convoy off The Netherlands coast Monday night, it is revealed in a story from London, England.

Two large merchantmen were torpedoed and sunk by the torpedo bombing squadron of which Squadron Leader Ruttan is a member, it was revealed.

Married Miss D. Young

A native of Manitoba the Canadian airman who distinguished himself in the convoy action, enlisted with the R.C.A.F. six years ago and while training at Trenton met the girl who was to be his future wife. She was Miss Doris Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Young, Ridley Avenue. The couple were married in 1939. Since Squadron Leader Ruttan's departure for overseas in March of this year, Mrs. Ruttan and her son, Charles G., Jr., have been living with Mrs. Young.

Enlisted in 1937

A natural born flyer Squadron Leader Ruttan had to get his college degree before he would be accepted into the air force under regulations prior to the opening of the present war. He majored in geology at the University of Manitoba and enlisted in 1937. Since training at Trenton he has been stationed in an instructional capacity at various stations across Canada and saw his first operational duty while posted in Newfoundland. At the time of declaration of war upon Japan he was at the controls of his coastal patrol plane for a stretch of 30 hours.

Early in March of this year he was posted for overseas duty and after spending furlough with his wife here left for England when his son was only 10 days old. Attached to a torpedo squadron, her husband is shortly due for promotion to the rank of wing commander, according to Mrs. Ruttan.

D. B. McCOY

who has returned to the Steel Co. of Canada, Ltd., Hamilton, after over two years with Wartime Merchant Shipping, Limited, Montreal, where he had been Assistant to the President, Mr. H. H. MacMillan. "Bert" is well known in Belleville.

Obituary

LATE EMERSON FREDERICK

The funeral of Emerson Frederick, late residence, 51 Highland Avenue, took place Thursday afternoon, May 20th., from the Grant Funeral Home, 68 North Front Street. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. J. C. Kleinsteuber of the Pentecostal Tabernacle, assisted by Capt. Strachan of the Salvation Army, Picton. During the service a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Arnold Riley.

Interment took place in Belleville Cemetery and the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. J. C. Kleinsteuber.

The bearers were Messrs. Lyle Mason, Arnold Riley, George Riley and Edward Navins.

MISS ELLA WELSH
(Picton)

Following a long illness Miss Ella Welsh passed away in Prince Edward County Hospital on Saturday, May 15th. For many years she was employed in the G. E. Fraser store, and enjoyed the esteem of many friends, who regret her passing. She is survived by one brother, Bee Welsh, of Picton. She was a faithful member of the Anglican Church.

The funeral service was conducted on Monday afternoon by Rev. J. B. Creeggan, with interment in Glenwood Cemetery.

MRS. EDWARD T. GOOD
(Tweed)

Tweed, May 21 (Special)—Mrs. Edward T. Good died at her home here on Wednesday, May 19th, after an illness of two and a half years' duration.

The late Mrs. Good, who had reached the age of sixty-nine years, nine months and eleven days, was born in Rawdon Township and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kingston. For forty years she lived in the Tweed district and was highly esteemed in the community. In religion she was a member of Bethel United Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Edward T. Good, four daughters, Mrs. W. L. Pollock (Irene), Harold, Ont.; Mrs. Sid Morgan (Kathaline), Moira; Mrs. Angus Mumby (Florence), Moira; Mrs. Thomas Emmerson (Artilla), Moira; two sisters, Mrs. G. Simmons, Toronto and Mrs. Robert Christie, Stirling; one brother, Mr. Fred Kingston, Stirling. Mr. and Mrs. J. Kingston, of Tweed, are second cousins of the deceased.

The funeral took place this Friday afternoon.

G. H. ACKER
(Marmora)

Marmora, May 21 — A former resident of Marmora passed away at his residence in Toronto on Thursday, May 13th, in the person of George Henry (Dick) Acker. His early life was spent in Marmora and he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Acker. For a number of years he was teamster for the late W. H. Hubbell at Marmora Flour and Grist Mill. He was widely known throughout this district and had many friends. He is survived by two brothers, Charles and Herman, of Toronto. The funeral took place on Saturday in Toronto and interment was made in Park Lawn Cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Murney Reynolds wish to thank their many friends and neighbors, the doctors and nurses in Belleville hospital, also the citizens and Doctor of Frankford, and L.O.B.A., for their kindness to Miss Maggie Gay, Mrs. Reynolds' sister, and for the floral offerings. M21

Mrs. Hiram Ibey and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for kindness and sympathy during their recent bereavement in the loss of a loving husband and father, also for the numerous floral offerings and use of cars. M21

Police Court Session Cancelled

Magistrate J.B. Garvin of Kingston, had a trip to Belleville Friday morning just for the ride. Upon the arrival of His Worship it was disclosed no session of city police court was necessary.

"The only informations preferred this week were three charges of intoxication and the parties concerned all paid their fines Thursday, so it is not necessary to hold court," explained Deputy Chief Arthur Harman, who is also clerk of the police court. However, Magistrate Garvin's journey was not exactly in vain as he is scheduled to preside at Trenton police court this afternoon.

With Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Kingston for today's police court, Magistrate Garvin came to Belleville in a straight exchange of benches for the day.

BIRTH

IN MEMORIAM

FOSTER—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Alexander I. Foster, who passed away May 21, 1941.

Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break, but all in vain.
To have, to love and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things
But this they wipe out never
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.

House Rejects Opposition Move For W.I.B. Probe

Expenditures Will Not be Examined by Accounts Committee

OTHER BUSINESS

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 21 — (CP) — The House of Commons today swings back to discussion of the $3,890,000,000 war appropriation resolution after a two-day debate on whether wartime information board expenses should be examined and, if so, whether the examination should be by the public accounts committee or the war expenditures committee of the House.

The debate on W.I.B. and publicity matters ended last night when a motion by Capt. George Black (Prog. Con. Yukon) to have such expenses referred to the accounts committee was defeated by a vote of 93 to 45. Two Liberal members—J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) and J. E. D'Anjoy (Lib. Mimouski)—voted with the opposition.

Government spokesmen said if W.I.B. expenses were examined, the inquiry should be carried out by the war expenditures committee. This committee has yet to be established although a government motion to set it up has been on the order paper since February.

Today, the House is expected to hear a statement by Air Minister Power on the work of his department during the past fiscal year.

Fifteen Members Speak

Fifteen members participated in yesterday's W.I.B. debate, including Agriculture Minister Gardiner who said that rumors on government purchases examined by the public accounts committee were taken as truths in some parts of Canada.

In peacetime no great harm was done because the truth finally caught up with the story, but in wartime, during a campaign to raise a large amount of money, such reports were more serious.

The government had never indicated opposition to having an inquiry of any expenditures.

"But what we do take exception to is items such as have appeared since yesterday in the press," Mr. Gardiner continued.

He said "There is no more evil propoganda circulated in this country at any time than the kind of propaganda circulated in this compress this morning to the effect that members of the House, on the government side in particular, were objecting to inquiries into expenditures made by the government or any of its officials."

Defends Information Board

Defending the information board, Mr. Gardiner said its establishment was demanded by the press, and by opposition members. He had no reason for believing that those employed by W. I. B. were failing to earn their salaries.

In a year the W. I. B. and the former bureau of public information expenditures had been about $1,600,000. Comparable United Kingdom outlays were $38,270,000 and in the United States $35,847,000.

T. C. Douglas (C. C. F. Weyburn) said that for two days the government had been resorting to "almost every kind of technicality and sophistry imaginable to avoid a very simple matter, namely an investigation into expenses for pubicity."

It was three months since a resolution to set up a war expenditures committee had been set on order paper and it still had to be dealt with. Four months might have passed before the committee was set up. The government had "hesitated" to appoint the committee.

J. S. Roy (Ind. Gaspe) said the government had used public funds through the W. I. B. for "electoral propaganda purposes." Editorials in Ottawa English-language papers dealing with adoption of the compulsory education bill in Quebec had been translated and sent to French-Canadian papers. The purpose, he said, was to assist Premier Adelard Godbout, Liberal Premier of Quebec.

Gordon Graydon (opposition leader) said the war expenditures committee could not legally deal with publicity expenses, as this work was concerned with peace as well as wartime services. The government had placed itself in an "impossible position.

Not Enough Speeches

Capt. Black congratulated Mr. Gardiner on a "cleverly-worded political speech" and said there were not enough such speeches in the House.

J. G. Diefenbaker (Prog. Con. Lake Centre) said that in reports sent out by information services the "prime qualification appears to be adulation of the government and everlasting praise of the ministers of the crown."

Hughes Cleaver (Lib. Malton) said that if Mr. Diefenbaker desired to raise the esteem of the progressive conservative party in the minds of Canadians he should "fire its present board of pin-pricking strategists." No specific charges against W. I. B. expenses referred to the acposition.

Donald McNiven (Lib. Regina City) said that if additional duties were imposed on the accounts committee it would be unable to carry out its original reference to review the public accounts and report of the auditor-general.

A. M. Nicholson (C. C. F. Mackenzie) said it was "disturbing" to see the debate continue for two afternoons with supporters of the government refusing to have the W. I. B. expenses rferred to the accounts committee.

Will Stamp Meat In Effort to Stop "Black Market"

Ottawa, May 21. (CP)—Meat now being marketed in Canada is sufficient to meet ration requirements, Foods Administrator K. W. Taylor said at a Press Conference here last night during which he disclosed that meat on sale in Canadian butcher stores in a few weeks will be stamped in an effort to eliminate a black market under the rationing system which starts May 27.

Mr. Taylor's statement coincided with a joint announcement by the Prices and Agricultural Food Boards of the establishment of a series of floor prices for beef, corresponding to seasonal ceiling prices which existed last fall and winter.

Under the policy announced by two boards, the wholesale beef ceiling during the next 12 months will be a flat one, based on the level reached May 27, 1943. In periods of surplus supply, the market will be supported by government purchases of beef through the Agriculture Department which, without piercing the ceiling, will maintain the floor which now has been established.

When the market is not over-supplied, cattle may be expected to sell at prices equivalent to the wholesale beef ceiling schedule. Mr. Taylor said the establishment of these floor prices gave farmers assurance that prices would not break on them when they began marketing.

F. S. Grisdale, Deputy Foods Administrator, said an increase in beef cattle runs was to be expected in coming weeks, thus enlarging meat supplies. Rationing has been imposed on the assumption that supplies over the ration requirements would be available for the use of other nations.

Allies Smashing Centre of Enemy Air Power

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May .1 — (CP) — Air forces of Japan and the Allies are trading punches freely in the Southwest Pacific like two wary boxers determined to keep the other off balance.

The Japanese stab consistently at Allied supply bases on New Guinea. Allied planes strike daily at the air nerve centres from which the enemy's New Guinea raiders probably come.

This aerial parry and thrust have as a background this situation: The Allies, in complete possession of New Guinea's Papuan Peninsula, have moved up more than 100 miles to menace Japanese-held Salamaua.

Today's communique listed strikes at four New Guinea points by 21 Japanese planes as the enemy continued to show more inclination to mix it than he has in many weeks.

The communique also reported the third Allied raid within less than a week on the enemy's air stronghold of Rabaul, northern New Britain, as well as a continuation of daily attacks on Gasmata and Cape Gloucester, Southern New Britain airdromes which are within a short over-water hop of New Guinea.

Sinking of a 12-ton boat and damaging of a 52-tonner at Douglas Harbor, northwest of Buna, and the firing of a fuel dump at Milne Bay were all the enemy had to show for the bombs his 21 planes dropped there, at Dobodura, near Buna, and at Port Moresby, nearest Allied New Guinea base to Australia.

TO PRODUCE ANTI-FREEZE

Ottawa, May 21 — (CP) — The Munitions Department announced today that the manufacture of anti-freeze has been made subject to permit to prevent the production of compounds which might damage automobile radiators. Chemicals Controller E. T. Sterne said the new order would be so applied that only anti-freezes which pass rigid tests of the national research council may be manufactured.

Largest Class of Nurses to Graduate From Belleville Hospital Receives Diplomas at Graduation Exercises

A capacity crowd was in attendance at the Collegiate Auditorium on Thursday evening to witness the graduation exercises of the 1943 nursing class. It was a great moment and a highlight in the lives of each and everyone of the twenty-three young women, who, on reaching the stepping stone of their careers, solemnly took Florence Nightingale Pledge, and were presented with their graduating diplomas and pins, which proved that they had not only attained success, but they were capably and proficiently prepared to launch themselves into the nursing profession.

Attractive Stage Setting

The stage of the auditorium was attractively decorated with a row of flowering hydrangeas and pine boughs across the front. The dark red of draperies formed an effective background against which the white uniforms of the nurses showed pleasing contrast during the time they were on the stage.

Seated on the stage were Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman of the evening's program and who also serves as chairman of the Board of Governors of the hospital. Along with him were Mrs. G. A. Morton, vice president of the Women's Christian Association who own and operate the hospital, Dr. W. J. Johnston, B.D., guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Gordon Barclay hospital administrator; Miss Ruth Thompson, Director of Nursing; Rev. G. G. Wright, Rev. R. E. Spencer, Dr. E. McDonald, President of the Medical Staff and Mr. Ormonde Butler, representing Mayor Rollins of the City of Belleville who was unable to be present.

Nurses Moved in

The program opened with the graduating class each carrying a bouquet of red roses, and undergraduates marching to their seats in the auditorium. Following invocation given by Rev. R. E. Spencer, of Tabernacle United Church, the chairman introduced Mr. Butler.

Mr. Butler extended congratulations to the graduates and said, "it is not necessary for me to laud these young women who have chosen nursing as their career because never in our history has the nursing profession been wanting." Mr. Butler also expressed his gratitude to the Women's Christian Association for providing such a splendid institution as the hospital and concluded with "I wish God speed, good luck and every success to the graduating class in all their undertakings."

Tribute to W.C.A.

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, as chaiman of the Board of Governors, also paid tribute to the Women's Christian Association, who own and operate the Belleville General Hospital, and on behalf of the Board of Governors and the W.C.A., paid tribute to all divisions of the hospital staff and especially to the graduates. In conclusion he expressed his appreciation to the citizens who had come to witness the graduating exercises.

Introduces Guest Speaker

Mr. G. Barclay, hospital administrator, introduced Dr. W. J. Johnston.

Dr. Johnston he said, was born in Ireland and came to this country in 1911. He began his career as a minister in Saskatchewan. From there he went to Montreal, where he remained for fourteen years. He is now completing his thirteenth year as minister of Eglinton United Church in Toronto. He has just received his D.D. degree from Victoria College. He is Master of his Masonic Lodge and past district governor of Kiwanis. He is a very well known and travelled lecturer.

"I Have Finished My Course"

In Dr. Johnston's opening remarks he said: "I will address the graduates as this is one of their greatest nights, and I think a most appropriate text tonight would be, "I have finished my course".

This is the day, after years of hard work and perseverance, that their dreams come true. This, at the same time, does not mean that their struggle is over, he said. This graduation is a jumping off place, a springboard from which one dives off into the sea of life's activities.

The world today is a volcano with eruptions breaking out over the whole globe and when the world is at its worst the nurses have to be at their best. This is the day to begin moulding a better world, Dr. Johnston said, and reminded the graduates that it was from the dark period of the Crimean war that their profession emerged.

Should Read Good Books

He asked them to read a lot about travel, history and literature and reminded them that they would not only have to care for the physically ill but also the mentally ill. Another admirable quality in a nurse is to understand and love people, have a sense of humor and the very finest characteristic is cheerfulness. In conclusion Dr. Johnston said "May you young women go from success to success, from glory to glory, and may all your years bring joy to each and everyone of you".

Mrs. Morton Presents Pins

Mrs. G. A. Morton, vice president of the Women's Christian Association, assisted by Miss Ruth Thompson, director of Nursing, presented the graduation pins to the graduates. Mr. Barclay presented the diplomas.

Special Awards

The Gold Medal awarded for General Proficiency and given by the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital, was won by Miss Leila McKague, Castleton, Ontario.

The Silver Medal, awarded for the highest standing in Theory in the final year, given by the Medical Staff of the Belleville General Hospital, was won by Miss Margaret McKinnon of Brighton. The Surgical Nursing prize was presented to Miss Elizabeth Moult of Belleville; the Medical Nursing prize to Miss Margaret Sutherland, Warkworth; and the prize for Obstetrical Nursing to Miss Gladys Milligan, Sydenham.

Congratulates Class

Dr. E. McDonald, president of the medical staff, expressed the pleasure, on behalf of the medical staff, of congratulating the nursing class of 1943 for their success.

Miss Iva Wannamaker of Trenton gave an inspiring valedictory address, telling of the years that the 1943 nursing class had spent in the Belleville hospital. She expressed gratefulness, on behalf of the class, to Mr. Barclay and Miss Thompson and concluded with "we stand on the threshold of new experiences, we face the future with new hope and we have been extremely happy to be able to take the Florence Nightingale Pledge."

Roses Presented

A pleasant interlude took place when little Miss Donna McDonald, winsome daughter of Dr. E. McDonald, presented bouquets of roses to Miss Ruth Thompson and Miss D. Riddell, assistant to Miss Thompson, on behalf of the graduating class.

The pronouncement of the Benediction by Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, brought the evening's ceremonies to an end.

Very special mention also goes to Mr. and Mrs. John Deacon for the entertainment they provided during the evening and also to Mrs. J. R. Guthridge, who assisted at the piano.

The list of graduates is as follows:

Reception Held

Following the graduating exercises, a reception for the graduating nurses and their friends was held at the Nurses' Resid[illegible]. Miss Ruth Thompson and Mr. Gordon Barclay received the guests. Delicious refreshments were served by the staff.

F.D.R.'S MESSAGE HANDED TO STALIN

United States Special Envoy Joseph Davies Visits Kremlin

Moscow, May 21 (AP)—Special Envoy Joseph E. Davies conferred with Premier Stalin at the Kremlin last night and delivered President Roosevelt's secret message—a letter that some quarters thought might contain an invitation to a personal meeting with other Allied leaders.

Mr. Davies was presented to the Russian political and military chief by Admiral William H. Stanley, the United States Ambassador, and was accompanied to the meeting by Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs.

Tass, Soviet News Agency, told of the meeting in a brief statement early today, but gave no details of what had occurred.

There was no immediate indication of Premier Stalin's reaction to the President's message.

(Some observers in London and Washington, however, were inclined to couple the mysterious missive with Prime Minister Churchill's statement in Washington Wednesday that he and President Roosevelt "earnestly hope that at no distant date we may be able to achieve what we have long sought —namely, a meeting with Marshal Stalin and if possible with Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.")

Cripps Stronger Politically Than For Many Years

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 21 — (CP)—Public reaction and private political information in Britain today indicates forcibly that Sir Stafford Cripps' move to the ministry of aircraft production from the war cabinet and his office as Lord Privy Seal, supposedly a demotion, instead made him a stronger political figure.

The Canadian Press has learned on good authority that although his position there is unofficial; Sir Stafford attends all war cabinet meetings and receives all the secret war cabinet documents he saw as an official member. And his position has this important difference —that in his forceful administration of the ministry of aircraft production he is bossing a vital part of the war effort, while as Lord Privy Seal his duties were almost entirely with parliament.

His wholesale attack on inefficiency in the aircraft industry, during which he has replaced key directors of several companies with his own nominees, raised a storm of criticism among financial interests directing the companies. But the lack of force of the political whirlwinds following his actions provide illustration of the general popularity of the moves.

Tours Plants Regularly

One of the reasons for his growing popularity in the public mind is his practice of touring aircraft plants every weekend. He leaves his office off Whitehall every Friday about noon and between then and Monday usually visits about a dozen plants, sitting in on joint production committee meetings, speaking to the workers, and stressing to both labor and management the need for increased effort.

The 54-year-old lawyer has made it clear to workers that despite his ruthlessness with inefficient management he is not labor's white-haired boy in the government any more than he represents big business. To a group of workers who walked out when their wage demands were not met, he said bluntly that the country would suffer tremendously if management took a similar line and demanded more money every so often.

"There is no excuse for strikes in wartime," he said, "and I will not tolerate them." Similarly, he reminded some dissatisfied labor men that their lot was infinitely more comfortable than that of soldiers, sailors and airmen.

The War Today— Trap Closing Fast on Hitler, Faces Wall Wherever He Turns

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Is Hitler preparing a last desperate fling to crush Russia?

One of the highly-important points brought out by Prime Minister Churchill in his address before the joint session of congress was his prophecy that the Fuehrer is likely to make another all-out attempt against the Soviet Union.

Certainly there are plenty of signs that the Nazi chief is getting set for contingencies. Reports from Moscow today—as for many days past—show continuance of fierce attack and counter-attack in the vital sector just above the strategic Black Sea naval port of Novorossisk as the antagonists manoeuvre for advantage in what is one of the gateways to the Caucasus. The way Mr. Churchill put the situation is this:-

"It may well be that a further trial of strength between the German and Russian armies is impending. Russia has already inflicted injuries upon the German military organism which will, I believe, prove ultimately mortal.

"But there is little doubt that Hitler is reserving his supreme gambler's throw for a third attack to break the heart and spirit and destroy the armed forces of the mighty nation which he has already twice assaulted in vain. He will not succeed."

Hitler's 'Intuition'

Had the Prime Minister seen fit to develop this point he might have given us some interesting "ifs" and "whens." The gambling Hitler is a great opportunist—he claims to work by divine intuition—and there are circumstances now which might deter him.

This column has expressed the view—and still believes in it— that the question of whether Hitler will attack Russia in a big way depends on how seriously he regards the threat of an Allied invasion of France. If he thinks the Allies aren't prepared to invade for some months, he might well take a chance and hurl everything he has against the Russians. That probably would represent his final big offensive before digging himself in for defence.

On the other hand, if he believes the Allies are about to invade France, or even the Balkans, he would be bound to pause before committing himself to another Russian adventure which would call for employment of most of his resources.

An Allied assault on Italy might not deter him. He undoubtedly has discounted the loss of Italy. An Allied occupation of this country, which is shut off from Germany by the Alps, wouldn't necessarily raise a threat of such immediate urgency that Hitler couldn't take a chance on attacking Russia.

A drive against Russia is the most logical move for the head hun—provided he thinks he has time before an invasion overtakes him. Actually the trap is closing so fast and securely that he will be flinging himself against a fairly solid wall whatever direction he turns. Still, the time when rats fight hardest, and sometimes are most dangerous, is when they're cornered and hurt.

BRITISH GUERILLA

Veterans Eat Mule Meat

Preston Grover, Associated Press Correspondent in India, saw the first of the hardened jungle veterans at a British frontier post when they completed their return march from the far shores of the Irrawaddy River.

Grover said they ate most of their mules and horses and had learned to live on tender bamboo shoots and banana and palm leaves.

Convalescing soldiers told Grover one large force spent a week at a rendezvous east of the Irrawaddy living on mule meat and crackers.

Planes of the R.A.F. sought out parties as best they could, dropping food, letters and spectacles.

In some cases the forces had to fight off Japanese troops who spotted the dropped supplies and engaged the British troops.

Grover said the success of the force was sevenfold:

They blew up 100 miles of railroad and several bridges.

They saved an encircled force of 5,000 loyal Burma natives by drawing off a Japanese army.

They riddled the Japanese feeling of security in Burma.

They gave the British forces invaluable training in jungle war.

They proved Wingate's contention that with quick training he could make Allied troops equal to jungle-fighting with the Japanese.

Six Months' Training

Some of the force had had six months' training. Others had trained for only a month before crossing the border into Burma, and then toiling up and down the north-south mountain ranges in their path.

The communique said superior forces of the enemy were engaged and beaten in numerous clashes east of Irrawaddy and that when ordered to return, the majority fought their way back", although in many cases under conditions of incredible hardship".

Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.P.P.

The untimely death by drowning of Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.P.P., of Roslin while on a fishing trip at Lake Opeongo in Algonquin Park, has shocked the wide countryside wherever he was known as doctor, citizen and friend, his fellow members of the Ontario Legislature and a wide circle of friends all over Ontario and also those who knew him only by his reputation as a legislator of this province. News of the tragic event brought a sense of personal loss and of profound sympathy for the bereaved family.

Dr. Welsh was a man rich in human sympathies, he possessed warmth of character, sincerity in all his actions, candor, openheartedness and kindliness. He had been brought into close contact with life's realities, especially in his young years in the teaching profession and his warm humanity left abiding influences for good upon the scholars whom he taught, and helped to master the problems of the schoolboy and schoolgirl. These years in the school room were a source of inspiration to him as his leader, in the Ontario Legislature, Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, so well pointed out in a tribute yesterday. "Because of early experience in teaching he was deeply interested in education and made many valuable contributions in debate on that subject."

The step from teacher to student of medicine and then to the duties of a family doctor by which he will be long remembered, was after all but a natural one for so keen and sympathetic a personality. He found in medicine a wide field of service for his fellowmen and here gave himself unsparingly and untiringly. Some years ago the demand of calling of medicine forced him to rest for a time. He was the family physician, attentive to those to whom he ministered and giving of his best skill and knowledge to his patients. He inspired confidence by his sympathetic attentions. His medical experience fitted him in later years to serve a wider community, the entire province, through the Provincial Legislature. Elected in the East Hastings by-election in 1936 in the Conservative cause he was able to speak in the interests of public health and general social welfare. Next year he was re-elected in the provincial general election.

In East Hastings and the whole district he was a most popular figure. In the Legislature as a representative he shed honor on his constituency by his attitude on public matters on the floor of the House and in committee. He gave promise of effective public service in the years ahead now so unfortunately cut off by his early death. Irrespective of one's party affiliation Dr. Welsh was ever ready to lend his help to further any cause and to do any service it was possible for him to render.

He was keenly interested in the progress of medicine and public health measures and thoroughly alert to the needs of education.

Dr. Welsh was keenly interested in sport of all kinds and was a devotee of the outdoor life for its enjoyment and for the influences it exerts on mind and body. He was a director of the Hastings County hard ball loop, and manager of the Latta ball club. He had also the keen enthusiasm of a fisherman.

He took the interest of the individual to his heart, he had the knowledge that made him a good doctor and surgeon and representative for he knew the social and economic conditions of a wide range of groups very intimately and he knew their needs. As fellow citizen, practising medical man and as legislator he was able to help and interpret others. He saw life with the fullness of one who loved his fellowmen and with that wide and sympathetic knowledge he nobly served his day and generation.

Mr. Churchill's Wit

The sense of humor and satire in Britain's Prime Minister had several opportunities to sally at the enemy in his speech to Congress at Washington. One was his reference to "the military intuition of Corporal Hitler" which helped the Allies in North Africa by his vain, insensate obstinacy. Another was when he said that he had not brought Field Marshal Wavell and the two other commanders-in-chief from India "simply to concern themselves about improving the health and happiness of the Mikado of Japan." Both remarks tickled the American statesmen and legislators.

Mr. Churchill's use of the striking phrase even in plain words is a proof of the genius of the British leader in the use of English. He was speaking at one point of the use of air power and whether it could bring about the collapse of the enemy. He said the experiment is well worth trying so long as other measures are not excluded. Then came the direct words, "Well, there is certainly no harm in finding out." This sentence stirred his hearers to cheers as he intended. He was the perfect orator using the language of every day with dramatic effect.

When the contribution of Mr. Churchill to the overthrow of Hitlerism and of winning the peace is appraised, history will give no small place to the supreme gift of oratory Mr. Churchill possesses, his matchless wit and humor and biting sarcasm among his other great remarkable gifts.

Roasted Swan

(London Evening Standard)

A well known West End poulterer told me that he had recently been able to buy a number of swans.

"But if you are offered a swan," he said, "make sure it is a young one—a cygnet. A swan is a muscular bird and the meat is tough and stringy in the adult stage. The only thing to do with a full grown swan it to stew it for a long time."

The classic way of cooking a cygnet is to make a stuffing of minced rump steak, and herbs, mixed with port wine: roast for 15 minutes to the pound, and serve with beef gravy to which port wine, lemon juice and red currant jelly have been added.

Failing this method, impossible in wartime, cygnet is usually cooked in the same way as wild duck.

The manager of the poultry department of a West End store said that the cygnets are coming from private swanneries. Their retail price ranges from 35s for a young bird of about 18 lb. to 50s.

Vanishing Scent

Scent will soon be only a fragrant memory, says a writer in The London Evening Standard. None is now being made, and manufacturers, who have been eking out their existing supplies, are nearing the end of their stocks.

An official of one of the most famous perfumers told me:

"Fortunately, we were well stocked. But as there is now an embargo on the use of spirit, which forms the basis of all perfume, supplies must soon become exhausted. Even if we had the necessary spirit we should still lack the civet, mostly obtained from Bulgaria, and the natural oils which were imported largely from the south of France.

"People often ask us why we cannot produce perfume from British country gardens.

"The trouble is that we cannot grow enough flowers in this country to supply the demand. Besides British land today is required for food production."

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds; therefore let him seasonably water the one and destroy the other.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

ABOUT WIVES

How very brave must women be
For some have married fools like me!
And wives must all be very brave
To stay by men who cannot save;
Who cannot hang their coats on hooks,
Who spend their substance buying books;
Who coming from the muddy street
Forget to stop and wipe their feet.
Yet women have, and will again,
Become the wives of paper men.

And brave are they who spend their lives
As celebrated doctors' wives;
Condemned to sit at home alone
And answer calls upon the phone;
To cook their husbands' favorite meat
They may not get back home to eat;
To visit friends at cards to play
And have their husbands called away,
Yet grim as seems the doctor's life
I don't know one without a wife.

But braver still are those who share
The burdens ministers must bear.
The wives of parsons one and all
Must gracious be when members call;
Must go to meetings near and far;
Make garments for the church bazaar
And think as true companions should
Their husbands' every sermon good,
Yet not withstanding such a life
There always is "the parson's wife."

Mr. J. Forrest who conducts the "Dollar Store" here, is advertising the business for sale.

The ladders used by the Hook and Ladder Company are in so bad a condition that the officers of that organization have notified the Captains of other Companies not to trust their men upon them. The Chief Engineer should give this matter his immediate attention.

Croquet has evidently lost none of its attractiveness and is still a fashionable amusement. Lawns here have been put in order and the mallets and balls are in use again.

The members of the Fire Brigade will parade on May 24th.

Mrs. Mickey Rooney Secures Divorce

Los Angeles, May 21. (AP)—Ava Gardner Rooney obtained an interlocutory divorce decree today from Mickey Rooney, young film star.

Mickey, 22, wasn't present when Miss Gardner appeared in court and asserted the actor just would not stay home nights, and that he had told her repeatedly he considered their marriage a mistake. She charged him with mental cruelty.

They were married at Ballard, Calif., Jan. 10, 1942, and separated Jan. 15, 1943.

SAVED THREE TIRES

Miami, Akla., May 21 — (AP) — An automobile caught fire after overturning, and a quantity of small-calibre ammunition inside began exploding. Highway patrolman W. S. Abbott said one bystander was wounded in the leg, but officers dashed in regardless of flames and bullets and managed to save — three of the tires.

The Real Issue Between Giraud and De Gaulle

New York, May 21. —It is only if we comprehend the revolutionary nature of the European struggle and the alignment of social forces ir that we can grasp the real issue between Gen. Giraud and Gen. de Gaulle.

It has been presented as a matter of personal pride and prestige. Such considerations certainly play a role, human nature being what it is.

But there is a more profound issue at stake. That issue will be at stake, not only in France, but in every European country, occupied or Axis, as our troops land.

So far the issue has been avoided. But it cannot be avoided. For, whether we do so consciously or not, every action we take will prejudice the eventual outcome. No "expediencies" remain expediencies, because the processes of history are not reversible—or are reversible only by violent upheaval.

Three Powerful Groups.

The social dynamics of Europe play between three powerful groups of ideas and interests. These are: the traditional-conservatives, the oligarchical, and the radical.

The traditionalists are: the peasants, who, of all classes of society, have best survived this war; small business; the Church ,Catholic and Protestant, but especially Catholic; the aristocracy, which exerts in modern Europe more influence than power, since it is no longer, economically, a ruling class; and a large part of the universities and professions.

The oligarchical interests have been for half a century the ruling class. They represent coalesced industrial and financial wealth, as exemplified in the great European cartels, and the political and intellectual influence that such wealth can buy. In prewar France, where the press was unconscionably corrupt, they controlled a vast part of it, as plain house organs.

The radical interests are invested in the industrial workers and their intellectual helpers, who are in positive revolt against the oligarchy, and in latent revolt against the conservative-traditionalists.

Against the Oligarchy.

But the traditionalists are also in revolt against the oligarchy. Ever since the Quadragesimo Anno of Pope Leo XIII, the tendency of the Roman Catholic Church has been against the power of the oligarchical interests, who are not conservative and traditional, but predatory.

The common man, whether worker, peasant, or independent business man, is also against the oligarchy.

Fascism was originally, a bid for the traditional and oligarchical interests against the radicals. But its own radicalism and lack of tradition have never wholly won it the conservatives, even in Axis lands. On the other hand, by tying the oligarchical interests tight to the party state, it has supported and used them and been supported and used by them.

In every single country the quislings have based their power on the oligarchy, having against them both the conservatives, in whom the national tradition is strongest, and the radicals.

Our True Allies.

If one considers this picture of Europe, it is obvious that our true allies are to be found in the radicals and the conservative-traditionalists.

Now, Gen. de Gaulle, who is aware of the social revolution — as Gen. Giraud obviously is not —is, in the structure of his underground movement, welding traditionalists and radicals together, against the oligarchy. The history of his movement displays where the true and reliable anti-Nazi forces are. Not a single member of the Comite des Forges or the "Haute Bourgeoisie" ever assisted him. They either sought to get their capital out of France, and bide their time, and/or collaborate with the Nazis.

The oligarchy included high officers of the former armed forces, and a servile bureaucracy. It is noteworthy that only a handful of officers over the rank of major joined de Gaulle, though non-coms and common soldiers did. There are aristocrats in his ranks, family-proud, like himself, but not money-proud. Radical workers, traditional intellectuals, the Church and the peasantry have, actively or passively, resisted the Nazis.

The oligarchy, however, has been wholly pro-oligarchy—for the Nazis, if the Nazis seemed certain to win; turncoat when the weight was on the side of Nazi defeat. This is a matter of record.

To Fight or to Think?

No one doubts the patriotism and integrity of Gen. Giraud. But the men he has put in administrative positions are the men of the oligarchy.

And in the long run the oligarchy cannot win in Europe, unless fascism is saved. The defeat of naziism will destroy the oligarchy in Germany. The fall of Germany will destroy it in Europe—unless it is reinstated by Anglo-American bayonets.

If thus reinstated, the European revolution will turn toward Russia, and, by so turning, will be diverted from its natural course of being the revolution for freedom, civilization, and humanity, and will create civil war.

Thus, all this complaining about why Giraud and de Gaulle cannot get together is superficial. Rival personalities can only get together on principles and ideas. But United States policy is attempting to avoid having any ideas. It is easier to fight than to think. But by failing to take thought we will immeasurably prolong this war and the chaos following it .

100,000 Made Homeless by Flood

Chicago, May 21 (AP)—Spreading waters from the rampaging Mississippi and Missouri rivers brought added concern to southern Ollinois and Missouri today as the two rivers joined together some 16 miles northwest of the normal confluence near Alton, Ill. The number of persons driven from their homes by the disastrous floods was close to 100,000—as estimated by Red Cross officials.

The Red Cross office at St. Louis said that in Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma, more than 80,000 were homeless, while in Indiana official observers estimated 12,000 were forced to flee their homes by the floods. The number left homeless in Kansas, the sixth state affected by the flood, was not calculated.

Thousands of farm lands were inundated in the six states and damage to crops was estimated at millions of dollars.

Late last night the Missouri River broke through weakened points along the channel and rushed northward across country in eastern St. Charles County (Mo.) to meet the overflow of the Mississippi near west Alton, Mo. Every levee was out along a 75-mile stretch from Augusta to St. Charles.

EASY TO HANDLE

Oakville, Ont., May 21 — (CP)—"I wouldn't have anyone else," declared Harold Stirling, part owner of an Oakville taxi company employing two women cab drivers. "They're easier to get along with, easier on the cars, and you have a lot less trouble with them," he added. The women drivers operate cars during daylight hours only.

NAGS HEAD

A small town on the Atlantic coast in Dare county, North Carolina, almost abreast of Manteo on Roanoke Island, bears the name of Nags Head.

How this odd appellation was acquired has long been the subject of considerable speculation.

According to a common story, Nags Head was named from the fact that in early days pirates and beachcombers made a practice of hobbling a horse, tying a lantern to its head and leading the animal up and down the beach at night to mislead mariners at sea.

Storm-tossed seamen, taking the bobbing light for that of another ship in calmer waters, would direct their own vessel in that direction for safety, only to be wrecked on the dangerous sands and rocks in the shoals along the coast.

The professional shipwreckers, like a pack of hyenas watching a battle in progress, lay in wait to salvage the cargo rolled out of the broken vessel by the waves.

Saxon Teach, a notorious pirate known in American history and legend as Blackbeard, is said to have often resorted to this nefarious practice.

This interesting story of the origin of "Nags Head," though often told for fact, is not very convincing and is probably fiction.

According to a tradition in the neighborhood, Nags Head received its name from the fact that long before any settlement was made there a horse's or nag's head was washed ashore at that point, which thereafter was referred to as the place where the nag's head was.

It is possible, however, that "Nags Head" is derived from some coastal physical feature, no longer recognizable, or that it is a corruption of an Indian name or that of an early settler's.

Many years ago the United States Geographic Board ruled that "Nags Head," not "Nag's Head," is the proper form of the name of the village.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Ruth Baines, who has been a patient in Belleville General Hospital, has returned to her home at Corbyville.

Ex-Mayor George O. Tice, who has been confined to his home with illness for the past week, is showing improvement.

Friends of Mrs. B. Morton, West Bridge Street, will regret to learn of her bereavement occasioned by the death of her mother, Mrs. William Hawkins, which occurred suddenly in her 84th year, at Girvin, Sask., on May 14th.

Miss Rita Hayes, Reg.N., has returned to Toronto, after spending a week's holiday with her family, 13 Dunbar St.

Miss Peggy Rawson, 27 Sinclair St., left on Thursday for Galt Naval W.R.C.M.S. Training School.

Mrs. A. E. Chaplin spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. L. Robinson, Picton.

Miss Margaret Cameron has returned from attending the convention of the Ontario Dental Nurses and Assistants Association at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

Miss Helen Smith, bride-elect of the month, was feted on Tuesday night at a miscellanous shower given in her honor by Misses Peggy Harvey and Dorothy Taylor. The table was tastefully decorated with pink streamers, which extended from it and fastened to the chandelier above. A doll carriage, very attractive in pink and white, laden with presents was wheeled in by little Miss Phyllis Brooks. Bingo and novelty games were enjoyed during the evening followed by dainty refreshments served by the hostesses.

WEDDINGS

JANDREW—HEFFERNAN

The wedding of Miss Bernice Heffernan, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Heffernan, of Bloomfield, to Charles Jandrew, R.C.A.F., took place at St. Gregory Church Rectory with Rev. J. A. Meehan officiating on Thursday evening, May 13th.

The attendants were Miss Jean Guernsey and Mr. Don Heffernan and the bride's parents were in attendance at the ceremony.

FERGUSON—NAYLOR

The marriage took place on Saturday afternoon, May 15, at two o'clock at Greenwood Towers, Port Hope, of Gwendolyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Naylor, King Street, West, Cobourg, to Sergt. David Reid Ferguson, Campbelltown, New Brunswick. The officiating clergyman was Flight-Lieut. Scott, padre at the No. 5 I.T.S., Belleville.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a becoming turquoise gown with matching veil and carried Ophelia roses and babies' breath. She was attended by Miss Leona Miller, of Bowmanville, wearnig printed corded silk with gold Juliette cap and carrying Talisman roses. The best man was Flight Lieut. A. Colison, of Belleville.

A reception was held after the ceremony, the bride's mother wearing shell pink with blue hat and accessories and corsage of pink roses. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Sproule, wearing black lace and large black hat.

Quintena Rebeka L. Marks Anniversary

A very interesting and pleasant event took place in the Oddfellows' Temple on Tuesday evening of this week, it being the thirtieth anniversary of the institution of Quintena Rebekah Lodge, No. 133, of Belleville.

The Noble Grand Mrs. Mabel Bray, gave a very cordial welcome to a large number of visitors from Stirling and Trenton lodges. The D.D.P., Miss Gena Spry, of Stirling, was introduced by Mrs. Ethel Sandercock, while the degree staff and their captain, Mrs. Edith Johnson, of Trenton, were introduced by Mrs. Irene Aman. The degree was very impressively conferred by Quinte Queen Rebekah Lodge, of Trenton, the charges being very capably given and the floor work beautifully portrayed by twenty-four members of their staff.

A very happy event was the presentation of thirty-year service jewels to the charter member sisters while Eversharp pencils were presented to the brothers. Mrs. Mabel Bray presented the jewels to the two sisters, Mrs. Emily Neate and Mrs. Ethel Frost, while Miss Gena Spry presented the gifts to Mr. Charles Frost and Mr. Richard Ketcheson.

Four members of the Quintena lodge,—Misses Phyllis Twiddy, Marie Redner, Violet Batchelor and Mrs. Helen Wright acted as escort to the charter members while eight others acted as guards of honor.

Mrs. Catherine McCurdy and Mrs. Emily Neate, also charter members, were unable to attend through illness.

Several speeches were given and before lodge closed Mrs. Irene Aman received a gold seal for proficiency in unwritten work and Miss Phyllis Twiddy and Miss Rita Lancaster presented Miss Barbara Turvey with a beautiful gift of silver on behalf of the lodge in honor of her approaching marriage.

After the lodge closed the members and guests retired to the banquet hall where a birthday party was held, Mrs. Emily Neate having the honour of the cutting of the birthday cake, which was decorated in pink and green, the lodge colours.

The committee in charge of the party was under Mrs. F. A. Pinkston, while the program was in charge of Mrs. Mary Plumpton and took the form of birthday gifts which were given for impromptu contributions to the program.

The evening was voted a pleasant success by both members and visitors.

Women Teachers' Federation Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Women Teachers' Federation was held on May 19, in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. After a splendid dinner, the meeting, was opened by the president. The Red Cross collection was taken and the treasurer's report given. Miss Pearl Campbell displayed some slippers made by Canadian children for children in England and suggested that the Belleville teachers take up some such work in school. Miss Fay Young gave the report on the district meeting held at the Queen's Hotel on May 15. All the officers acting in the past year were reinstated in office.

The business part of the meeting completed, Miss Smyth introduced to the assembly the guest speaker, Rev. Mr. Spencer, of Tabernacle United Church, whose fine address was centred on "The Place of Religion in Education." Mr. Spencer expressed his belief that religion should have the central place in education and that the realization of this will increase with the years. Miss Lillian Hart moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Spencer for his inspiring address and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Holloway St. T.O.G. Club Holds Tea

The T.O.G. Club of Holloway St. United Church held an old-fashioned tea at the home of Mrs. J. A. Dilts, Hillside St. Mrs. Dilts, attired in a long white embroidered gown with black velvet sash and having her hair in the style of many years ago, received the guests. Miss Marjorie Hitchon invited the guests to the tea-room. She was frocked in an old-fashioned black full skirt, white lace blouse and a large brimmed black velvet hat trimmed with ostrich feathers.

Mrs. A. Hitchon and Mrs. W. Oliphant poured tea. Mrs. Hitchon was wearing a two-piece black silk dress and a very becoming black bonnet type hat and Mrs. Oliphant a white eyelet embroidered dress, a black shawl, over a hundred years old and a small black hat. Those who assisted were the Misses Shirley Hitchon, Shirley Oliphant, Jean Parks, Dorothy Craighead and Mrs. Ralph Ashmore, who also wore very becoming and colourful old-fashioned gowns and hats. Mrs. Hopkins and Miss Ruth Oliphant replenished the table.

The success of the tea was due greatly to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Goodfellow and Miss Beverley Goodfellow.

The table and the rooms were decorated with spring flowers. Many of the dishes used were more than a century old. The tea proved to be a very interesting and successful event, the proceeds going for missionary work.

The monthly meeting of the T. O. G. Club was held at the close of the tea at the home of Mrs. Dilts. Miss Evelyn Anderson presided in the chair. After the business was discussed, the girls worked on their layette which is for missionary work. A dainty lunch was served, after which Miss Beverley Goodfellow moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Dilts for her kind hospitality. The meeting closed with the Mispah benediction.

Melrose W.I. Elects Officers for Year

The annual meeting of the Melrose W. I. was held on April 29th, at the church hall. The ladies gathered in the morning for a quilting and five quilts were quilted. In the afternoon the meeting was called to order with the president in the chair. Letters of appreciation for cards received in time of sickness and bereavement were read. Mrs. Harry Murphy took the chair for the election of officers. All officers were re-elected with a few changes made in committees: President, Mrs. Roy Badgley; Vice-Pres., Mrs. John McFarlane; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. Harry Murphy; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. Edward Lazier; Card Com., Mrs. E. Whiteman, Mrs. John Blatherwick, Mrs. C. Bates, Mrs. F. D. Pringle, Mrs. C. Osborne, Mrs. J. Haight; Additional Directors, Mrs. J. Blatherwick, Mrs. F. D. Pringle, Mrs. C. Hagerman; Committee for War Work, Mrs. T. Leslie, Mrs. R. McFarlane, Mrs. J. Hines, Mrs. W. McMechan, Mrs. C. Bates; Auditors, Mrs. J. Milligan, Mrs. E. Embury; Standing Committee, Agriculture, Mrs. Grant McLaren; Citizenship, Mrs. Fred Jeffrey; Historical Research, Mrs. Geo. Badgley; Home Economics, Mrs. A. English; Social Welfare, Mrs. J. C. Milligan; Publicity, Mrs. E. Lazier; War Work, Mrs. Thos. Leslie; Pianist, Mrs. Geo. Badgley; Assistant, Mrs. C. Bates.

The year's report of war work was given by Mrs. T. Leslie. Red Cross work consisted of 333 knitted garments and 310 sewn articles, also a nice sum of money. The Red Shield, Central Fund and Russian Relief were also remembered. Delegates to district annual were elected as follows: Mrs. J. McFarlane and Mrs. F. D. Pringle. Health Education was chosen as the project. Mrs. Badgley then presented Mrs. Leslie with an institute pin. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

CENTENARY W.M.S. AND W.A.

The May meeting of Centenary W.M.S. and W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Hart. Mrs. Avory presided and opened the meeting. Mrs. Booth kindly offered her home for the June meeting and it was decided to ask Mrs. Blythe Leeman to be the guest speaker at this meeting. The collection amounted to $1.35. The business period closed with one verse of "Rescue the Perishing." Mrs. Byron Roblin, group leader, then took charge. Mrs. Gordon Woods read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Roblin offered prayer for those in service. Mrs. Thrasher gave a reading entitled "Churches." Parts in a missionary story of Africa were taken by Mrs. B. Roblin, Mrs. Fair and Mrs. Nobes. A temperance reading, "An Enemy Hath Done This," was given by Mrs. Robert Hart. Mrs. Avory gave a study on Africa from the Blue Book. The closing worship poem was given by Mrs. Byron Roblin.

The W.A. meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. Harry Roblin. The collection amounted to $2.10. The secretary read two thank-you letters from Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Hall and also a letter about the W. A. convention to be held in Belleville in Holloway St. Church. Mrs. Charlie Fair and Mrs. Ray Hall were appointed as delegates to attend it. Arrangements were made for the supper at the Sunday School convention to be held at Centenary. Rev. Mr. Spence reported on the business arranged by the delegation which met at the parsonage. It was moved by Mrs. Fred Aikens and seconded by Mrs. Byron Roblin that the sum of $24 be paid to the treasurer of the parsonage committee. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Mountain View

Mountain View — Miss Pearl Hamilton, Reg. N., spent last week at the home of her parents. Miss Hamilton has been accepted as industrial nurse, at the Bristol Aircraft, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Sprague, Eleanor and Roger, spent the tea hour with Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Weir, of Bowerman's, on Sunday.

A number of people from here attended the Sunday School convention at Crofton on Friday last and reported a large gathering and a good program.

Mr. and Mrs. William Burkitt and Muriel spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burkitt.

Successful Treatment of Tuberculosis Depends on Early Diagnosis

Early diagnosis is an important step in the successful treatment of tuberculosis. One of the methods used in diagnosing this ailment is the tuberculin test. This test is made by injecting a solution of dead tuberculosis germs under the skin.

The patient with early tuberculosis complains of such things as a chronic cold, indigestion, poor appetite and fatigue. All of these symptoms occur in other disorders, too, so that special methods for diagnosing tuberculosis are required.

In the early stages of tuberculosis, none of the symptoms is striking. If the disease were always accompanied by pain, or if there were a rash, the diagnosis would be much easier, but with the symptoms of the disease as they are, the use of a skin test and the X-ray has become of inestimable value.

The skin tuberculin test is not difficult to carry out. It may be done in a number of ways, but it would appear that the method known as the intracutaneous method is the most satisfactory. This is done by injecting into the skin a small amount of material known as old tuberculin. This material is prepared by growing the tuberculosis germs and then using heat or some other method to kill them in the solution.

One method of carrying out the test is to give a small injection of the substance and then wait for 48 hours to determine if a reaction occurs. If there is none the dose is increased and a second injection given. The test does not prove definitely that a person has active tuberculosis.

If, as a result of the injection, a red swelling occurs around the place where the injection was made, it means that the person has had a tuberculosis infection at same time and that further investigation is required. X-rays of the chest should be taken, and a general physical examination carried out. The patient's symptoms also require careful study.

In other words, the tuberculin test is not definite proof that a person has tuberculosis, but merely indicates the need of further study to make sure what disorder is present.

It would appear that this test should be frequently used in patients between thirteen and thirty-four years of age. Tuberculosis is about ten times more common at high school and college age than at younger age. It apparently would be a wise thing to do the tuberculin test on all patients in this younger age group. It has been suggested too that applicants for marriage licenses should be given a tuberculin test.

During pregnancy, tuberculosis may be an especially serious condition. Hence, if possible, the tuberculin test should be done on all pregnant women and an X-ray of the chest taken. If tuberculosis is present, with early treatment and proper care of the expectant mother many lives may be saved.

CAR PAINTED PINK

Great Falls, Mont., May 21—(AP)—The police blame war priorities for their red faces and un-red automobile. When they drive by in their newest radio car, they get whistles and "yoo-hoos" from the sidewalk. The car is painted pink.

Says Mr. Gold Seal "YOU CAN COUNT ON ME TO SEE YOU THROUGH"

I've got a war job in my own quiet way, and it's for the duration," says Mr. Gold Seal, famous emblem of Congoleum Rugs and Congoleum by-the-yard. "It's to stand up under punishment as never before so that in spite of everything, your floors will continue to look bright and beautiful. You'll find it hard to replace them in a hurry: that's why the care we put into the making of Congoleum means extra value today. It's value that will show up quickly—if you give it a chance—in added wear and service. For years, as you know, I've stood for the highest in home furnishing values and today, my aim is higher than ever."

CONGOLEUM GOLD SEAL Rugs

HOW TO HELP MR. GOLD SEAL MAKE GOOD

You can get added wear out of your Congoleum floors with very little effort. Brush and mop them regularly and renew the brightness of their surface with an occasional waxing. Make sure too, that the floor underneath is smooth and free from crevices or knobs. If it's a rug, move it every few months to "spread" the traffic. Yes, a little care will pay big dividends.

Phillies Not Only Standing On Own Feet But Tramping On Toes of a Lot of Other Clubs

5-GAME WIN STREAK

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phillies not only are standing on their own feet these days, they are tramping on the toes of a lot of other clubs in the National League.

Yesterday they shut out Chicago Cubs in both ends of a doubleheader 3-0 and 2-0 ,allowing the Bruins just four hits in each game.

The twin triumphs were achieved on superlative pitching by Charley Fuchs and Left Al Gerheauser, a pair of rookies. The Phillies made nine hits off Bill Lee in the first game, but in the nightcap were held to four by Kewpie Barrett. Two singles and some bad infielding by the Cubs provided the Phils both their runs in the third inning of this game.

This extended the Cubs' losing streak to nine games, miring them deep in the cellar and led to announcement of a compromise on the salary demands of Lou Novikoff, a .300 hitter last year who was the last Major League holdout. The detail of whether he should be paid during the period of his suspension was to be worked out today.

Stretched to Five Games

The Phillies' winning string was stretched to five games and they moved within half a game of the Cardinals, who were beaten 5-2 at Brooklyn.

This made the four-game Brooklyn-St. Louis series a standoff between the Cardinals and Frank (Rube) Melton, who accounted for both Dodgers' victories. The former Philly ace stopped the Redbirds 1-0 Monday and then came back on two days rest yesterday to pitch a seven-hitter. Big Mort Cooper, the first righthander used by St. Louis in the series, gave seven walks in addition to eight hits and he forced one run across by a walk with the bases loaded.

In the American (yes, there still is an American League) Boston and Cleveland managed to get in a doubleheader for the only action the circuit has had since Sunday. Boston bagged both games 2-1 in 10 innings and 7-4 to bump the Indians into third place behind the Yankees and Senators, who were idle. Cleveland used 20 players, including six pitchers, in a vain effort to win the second session after Oscar Judd's seven-hit pitching had taken the opener for the Red Sox.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 20 —(CP)— Gents' underwear and wooden clogs aren't exactly approved wear for rugby, but if a fellow behind barbed wire in Germany gets a yen for a little scrimmage. . .

That's the way they play in a prison camp containing more than 1,000 Royal Air Force lads, according to a letter from one of the players, and a league has been formed with teams named after clubs back home. For instance, there are Rosslyn Park, Harlequins and Bath.

They say it's quite a sight to see an underwear-clad airman in wooden clogs dive into a scrimmage. There are plenty of blistered feet and sore toes when the boys troop off the field.

At another camp soccer fixtures have the ring of English Cup camppetitions. Glasgow Rangers won the League championship there while Preston North End went on to take the Cup.

From Tripoli comes word that R. A. F. units stationed in that area played a "Tripoli Cup" soccer final in Tripoli Stadium. Spectators jammed every inch of accommodation—and most of them were local unhabitants, both Italian and Senussi, who cheered like mad. Some of the busy Eighth Army boys also found time to drop in for the fun.

Much has been said as to transport restrictions in wartime Britain but in some ways the ban isn't as drastic as generally believed.

For instance, the subject came up in the House of Commons a couple of days after Britain's 1934 racing season opened at Windsor, and members were informed that 59 taxicabs were used in the "perfectly legitimate" task of transporting turf followers to the track for the one-day meet.

Maj. Lloyd George, Minister of Fuel and Power, said that of these, 14 were licensed for the Borough of Windsor and entitled to make repeated trips over the mile distance from the railway station to the track. There were 45 cabs licensed in other areas which legitimately could bring visitors from their own districts to the course and return.

Private cars and private hire cars at the track totalled 138. Maj. George said the hired cars were operating in accordance with wartime restrictions and that the private cars were for horse owners, jockeys and others attending for business purposes.

Anyway, they were greatly in the minority. Most of the 20,000 spectators walked from the station to the racing scene while hundreds engaged boatmen to row them a mile from the town to the course situated on the Thames River.

The question of greyhound racing also popped up in the Commons recently and Home Secretary Herbert Morrison said 144 dog tracks operated in England and Wales last summer. Racing was limited to one day a week at each track.

COUGHING HITS OSHAWA STABLE ON PLATE DAY EVE

Not Likely McLaughlin Will Send Any of Four Entrants After Guineas

HATCH SENDS TWO

Toronto, May 21—(CP)—For the first time since Col. R. S. McLaughlin founded the Parkwood Stable, the blue and gold silks of the Oshawa, Ont., automobile executive may not appear in the King's plate running at Woodbine Park.

Trainer Frank Gilpin reported today that all four Parkwood eligibles for the 84th renewal of the three-year-old classic—Tallpat, Raglan, Astrometer and Gyntaf—have been affected by the mild coughing epidemic at the track. Raglan was declared out of Saturday's race several days ago and the remaining trio are now classed as doubtful starters.

There still is a chance that one of the three may be sufficiently recovered to face Starter Nipper Rowe Saturday to contest the mile-and-an-eighth journey against an estimated nine other three-year-olds.

The only other owner beside Col. McLaughlin considered likely to start more than one entry was H. C. Hatch, who is expected to send Grandpal and Sweepgold to the post. Grandpal won the Coronation Stakes at Woodbine last Autumn but has been training erratically this spring and some rate him below Sweepgold, who finished third in the Coronation.

Three Favored for Race

The role of favorite for the $8,000 added event which has been run continuously in Ontario since 1860 still is a toss-up between W. F. (Willie) Morrissey's Arbor Vita, W. E. MacDonald's Tulachmore and Riverdale Stable's filly, Gallant Foe. Others expected to face the barrier are George McCullagh's speedy Vivid Vision, Mrs. Grace MacKay's Hemjoy, Mrs. R. E. Webster's grey Syngo, W. T. Northgrave's Pacific Isle, Charlie Hemstead's Paolita and possibly Jim Fair's Great Mark.

Harry Carmichael's Heysickle, purchased from the Parkwood Stable to give the Garden City Stable of St. Catharines, Ont., a representative in the classic, has been declared out along with Harry Tomlin's T-Chum, second in the cup and saucer handicap at Dufferin Park last season.

There is a possibility that Al Shelhamer, former contract jockey for Lieut. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, will ride one of the Hatch entries. Tulachmore will be ridden by Frankie Mann, one of the most controversial figures in contemporary Canadian racing. Mann, set down in 1937 for alleged association with an Ontario betting ring, has been granted a probationary licence and will return to the saddle of the Ontario circuit Saturday.

Mann rode three previous King's Plate winners—Froth Blower in 1931, Queensway in 1932 and Horometer in 1934. He has been active on the Quebec circuit in recent years.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 21, (AP)—Local baseball rumors are that the Yanks are looking covetously at Detroit's Ned Harris. . . . Boyd Hartley, Illinois U. shortstop who'll get a tryout from the Cubs, is a better prospect than Lou Boudreau was in his college days, says Coach Wallie Roettger.. . .

Today's Guest Star.

Dick Cullum, Minneapolis Times: "Big ten faculty representatives raked up all the rules they could find, tied them into a neat bundle and heaved them over at their Spring meeting. Freshmen may play. Post graduates may play. Transient soldiers may play. Just about the only way to become ineligible is to die or move to Attu."

Service Dept.

From North Africa, Lieut. Tom Farrell, former Cornell football and track man sends word: "A guy who speaks as little French as I do is lost here, but I am fast becoming master of the sign language".

Up And Coming.

Garland rixton, who pitched for the Braves back in 1921, still is southpawing 'em up for the Norfolk Piedmont League Club. . . . The other day he tossed a seven-hitter at the Lynchburg Cardinals and Scribe Tom Fergusson reports that after the game a fan was heard to remark: "That Fella Brixton is sure a promising player. Bet he could play major league ball right now".

New York, May 20—(AP)—There's nothing like a fight to start a fight, so here's another hot one getting under way. . .Seems that Eddie Mack, the Boston promoter, is hollering to Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York that Mike Jacobs is bossing the New York State Athletic Commission and, incidentally, damaging Mack's Willie Pep-Sal Bartolo featherweight "title' fight at Boston, June 8. . .

That's Why Its Peoria

In case you've wondered why Peoria (which isn't a sad spot at all) is the accepted symbol for a bush league town, here's what happened in a high school game there the other day. . .The third baseman made a putout at second base on a throw from the right fielder, who picked up a ball that dropped between the centre fielder and the second baseman. . .And in the same contest the umpire raced from the plate to second to call a play. . . Going back, he picked up his cap at the mound, his indicator halfway to the plate and then asked: "where's my mask?". . .It was under his arm.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Continue After Curfew

Boston (AP)—Sunday baseball doubleheaders in Massachusetts may now continue until after the sport curfew hour of 6.30 p.m., providing the second game gets under way before 4.30 p.m., under a new ruling by Governor Saltonstall.

Novikoff Comes to Terms

Chicago (AP)—Outfielder Lou Novikoff, hold-out of the Chicago Cubs for 61 days, has come to terms with the club on undisclosed terms after demanding a salary of $10,000 compared with the $6,500 offered by P. K. Wrigley, owner. Novikoff is reporting immediately.

Likes Hits That Count

New York (AP)—Paul Waner, 40-year-old outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, commented that he does not figure out his batting averages like he did in his younger days. He does take pride, however, in a hit that helps to win a game—that's better than getting four or five when they don't count, he said.

Manager Gives Self Release

St. Louis (AP)—In order to get the St. Louis Browns down to the required 25-player limit for the balance of the season, Manager Luke Sewell had to release himself unconditionally yesterday as a player. He was on the roster as a catcher. Two young pitchers were also cut off.

Lawns Not Available

Hamilton, Ont., (CP)—Used for the past 15 years for the annual event, the greens of the Roselawn Club will not be available this season for the tournament of the Ontario Lawn Bowling Association, it was announced yesterday. The association is trying to get other local greens but, if unsuccessful, the tournament may be cancelled.

Pitcher Joins Army

Boston (AP)—Lefthander pitcher Lou Toft of the Boston Braves leaves baseball for the U.S. army on May 28. Toft is 28 years of age, married but has no children. Last year with the National League Club he won 10 and lost 10 games.

Mantha Takes Position

Montreal (CP)—Georges Mantha, for years an idol of the Montreal Canadiens in the N.H.L., has become established as assistant superintendent of the civic department of Park and Playgrounds. His reported salary is $2,100. Last winter he managed the Washington Club in the American Hockey Association.

Life Member Dies

Montreal (CP)—An old-timer of the Montreal A.A.A., George James, 72, died in a local hospital yesterday after a lengthy illness. He was a life member of the association and starred for M.A.A.A. hockey teams in the early '90's.

Will Defend Title

New York (CP)—Willie Pep, through his manager Lou Viscusi, Thursday told the New York State Athletic Commission that he would defend his New York part of the featherweight boxing championship against the winner of the Chalky Wright-Phil Terranova fight—a 15-round bout which promoter Mike Jacobs will stage in Madison Square Garden, June 4.

Apply For Series Tickets

Philadelphia — (AP)—Four local fans applied to the office of the fast-stepping Phillies Thursday for 1943 world series tickets.

"Don't think we are over-confident," they wrote. "We know the Phils can do it."

Dodgers Sell Two

Brooklyn (AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers made two player deals last night selling second baseman Alex Kampouris to Washington Senators and pitcher Newell (Newt) Kimball to Philadelphia Phillies.

Both transactions were for undisclosed sums.

Toronto, May 20. (CP)—Referee at a charity boxing show in Regina last night was Tr. Alex Borshuk. And who is this Borshuk? None other than Al Delaney, the leather-pusher who came out of Windsor, Ont., eight years ago to fight many of the world's best heavyweights. Now he's stationed with the army at Dundurn, Sask.

Champion Joe Louis still insists the hardest punch he ever took was from this same Delaney. Al was just 19 when he was matched eight years ago in Detroit with Louis, then an unknown. In the second round Delaney landed a punch to the jaw that set Joe's molars rattling like marbles on a tin roof.

Maybe that punch proved Louis had what it takes to be a champion. Anyway he stayed on his feet and a few minutes later it was curtains for Delaney.

Al finally slugged his way to recognition as the world's eighth ranking heavyweight. He fought Tony Galento and Bob Pastor twice each. Had bouts with Tommy Loughran, Buddy Baer and Gus Lesnevich. He beat Eddie Wenstob and Tiger Warrington to become Canadian champion, scored some notable ring victories in Europe. He fought in Germany and got out just before the war.

Delaney beat Galento twice, has great respect for the big boy's punching power. "He caught me in the first round of one of our bouts and I didn't know what was happening until the eighth. 'Just fight like you've been doing', advised my manager, but how could I when I didn't know I had been fighting".

Rags To Riches.

Ken (Edmonton Journal) McConnell is worried by the report Jim Coleman, the Toronto Globe and Mail Sports Columnist, now owns a racehorse—Broom Time. "Mr. Coleman", says Ken, "will now undoubtedly appear in the clubhouse with derby hat, flashy coa, leather and leggings and a worried look".

Incidentally:

Red Pollard, Edmonton boy who was Seabiscuit's regular jockey, is a shipyards worker in Rhode Island. . . .Joe Klukay, who jumped from the Stratford, Ont., Juniors to Toronto Maple Leafs during the past hockey season, has joined the navy . . . The Quebec Rugby Football Union has formed a juvenile league for six-man teams—age limit 18 . . . Able Yanofsky, Winnipeg's North American chess champion, is training with the University of Manitoba C.O.T.C.

Toronto, May 21 — (CP) — Remember the days when Mr. Sport Fan couldn't go to the ball game or the races when his car was laid up? And remember how grandpa used to say, "The trouble with you young fellows today is you're too soft. Why, in my day we'd think nothing of walking five miles to see a good ball game." Well, Canadians may not have reverted to the walking era yet but apparently they don't mind taking a street car. Calgary switched its spring race meet from Chinook to Victoria Park because the latter is on the street car lines. The attendance on opening day last Saturday was 35 per cent up from last year's getaway day and wagering showed a 30 per cent increase. Monday all records for a second day in recent years were eclipsed as both attendance and mutuel returns showed an advance of 75 per cent. Chances are conditions will be the same when the Eastern racing season opens at Toronto Woodbine tomorrow.. How people do rush to spend their money!

Quip of the Week Club:

Vic (Kitchener Record) McKenty: "A dispatch out of Ottawa says that the transfer of FO. Lew Hayman from Toronto to Ottawa is merely 'a normal service posting' that has nothing to do with football. When Hayman's gridders bring the Grey Cup to Ottawa this fall, that'll probably be listed as a 'normal' consequence."

Incidentally:

Fans are hoping for a report on how the army made out financially in promoting the Johnny Greco-Terry Young fight at Montreal May 8. Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson reports considerable Montreal discussion about what the Army intends to do with proceeds of the fight. He adds: "One thing all the arguments may lead to is decision from military headquarters that there shall be no more general participation by athletes in uniform in any but inter-army events, this to apply to all forms of sport."

Round and About:

Sid Abel, captain of the Stanley Cup hockey champions, Detroit Red Wings, was presented with a pen and pencil set by admirers at his Melville, Sask., home before he left to join the R.C.A.F. ... Bob Dill, who played defence with the American Hockey League champions, Buffalo Bisons, has been signed for baseball by Minneapolis Millers in the American Association. Bob joined the U. S. Coast Guard after the hockey season closed but was discharged as physically unfit because of asthma. His home is in St. Paul, Minn.

TIGHT BATTLE FOR SECOND PLACE IN INT. LEAGUE

Montreal and Syracuse Swap Places for Third and Fourth

NEWARK SECOND

By the Associated Press

Toronto Maple Leafs, breezing along blissfully with a tight hold on first place, sat by idly yesterday as the tight battle for second place in the International League continued unabated, and today Newark, Syracuse and Montreal still were closer than bread and butter in the race for the runner-up spot.

Newark retained a slight edge despite the fact it was whitewashed by Baltimore yesterday 8-0 but Montreal and Syracuse, in thtird and fourth places respectively before the day's games, swapped places as Montreal lost to Buffalo 4-3 and Syracuse edged out Jersey City, 3-2.

It was a case of too much Roland Van Slate for Newark. The Oriole hurler limited the Bears to three blows in scoring his shutout. It was his fourth victory after he had suffered three straight setbacks. No Newark runner reached third, and two of the Bears' three hits were registered by Joe Buzas. Van Slate fanned nine men.

The Orioles got nine hits off the offerings of Ken Holcombe, Ed Marleau and Walt Dubiel, with Hal Selling getting a homer and a single and Ted Mackiewicz and a double.

It took Buffalo 10 innings to gain its decision over the Royals, with neither starting itcher being around at the finish. Rufe Gentry, Bison starter, went out for a pinch hitter in the seventh, and Bob Chipman, starter for Montreal, left in the same inning with one man out, two on base and one run in. Al Sherer, who relieved him, was charged with the defeat and Mike Roscoe, who relieved Gentry, got credit for the victory. The Royals left 13 base runners stranded.

Tom De La Cruz pitched Syracuse to its victory over Jersey City in the first night game of the Chiefs' season. Norm Small's two-run homer in the seventh ruined a possible shutout for De La Cruz. The Chiefs got only five hits off Bill Voiselle, the loser, and Crip Polli who went in in the eighth.

The 10 Guineas.

The eighty-fourth running of the King's Plate will feature the opening of the turf season at picturesque Woodbine Park in Toronto tomorrow. The distance is one mile and a furlong while to the winner goes the King's Plate, 50 Guineas in gold and $8,000, added by the Ontario Jockey Club. Incidentally the King's Plate is the oldest continually run turf event on the North American continent. The first royal donation was originally made in 1859 by Queen Victoria. During the 84 years of its existence the Plate has been run in many sections of the Province, including Picton and Kingston in Eastern Ontario. However, since 1883 it has been run at Toronto.

Take Your Pick

With the latest spring in years and the recent heavy rains nothing but a gooey track can be expected for the gallop of the guineas. However, there are some who say Willie Morrissey's Arbor Vita, the Plate favourite, can really dangle in the sticky going. However, Tallpat headed Arbor Vita under the wire as a two-year-old at Fort Erie last season. Then there's Gallant Foe, one of the few fillies eligible for the race, with a sensational mud record also. Unfortunately the mud has been so deep at the Woodbine track the "bangtails" haven't so much as had a decent spring training over the oval.

Grandpal was never given a competitive test in the mud, while Tulachmore, another one fancied by many, made but one start in the mire and finished fourth to Tallpat, Arbor Vita and Sweep Lad. So, dear clients, it promises to be a hoss race, no matter what conditions may be.

Tall Baseball Yarns.

When Hans Wagner starts relating incidents he "saw" happen in his long baseball career, truth generally gets badly trampled. The genial Pirate coach never bats an eye when he tells of the time he saw an outfielder make a great catch near the fence with the bases full. As he pulled back his arm to throw home, his hand stuck in the fence and all the runs scored.

"Or I can give you a better one," says the grizzled veteran. "A fellow hit one over the fence just as a train was going by. The ball landed in the smokestack of the engine. But that engine just puffed once, the ball popped out of the smokestack and the outfielder caught it for as pretty a putout as I ever saw."

Identical Records

Beau Jack and Bob Montgomery bring strangely parallel records into their lightweight championship fight on Friday when boxing returns to the Garden. Each has scored twenty-seven knockouts, Jack in fifty-three bouts and his rival in fifty-nine.

Remember When—

Dizzy Dean four years ago today made a strong comeback when he pitched a three-hit game to give the Chicago Cubs a 4-0 victory over the Boston Braves. Nearly 22,000 fans stood in the rain to give Dizzy a big hand. "Ol' Dix" finished big league baseball in 1941 with the Cubs but since his retirement has been heard from as a farmer and radio announcer.

Opening Ceremonies Etc.

If the rain DON'T come the curtain will ring up on 1943 girls softball at the Armouries this evening when Deacon A. C. clash with the east-end SWACO nine. President Chuck Barnett has arranged colorful opening ceremonies and all that remains is to have the umpires shout—"play ball"—and the season is on.

DID YOU KNOW . . . Hal Peck, the Chicago outfielder, is now wearing a specially built baseball shoe for his left foot, from which he accidentally shot off two toes last winter. . .The baseball shoe has a pad of rubber covered with soft leather to take up the room where, as Peck puts it: "My two toes should be but aren't . . . Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox says that Dick Wakefield of the Tigers is the best looking prospect of the new crop of players in the American League this year. . . Next in line his vote goes to his own rookie outfielder, bespectacled Tucker Thurman. . .Thurman was heralded as a fine fly chaser with a great throwing arm. . .He has proven this already in addition to showing promise of being quite a hitter . . .Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings says that one of the big reasons he is so high on Johnny Mowers as a goal-tender is that the Red Wing custodian is "an even worse loser than I am" . . . Certainly there are few greater competitors in hockey today than Mowers.

LESSON NO. 62

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Try to keep your partner buoyant. Think of him not as clairvoyant. Let him know what you are holding by your bidding, not your scolding.

Dire results may not always follow your wrong bid in bridge. Maybe you find partner with more than he said. Maybe you have extra values that protect your error.

That is likely to make you careless. It may tempt you to take liberties. It may trick you into pushing your intuition. It may lure you into taking chances.

Better lay off that stuff with a borderline hand. A borderline means a holding that is on the edge of either pass or bid.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one. As the responder, you must either pass or bid. Sometimes you have a hand that looks as if it is either or neither.

With not more than two tricks you should pass. You should bid if you have more than two tricks with two high cards. But you must not lie to your partner.

Do not bid with two high cards but not more than two tricks. And do not bid with more than two tricks but not two high cards.

Another thing. If your response is in a suit, you also need the stuff for that suit. If you assist partner's suit, you need adequate support in it. If you bid your own suit, it must be biddable.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠K 8 6 5 2
♥6 4 3
♣10

Your spade suit is biddable. You have three tricks; the king and two cards short in clubs. But you have only one high card; the king. So, you should pass.

If you respond with one spade, you will lie to your partner about one high card. If you have corned beef, do not promise corned beef and cabbage, if you do not have cabbage.

For Your Information At the Local Theatres!

AT THE BELLE

"Chetnicks"

Telling for the first time on the screen the story of a nation that refuses to die, "Chetniks!" The Fighting Guerrillas, the new 20th Century-Fox film, is now at the Belle theatre.

Lloyd Nolan "Time to Kill"

A new exciting crackling mystery featuring private detective Michael Shayne, the handsome wise-cracking detective, "Time to Kill" is the added feature attraction. Starring Lloyd Nolan, as the breezy sleuth, the story traces the theft of a rare and valuable coin, and the murders which follow. With Nolan in this fast-moving mystery comedy are two beautiful girls, Doris Merrick and Heather Angel. So daredevil Mike couldn't be happier.

"Immortal Sergeant"

In John Brophy's "Immortal Sergeant," which arrives this weekend at the Belle theatre, 20th Century-Fox brings to the screen the first stirring drama to come out of the blazing desert warfare which led to a British victory in Libya.

Starring Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Hara, the action-packed film was translated to the screen from Brophy's popular novel which, besides being the first to dramatize the adventure and courage of the embattled African scene, in effect set an exciting new story pattern for these unforgettable times.

Brophy has written more than a story of action in the desert or an account of an heroic incident. With tense suspense, he constructed in sharp detail a story of average men growing to the stature of heroes under an incredible strain which, as brought to the screen, becomes an epic of men under fire.

Moreover, the film has tender love scenes between Fonda and Miss O'Hara which reveal just where a soldier's thoughts lie when, as the foreword to the film says, "between periods of action the solitude of the desert makes the men think."

All in all, reports from previews indicate that 20th Century-Fox, which made "How Green Was My Valley," "This Above All" and "The Pied Piper," once again has uncovered the key to translating a thrilling novel into an even more thrilling film.

A strong supporting cast features Thomas Mitchell, Allyn Joslyn and Reginald Gardiner. John Stahl directed, while Lamar Trotti, who produced the picture, also wrote the screen play.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Wake Island"

Out of the soul-stirring stand of a handful of Marines battling against tremendous Jap odds to hold a strategic patch of desert soil in the Pacific, Paramount Pictures has fashioned a truly great picture—"Wake Island."

It opened last night at the Capitol Theatre, an epic document of American fighting courage and skill. In it is enshrined the shining heroism of that little band of Marines and civilians that held out for days, outnumbered, out-equipped, outstripped in everything but courage and determined fighting spirit; in it are enshrined the meaning of this war and why it must be won.

One feels impelled to shout hurrahs for the realistic re-enactment of the Wake Island struggle, for the direction that John Farrow gave it and for the splendid acting of the hand-picked cast. Heading the list of actors giving memorable performances are Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, MacDonald Carey, Albert Dekker, Walter Abel, Barbara Britton and William Bendix.

What happened at Wake Island will never be forgotten. This stirring film re-enactment will be remembered for a long, long time by all who see it. You must see it!

"Lone Star Vigilantes"

Columbia's "The Lone Star Vigilantes," exciting western hit now thrilling Capitol Theatre audiences, co stars Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter, two of the screen's mightiest western heroes, the film is one of the fastest-moving thrillers of the season. Directed by Wallace W. Fox, the new hit tells the story of early Texas bandits and the hard-riding, fearless vigilantes!

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Code" complete the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Lady of Burlesque"

It can be recorded that for the first time we've struck a boom in a war period. Yes, a boom in entertainment that skyrockets right to the top of the list of exciting motion pictures and marks the beginning of a new era in film producing. Loaded with action, suspense, beautiful show-girls, smart songs, gay, fast-moving dialogue and a thrilling-chilling mystery, Hunt Stromberg's "Lady of Burlesque," which stars Barbara Stanwyck and introduces a talented and handsome newcomer in Michael O'Shea, is playing a special Sunday midnight performance at the McCarthy Theatre this coming Sunday.

From Gypsy Rose Lee's best-seller exposing backstage burlesque life, "G-String Murders," James Gunn, a young script writer new to Hollywood, has fashioned this punchy, briskly-paced murder story in the colorful atmosphere of show life. Barbara Stanwyck plays the burlesque queen, Dixie Daisy, who is the star not only of the show but also of two daring murders committed backstage during performances at the Old Opera House. Since excitment is keyed to a high point, accusations fall upon several suspicious members of the troupe including Dixie who, with the help of Biff Brannigan, comic of the show, sets a trap to catch the villainous murderer and vindicate herself. Biff offers his assistance because he is very much attracted by Dixie and, when she spurns him, he becomes more anxious to be friendly with her.

Enhancing the story is a smart entertainment program studded with gorgeous chorines who present a stunning girly-girly burlesque show in gay song and dance. A real treat is in store for you when star Barbara Stanwyck lets her hair down and sings a song especially written for the picture, "Play It On the G-String," and goes to town in an amazing dance routine. This new Barbara Stanwyck is a refreshing, bright personality who is establishing herself surely as one of the most versatile Hollywood actresses. Michael O'Shea reveals an unusual talent and in this reviewer's opinion is headed for immediate stardom as a result of his performance in "Lady of Burlesque." Much of the praise accorded "Lady of Burlesque" should go to Director William Wellman, who did an outstanding directorial job.

Hunt Stromberg has given the public a powerful hypodermic in "Lady of Burlesque" to make moviegoers laugh and thrill as they never have before.

GRECO-YOUNG FIGHT COMMENT IS CONTINUING

By JACK BRAYLEY

Montreal, May 21 (CP)—A flood of comment that swept Montreal sports pages over the army sponsored Greco-Young fight May 8 continued today although promoter Lt.-Col. Arthur G. White said it was a "tempest in a teapot."

Incidentally Pte. Johnny Greco of the Canadian army won a nifty 10-round decision over Terry Young of New York in the main event of a card that resulted in 6,400 paid admissions totalling $16,260 by unofficial count.

The army previously explained the fight had two-fold purpose: first to add to army benefit funds and secondly to give the army some publicity for recruiting and morale purposes.

Colonel White says the audit of the fight returns will not be published because "it's the army's own business" but he invited any members of the press to take a look-see.

The promotion was first questioned when it was reported that city councillors were going to ask the Municipal-Controlled Athletic Commission to produce an audited statement on the fight.

The report added this attitude was taken as a result of "unconfirmed reports of high sums paid United States Fighters, of a percentage guarantee given Pte. Greco, the bally-hooed presence of 'Uncle Mike' Jacobs and a retinue of advisers and hangers-on..."

Councillor Frank Hanley was quoted as saying "A Toronto columnist wanted to know for whose army the show was run, the Canadian army or Mike Jacobs' and I'd like to know too."

Colonel White said his report on the show was for his superiors in Ottawa only—that is with the exception of the private view for the press. "As for these city hall rumors...about large sums of moneys involved in bringing Mike Jacobs and his staff up here. I'm afraid somebody has gone overboard without trying to get his facts straight." He said Jacobs visit had been paid for the firm sponsoring the radio broadcast.

The Colonel said that in order to achieve a big time flavor for the show it was decided Terry Young was the only opponent of sufficient calibre to fit into the Greco picture and keep the affair from being "just another exhibition."

He said the audit will likely show that 20 per cent of the gate went, as per contract, to Young. It would also show that 37 1-2 per cent came "off the top" of the show taxes Then there was Greco's training expenses. Whatever is left over after the bills are paid and it shiuld amount to a few thousand dollars at least"—will go, as advertised to army benefits.

AT THE CAPITOL

Lowell Drew, playing the leader of a gang of outlaws, is confronted by the business end of Bill Elliott's six-shooter in "The Lone Star Vigilantes," at the Capitol. The added attraction "Wake Island," is also shown.

PASSING DREAM

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 21

Sitting beside Molly Santos in the black coupe, Temple wished she had written her family that she was coming to Florida. Suppose she were taken ill or had an accident. But even spared illness or an accident, it troubled her that she had not taken the family into her confidence. Only since she had known Jud had there been chapters in her life forbidden to her family. The old determination to live honestly and truthfully had suffered in the experience that had given her her greatest happiness. Strange . . the experience of love had made her lie. Was any conviction strong enough to withstand the tides of change and growth and temptation? Once she had been so certain of the sort of person she was and the sort of person she was not.

Temple was wearing a white terry cloth robe over her blue bathing suit and she was sitting in the patio again with Molly Santos when the station wagon stopped before the house. Seeing Jud, refreshed, immaculate, handsome, Temple thought, "Why do I think at all? Why don't I live on my feelings?"

"You two look very comfortable," he said, smiling at Molly and then at Temple. "All set for a swim? I'll make a quick change. I keep my trunks here, Temple. All the comforts of a home and country club combined and none of the expense. Be back in a minute."

They spent the afternoon at the beach, a happy afternoon that would live long in her memory. His good humor was infectious and once more she reproached herself for the bad habit of analysis and comparison. And though her mood responded willingly to his, she thought once or twice, with tender pity, of a locked drawer in a boarding house in Washington in which there was a wedding ring and an assortment of new linens. It was as though she had left Jud's secret wife in Washington and this girl swimming with him in the bluest water she had ever seen might be any pleasant companion with whom he was spending the afternoon.

They were lying on the beach, their faces turned toward the sky when a plane passed over.

"Have you done any flying since you've been down here, Jud?"

"A little. I flew to Miami a couple of weeks ago with a British pilot who had been at Dunkerque. It was thrilling flying over that part of the country and talking to him. But we ground men don't get up often."

"I went up once in an open cockpit with one of the boys at school who had his own plane." She smiled. "I knew why I've always envied sea gulls and hoped, if I came back in another form, to be a gull."

He laughed quietly. "What about me? Where do I fit in your future life as a gull?"

"Flapping beside me, of course. Dipping down to get the biggest fish."

He laughed again. "Well, if you'll forgive me, darling, I'd rather look like Gable, have the voice and manner of Boyer and money of the Vanderbilts."

"Still mercenary . ."

"On twenty-one bucks a month? Oh, horribly mercenary!"

"I'd rather be of all people and things just what we are."

He reached over and took her hand. "My heart is in it, Temple—in my hand. I can't be very demonstrative. At the base, you know, I'm just one of the boys and if I were seen making even passive love to you, it would let me in for a lot of kidding. And I'm not too good at taking that sort of thing. How about another dip?"

She got up quickly. "And another!"

"Hey! I didn't marry a future gull. I married a future fish."

She put on her white rubber cap when suddenly she stood very still and looked at him.

Then he said, "Temple, I don't dare let myself think too often that you are my wife." He got up quickly, too, and stood beside her. He smiled. "You're the only girl I've ever known who didn't look hideous in one of those damned caps."

So that day made a pattern for the succeeding days that were spent all too soon.

On her last day and the last morning Temple would ride into town with Molly Santos, Molly said:

"I shall miss you, dear, and I think I should tell you that I feel somewhat guilty about not having a party for you. But I thought you wanted to be with Jud. This week that Thalia has been away has been a grand one for me to rest and write letters and catch up with my sleep. I am one of those mothers who tries to keep up with a very active daughter and who have to take a week out every now and then to recover from the strain. You've been a perfect guest, Temple."

"It's perfectly natural to be kind to a girl like you. Because, you see, you are not the first girl who has stayed with me since the base was built. I've had quite a variety. One or two didn't behave any too well, probably because they never expected to see me again. One girl came down to see one boy and spent all her time with another. Some young people seem to think that these times give them a special license to be unconventional. I feel that one of our deepest obligations to our men is to be calm and normal."

Temple nodded. The thought came again that her leaving Jud would cause no sharp hurt but rather an aching sadness. Was it the second stage of love when the excitement had cooled or had she resigned herself to the loss of him for the duration of the war? Perhaps it was because they had been only pleasant companions and not lovers, not husband and wife. Certainly, she told herself firmly, she was no less in love with him. Why didn't it worry her more? Why wasn't she fearful that her awareness of hi mhad lessened? She admitted that she did not know. But she did know that she had been happy as his companion and that this week she had not thought of the war and the future. She had been even a little annoyed this week at the Temple who had eaten out her heart in sultry Washington through the summer. When she went back, she would go out more and meet new pople, be more normal.

That afternoon they were on the beach again. Temple's whiteness of him had lessened? She advous among the sunburned natives, had vanished. She was as brown as they now.

They had returned from their first swim. Now Jud was lying down with his arms cushioning his head and Temple was on her knees, shaking loose her hair.

"I hope it dries before I have to wear a hat again."

"So girls in Washington still wear hats."

"Does Washington seem so remote? You haven't spoken about your mother, Jud. How is she?"

He smiled. "She's married again and so everything connected with my life before this life seemed far away and unimportant except you. My mother married an old bridge hound and an income slightly less than hers. Can't you see them spending their honeymoon looking for bridge partners?" He scooped up a handful of sand and let it run slowly through his fingers. "Actually I'm glad she did it. He's an all right sort of guy. I've known him all my life."

Lewis Will Go To Washington

New York, May 21 (AP)—United Mine Workers officials announced today that U.M.W. President John L. Lewis would go to Washington during the day and that headquarters of the union in New York would be closed immediately.

There was no immediate explanation of the move nor was there any indication that Lewis' trip to Washington meant that he might have agreed to consult with the War Labor Board which he has ignored since the soft coal wage dispute was referred to it several weeks ago.

1,500 Employees Of Eight Galt Plants on Strike

Galt, Ont., May 21 — (CP) — Fifteen hundred employees in eight Galt war plants went on strike today and a representative of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) said the walkout would continue until all eight sign collective bargaining agreements with the union.

The statement, issued by District Representative P. J. O'Donovan, said the union insisted that all the agreements be signed simultaneously.

Pickets were placed on duty at all of the eight plants and it was announced that a mass meeting of the strikers would be held at 2 p.m.

The strike started in six of the eight plants at 10 a. m. while in the other two — Shurly, Dietrich, Atkins and Galt Malleable Iron—the men delayed walking out until they had finished incompleted work.

There was no immediate statement from any of the companies.

The other six plants involved are: Canada Machinery Corporation; Babcock, Wilcox and Goldie McCulloch Co.; R. McDougall Co.; Galt Metal Industries; Galt Brass Co.; Whitehall Machine and Tools, Ltd.

OFFICIALS DENY STATEMENT

Toronto, May 21—(CP)—City officials today denied a statement by Ald. Stewart Smith that three Toronto families were being maintained in a hotel at the cost to the city of $9 a day.

In an address last night to a meeting of the war housing committee, Ald. Smith said the city was paying $9 a day to house three families —among them the wife and children of a soldier overseas —in a Toronto hotel.

HOGS

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $12.

Dressedweight: Hamilton $16.65 delivered, Stratford $16.50 delivered, Hull and Peterborough $16.10 plus transportation.

Farm Households On Honor System In Meat Rations

Ottawa, May 21. (CP) — The Prices Board said today that Canada's farm households will be largely on a voluntary rationing basis under meat rationing, since most farms produce at least some of their meat supplies. Consequently, farm households will be on the "honor" system, just as they are under butter rationing.

The Board urged farm households to live within the spirit of the meat rationing order, and to reduce their consumption of meat to the same degree that consumers who buy meat by coupon entirely will be compelled to do.

Farmers who slaughter livestock for their own meat supplies, or for supplies to other farmers, will be required to register as meat producers with their local ration boards. A letter to the ration board stating that livestock is slaughtered for home use or for the home use of other farmers is all that is necessary.

No meat so killed, the Prices Board said, may be used by any other person or supplied for any other purpose than for consumption on the farm itself or on another farm. Every farm household killing and consuming meat from its own farm must, at the end of every month, send in coupons from each ration book in the household to cover the amount of home-killed meat that is consumed during the month, at the rate of one coupon for every two pounds of meat consumed.

PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost. If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 21 — (CP) —Mines and industrials showed slight losses this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Trading was heavy. Volume was sizeable at 172,000 shares.

Golds boarded widest declines. Lake Shore, McIntyre and Dome were off fractions, Kerr-Addison weakened 25 to 6.20 and moderate losses appeared for Macassa, Wright-Hargreaves, Upper Canada, Beattie and East Malartic. Pickle Crow, Preston and Aunor were stronger.

Base-metals and western oils posted minor changes. Industrials were weak. Massey-Harris issues, Cockshutt Plow, Canada Cement, Aluminum and Hamilton Cottons Pfd weakened. Fanny Farmer and Loblaw improved.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, May 21. (AP)—Prices exhibited a generally lower drift in today's stock market although it was more a question of buying timidity than selling urgency.

Wild cat walk-outs in the coal and motor fields continued to chill bullish sentiment to some extent and many potential purchasers seemed reluctant to bid because of the approach of the weekend. Cashing in of profits which have accrued over the past year also was a brake on trends. The war news was a sustaining influence.

Easier tendencies prevailed at the start. Dealings then turned sluggish. While there were scattered spots of strength in evidence near fourth hour, declines of fractions to three points predominated.

Selected carrier bonds were in demand. Commodities were mixed.

Canadian issues faltered, with Dome Mines, Distiller Seagram and Lake Shore dropping fractions of a point. Canada 4s gained 1-8 however.

Say Giraud Offers New Approach To Settlement

London, May 21 —(CP)— Gen. Henri Giraud was reported today to have offered Gen. Charles de Gaulle a new approach to a settlement of the problems of French union, again raising hopes for a London-Algiers agreement.

"Accord between Algiers and London near," said a headline in "France," the Fighting French daily, which based this conclusion on the report that the military and civil commander-in-chief of French North Africa had sent a new note to Gen. de Gaulle.

In this, Gen. Giraud was said to have suggested that Gen. de Gaulle and two other members of his French National committee meet him and two other North African administration members in Algiers.

Among them, these six would select three other representative Frenchmen and this committee of nine would attempt to eliminate obstacles in the way of unity.

Mr. King Confers With President

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 21 — (CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King went to the White House today for conferences with President Roosevelt while Canada's three chiefs-of-staff and Defence Minister J. L. Ralston talked with high ranking British and American officers on the strategic conduct of the war.

It was expected that today would see the end of Canadian participation in the military conferences now proceeding in Washington, with the Prime Minister leaving tonight and Col. Ralston and his staff officers flying back to Ottawa early tomorrow morning.

Three staff officers, Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Vice-Admiral Percy Nelles and Marshal L. S. Breadner arrived here by air yesterday and have been in a round of conferences with British and American military leaders ever since.

Pound Communications Of Japs in Burma

New Delhi, May 21—(CP)—Three R. A. F. bomber formations maintained the Allied pounding of Japanese communications in Burma yesterday, following up two days of bomb tonnage record-setting by United States Army bombers.

A British communique said that today one formation of Blenheims left fires burning at Letpan and Kywegn, points on the supply route from Taungap to Arakan, and that another attacked warehouses at Akyab.

LABRADOR COLD? NOT THESE DAYS OF NORTH SUNS

Press Fliers to New Airport Found Themselves With Famous Pilots — Notes From Big New Airport

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose Airport, Labrador, May 21. (CP)—The first Canadian newspaper party to visit this base had famous pilots in and out. . . From Montreal they flew with Captain Art Harris of London, R.A.F. Transport Command pilot who used to be with British Overseas Airways and flew the King's messenger from Cologne to the United Kingdom after pre-war talks between Sir Neville Henderson and Hitler. . . On the flight from here to an eastern Canadian airport they rode with an R.C.A.F. Wing Commander who has flown seven planes across the Atlantic and now has organized an R.C.A.F. transport squadron.

It came as quite a shock when both motors of the R.A.F. Ventura cut out over the Gulf of St. Lawrence. . . ."Landlubber" newspapermen decided it happened when Capt. Harris and his crew—First Officer Harry Tanason of Windsor, Ont., and Civilian Radio Officer G. S. Thomson of Glasgow-switched gas tanks.

That was partly right . . . The crew confessed that evening they were more startled than the passengers. . . The tanks got twisted and the gas ran out in one of them about 80 miles before they thought it would . . . . To make the day complete, maintenance crews at the Labrador base found a broken oil-line which would have brought the plane down in another hour's flying.

One anti-aircraft gunner stationed in Labrador believes in advertising. . . .His name and address — Gnr. Fred Brinnelow, 106 Mackonnell St., Guelph, Ont., —was written on the Ventura's unwelcome "No Smoking" sign.

Don't believe the stories about cold weather at this airport .. . . Newsmen from eastern Canada found their first "shirt-sleeve" weather here and the heavy clothes they brought along were mainly a nuisance.

Max Dunbar of Edinburgh and Montreal, Canadian vice-consul in Greenland, rode in with the newsmen, on the way back to his post after several months on the External Affairs Department staff in Ottawa. . .Max doesn't think much of Greenland's weather but said he likes to work there.

On the way out the Wing Commander turned over the controls to his co-pilot, Sqdn. Ldr. Charlie Hoyt of Eastview, Ont., long enough to give his plane a vacuum-cleaning. . . He shoved a piece a rubber hose through a ventilator and the suction caused by the plane's flight did the rest.

Dance music helped brighten the trip. . . One of the maritimes long wave stations makes a good radio beam—which shows why the Nazis turn off their stations when British bombers are in the air over Germany.

Most appropriate title in the airmen's library is "Down North on the Labrador" by Wilfred T. Grenfell, and there are two copies. . . But the most popular books are those by Zane Grey, P. G. Wodehouse and Warwick Deeping. . . There's a good selection of non-fiction but it doesn't go over with the readers who seek entertainment, not information.

The editor of the Gazette had a week's trip to Washington and New York, writes William Allen White in the Emporia Gazette. He has been out and around, looking at the sights of the eastern seaboard, and incidentally attending editors' meetings and committees that were interesting, maybe profitable, but not highly important.

I saw the President twice on this trip. Once I went with the American Society of Newspaper Editors, a group of 150 or 200 editors of American daily papers, into his office. I stood in the front row where I could watch him closely, less than seven feet from his desk.

He talked for 20 minutes, glowing with gracious vitality. He seemed to be gay, sure of himself, a bit festive at times, informative —indeed, illuminating— on the subjects which he covered, and he seemed full of "wim, wit and wigor"!

He has grown notably heavier since he came to the White House. Perhaps it is the middle aged spread. His growth has not been in paunch. It has been above his navel. His shoulders have widened. His neck and jowls have filled out.. His head has taken a new form.

He was a good looking man as he sat there in his chair, vestless, with a long, dark figured four in hand tie reaching an inch or two below his waistband, with his thinning hair just slightly disheveled, waving his long cigaret holder in his hand like a wand. He seemed to have a curiously informal, nonchalant, self-possessed manner that is part of his personal charm.

He gesticulates with his head and shoulders more often than with his hands and arms. But he is a vital person, and I saw more than one southern Democratic editor, who pounded on the table and snarled when he spoke of Roosevelt the evening before we met him, surrender to him and eat out of hand when we had left the room where the President talked.

Abounding Vigor

I was astonished — perhaps amazed is a better word—at the abounding vigor of the man after ten years in the White House. I didn't think that the human boiler could keep up steam all those years with only a few weeks' letdown now and then. But there he was.

The next time I saw him was five hours later. I sat in the banquet room of the new Statler hotel and he sat at the speakers' table a few feet above the 800 dinner guest. I heard the long speech he made on Lincoln's birthday, reporting on the state of the nation. There I seemed to find another Roosevelt.

During the five intervening hours he had grown tired.. Sometimes, as he talked before the mike to the millions, it seemed to me that he gave the impression of a man who was bored with the same old thing. How many scores of times, perhaps thousands of times, this man had sat at a public dinner—and nothing is more inedible or less attractive than a public dinner when you have had about ten of them—and has seen himself cast as the belle of the ball and the queen of the May!

A thousand times he has felt the psychological impact of a thousands or 10,000 eyes upon him and has risen to say his say and go on to the next show like a barnstorming actress. It is a part of the job. Therein lies his leadership and he has to do it.

That sort of performance is as inescapable for the president of the United States as the dawn and the sunset.

As I sat listening to him, feeling that he was just a bit weary of it all, the monotony and sameness of it all, I could —or fancied I could—notice that as his speech went on and on for 45 minutes, he was getting physically tired. His voice, to me, seemed to lose its fire. I felt that he jammed in the emphasis where it was marked on the manuscript, and without much spontaneity. At last, in the final sentence of his speech, his voice dropped and I could not hear his last three words. But I could see then that the stream in the older boiler chugging along for ten years had taken its toll of rust.

Unenviable Job.

I did not envy him his job. To tell the truth, of all the ten presidents I have known, as I have watched them in the White House, I have never envied any of them. It is a hard and thankless task. In the end of the presidency is a man killer.

I suppose I am not the one to assess Mr. Roosevelt. The Republican Party has two schools of thought about him, two methods of assessment. One wing rather casually sometimes speak of him "trippingly on the tongue" as "that God-damn Roosevelt"—short, snappy and staccato—but without grinding the vocal gears. The other crowd snarls it savagely, adagio, making two words out of God like "Gaw'ud" and two out of the dam — "da-yam", growled with heartpumping scorn and generally with a table pounding drum-beat!

I belong to the lighter staccato, left wing. We less emotional Republicans are inclined to admit under pressure that after all, he is the president, and that he had been elected and—well, now—anyway, he is the only president we have and we might try to put up with him. So this picture of the President, at ease in the White House and then under stream at the editors' dinner, should be accepted along with a liberal commercial discount—perhaps 80 and 5!

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with my cousin Artie playing we were spies and pretending to be shadowing different people, and Artie said, G, I wonder where they're going?

Meaning 2 soldiers waiting at the bus stop and each sitting on a big suitcase, and I said, They're not allowed to tell, no matter who asks them, they have to be too careful of spies.

Well let's ask them anyways just to find out how careful they are, Artie said. They wont think we're old enough to be spies and maybe we can just trap them into telling us, he said.

Sounding like a good idea, and we stopped in front of them and I said, Are you waiting for a bus?

You hit the old nail right on the old head that time, buddy, one soldier said. They're pretty clever kids, hey Joe? he said, and the other soldier said, You said it.

Well where are you going to? Artie said, and the first soldier said, Straight to Japan.

G, are you? I said, and the first soldier said, Surest thing you know. We're just taking the bus first to throw people off the cent and then we'll hop off and hop on a boat to Japan, and if you're thinking we'll get in trouble over there in these uniforms, that's where you're wrong, because the dum Japs will take u. for diskuized Jap soldiers on our way some place to do some fancy spy work, he said.

Which just then the bus came and they both got on it, and I said to Artie, Good night what do you know about that, they really thought we were spies after all so they made up that bum story.

Sure, they thought they were fooling us and here we were fooling them, that's a good one on them all right, Artie said.

Making us feel better instead of worse.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sharpe of Colbourne (formerly of Wooler) will be sorry to learn of the illness of Mr. Sharpe, owing to a weak heart condition.

Mr. John P. McAuley is suffering from rheumatism.

Mrs. Nesbitt Haggarty is taking care of Mrs. Henry McColl, who has the mumps.

Mr. Neil Nelson is making extensive alterations to the buildings and the lawn front on the property that he recently purchased from Mr. Wm. J. Lawson.

Mr. Dan Hennessey is suffering from a heavy cold.

Mr. Walter Ellis has erected a new mail box on the roadside opposite his premises.

Owing to inclement weather, the planting of victory gardens in this locality is very discouraging.

Mrs. Arnold Adair (Nadine), elder daughter of Mr. Herman Morrow, was brought by ambulance last week to her father's home, where she is now convalescing from an attack of pleurisy.

Science Creates Rayon Hosiery —Better than Ever

SINCE silk and nylon were curtailed, science has achieved a real triumph for the hosiery industry. Rayon hosiery has been transformed; made more glamorous, finer, different.

You will never recognize the pre-war rayon hosiery in the lovelier, Orient Beauti-Skin rayon hosiery of 1943, for they are not alike in looks, in fitting, or in wearing quality.

See Orient's new achievements of science. When you wear them, compare them with the rayon hosiery you have known in the past. You will agree that here is a new creation—the finest rayon hosiery yet produced.

Much of the rayon yarn, produced today, is being used for war purposes. So, if you can't always get Orient Beauti-Skin rayon hosiery, don't blame your dealer.

Wash Your Rayon Stockings with care.

Use mild soapsuds (such as Lux) and lukewarm water, not over 105°F. Don't rub. Don't twist or wring. Squeeze out the water. Leave to dry for 24 to 48 hours, NOT on or near radiator or fire!

CORVETTE REGINA SINKS SUB BY GUNFIRE

ALLIES BLUDGEON SARDINIA WITH BOMB STICKS

Ten Depth Charges Bring Submarine To the Surface

Canadian Gun Crew Outfires Italians In Sharp Running Battle

21 OF CREW RESCUED

Ottawa, May 25. (CP)—The story of how the Canadian Corvette Regina blasted an Italian submarine to the surface and then out-gunned its crew to force them to abandon their sinking craft and surrender was told in a Navy Press release today.

The Regina was the third of the Canadian Corvettes which went to Mediterranean waters last Autumn to assist in Allied operations in French Africa to score against the submarines.

Previously, the Corvettes Ville de Quebec and Port Arthur were credited with sinking enemy submarines, while the Corvettes Weyburn and Louisburg were lost in the same operations. The Regina's success was under command of Lt.-Cmdr. Harry Freeland, R.C.N.R., of Sydney, N.S., and on a pitch black night was informed a submarine was about a mile away.

Located Quickly

"We ran towards her and were successful in locating her", said Freeland. "We dropped 10 depth charges, and we must have laid them right around her. She popped to the surface in seconds and although we didn't know it then she was badly damaged. One charge must have exploded right on her nose. Her bow plates were torn eight feet away from the hull".

OS. Vern Cavanaugh, R.C.N.V.R., of Perth, Ont., saw the sub come up and got in the first shots with an Oerlikon gun. The Italians started firing too and trying to get away. It appeared to be a race between the crews of the two ships to see which could kill off the other's gun crews and deck officers first, and the Canadians won.

Chasing the sub through the water, Freeland ordered a zig-zag course so that as the guns on one side of the ship fired, the guns on the other would get their sights on the sub and get away their shots.

His Conning Tower

One shell from the corvette's four-inch gun hit at the base of the conning tower and tore it loose. The Captain, Navigator, First Lieutenant, after-gun's crew and several others of the Italians were killed as they attempted to direct fire at the corvette.

For a time the bullets whistled around the bridge, from which Freeland directed the operations, but by luck, only one man was grazed. The Regina prepared to ram the quarry, but as its fire slackened off it was decided to avoid the risk of damaging the corvette if possible.

"About this time we heard shouting, and it became obvious she would surrender," said Freeland. "She had then, of course, stopped firing at us."

The Italians shouted "my friend" and "courage" from the deck of the submarine, clambered out on deck and jumped into the water. In all, 21 were rescued and made prisoners, some of them badly wounded. Soon after resistance ended the submarine sank.

"A more dishevelled, frightened bunch of chaps I wouldn't want to see," said Engine Room Artificer T. W. Henderson, R. C. N. V. R., of St. Catharines, Ont., who spent most of the night searching for and patching up prisoners.

Risked Loss of Hand

Chief Engineroom Artificer Allen Hurst, R. C. N. R., of Dartmouth, N. S. risked the loss of his hand when he tapped home a pin which became looses on a revolving part of the steering engine. Without the pin, the ship would have been out of control.

"We were so wrapped up in the fight we didn't even know the enemy was firing at us," said Cavanaugh. Cavanaugh strapped himself into the Oerlikon and sent 240 shells into the enemy. "I saw the sub coming up," he said, "and I had first shots at her. I opened up on her conning tower. The shells were piercing, and exploding as they hit. They made a very pretty sight. . .I could see the conning tower plainly, although it was very dark.

3 R.A.F. RAIDS MADE ON UDAUNG

Blenheims Attack Jap-Held Village and Japanese Camp

New Delhi, May 25—(CP)—R. A. F. bombers made three attacks on Japanese troops at Udaung, a few miles south of Maungdaw on the west coast of Burma yesterday and bursts were observed well within the target area, a British communique said today.

Blenheims escorted by Hurricanes attacked an enemy-occupied village near Buthedaung in western Burma in the afternoon. The bombing was followed by low-level machine-gun attacks.

Blenheims also attacked a Japanese camp near Homalin in the Upper Chindwin area, where extensive damage was done to barracks.

Outsider Wins The Guineas

Newmarket, England, May 25—(CP)— Kingsway, an 18 to 1 shot owned by A. E. Saunders, today upset the calculations by winning the Two Thousand Guineas, from Pink Flower and Way In, who were second and third, respectively. Pink Flower and Way In both started at odds of 100 to 9.

The temperamental favorite, Nasrullah, was fourth. Kingsway dashed into the lead in the last 100 yards and won by a short head in one minute 37 3/5 seconds for the mile race in one of the most exciting finishes in the history of the classic race for three year olds.

It was the first victory for Saunders but the ninth for trainer Joe Lawson. Jockey Sam Wragg had not previously won the Two Thousand Guineas, although he was a Derby favorite and the One Thousand Guineas to his credit.

The One Thousand Guineas, restricted to three-year-old fillies, will be run tomorrow.

DR. BROCKENSHIRE HEADS ONTARIO MEDICALS

Other officers chosen are as follows: President-elect, Dr. H. M. Torrington, Sudbury; Chairman of Council, Dr. C. J. Bevins, Aurora; Honorary Treasurer, Dr. C. E. Hill, Lansing.

RED ARMY HOLDS STUBBORNLY TO NEWLY-WON LINES

Air War Continues To Be Battle of Moment With Reds Having Advantage

ARTILLERY ACTION

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, May 25 (AP)—Although sporadic artillery fire and scouting was reported along some sectors of the Russian front today, the significant lull which has prevailed generally remained unbroken and the air war continued to be the battle of the moment.

Both the German and Soviet ground and air forces were hacking away at the transport and communication facilities but it was obvious that the opposing armies were getting large quantities of supplies through to strategic sectors in preparation for the summer campaign.

The Red army held stubbornly to new-won lines west of the Donets River near Lisichansk and northwest of Novorossisk in the Kuban, but there have been no major changes along the long front in days.

Renewed reconnaissance indicated that the commanders on both sides had ordered constant scouting against the possibility of a surprise major assault, but the chance of catching either off guard was considered remote in view of the short nights and long spring days.

Sharp Artillery Action

(Sharp artillery action occurred during the night along the south-central front from Sevsk, northwest of Kharkov, down the Donets River to the lower front northwest of Novorossik, said the midday communique as broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor in London.)

Air battles south of Rostov and on the Arctic front were described in the midnight communique. Thirteen Nazi bombers were downed on the Rostov front against a loss of three Russian planes, while artillery fire downed 10 and drove off 28 German craft in a raid on the Rybachi Peninsula area in the far north near Petsamo, it said.

German reconnaissance units near Rostov were repulsed and numerous German blockhouses, pillboxes and gun positions along the front were smashed by artillery fire, the midnight communique aid.

ONE CHANCE SAVED HIM

Burslem, England (CP) — A 1,000,000 to one chance saved the life of Joseph Boulton, a 40 year old Staffordshire colliery worker, when he fell down a 1,800 foot pit shaft. About half-way down the light from the pithead reflected on a wire guide rope. He grabbed the rope and slid to safety.

'Bold National Policy' for 'Rehousing Low Income Groups' Is Advocated

Ottawa, May 25—(CP)—The executive of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities in a brief submitted to the federation today proposed adoption of a "bold national policy" for "rehousing the low income groups at acceptable minimum standards," as a co-operative undertaking among federal, provincial and local governments and private enterprise.

The brief, prepared for presentation to the House of Commons reestablishment and reconstruction committee, discussed the role of municipalities in post-war rehabilitation and reconstruction.

To meet housing needs, it proposed these other steps:-

"The federal government should extend, in accordance with local needs, financial assistance to local authorities, conditioned on the existence of a comprehensive town plan and housing program meeting satisfactory standards.

"The appropriate federal housing agency or department should extend capital grants, long-term, low-interest olans or annual rent subsidies in cities, to permit them to carry out a local housing program.

"The federal government should also extend and provide long-term, low-interest loans, up to 90 per cent of the loanable value (say with a maximum of $6,000), for housing purposes to individual home builders and building societies.

"A model provincial housing law should be prepared, to enable local communities to take part in a National housing program, and to carry out community rehousing programs, in which public and private groups can co-operate. The provinces should be encouraged to enact legislation in comformity with such a model provincial housing.

"Municipal authorities should consider the reduction of the rates of taxation on buildings and the corresponding increase of such rates on loan, to lower the tax burden on home owners and the occupants of low-rent houses, and to stimulate rehabilitation of blighted areas and slums."

The brief said central areas of towns must be reshaped and rebuilt "into places of character, meritorious design and expansion of the city's personality." They should be made accessible, be transformed by sunlight and stirripped o drabness.

Slums must be eradicated before they spread to larger sections.

"The rehabilitation of our downtown business districts and the clearance of our slum areas is the most challenging urban problem of our times,' 'the brief said.

Canadian Mutual Aid Act Is 'Magnanimous, Far-Reaching Measure'

—Sir Kingsley Wood

London, May 25 — (CP Cable)— Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchekuer, told the House of Commons today that the Mutual Aid Act recently passed by the Canadian parliament goes far beyond even the generous gift of $1,000,000,000 which Canada gave this country last year."

Sir Kingsley asked the House for a supplementary vote of credit of £1,000,000,000 ($4,450,000,000) to pay for running the war from early June to August.

Speaking of the Canadian Mutual Aid Act, he said:—

"It represents the acceptance by Canada of new financial liabilities of a very large order. It will enable the United Kingdom and other United Nations which lack Canadian dollars to obtain from Canada war supplies they need and will do this without the accumulation of war debts between nations which we so much wish to avoid.

"It was a magnanimous and far-reaching measure."

In asking the appropriation, he said that British war expenditures now amount to £13,500,000 daily, of which £11,000,000 is sent on the fighting and supply services.

The £1,000,000,000 appropriated on Jan. 6 is likely to be exhausted in early June, Sir Kingsley said, adding that the total for which he has budgeted in the present financial year is £4,900,000,000.

SEVEN CANADIAN SOLDIERS KILLED IN SNEAK RAID

Hotel Where They Were Quarfered Hit Squarely by Nazi Bomb

OTHERS TRAPPED

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A South Coast British Town, May 25— (CP Cable) —Seven Canadian servicemen, possibly one or two more, were killed and a number of others injured when a hotel was hit by a bomb recently in this town.

The casualties among persons in uniform were considered extremely light in view of the number in the seaside town at the time. They were heavy among the civilian population who treated the alert as "just another warning."

There were a number of Canadians among guests of the hotel struck by the bomb dropped by one of the sneak raiders. The missile wrecked one hotel wing, trapping some Canadians, mostly women, who were rescued. Few were not injured.

Besides the hotel where the Canadians were staying, another was demolished. A department store was gutted by fire, a church steeple crashed to earth, a cinema and a memorial hall received direct hits. Scores of other properties were damaged.

The quick, sharp attack gave the town the after-raid appearance so familiar in Britain. Roped-off streets were littered with small heaps of glass from shattered windows. Firemen played hoses on smouldering ruins. Traffic was rerouted and people crowded the streets in the bombed areas like sight seers. Neighbors exchanged bomb stories.

Workers Form Human Chain

In the roped-off district not far away a time bomb went off while I was writing this story.

Servicemen and civilians working side by side with civil defence personnel and fire fighters cleared away rubble to reach persons trapped in the hotel. They formed a human chain across road in front of the wrecked building, passing debris from hand to hand, and soon the road was piled high with heaps of, bricks, mortar, woodwork and broken furniture.

Meanwhile parties of men clambered over the wreckage and up to bedrooms, may of which were cut in half and in some of which persons had been caught. Disregarding risk, rescue parties were thus able to extricate a number of guests who were lowered to waiting ambulances.

No Panic Seen

In some cases the persons removed were dead. From the ground all that could be seen of one man buried three stories up was his black hair. He was dead when workers reached him. Both legs and one arm were gone.

Wing Cmdr. G. E. M. Scott, former Quebec resident whose home now is in Toronto, said it was amazing that casualties were so slight and added there was no lack of volunteers to aid in rescue work.

"Everybody pitched in," he said, "our Canadian fellows were very good. We got high compliments about them."

Flt. Lt. N. Black of Toronto said there was no panic, no excitement, when the bomb hit the hotel.

"Everybody seemed to take it in stride," he said.

BOMBERS RESUME OFFENSIVE AFTER DORTMUND RAID

Head Out to Hit French Coast Between Dieppe and Boulogne

CONVOY ATTACKED

London, May 25—(CP)—A strong force of Allied aircraft headed eastward across the channel this morning to resume by daylight the Allied offensive which reached its peak Sunday night in a record-breaking R. A. F. assault on Dortmund.

The course followed by the daylight raiders indicated they would hit the French coast somewhere between Dieppe and Boulogne.

R. A. F. fighters were over Northern France on small-scale intruder patrols, during the night, but the heavy bombers were given a rest after their 2,000-ton attack on Dortmund.

(Berlin claimed today in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press that Nazi guns brought down seven multi-engined British bombers and damaged another during an R. A. F. attack yesterday on a German convoy off the Netherlands coast.)

No enemy activity was reported over Britain during the night but it was authoritatively learned that R. A. F. fighters shot down an enemy plane during an attack on a town in the south of England this afternoon.

About 25 Germans planes struck at the town in the raid which flattened workers' homes and buried an undetermined number in the ruins. It was one of the biggest daylight forces the Nazis had used in some time.

The Netherlands coast convoy attack yesterday was carried out in daylight by torpedo-carrying R. A. F. Beaufighters which struck at six German merchantmen and 12 escort vessels.

The Air Ministry News Service said it was believed one merchant ship was sunk and several escorts were damaged. Poor visibility prevented accurate observation of the results. One Beaufighter did not return.

In another action off the Isle of Wight yesterday Albacore fighter-bombers of the fleet air arm sank at least three German motor torpedo boats. The five others in the flotilla of eight craft were damaged, some of them possibly sunk.

The great raid Sunday night on Dortmund brought the total weight of bombs dropped on Germany by the bomber command since the start of the war to 100,000 tons, Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, command of the bomber command, disclosed. Dortmund was laid waste by 2,000 tons of bombs in the concentrated hour of attack, the heaviest assault ever made on a city.

The number of planes engaged in the raid, spewing out bombs at the rate of 33 tons a minute, was not disclosed but the meticulous Air Ministry described it as of "very great strength"—a rare superlative. Thirty-eight bombers did not return, four of them from the Canadian bomber group which played a large part in the attack.

It was possible the number of planes was smaller than the 1,000-bomber forces used against Cologne and other cities a year ago. The carrying capacity of bombers has been increased steadily.

HEAVY BOMBERS TEAM UP ON RAID OF JAPANESE BASE

FIRES SEEN 100 MILES

Towering fires were kindled among parked aircraft by the 16 tons or more of explosives and incendiaries dropped by successive flights of heavy bombers. Returning pilots said the glare of the flames still could be seen 30 minutes later when they were 100 miles away.

Heavy bombers struck shortly after midnight. The first flight remained over the target area 45 minutes. Twenty minutes after they departed, a second flight reached the target area and bombed it for 30 minutes.

Three airdromes-Vunakanau, Lakunal and Rapopo—and the Sulphur Creek seaplane base all were hit. The communique mentioned no Allied losses in the Rabaul raid.

Gasmata, the other principal Japanese base on New Britain, was bombed for the 13th day in a row. Medium bombers dropped bombs in the dispersal areas but results were not reported.

Far to the west another formation attacked Penefoei airdrome at Koepang, Timor. Fires started in the dispersal areas were visible 30 miles away.

Medium bombers made a dawn attack on Lae, New Guinea, causing large explosions and fires. A gunner on one of the planes was killed and another crew member was injured by an anti-aircraft shell which exploded in the ship.

Two four-engine aircraft bombed Finschhafen and two nearby villages in a daylight attack and a single Catalina followed up with a night raid on the same objectives.

BRITAIN'S SIXTH SENSE

Lisbon (CP) — "In her four centuries as a world power, Britain has developed and perfected a sixth sense of international policy," says the Portuguese paper "Novidades." It said the "sixth sense" enabled Britain to "foresee instinctively and intuitively the evolution of events."

Bombing Raids Forcing Residents Of Ruhr, Sardinia to Leave Homes

(By E. C. DANIEL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, May 25 (AP) — The deterioration of Axis air power and civilian defences under the pressure of Allied air might, combined with high expectations for the outcome of the Churchill-Roosevelt conferences in Washington to brighten the Summer war picture today for the United Nations.

The unremitting air raids on Sardinia, which the North African air forces again pursued yesterday, was reported by the Rome radio to have caused "city districts proper" of the island's capital of Cagliari to be abandoned.

From many towns in Italy's toe and the Mediterranean islands refugees were reported streaming north to escape Allied bombardment, a dispatch from Zurich to Reuters News Agency said. Rome is receiving thousands, it added.

Although the German radio reported yesterday that Nazi troops had been sent to reinforce the defences of Sardinia, Allied pilots said that Axis air squadrons had vanished from the Italian outpost islands Sunday.

All Suffer Losses

In Germany, the Nazi party newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, declared that there was not one person in the heavily-raided Ruhr cities who had not suffered personal property or family loss as the result of air attacks.

Air observers in London, assessing the results of the heaviest air raid of all time on Dortmund Sunday night, suggested the R.A.F. strategy was designed to pile up cumulative ill effects of the bombing on the strategic Ruhr area.

One mid-afternoon report from the Morocco radio said fires were still raging in Dortmund, and were out of control due to a shortage of water caused by last week's dam burstings.

Observers speculated that thousands of the Ruhr's civilian defenders were engaged in flood relief work when the bombers struck again. Some pilots reported seeing wet patches in Dortmund.

Bombs Fell Before Alert Sounded

London papers reported from the continent that the first bombs fell on Dortmund before an alert was sounded. Some air correspondents in London said that the raiders employed deceptive tactics of dispersing widely, and then re-forming to pounce on Dortmund, thus they caught the defenders unaware.

This raid was regarded in London as a direct response to Prime Minister Churchill's suggestion of an experiment to bomb the Axis out of the war. The Dortmund raid thus may be expected to be a forerunner of many more of equal destructiveness.

The BBC, in a broadcast recorded in New York by CBS, said today that Crown Prince Umberto of Italy, in a special order of the day has warned Italians they are short of arms and called on his troops to throw into the struggle all their "spiritual and physical strength."

Umberto said "Italy hadn't been able to make as many arms as other countries because she hadn't got enough raw materials," the broadcast continued.

BBC added that "the Italian official gazette publishes a decree placing all war workers in Sicily and Sardinia under military discipline. Premier Mussolin himself called a meeting of Fascist party chiefs of the Rome district last night and gave them new orders."

Send 300 Planes To Attack Nine Defence Targets

Stepping Stone To Italy Under Almost Continuous Raids For Past Week

13 PLANES DOWNED

By DANIEL DeLUCE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 25 — (AP) — The Allies bludgeoned the Italian island of Sardinia with their big stick—their air power — yesterday, sending more than 300 planes to attack nine important defence targets on that stepping stone to Italy.

Bomb-pitted Pantelleria, the fortified island 45 miles off Cap Bon which was under almost continuous attack much of Sunday and Sunday night was raided again Monday by fighter-bombers in the steady air offensive against the Axis' southern front.

Twelve enemy aircraft were destroyed in combat during these operations of the last 24 hours, and an unestimated number of others were wrecked on the ground.

This brought the number of destroyed Axis aircraft in the last six days to at least 329 as a result of operations by the Northwest African, Cairo and Malta Air Forces.

Supply Lines Hit

Waves of American bombers and fighters roared over Sardinia where German troops were announced yesterday by Berlin to have landed. The planes dealt their heaviest blows to this vital Axis base west of the Italian mainland.

Docks, shipping and airfields suffered heavily. One supply ship exploded, four small vessels were sunk and seven others damaged by the cascade of bomb hits.

The present Allied air offensive, unlike the German air force's attempts to neutralize the British fortress island of Malta last year when Marshal Erwin Rommel was pressing toward the Nile, maintained its full striking power with negligible cost, taking full advantage of the heavy bombers ability to carry out high-level precision bombing while defending themselves.

12 Jap Bombers Bagged in Raid On Attu Island

Washington, May 25 (AP)—The Navy Department reported today that seven out of 16 Japanese twin engine bombers which had ventured into the Attu battle area Sunday were "probably destroyed," in addition to five originally reported as "definitely destroyed."

Amplifying yesterday's report on the air fight which occurred over the western Aleutian Island when six United States army fighters intercepted the bomber formation, a navy communique said the remaining four enemy bombers which were apparently unharmed fled to the west without doing any damage to American ships or positions.

Prior to issuance of the communique, which covered only operations on Attu through Sunday, Navy Secretary Frank Knox reported that the battle on the island was continuing with the Japanese "corralled" on the peninsula which juts out along the island's northeastern rim.

Germany Reported Strengthening Coastal Defences in Norway

Stockholm, May 25—(AP)—Germany, alive to the possibility of an Allied invasion through Norway, is hurriedly strengthening coastal fortifications there, reports from usually reliable Norwegian sources said today.

Two hundred thousand German troops are guarding this possible gateway to Europe, including many marine units responsible for vital coast defences, these reports said.

CYCLIST ESCAPES INJURY WHEN HE COLLIDES WITH CAR

When the bicycle he was riding along East Bridge Street at noon on Friday collided with a parked automobile, Douglas Evans, 188 Foster Ave., escaped serious injury when hurled to the pavement. The front part of the bicycle was completely wrecked, young Evans later informed police when he reported the accident. It was raining and the pavement quite slippery at the time.

STEPS INTO PATH OF MOVING CAR

When he stepped out from between two parked motor cars on Front St. Saturday afternoon, James Orr, 29 Everett St., walked directly into the right fender of a motor car and was knocked to the pavement where he sustained ligament injuries to his left knee. The motor car was driven by C. R. Lucas, 10 Patterson St., and eye witnesses assured investigating police that Mr. Lucas was proceeding at an exceptionally slow speed which accounted for the fact Mr. Orr was not more seriously injured.

BITES BY DOG ONLY SUPERFICIAL

Two sisters were bitten on the hands and ankles by a dog on Bleecker Ave. over the holiday weekend. The girls, Hazel and Mary Alexander, 15 and 16 years respectively and residing at 272 Bleecker Ave., were in the act of mailing a letter when set upon by the dog. The girls were treated by Dr. J. J. Robertson when it was discovered that severe ankle and wrist lacerations had resulted when the children were bitten. Later police were notified and the owner of the dog was cautioned to keep the animal secured in the future. Dr. Robertson stated today the lacerations were superficial and no serious results would follow.

HOTELMEN SEND SMOKES OVERSEAS

Using the facilities of the Kinsmen "Fag Fund," the Belleville and District Hotelmen's Association sent 10,500 cigarettes to Belleville boys serving overseas last week. The aggregate number of "smokes", at the usual 300 per person, means that 35 Belleville boys were sent additional cigarettes by this means.

WINDOWS BROKEN BY AIR RIFLE PELLETS

The discharging of air rifles in the Coleman St. area was investigated by police over the weekend after residents at 212½ Coleman St. complained that two windows in the home had been broken. Police later apprehended two teen-aged lads, who resided nearby, and cautioned them regarding the firing of air rifles within the city limits. The windows panes will be replaced, police announced today.

THREE BIKES STOLEN BUT TWO RECOVERED

City police are in possession of two girls' bicycles, that were recovered when abandoned over the weekend. Shirley Adams, 98 Catharine St., reported her bicycle stolen over the weekend and later it was recovered by police. At the same time another girls' bike was found secluded along the Moira River esplanade north of the Bridge St. entrance. Both bikes were taken to the police station for safe keeping and await identification.

A third bicycle, belonging to William Graham, 85 Great St. James St., was also reported stolen from a parking position at the south end of the main street. This bike had not been recovered at noon today, however.

NO POLICE COURT

There was no session of post holiday city police court held in Belleville today as activities in and around local police circles were quiet over the Victoria Day holiday weekend.

Obituary

MRS. LILLIAN NOBLE
(Picton)

Picton, May 25 — The death occurred at her home, Prospect Ave., on Saturday, May 22nd, of Lillian Bailey Noble, widow of the late John Noble, in her 80th year. The deceased Mrs. Noble had been in failing health for some weeks. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Gay Wilson of Sault Ste. Marie, and Miss Daisy Noble at home.

The funeral service was held in St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. B. Creeggan, with interment in Glenwood Cemetery.

MRS. FRANK H. TULK

Mrs. Frank H. Tulk died at her home, 46 North Park Street (Thurlow Township), on Sunday, May 23rd., after a lengthy illness.

The late Mrs. Tulk, who was in her 54th year, was born in England and prior to her marriage she was Miss Florence Gertrude Davis, daughter of Mr. Harry Davis, Point Anne, and the late Mrs. Davis. For the past six months she lived on North Park Street, and prior to that time she resided at Shannonville and Point Anne. In the communities where she lived she was highly esteemed. She was a member of the Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute and in religion she was a member of the Tabernacle United Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Frank H. Tulk; her father, Mr. Harry Davis, Point Anne; four daughters, Mrs. William Williams, Mrs. Arthur Genereaux, Miss May Tulk and Miss Jessie Tulk, all at home; one son Sergt. George Tulk, R.C.A.F., Toronto; and one granddaughter, Constance Marie Genereaux.

LATE ALBERT H. BRUEIN

The funeral of Albert H. Bruein, late residence, 30 Everett Street, took place from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, 38 Everett Street, on Monday afternoon, May 24th. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church, assisted by the Rev. E. Farnsworth.

Interment took place in Belleville cemetery and the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Semple.

The bearers were Messrs. Adam H. Palmer, Frank Lent, D. W. Adams, J. Bell, Samuel McGuire and R. H. Ketcheson.

JOHN KETCHESON
(Rawdon Township)

After an illness of two years' duration, John Ketcheson died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Hiram C. Ashley, First Concession of Rawdon Township, on Monday, May 24th.

Born at Latta, the late Mr. Ketcheson was in his 77th. year and was a son of the late Mr and Mrs. William Ketcheson. For some years he lived at Roslin and for the past five years he made his home in Rawdon Township. In religion he was a member of the United Church and was well esteemed.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. Hiram C. Ashley, Rawdon Township; one son, Mr. Roy Ketcheson, Niagara Falls, Ontario, and one sister, Mrs. Fred Blakley, Eldorado.

DAVID SUTHERLAND
Formerly of Ameliasburg Township

David Sutherland, formerly of the 1st. concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County, died in Vancouver, B.C., on Monday, May 24th. He left this district about six months ago to reside in Vancouver. Friends here will regret to learn of his death.

Besides his wife, who was with him in Vancouver, he is survived by one brother, Mr. George Sutherland of Sidney Township.

The body will be brought here for interment and more particulars will be given later.

Body of Dr. Welsh Found on Monday

Culminating an intensive four-day search which had extended for many miles downstream, the body of Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.P.P., of Roslin who was drowned in Opeongo River, Algonquin Park, last Thursday morning, was discovered by searchers Monday morning.

The body was discovered 20 yards below the dam over which Dr. Welsh and Sam Goodwin of Maynooth had been swept in their small boat while on a fishing expedition. Mr. Goodwin managed to retain hold of the boat and floated ashore, while Dr. Welsh disappeared below the turbulent current and was drowned.

Fearing that the body may have swept many miles down the river in the rushing current, searchers had made a close inspection of the banks of the river as far as McDougall's Lake without avail. It was then decided to stake the river off into sections and placing nets across the current, flush the river in an effort to dislodge the body from any possible resting place.

In a last-minute attempt at grappling, however, authorities hooked onto the windbreaker worn by Dr. Welsh and raised the body to the surface. The body was found approximately 20 yards below the dam and in fifteen feet of water.

The body was brought to Belleville Monday afternoon with a preliminary inquest being conducted by Dr. R. W. Tennent. Identification was made by Dr. J. Russel Scott following which the body was released for burial which will take place on Wednesday at 2.30 at Thomasburg United Church.

Annual Meeting Of Club Held

The Annual meeting of the University Women's Club was held at the home of Mrs. W. L. Langlois, Foster Avenue on May 20. The President, Miss Sweeney called upon the executive for reports of the past season.

Mrs. May reviewed the monthly programs, the highlights of which were the discussion of the need for a creche in Belleville, and a group of papers and discussions on present day problems and government in India. The Treasurer, Mrs. R. D. Davidson, in her report announced a balance on hand. The conveners of the Drama, Modern Literature, and French Conversation groups reviewed their activities for the year.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows:

Past President—Miss A Sweeney
President—Mrs. G. Taylor
Vice President and Program Convener—Mrs. R. D. Davidson
Secretary—Mrs. L. R. Finlayson
Treasurer—Miss S. Pallett
Federation Representative— Miss R. Thompson
Membership Convener—Mrs. A. E. May

Evening Aux., United Church Holds Meeting

Frankford — The Evening Auxiliary of the Frankford United Church met on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. J. A. Warren. The president, Mrs. J. Finnigan, was in charge of the opening exercises and the business discussion. The program was presented by Mrs. Warren, who with the assistance of Mrs. Floyd Ketcheson, conducted the worship service. A playlet entitled "Asleep or Awake to our New Home Mission Task" was put on by Mrs. F. Ketcheson, Mrs. Harry Montgomery, Mrs. A. Stickle, Mrs. L. Coutts, Miss Hazel Mikel and Mrs. C. Bennett. A story of the "Search for Mr. Dix" was very well told by Mrs. Finnigan. Readings were given by Mrs. Roy Osterhout and Mrs. Harry Slingerland. Several rounds of songs were enjoyed and two contests were put on after which the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. F. Ketcheson and Mrs. J. A. Warren.

Mr. Exli Harrington of Hilton spent Sunday with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Frost.

In the recent list of graduate nurses from St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, appeared the name of Miss Edna Johnson of Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Frost are spending this week visiting their daughter, Mrs. C. A. Jaques and family in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Loney and Bruce of Peterboro spent the weekend visiting relatives in town.

Sea Cadet Corps To Have Use Of Sailing Yacht for Training

Ald. Jack Allin Donates His "SkipJack" to Local Corps

GREATLY APPRECIATED

Like the fledgling bird which takes to the air when his wings are developed sufficiently to fly, the Belleville corps of the Sea Cadets will "go to sea" this summer through the kind generosity of Alderman Jack Allin, it has been announced by Arthur Wealey, Sea Cadet commanding officer.

Realizing that the local Sea Cadet Corps would require some kind of a boat upon which to train if the complete cadet curriculum were to be followed, Mr. Allin last week offered "for the duration" the use of his fine sailing yacht, the "Skipjack" seen each summer cleaving the waters of the Bay of Quinte. The offer was made official last Friday when papers between the two parties were signed.

"The boat will certainly afford the members of the Sea Cadet Corps a great deal of training they would not otherwise have had," stated Commanding Officer Wesley. "The officers and members of the corps really appreciate Mr. Allin's gesture.

Although members of the local unit are "tickled pink" at being given the opportunity of using such a fine boat for training purposes, the "Skipjack" has served in this capacity before. A former Sea Cadet Corps in this city sponsored by Mr. George Wesley through the Kiwanis Club used the same boat for training, it was revealed. This corps disbanded some eight years ago.

Training on the "Skipjack" will commence in about one week's time, according to the Sea Cadet commanding officer. First, however, the boat will receive a thorough sanding and a complete paint job. The boat is now on the slips.

Thirty-two feet long and with a beam of eleven feet, the "Skipjack" is a one-master with an auxiliary gasoline motor which will be used only "when absolutely necessary," according to Mr. Wesley. The corps members will refit and repaint the boat in readiness for its christening some time next week.

NAVY LEAGUE TAG DAY TOTALS $596.62

Appreciation to all who participated in Saturday's tag day sponsored by the Navy League of Canada was expressed today by officials of the Belleville Branch who revealed that district residents had contributed approximately $600 toward the work of the League. Total money raised was $596.62.

The Belleville corps of the Sea Cadets drew added attention to the tag day with a smart parade of personnel through local streets early Saturday evening. The cadet corps, headed by their bugle band, formed at the collegiate campus and after marching north to Station Street proceeded down Front Street to Dundas, the parade being witnessed by a large number of early evening shoppers.

Mrs. Ingram, under whose direction the tag day was held, added personal expressions of appreciation to those of the League to the many who assisted in making the day a success. Especial thanks was extended to the taggers, to those who donated cars and to the members of the local Oddfellows' lodge who offered the use of their club rooms for taggers.

Grand Lodge of B. A. Loyal Orange Young Briton Assoc. Holds Annual Session in City

The 62nd Annual Session of the M. W. Grand Lodge of British America, Loyal Orange Young Briton Association was held in the Orange Hall, Belleville, May 22nd. M. W. Bro. Henry Tomkins, Grand Master, of Manotick, Ontario, presided and welcomed a splendid attendance of delegates which included nine Past Grand Masters. The delegates were welcomed on behalf of the local L.O.L. by Bro. Fowler, D.M., Wor. Bro. Reid, Co. Treasurer and Wor. Bro. Nickle who all in very cordial words wished the Grand Lodge a most pleasant stay in this fair city. M. W. Bro. Stanley C. Hudson, P.G.M., replied to the visiting brethren and thanked them for making it possible for the Young Britons to meet in Belleville.

The Grand Master in his address pointed out that over fifty per cent of association's membership was now wearing His Majesty's uniform and although the attendance, at lodge meetings was therefore lessened, the primary lodges were carrying on as usual.

M. W. Bro. J. A. Dickson, of Dundas, Ontario, Grand Secretary, in his report showed that even with so many young men now enlisted that several new lodges have been formed, a County Lodge was organized in Newfoundland, several dormant lodges had been resuscitated and that an increase in membership was shown by the annual returns.

Rt. Wor. Bro. Cecil Willis, Toronto, Grand Treasurer, reported the finances in good shape with the receipts ahead of the expenses.

Appointing of committees and submitting reports of same were despatched in good order and business was conducted with expediency that caused no delay, as this being a wartime session, one day only had been set aside of the sessions. This also caused the elimination of the usual banquet and dance which have been the custom of the past.

Internal business was discussed and dealth with and no changes in the present constitution were made.

Election of Officers

The election of officers was conducted by W. M. Bro. S. C. Hudson, Ottawa, Past Grand Master, assisted by M. W. Brothers, A. E. Mitchell, Toronto, Geo. S. Sloan, Ottawa, and Wm. Chambers, Manotick, all Past Grand Masters. The following were elected. Grand Master, Bert Harper, Orillia; Deputy Grand Master, E. A. Warfe, Toronto; Jr. Dep. Grand Master, Everitt Gardner, Brockville; Grand Chaplain, J. E. Stinson, Manotick. James A. Dickson, Dundas, was re-elected as Grand Secretary and Cecil Willis, Toronto, as Grand Treasurer. Grand Director of Ceremonies, G. H. Whittingstall, Toronto Grand Orator, Frank Griffiths, Toronto; Deputy Grand Chaplain, J. Birtch, Billings Bridge; Dep. Grand Secretary, F. Preston Hackett, Ottawa; Dep. Grand Treasurer John Edwards, Smiths Falls. W. Smith, Ottawa, and W. Sunstrum, Osgoode Station, were elected as Deputy Grand Orators and R. Risk and A. Nelson of Dundas were elected Grand Auditors. M. W. Bro. Wesley Montgomery, North Gower, Past Grand Master, installed the new officers.

It was decided to again meet in the city of Belleville on Saturday, May 20th., 1944.

Before closing the best thanks of the Grand Lodge were expressed to the local Orange Lodge and the committee which had made possible the meetings and hotel accommodation.

Police Recover Nearly All of $700 Stolen by Youth

Police recovered practically all of $700.00 reported stolen from the farmhouse of Robert Wilsey, 4th. Concession of Thurlow, last week. A 'teen-aged farmhand, who was on parole from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School, was taken into custody at the Belleville C.N.R. station on Monday as he was about to board a west-bound train for Toronto.

Considerable cash, and three new watches, police said, were found on the person of the lad, who had remained quietly in Belleville from Friday evening until he was about to leave the city Monday. The watches were returned and today Constables Wright of the city force, and Kellogg of the Provincial Police, stated today they had recovered over $673.00 of the reported missing $700.00.

Mr. Milsey's home had been ransacked during his absence last Friday and a steel tool box, containing his earnings, broken open and the money stolen.

Owing to the fact the boy is under fourteen years of age, his name was withheld by police. He was employed as a farm hand by a neighbour of Mr. Wilsey's.

24th Observed In Quiet Manner

The conventional Victoria Day "bang" was somewhat of a missing feature in 1943 when celebration with fireworks and crackers was at a minimum in Belleville. The war had caught up with the explosion of crackers, as the small boy's traditional celebration was noticeably curtailed. Gunpowder and such explosives must be saved for the more important factor of winning a war.

As is the case with other commodities, fireworks of all nature were rationed and only a small percentage of usual noise-making firecrackers and fireworks displays was available to the public. On private lawns a few rockets and the spectacular pin wheels and Roman candles were seen displayed, but generally speaking there was a marked decrease in the usual Victoria Day display of fireworks in Belleville.

With practically all industries closed for the day, the chief occupation was that of attending to the "victory garden" or catching up with the family paint-up and clean-up program around the home. There was a small exodus of the younger generation, who took advantage of the summer-like weather and mounting bicycles, peddled to the nearby woods and streams to enjoy the season's first picnic and tranquility of the "great open spaces." As business houses along Front St. observed the holiday that ushers in the summer season, the main street took on a quiet atmosphere, except for pedestrians who wended their various ways to city parks to relax. Theatres reported a strong uptrend in business all over the holiday weekend, including their Sunday midnight performances.

IN MEMORIAM

HOLLINGER — In loving memory of Mrs. George Hollinger, who passed away May 25, 1938.

Sleep on, dear, good mother, it has been long years
Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears;
Yours was a heart that was blithesome and gay,
Scattering sunshine all along the way;
You know how we loved you, and yes, love you yet,
Though God took you from us we cannot forget.

You Don't Know Beans--

They're a Great War Time Food, But Beans Are Frequently Considered Lowly — Amazing Number of Ways in Which They Can Be Prepared — Saturday Night Dish

(By John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor)

A book supplied to army cooks informs them that "leftover beans are palatable when reheated." That's right—the more you reheat them, the better they get. With all the propaganda lately about fresh baked beans, roast beef, milk-fed chicken, olives and celery, and even concentrated food tablets, it may be a surprise to many that soldiers still eat beans.

Out here in the country, however, we know that the rise and fall in the demand for dry beans, varies with the times of peace and war. A neighbor of ours once demonstrated that with profit. He was a young man during the 1861-1865 disturbance, and he observed that he got a good price for beans during that time, and then the demand dropped off. This impressed him, and in the ensuing years he raised a family and beans with vigor and enthusiasm. As his children grew up, he set them to work, so raised more beans, and became noted far and wide as The Bean Man. He did not, however, dispose of them on a deflated market. He waited for another war and stored them meanwhile in his barn.

When he was elderly, and well surrounded with family and beans, he read that the battleship Maine had been removed from active participation, and he stepped into the breach by going to Lewiston. He called upon a buyer of produce and made the customary conversational openings. They discussed the weather, the news from Cuba, and eventually got to beans. "What you payin' for beans?" he blurted out.

The buyer made an offer, the best figure since Grant took Richmond. "How many'll you take at that price?" The buyer, now off guard by the length of the preamble said ,"All you're got—bring 'em in."

The next morning the buyer came down to open his shop, and found The Bean Man sitting on the curb by the heads of a yoke of Durhams. The oxcart was piled to the sky with bags of beans. The buyer expostulated that he hadn't expected that many beans, whereat The Bean Man pointed down Lisbon Street at the approaching spectacle of five stalwart sons, each teaming his own yoke of steers and each cart laden with suspicious-looking bags.

The clean-up was terrific. Knowing how hard and how dry those beans had become with the passage of time, folks around here sincerely pitied the poor soldiers who marched away to battle Spain.

Beans are frequently considered lowly. Housewives sometimes apologize because they have nothing better for the unexpected visitor. Our Bean Man, they say, with appropriate frugality, caused his wife to feed beans three times a day. To circumvent rebellion among his satiated descendants, the old man would lift the cover from the tureen, sniff expectantly, and cry with exquisitely simulated joy ,"Ah-h-h, beans!" Sometimes his wife would say, "I'm sorry not to have something better than beans," whereupon he would say, "Not at all, ma'am, not at all—plenty good enough for me, and good enough for me, good enough for anybody—pass up your plates, folks."

We down-easters have been known in maritime circles for generations as bean-eaters. We do eat beans because they are cheap, and it is fortunate they happen to have nourishing qualities. We also eat beans because they taste good, and they taste good because our men prefer women who know how to bake them. But do not suppose the bean is baked by one standard and immutable recipe. As Kipling observed:

> There are nine-and-sixty ways of constructing tribal lays,
> And every-single-one-of-them is right.

Tell me the number of women in Maine, and I'll tell you as many ways to bake beans. Some use molasses, some use brown sugar, some use white. Some put in an onion, some like mustard. The kind of bean is likewise variable. The pea bean is not Maine standard, but it has its faithful. Yaller-eyes, Soldiers, and Jacob's Cattle beans fare well, especially if red kidneys are used once a month for a diversion. At Grange suppers I have seen two dozen pots of beans, no two alike. Probably the nearest thing to a universal, in Maine, is the Saturday-night rule. Vermonters eat beans any old time.

But great-grandmother's recipe, hand-written in the old book, began, "Friday night pick over two cups beans . . ." It was never Thursday, or Tuesday, Friday night the beans were put to soak on the back of the stove, and Saturday morning she moved them up front during breakfast to parboil. Then they went into the pot—a mellowed earthenware antique with the juice of years cooked into it.

The recipe, continuing over to Saturday moring about 10 o'clock advises: "Put a good-sized onion on bottom of pot. Put in beans. Add ½ cup molasses, tblsp. mustard, 2 tsp. salt, piece lean pork, cover with boiling water." Then Greatgrandmother (and her daughter and her daughter's daughter) commended herself to a day's work of stoking the stove with beech wood, and keeping the water over the top of the beans. She had one little trick—about two o'clock in the afternoon she would let the beans boil a little dry, and then when she added more water the pot would be impregnated with a delicate essence not otherwise obtainable. Too, this boiling-dry business would brown the beans nicely.

I should explain that the terrific heat needed for beans was not wasted on beans alone. She baked bread, and made pies, and did her regular Saturday cooking besides—doughnuts and cookies and cakes and, of course, brown bread to go with the beans.

When she went to the door with the supper horn, Great-grandmother blew with vigorous certainty; she was positive of faithful response. Her bean pot is an heirloom we cherish, carefully cleansing it with soda water between bakings, and we would evacuate it tenderly in an invasion.

As our army cooks now know, the beans are better when reheated for breakfast Sunday in a spider. And if any are left, they taste even better along about Tuesday or Wednesday. And if any are still left, they make tasty sandwiches for wood-cutting or fence-fixing. That done, we have only to wait for Saturday again.

Vaccinate Now To Prevent Blackleg

Now that the time has arrived when cattle are being turned out to pasture, Dr. M. Barker, Acting Veterinary Director General of Canada, calls attention to the need for prevention of blackleg, a serious disease, which is essentially a malady of young cattle between the ages of four months and two years. Immunity may be brought about by inoculation with vaccine or aggressin, but it is important that the cattle should be vaccinated two weeks before turning out to pasture, because resistance is lowered for a short time immediately following vaccination. Human beings, horses, dogs, cats, and poultry appear to be immune from the disease.

The cause of infection is the micro-organism "Blackleg Bacillus" which is present in the soil and may be on the feed, while the mode of infection is through wounds or cuts in the skin or mouth. Symptoms appear in about three days after infection and death usually follows in from 24 to 48 hours.

The disease, states Dr. Barker, is characterized by local swelling and lameness. The swellings contain gas and crackle in pressure. The infected animals have high temperatures, laboured breathing and extreme weakness. The mortality is very high, and treatment is seldom satisfactory. Any animal dying from blackleg should be buried as soon as possible without being skinned or any of the swellings opened. All contact material should be burned or buried with the carcass and covered with lime. This is necessary to prevent release of organisms which would infect the premises and spread the infection.

MALE SOLDIER SEWS

Boise, Idaho, May 22 (AP) —The WAAC may have been organized to free man for active military service, but a Gowen Field corporal has his doubts. When Dorothy Hillman wanted a chevron sewed on her uniform she asked a male soldier to perform the task.

Dogs Present WAACS With Filled Purses

Kansas City, May 22 (AP) — A couple of dogs popped up before two WAACS yesterday, Corporals Mary Bowling of Marion, Alta., and Genevieven Rodreques of Honolulu. Each dog had a purse in his mouth. The purses contained a total of $421.98. Only the canines knew where the money came from. Police said if the owner wasn't found the WAACS could keep the money. The dogs? They disappeared—probably went back for more capital.

Bonded Liquor Sufficient For Nearly Six Years

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 22 (CP).—Sufficient beverage liquor is stored in bond in Canada to supply the domestic market at the present rate of consumption for 5½ and possibly six years and consequently there is no danger of a shortage, The Canadian Press was informed today.

Canadian distilleries since Nov. 1 last have been concentrating entirely on the production of industrial alcohol and are building up so great a surplus that obtaining sufficient air-tight tanks to contain it has become a problem.

Munitions Minister Howe told The Canadian Press that so far sufficient tanks had been available but he reclined to prophesy how long that situation would continue. The storage space was getting short.

"The plant being built to produce rubber, which will require great quantities of alcohol, has not come along as fast as we had expected," the minister said. "That is why we are having difficulty getting enough containers for the surplus alcohol."

The plant is being set up at Sarnia, Ont.

Difficulty in Storing

The United States also is having difficulty storing all the alcohol which the distillers there are producing for industrial purposes. Recent dispatches from Washington said there was a revival of talk to allow distilleries in that country, which formerly produced potable liquors, again to use part of their output for that purpose and build up their stocks in bond.

Discussing these reports Mr. Howe said the situation was somewhat different in this country. "They are getting short of liquor in the United States while we have ample here," he said. "However we are watching what the United States does and might follow its example. But we will not move until they do."

From other sources it was learned that the distilleries would be greatly pleased if they were permitted to put part of their production into the aging vats for beverage liquor and thus keep up their stocks. These sources however, did not expect there would be any change decided on until there was definite information as to how much alcohol the Sarnia Rubber Plant would require once it got in operation, possibly in the late summer.

There are many other uses for industrial alcohol including production of explosives and until the gross requirements are accurately known the government is not expected to consider any change in the present policy of keeping the entire output in industrial alcohol.

A Munitions Department spokesman said the hard winter and scarcity of labor both had made it difficult to keep the construction of the Sarnia plant up to schedule.

Taken as a whole, the breweries have sufficient supplies of beer, a Revenue official said. Some are short but some have substantial surpluses.

Farm Cash Income Reached in 1942

The estimated cash income from the sale of farm products in Canada in 1942 at $1,083 millions was the highest, on record states the Current Review of Agricultural Conditions in Canada. The figure was more than double the total for 1935 and $184 million higher than in 1941. Sales of meat animals and live-stock products in larger volume and at higher prices was the greatest contributing factor to the increased income which was larger in all provinces than in 1941. Sales of dairy products totalling $224 million was the largest single source of income to farmers, with hogs ranking next at $191 million. The estimate of farm income does not include all Government payments to farmers, which would further increase the total.

CIRCUIT COURT POSTPONED AS FARMERS SO BUSY

St. Matthews, S. C., May 22—(AP)—A term of circuit court here was postponed until December, due to the farm labor shortage. Solicitor Julian S. Wolfe said the farmers were too rushed with work for jury duty, and added: "Many of my prisoners are out on bond, too, working on farms where they are really needed."

After midnight May 26th, it is unlawful for a consumer to buy rationed meats and for anyone to sell rationed meats to a consumer except on surrender of valid ration coupons.

WHAT MEATS ARE RATIONED?

Beef, Veal, Pork, Mutton and Lamb.

WHAT MEATS ARE NOT RATIONED?

Poultry and Fish are not rationed. "Fancy" meats such as Heart, Tongue, Liver, Kidneys, Brains, Sweetbreads, and cooked sausages such as Weiners and Bologna are not rationed. Meat cuts containing 50% or more of bone such as spare-ribs, oxtails, and pigs' feet are not rationed.

HOW MUCH RATIONED MEAT AM I PERMITTED TO BUY?

An average of two pounds per person per week. You get less of meats containing no bone and more of meats containing considerable bone. See the chart of coupon values below.

WHAT COUPONS DO I USE WHEN BUYING MEAT?

The brown Spare "A" coupons from your No. 2 ration book—the book you are now using to buy tea, coffee, sugar, and butter.

HOW OFTEN CAN I BUY MEAT?

Two coupons become good each Thursday. The first pair of No. 1 coupons become good May 27th. Each coupon is good for ½ of one week's ration.

HOW LONG DO COUPONS REMAIN GOOD?

Coupons becoming good before the 15th of a month are good until the end of that month. Coupons becoming good on or after the 15th of a month are good until the end of the following month.

DO I HAVE TO USE THE TWO COUPONS AT THE SAME TIME OR IN THE SAME STORE?

No. You can use a coupon at any time during the period in which it is valid, and in any store you wish.

CAN I BUY ONLY ONE KIND OF RATIONED MEAT WITH A COUPON?

No. You can buy whatever rationed meat is available and as many kinds as you want providing the coupon value is not exceeded.

The Air Forces

The Allied air power is one of the mightiest agents for the safety of the world that has ever been devised. At the present time it is at the real test, smashing Germany and her war machine. A few days ago Mr. Churchill dealt with the question of whether air power is sufficient to deal the death blow at Germany and said it was worth finding out as long as other factors of the offensive against the enemy are considered.

The rise of the United Nations' air power has been one of the wonders of modern days and the part of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan has been an agency of British strength. Hon. Charles Power, Canadian Air Minister, in his statement of the Commonwealth Plan gave it out thot he was "half convinced" of the possibility of air power knocking the Axis out of the war. Some months ago the number of aircrew trained in Canada passed the fifty thousand mark and Canada has sent overseas more than forty thousand in aircrew and ground crew. He made the instructive remark that for every Canadian in a Canadian squadron there are 11 in R.A.F. squadrons and that it would take a quarter of a million ground crew men to look after Canadian aircrews if all were in Canadian squadrons. Growth still continues, as average home war establishment this year will be about 35,000 as against 23,500 average last year.

Mr. Power's picture of the Canadian Air Force was one to make Canadians proud. The home squadrons of Canada are ready to take part in the coup de grace to Germany and Japan, he said. Our men are fighting in practically every sphere of the war.

The wisdom of the British and Empire authorities to put the greatest stress on air power is proven by events. Germany, day and night, is a nightmare to Hitler and Goering, who can only retaliate by raids on a coast town while the R.A.F., R.C.A.F., and the American air force strike at the nerves and sinews of Hitler's grip on Germany and overrun Europe. Out of so few of whom Mr. Churchill spoke three years ago, the newest factor in war has come about with power unconceived of a year ago.

Comintern Dissolves

The Third International or Comintern is dissolved by the decision of Moscow and groups outside Russia are asked to dissolve and fit themselves into the situation in the countries where they are in order to hasten Allied victory over Germany. News of this decision is considered as of the greatest importance. Germany has been greatly upset and has called it "the greatest propaganda action." The Germans find in this action the greatest blow dealt at the claim of the Hitlerite crowd that Germany is defending the world against Bolshevism. The German claim was preposterous and now it is given its quietus. The United World's appreciation of the towering importance of this act of the Third International is best summed up in the British foreign diplomatic opinion that it is "the most intelligent and adroit diplomatic move of the war." It is seen as of great importance because it is said it will clarify relations between Russia and the United States and certain British opinion sees in this Russia's swing to nationalism which has been, they say, under way ever since Stalin expelled Leon Trotsky in 1927 since when Stalin has devoted his attention mainly to domestic developments, reconstruction and defence.

World Communism, it is admitted, is outmoded.

One of the points of importance of the resolution is found in this paragraph: "In countries against the Hitlerite coalition, the sacred duty of all the masses and primarily that of the vanguard of workers, consists in all-out support of their governments' war efforts in order to rout the Hitlerites as soon as possible and secure friendly co-operation of nations on basis of equality."

The resolution of dissolution said that "the world war started by the Hitlerites made differences in situations in various countries more acute and erected a high barrier between countries which have been bearers of Hitlerite tyranny and freedom-loving people united in a coalition against Hitler."

Salvaged

Where the enemy Japanese had their greatest opportunity, at Pearl Harbor, the final loss sustained by the United States in ships has been placed at three craft which are written off as lost and even fifty per cent of salvage has been achieved from these vessels. On December 7th., 1941, nineteen American navy ships were sunk or damaged. Now the ultimate loss of that event is only three.

Time has brought its revenge on the foul Nipponese. Instead of the result of Jap raids as on Pearl Harbor Day, vast changes have come. And so it will continue to be as the United Nations climb higher and higher in achievement while the enemy shrinks in power.

But the attack on Pearl Harbor and other dastardly deeds by the Japanese have accomplished just what the evil forces of the world are forced to bring about contrary to their will, they have aroused all humanity to smash the Axis. The enemy has not aimed to do anything for the United Nations but Japanese evil brings the lash for the backs of the Japanese. That whip is a powerful one as the enemy has found to his sorrow in Attu Island.

Income Tax

How Canada is facing up to the war financially may be judged by the figures quoted by Revenue Minister Gibson showing that Canadians will pay $1,824,000,000 this year or more than Canada collected in income tax in all the quarter of a century from 1915 to 1939 inclusive, when the total was $1,581,000,000. This shows the difference between the first and second wars with Germany, indicating something of the expense of mechanized war, and the wise choice of policy of paying off as much as possible of the war debt currently as it is possible.

A Man's Clothes

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

Coming home on leave the other day a friend of mine decided to go into 'civies.' He searched in vain for the new grey flannel suit bought just before joining up. He took up the matter with his wife.

"Where's my flannel suit?" he demanded suspiciously.

"Well—er," she began, and glanced self-consciously at the costume she was wearing. It was of grey flannel. "I didn't think you'd be needing it," she explained apologetically, "and it looked a shame to leave it hanging in the wardrobe."

Worse was to follow. Further search by my friend revealed that one of his best dress shirts had been sacrificed to make a shirt-blouse to go with his wife's A.R.P. uniform; that a favorite pull-over had been unravelled and re-knit as a jumper, and that a favorite scarlet blazer was already in the last stages of disintegration before transformation into a smart companion to his wife's black skirt.

His wife had joined a "make-do and mend" class. Now he insists she shall mend her ways.

NEXT MISSION

Over the emperor's palace they flew in the light of the day,
But the word of command had been given, unharmed must the emperor stay.
They were sent on a mission of warfare, unchallenged they dropped from the sky
And the emperor must have been thankful in safety to watch them go by.

As the emperor stood in his palace he saw them just over his head,
In his ears was the roar of their motors as on to their targets they sped.
That mercy must go with the triumph and the ruler be spared to his land.

They could have set fire to the palace, for it stood but a few yards below.
They could have dropped death on the emperor.
They'd time and means for the blow,
But they left him unscathed in his splendor.
And how was their mercy repaid?
The lads who had spared Hirohito were tortured and put to the blade.

Well, the boys will be over the palace again in a month, or two more
Some day when the emperor's watching they'll come there to settle a score.
And the bomb bays will suddenly open and death will sweep out of the sky
For the lads with their hearts set on vengeance will never again pass it by.

MAY 25, 1873

The weather for the celebration of the 54th. anniversary of the birth of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, was delightful and the townspeople thoroughly enjoyed the day. As has been the custom for several years the band of the 15th. Argyleshires turned out at an early hour and serenaded several of their officers and supporters. Many citizens watched the parade of the Fire Brigade and the Fire Department from the D. & D. Institute. The picnics at Massassaga Point were well patronized; the steamer Prince Edward made several trips to the Point and carried along with the many citizens on her various trips, 114 children from the D. & D. Institute. The Point was beautiful and the time spent there was most enjoyable. The excursion to the Point was under the auspices of St. George's Society and the young men of Bridge Street Wesleyan Methodist Church. The picnic of the congregation of St. Michael's Church in Bleecker's Grove was largely attended and was a great success. A cricket match also took place and many lovers of the game enjoyed themselves there. Flags were flying and the town had quite an animated appearance. A tin-pan band was out at four o'clock in the morning and serenaded some citizens. The boys and girls had a great time with fire crackers and in the evening a few fire works were put off. Dances were held in the Masonic Music Hall and the Ontario Hall.

CURFEWS ARE INCREASING

Chicago, May 25 — (AP) — Curfews are ringing in an increasing number of cities to keep children off the streets at night and to curb juvenile delinquency. The American Municipal Association reported tonight that old laws have been dusted off and new ordinances have been enacted during the last six months at a rapid rate.

W.R. MOTHERWELL DIES IN REGINA AT AGE OF 83

Former Provincial and Federal Minister of Agriculture Retired in 1939

Regina, May 25—(CP)—Hon. W. R. Motherwell, 83, "the grand old man of Canadian agriculture," who promoted probably more agriculture reforms than any other man in the Dominion's history, died here yesterday.

Mr. Motherwell, pioneer of the ox-cart days in Saskatchewan, unceasingly devoted his time to agriculture improvement as head of various farmer organizations and as Minister of Agriculture in Saskatchewan and for the Dominion until his retirement when 80 years of age.

As a homesteader at Abernethy, Sask., where he settled in 1882, Mr. Motherwell was the first president of the Territorial Grain Growers' Association, first Saskatchewan Minister of Agriculture and became known as the father of the co-operative movement among agrarians.

Mr. Motherwell was Provincial Agriculture Minister from 1905 until 1918 and held the same portfolio in the Liberal administration of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King in Ottawa from 1921 until he resigned in 1930.

In announcing his retirement in 1939 from an active political career he stated "When a man drops out at 80, people can't say he was a quitter."

Bargaining Agency Selected Is C.I.O.

Montreal, May 25. (AP)—A. R. Mosher, National president of the Canadian Brotherhood, of Railway Employees (C.I.O.) arrived here last night with a letter from Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell to Mr. Justice C. P. McTague, chairman of the War Labor Board which said that the C.I.O. Union be recognised as the sole Bargaining Agency for the Montreal Tramway workers. A vote was to have been taken today among the workers to name the union which was to represent them.

The letter was to the effect that the other two union involved in the tramways dispute, the Amalgamated Brotherhood of Street and Electrical Employees (A.F.L.) and the Catholic Syndicate of Transport workers, had waived their rights as to the matter of a vote.

Frozen Goldfish

(From the Fergus News-Record)

Another of those things happened last week, which you don't believe unless you see for yourself. For that reason, we don't expect you all to believe it. We'd be inclined to be sceptical, too, if the proof wasn't right there where we can see it every day.

The News-Record garden built by the late Editor J. C. Templin, contains a nice lily pool, which was complete with lilies and goldfish. Every Autumn, our father used to drain all the water out of the pool, catch the goldfish and put them in tubs to be taken into the cellar, and lift the boxes which contained the roots of the water-lilies so they could be stored indoors. It was a lot of work, and though most of the lilies could be counted on to survive, the goldfish weren't so lucky. Out of a hundred or so in the Fall, maybe twenty would go out into the pool, and half of them would die as a result of the sudden change.

Last year, with the lack of help, we could not carry out the program. The pool was drained till there was only a foot or so of water left. We knew there were eight goldfish, but never found them. The water lilies were left to take their chances, which seemed fair enough, as they were fairly hardy varieties. The pool filled with snow fairly early, but was given no covering or protection.

The other day, as we walked past, we saw a glint of something moving in the water. We went over to have a look. The water lilies were both growing far better than if they had been taken indoors, and there were eight fine, lively goldfish swimming around in the pool.

We have heard stories about other people leaving their goldfish outdoors all Winter. And it is said that river fish survive even in cold climates where the water freezes right to the bottom. After this, we'll believe it.

ALL QUIET ALONG POTOMAC

It at first referred to the actual state of military affairs along the Potomac River in the vicinity of Washington.

This and similar expressions frequently occur in the official dispatches and newspaper articles of the time.

"All is quiet," "All is quiet today" and "All is quiet tonight" were favorite expressions in the telegrams sent to Secretary of War Simon Cameron by General George B. McClellan in 1861 and 1862 while he commanded the Army of the Potomac.

For this reason McClellan and Cameron are sometimes credited with the authorship of "All quiet along the Potomac."

The expression was given wide currency by Ethel Lynn Beers (1827-1879), whose popular poem entitled "The Picket Guard" was published in Harper's Weekly in the issue of November 30, 1860.

Although this poem was entitled "The Picket Guard," it is better known by the first words of each stanza, "All Quiet Along the Potomac."

The theme of the poem was suggested by the frequent occurrence of the phrase "A Picket Shot" in the newspapers of the time.

More than a year later this poem was printed anonymously in a Southern newspaper with the explanation that it had been found on the body of a dead soldier.

After the war the authorship was claimed by a Southern writer named Thaddeus Oliver, but he was never able to support his claim with satisfactory evidence and the controversy has been decided in favor of Mrs. Beers, who was born at Goshen, New York, and who, before her marriage, wrote under the name "Ethel Lynn."

Mrs. Beers was a frequent contributor to the New York Ledger and wrote a number of other popular poems, among them "Weighing the Baby," "Baby Looking Out for Me," and "Which Shall It Be."

Although of a cheerful disposition, she had a strong premonition that she should die immediately after the publication of her collected poems.

Her collected poems, under the title "All Quiet Along the Potomac," were published October 10, 1879, and she died the next day.

"All Quiet Along the Potomac" was used by his enemies to ridicule the Fabian military tactics of General McClellan.

BUILDERS WHO SEND Ships DOWN TO THE SEA

"Give us more, more ships"—that is the cry heard around the world from the United Nations. And the ship-builders are performing miracles of modern construction to respond to that cry. In Canada, in England, in the States and in other countries, ships are being launched daily to fight on the seven seas.

In a real sense, all ships today are fighting ships, whether fighters or freighters, for they have to go through many perils and battles to perform their appointed missions. The men who man them and the men who build them are bravely fighting the "survival war". While paying tribute to the courage and loyal heroism of those who sail our navy and merchant marine, we will not forget the praise due the workers who build ships, hundreds of ships, for the United Nations.

The Bank of Montreal is working for the war's success by co-operating with war industries and their workers. Six thousand employees in hundreds of branches across Canada daily serve the war-time banking needs of workers, industries and Government.

Madoc and District

Madoc — The annual meeting of Madoc Bowling Club was held in the Review office, with the president, Hugh Kellar, in the chair. The auditor's report showed a balance of $2[illegible]6 on hand. On motion of J. Brown and J. Watson the old officers were re-elected for 1943:

President, Hugh Kellar; vice-president, Rev. A. Poulter; secretary, C. I. Ross; treasurer, A. Cochran; grounds committee, J. Brown, L. Ashley, S. Ashley; auditors, Dr. S. R. Beatty, Geo. West.

The hiring of a caretaker was left to the president and grounds committee.

An invitation is to be extended to the ladies to bowl this season. A "Get Well" card was sent to one of the members, Dr. F. Nickle, who is at present a patient in Belleville hospital. It was also decided to affiliate with the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association.

Trinity Women's Club

The May meeting of Trinity Women's Club was held at the home of the president, Mrs. S. R. Beatty, with a fine attendance of members and visitors. Business period was conducted by the president, Mrs. Beatty and the secretary, Mrs. G. White. Mrs. R. C. Cummings gave a splendid report on the war work. Members were also reminded of talent money obligations. Mrs. Poulter conducted the devotional period. The story, "The Braves Who Climbed the Mountain" was read by Miss M. Mutton. The program arranged by Mrs. White was opened by musical numbers. Two songs were rendered by Phyllis Beatty, and a piano duet "The Two Guitars," by Mrs. L. Ashley and Stanley Hawthorne. Miss E. McDermid spoke briefly on the value of reading good poetry. Miss H. Mutton read "Brave Living."

A quiz contest arranged by Misses E. McDermid, and H. Mutton proved entertaining. Vocal solos "This is Worth Fighting For" by Stanley Hawthorne and "Her Name was Mary" by Phyllis Beatty concluded a fine, varied program. The National Anthem was followed by a social hour.

D.D.G.M. Pays Official Visit

Rt. Wor. Bro. George F. Little, D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District paid his official visit to Madoc Lodge, No. 48, A.F. and A.M., on regular meeting night. During lodge the second degree was conferred on a candidate by the officers of Madoc Lodge. The District Deputy complimented the officers on the fine manner in which the degree had been conferred stating that he had never witnessed the work taken by Wor. Master Bro. Dr. S. R. Beatty given in as capable and impressive manner. Following the closing of lodge refreshments were served, after which Dr. Beatty welcomed the D.D.G.M. and other visitors who were present. Rt. Wor. Bro. Little gave a very instructive address. Short speeches were given by Wor. Bro. Solomon of Brighton; Wor. Bro. Jack Allen and Wor. Bro. Bird of Belleville; Wor. Bro. H. Cordy, Tweed, and Wor. Bro. Geo. West, Madoc.

Presentation to Bruce Armstrong

On Thursday many friends of P.O. Bruce Armstrong met at the home of his mother, Mrs. John Armstrong, and presented him with a fountain pen, Stanley Hawthorne reading the address and Joyce Nic- of making the presentation. A club bag was also presented by the Armstrong family and his aunt, Mrs. Manley Fox. Bruce thanked his many friends for their kindness and good wishes. The balance of the evening was spent in community singing. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Armstrong bringing the evening to a close with everyone wishing Bruce the best of luck.

Honor Bridal Couple

On Friday evening friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McCoy, O'Hara neighborhood, in Madoc Township, to honor their son, Donald, and his bride (formerly Bessie Maxwell) with a miscellaneous shower. At midnight the young couple were given seats of honor while Miss Edith Miller read an address, and Miss Sadie Tumelty, Charlies Stinson and Jim Miller presented them with the gifts. Mr. and Mrs. McCoy thanked the guests for their many kind remembrances. Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

Celebrates 89th. Birthday

On Sunday, May 23rd., Mrs. Geo. Rollins, Madoc's oldest resident, will celebrate his 89th. birthday. Mr. Rollins has carried on a tinsmith business in Madoc for sixty years, and enjoys very good health. During the past long cold Winter this gentleman was one of the first men to be down to his place of business. The citizens of Madoc and community extend to Mr. Rollins congratulations.

Conquest of Aleutians Will Strike Blow at Japan's Seafood Supply

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 22 — (AP) — American conquest of the Western Aleutians, some authorities said today, probably will prove to be a serious stab at Japan's food supply by bringing important North Pacific fishing grounds under the guns of United States patrol ships and planes.

Cutting the enemy's seafood supply by sinking some of his fishing boats and sending the rest scuttling back to Japan, it was said, would be a major step in the planned economic strangulation of the island empire.

Strategists said a campaign to close huge fishing grounds to the enemy probably will be one of the first moves of the United States North Pacific command, as soon as forward positions in the western Aleutians have been secured and developed.

Most advanced of the air bases undoubtedly will be on Attu Island, where Japanese resistance has been all but eliminated.

Navy Secretary Frank Knox told a press conference late yesterday that the campaign was successful and it was only a question of time until the Japanese remnants trapped on the northeastern extremity of Attu were finally overwhelmed.

The Tokyo radio quoted circles close to the Japanese war office as saying that a real fight "from now on had begun on Attu. But little credence was given the report here, and it was noted that Knox said that already the Japanese forces left on Attu had no choice but to surrender or die.

Not Much Electricity in Lightning

(From "Time" Magazine)

Electrical charges accumulate in clouds, positive at the top, negative on the bottom. A spark bursts through the air to another cloud or to the earth—lightning. First comes a faint leader stroke, then a huge discharge builds upward from the earth. The slender core (about the thickness of a finger) explodes into a column of fire much greater in diameter. As this heated air cools and contracts, other air rushes in to fill the space. This sudden disturbance makes the thunderclap.

Destruction comes from the speed of the discharge, not the total amount of electricity; the quantity of electricity in an average thunderbolt would be worth only a few cents if tamed and metered.

New Mexico, Arizona, Georgia and Mississippi are the most lightning-liked states, with an annual fatality rate of ten in a million population. Pacific Coast states and the Middle Atlantic seaboard states are the safest; (less than two per million in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Southern New England.)

Avoiding drafts, closing doors and windows will not keep out lightning. It is most likely to hit the chimney. Safest place in the house; the middle of a downstairs room.

Telephones are not unsafe in a thunderstorm. The cracking and tinking are caused by induction charges.

Thick woods are safe enough, but isolated trees are bolt-catchers. Since they are poor conductors, lightning may take the easier way through humans standing near.

WHY Do Certain People Have So Much PEP?

Doesn't it feel swell to wake up in the morning clear-eyed, refreshed, just rarin' to go? Yet so many people, especially over 40, get up tired all over, never really feel their best. Why is this?

The reason can often be traced to a very common cause—a sluggish system clogged with poisonous food waste. If you are like most people, you need help every so often to clean out your system, get back pep and sparkle that is rightfully yours. You can do this simply and so gently with the aid of the 4-way vegetable action of Bile Beans, the small, purely vegetable laxative pills that work on stomach, liver bile, upper and lower bowel.

For a peppier, brighter tomorrow, try Bile Beans tonight and prove for yourself their amazingly gently action. Made in England—over 7 million boxes sold yearly, proof of sensational popularity. Only 50c at druggists.

PENCILLIN NEW DRUG

London (CP)—Scientists are trying to purify pencillin, a new drug which Health Minister Brown believes is unlikely to be available yet for general use because of the great difficulties involved in its production. Pencillin is derived from a minute green mould.

NAZIS BAN BOOKS

London (CP)—Sir James Craig, Secretary for War, said in the House of Commons that the Germans had banned books by about 100 well known authors from British prisoners of war, including works by H. G. Wells, Edgar Rice Burroughs, Vicki Baum and Lord Beaconsfield.

BUSMAN'S HOLIDAY?

SOME BIG FOLKS HAVE INSPECTED GOOSE AIRPORT

Top-Liners From Anthony Eden to Clark Gable in the Visitors' Book — Notes From Labrador Metropolis

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose Airport, Labrador (CP) — First name in the visitors' book in the R.C.A.F. officers' mess in the new Canadian airdrome is that of Lt.-Cmdr. Charles J. Hubbard, U.S.N.R., of Washington, and from there on the book reads like Who's Who—Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and his party went home from Canada and the United States by way of Labrador in three huge Liberators .. Munitions Minister Howe and Defence Minister Ralston went through last September .. And Clark Gable, the motion picture star, went overseas through here a few weeks ago as a tailgunner in the U.S. Army Air Corps.

Who said Labrador isn't civilized? One big sign says "Times Square" and there are plenty that say "Stop—Through Street" and mean it. Even in Labrador there have been traffic accidents.

x x

The three R.C.A.F. security officers who have served in Labrador are all Vancouverites. The first, PO. (now FO.) Keith Ross Mackenzie; the second PO. J. Y. Baird who is more than ever convinced he doesn't like the weather here since he got an envelope containing a bunch of violets grown outside in Vancouver; the third PO. S. E. (Alex) Alexander, former member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who used to be stationed on the coast and at many prairie and northwest points.

x x

The R.A.F. commander here doesn't like newspapermen. He acknowledged grudgingly that he did a good bit of flying in fighters during the Battle of Britain and that his squadron once had to make three extra patrols while France was falling, on the lookout for a missing Canadian. He is proud of his bushy R.A.F. moustache, the only one of its type in the station.

x x

Life was grim until permanent buildings were completed at the airport but now the base has most of the comforts of city living .. Electric razors are used by many of the men .. Rooms are too hot rather than too cold—although they sometimes get chilly in the Winter. .. Hot water in the station is scalding . . . Telephone and electric lights are everywhere.

x x

The airport is in the muskeg country and the mosquitoes are a summer worry. The base commander, an R.C.A.F. officer from Minnedosa, Man., describes them vehemently as "the biggest bloody mosquitoes in the world."

x x

Finnish baths are a favorite winter pastime for air force officers, including the Americans stationed here. They were the only kind available at first. The plan now is to build a big Turkish bath beside the new recreation hall and another at the R.C.A.F. officers' mess, using steam from the central heating system.

x x

Road building is a cinch on the huge natural pile of sand on which Goose Airport is built. The system is to run three bulldozers side by side, their cutting blades overlapped about a foot. The shallow-rooted trees topple out of the way and the Labrador moss is shoved off, all in one operation. And trucks can get through right behind.

Wrist Watch, Presented To Pte. Allan Sine

Rawdon (Special)—On Friday evening a large assemblage of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Sine of Bethel, in honor of their son, Allan, who has joined the King's forces.

Rev. T. F. Townsend was chairman for the occasion and the program opened with a round of community singing.

Miss Gertie McMullen gave a reading and Mr. Don Thompson contributed a vocal number with guitar accompaniment. Miss Mae Johnson presented "Send Them Letters from Home." Master Neil Hubble delighted with a group of patriotic songs. Miss Elda McMullen favored with two guitar numbers. Mrs. Walter Warren sang "The White Cliffs of Dover."

O.S. Clifford Wannamaker, who has made seven trips across the ocean and is now on furlough, spoke briefly on behalf of the boys already in the service. Mr. Stuart Brady spoke on behalf of the veterans in the last war. Mrs. James Warren spoke on behalf of Bethel Sunday School. Mr. Will Donald and Mrs. Thomas McMullen on behalf of the community.

Allan was given a seat of honor and Miss Laura Wright read an address of appreciation which was signed by Messrs. Nathan Sine, Don Thompson and Stuart Brady.

Mr. Nathan Sine presented Allan with a handsome wrist watch and a flashlight on behalf of the Sine community and surrounding district.

Allan suitably replied to this friendly gesture and thanked his friends for the lovely gifts.

An appetizing lunch was served and following this the young people tripped the light fantastic to music supplied by Mrs. Percy Hubble and Mr. Clarke Haig.

O.S. Clifford Wannamaker has been visiting his parents at Madoc Junction and holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Brady.

Common Courtesy In Your Smoking

(By GRACE MARTIN)
(Associated Press Writer)

New York (CP)—When you and a match and a cigarette meet, can you take care of the situation? Or does your meeting constitute a first-class social hazard, not to mention a fire hazard?

After your cigarette is lighted, do you drop your smoking match to smudge wherever it falls? Do you leave your cigarette burning in the ashtray, until it tips out and burns a hole in the table?

Some people are mindful of the fire hazards of a cigarette, but they are less careful about its social hazards. They talk with a cigarette in their lips or let ashes drop. Smoking is so much a part of social life now that it means a lot in the way your friends regard you.

Mount Pleasant Y.P.U. Meets

Rawdon — Mount Pleasant Y. P. U. met at the Allan School with Miss Muriel Welbourn in charge of the worship period and special story. Miss Joyce Johnson read the devotional.

Rev. T. F. Townsend gave the topic on "Life Problems," and a discussion period at the close.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver conducted a series of games. A good number were in attendance.

Successful Play

On Monday evening Petherick talent presented their play "Bean Town's Choice," in Mount Pleasant hall, under auspices of the Y.P.U. A large crowd was in attendance and the play was full of merriment and humor.

Rev. Mr. Bick introduced the cast.

BRITISH GENERAL PRISONER

London (CP)—Maj.-Gen. Degge Sitwell, 46 year old general officer commanding British forces in Java, Netherlands East Indies, is a prisoner in Japanese hands.

Industry is helping win the war... industry must help build a peacetime world

Today, all industries must produce as never before—must speed the output of food, tanks, planes, guns, ships and other instruments of war—must conserve vital supplies—that we may win quickly a decisive victory.

Tomorrow, all industries must continue to produce—beating swords into plowshares—to prevent world-wide unemployment leading to ultimate economic collapse.

If the world is to prosper, there must be the same cohesion among the United Nations during the transition period and thereafter as now exists during the world-wide conflict. Internal stability here and in other nations, can be gained and maintained only by sustained industrial production and by interdependence.

The people of this country, in common with the people of other lands, will prosper materially and spiritually when this war is ended but only if plans world-wide in scope are formulated promptly for A JUST AND DURABLE PEACE.

WEDDINGS

BAKER—MORCH

An Air Force wedding of wide interest took place on Saturday evening in St. Paul's chapel, Bloor St., Toronto., when Assistant Section Officer Doreen Gladys Morch, R.C.A.F. (W.D.), Camp Borden, became the bride of Flt.-Lt. Kelts C. Baker, Jr., R.C.A.F., Camp Borden. The bride, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Morch, Belleville. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kelts C. Baker, New York City. Rev. Clarke Wallace officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, in a cream satin floor-length bridal gown and finger-tip veil, was given in marriage by her father.

The maid of honor was gowned in a floor-length frock of dusky pink crepe with a matching pink floral cap and veil. Squadrpn Leader Sturgen, R.C.A.F., was groomsman.

HEARNS—GEEN

Frankford—Tulips, narcissus and fern adorned St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, on Saturday, May 22, at 2.30 p.m., for the marriage of Eva Frances Geen of Frankford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie Geen, to Harry Frederick Hearns, son of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Hearns, Frankford. Rev. H. L. Harding, of Stirling, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Harry Morrow played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in an ivory satin appliqued gown with slight train and her veil of tulle illusion with train fell from a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Jean Gatenby, of Toronto, was her attendant, wearing a floor-length turquoise blue sheer frock over taffeta with shoulder-length veil caught to her hair with a coronet of white roses. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Ann Bolte, of Stirling, as flower girl, was attired in pale blue French embroidered taffeta with matching headdress. She carried a nosegay of sweet peas and baby breath.

Mr. Raymond Geen, of Frankford, was groomsman and the ushers were Messrs. Bernard Hearns, Frankford and Donald Francis, Stirling.

At the buffet luncheon at the bride's home, the bride's mother was charming in a flowered silk crepe ensemble with corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother assisted her, wearing a two-piece blue crepe frock with corsage of pink and white sweet peas.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara, the bride donned a blue tailored suit with beige and brown accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Bob Carr, Miss Lois Vinson, Miss Jean Gatenby, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. A. Thomas, of Oakville; Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Rutherford, Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Geen, of Thomasburg.

On their return the bridal couple will reside in Frankford.

Embroidery Trim

By ALICE ALDEN

THE SPIDER web embroidery used on Lucille Ball's new Spring suit and hat designed by Irene is the latest foible. With the impossibility of obtaining any more fine Brussels and French laces, Irene hit upon the idea of using gossamer fine embroidery. Done under a magnifying glass the embroidery looks like navy lace over flesh colored chiffon. The same idea is used for the star's coachman hat. The suit features a full peplum to the hip length jacket which emphasizes the slimness of the skirt.

Memorial Service Held For Late Stewart Kerby

Madoc (Special) — A memorial service of Solemn High Mass was held in Sacred Heart Church, Madoc, on Tuesday morning for the repose of soul of Stewart Kerby. Stewart was a universal favorite of jovial character and a generous mind and highly esteemed by his many friends. When the news reached Canada the whole district mourned. High Mass was celebrated with Father Hyland as celebrant, Deacon, Father LeSage of Stirling, Sub-deacon, Rev. Father J. V. Meagher, a chaplain in the last war and a particular friend of the Veterans, preached a very appropriate sermon in which he emphasized the necessity of supernatural intention in order to raise any ordinary act to the dignity of supernatural value. There was a large attendance at the service.

The late P.O. Stewart Kerby was a son of Michael and the late Mrs. Kerby, formerly Miss Minnie Stewart of Madoc, and prior to his enlistment was employed in Connor's Hardware, Madoc. Messrs. Fred, Will and John Stewart of Madoc, are uncles of the deceased.

Catholic Women's League Meets

Marmora — The May meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in the school on Thursday evening, May 20th., with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Black, was in the chair.

Letters were read from the National President, from Minister of National Defence and from the local member of parliament, in regard to a resolution passed by the subdivision regarding chapels for the men and women in the services. Letters of thanks and appreciation for treats received by sick members of the parish and also for spiritual offerings for deceased relatives of members were read. Rev. Father Farrell gave an interesting address, describing the vision of Bernadette of Lourdes, and he also asked the members to pray for the boys in the services. It was later decided to have a Mass said for their welfare.

A discussion was held regarding the starting of a scrap book. It was also decided to have a day of recollection and prayer on the first Sunday in June when Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament will be held. Mrs. Black spoke of the presentation of a coffee table to Mrs. William Flynn, who has recently left the Parish to reside in Peterboro. A discussion was held regarding the play "The Fountain of Youth," which will again be enacted in the Town Hall, Marmora, on Monday evening, May 31, and in Tweed on Tuesday, June 1st. Articles for sewing at home were given out to some of the members by Miss Mary Hughes. Mr. Dan Shannon then favored the members with a pianoforte solo, followed by a chorus "A League Member's Perfect Day." A few games of Bingo were played and the meeting closed with God Save the King.

Fashion Flashes

NATURALLY, there aren't many evening frocks represented in the various collections, but almost every house does show at least one, and that a beauty. One model is of white starched chiffon with broad bands of brown lace, the lace making the short-sleeved bodice, and applied over the chiffon in bolero fashion.

A NICE TOUCH lifts a simple black or navy suit out of the commonplace. A two-piece wool suit made with a gored skirt has a fitted jacket that is completely bordered around the deep collar, the front closing and hem with self fringe.

SEEN ABOUT TOWN frequently is the suit of navy blue bengaline. A smart model is made with a broad shoulder effect and nipped in waist. A daisy print chiffon blouse has a beruffled, pleated self jabot that is draped softly over one rever.

BEST CHOICE for a conservative tailored hat is dark felt spiced up with bright trimming. A dark blue felt postilion with softening visor brim has a tucked slanting crown band and huge bow of bright green and white striped taffeta ribbon.

CITED for popularity because of its easy yet trig smartness is the Spring version of the ubiquitous Chesterfield. Deep biege woolen bound with dark brown braid makes a handsome Chesterfield nice for Spring and into early Summer.

IT LOOKS LIKE a long Summer in town for most of us and that's why the dressy black sheer is a must. A nice little frock is of black sheer crepe made with cap sleeves and a deep scooped-out low neck. Large pink roses in front of the shoulder with rhinestone dew-drops give a prettycolor accent.

Are You Having A June Wedding?

IT'S A GREAT YEAR FOR WEDDINGS, from big, fashionable affairs with all the trimmings to the little quiet ones where only the immediate relatives are present. When choosing your costume, remember that your hat is most important and the fur scarf you wear away may add greatly to the occasion.

Your Hat

The choice is large, from pompadours with frothy veils to large brimmed picture hats. For travelling, the new light weight Madagascars, tailored by Lady Biltmore, are particularly nice. Prices from $2.95 to $7.50.

Your Fur Scarf

Soft, lustrous fur pelts are arranged in from two to eight skin styles, in mink, silver fox, kolinsky, red fox and squirrel. One of these scarfs will be practical as well as beautiful. Prices from $12.50 to $125.00.

WE INVITE YOUR INSPECTION.

Searching River For Missing Bodies Of Mother, Son

Marmora, May 25 (Special) — Searching for the bdies of Mrs. Charles Dunlay and her son Wilfred, believed to have drowned in Crowe River on Thursday afternoon, continued on Saturday. In the forenoon Constable W. D. Lavender and Game Warden J. A. Shannon patrolled the waters between the dam and the bridge. In the afternoon Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson and Constable Lavender patrolled the same waters. Owing to the swollen waters and fast current, it was considered unpractical by the police to carry out any dragging operations. On Saturday evening Constable Lavender and Game Warden Shannon spent another three hours with the use of a high-powered light, the search again proving futile. On Sunday afternoon the Game Warden, in company with H. Auger, searched the river below the bridge as well as above it. A large number of men assisted Constable Lavender in the placing of guard rail wire on the surface of the water on the north side of the bridge so that with the expected rising of the bodies by the traditional nine days, the bodies might not be carried further down the river in the night. The bridge was visited by many villagers in course of Sunday.

Successful Tag For Chinese War Relief

Marmora. —The credited sum of $80.39 was raised for Chinese War Relief purposes in Marmora on Saturday through a Tag Day in which girl students of the three schools of the village took part under supervision of W. Hamilton, B.A., principal of Marmora High School. Good support for the cause was forthcoming from Proprietor Lem Lung of the Glossy Cafe, and his co-partner, Lem Jong. Treats were given by them to the collectors at the cafe and universal pleasure at the success of the venture was in evidence. Those taking part were: Betty Auger, Cecille Black, Patricia Brady, Audrey Burwash, Laura Davidson, Dorothy Forestell, Elda Gordon, Betty Grant, Lucille Green, Doris Hannah, Iris Hannah, Isobel Hickey, Eva Johnston, Joyce Kouri, Joan Leal, Shirley Lummis, Dorothy Lummis, Patricia Lynch, Ruth Nayler, Isabel Nayler, Paula Nicholson, Jennie Paranuik, Joyce Potts, Betty Pritchard, Yvonne Quakenbush, Virginia Robertson, Gwendolyn Rundle, Agnes Terrion, Blanche Young and Bernice Young.

The presentation of prizes to the two scholars of St. Paul's Sunday School who raised the most in their Lenten Mite Boxes this year was made on Sunday morning in course of the regular session of Sunday School. Anne Lavender received a prayer and hymn book and Calvin Baker who had the highest amount, received a Red Letter Testament. The presentations were made by the Assistant Superintendent, W. J. Cottrell. The total amount received in the mite boxes this year for missions was $35.

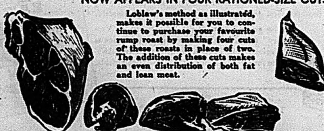
HOW ONE DIFFICULT-TO-SELL ROAST NOW MAKES RATIONED-SIZE ROASTS

Note the division of these roasts into various cuts making it possible to satisfy the ration coupon. You will find throughout our merchandising plan that a sincere effort has been made to present your favourite cuts without any change in your purchasing plans.

ANOTHER ROAST ALWAYS "TOO LARGE" NOW APPEARS IN FOUR RATIONED-SIZE CUTS



Loblaw's method as illustrated, makes it possible for you to continue to purchase your favourite rump roast by making four cuts of these roasts in place of two. The addition of these cuts makes an even distribution of both fat and lean meat.

In Addition to the Above Display of rationed meats, there are many items too numerous to illustrate. We describe below a further selection to choose from.

TWO boneless stewing cuts enjoyed in winter and fall seasons. When minced and converted to hamburg steak it becomes ideal for summer use, it is easy to prepare, and is available in the 1-lb. Group "C."

WING ROAST can be cut any size to suit your coupon purchase. Also available in the 1-lb. Group "C."

Note the Loblaw method of preparation. It makes this roast compact, easy to carve, and it cooks evenly throughout. Available in 1-lb. Group "C."

IRRESPECTIVE of GROUP—the bone and fat content has been taken into consideration when arriving at the COUPON VALUE.

IN VIEW of RATIONED COUPONS being two per person per week—ROASTS will be smaller, steaks and chops will be thinner. This will necessitate LESS HEAT and SLOWER COOKING.

Liven Up for Beauty's Sake

Laraine Day Looks Smart in a Large Hat

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT IS a funny thing. When women feel low, want to regain good spirits, they do the strangest things. I know a woman who once upon a time, fancying that life had become so stale there was no hope of even one happy day, went out and bought herself six pairs of expensive shoes, one pair being bright red. She said it was the smartest act of her life. She still has the red shoes, puts them on when she fears she's going into a slump.

Boosts the Spirits

The outdoor lover will regain courage by getting into the country or planting seeds or taking a long walk. The girl who loves luxuries may find a big spirit boost in a bottle of perfume. But almost any feminine creature will perk up under a new hat. Marvellous how much spiritual comfort one can get out of a hat, if it is particularly chic and becoming.

Smart models are within the reach of any woman. This season's offerings are piquant, when they aren't too out-and-out haywire. The girl who is inclined to freckle will find some dandy shallow-crowned, broad-rimmed models that will protect her precious nose from the sun. The pompadoured lassie can get a hang-on-at-the-back style that won't crush her forehead waves and ringlets.

Effect of Color

Every buyer should be color wise. The color of the hat has a decided effect upon the complexion.

The elderly lady will feel that she is shedding a raft of birthdays, has a new lease on life, if she gets herself a bonnet-shaped chapeau of gay ribbons and flowers. These offerings are enchanting, one never tires of them.

MR. JACKSON GIVES HIS SWITCHBOARD OPERATOR A HEADACHE...
...and besides HE'S HOLDING UP THE WAR

When will he get off that line! It's easy to see he's forgotten how precious time has become, and how seriously telephone facilities are strained.

The days of casual telephoning are definitely over; there is urgent war work to be done.

You can help hurry it along by using the telephone judiciously. Before you lift the receiver, ask yourself: "Do I really need to make this call?" And when you do, please be brief.

WARTIME TELEPHONE TACTICS FOR YOUR OFFICE

Help your switchboard operator to handle calls promptly by getting your own numbers rather than asking her to do it for you.

Avoid asking the switchboard operator to look up telephone numbers—keep a list of frequently-called numbers handy at your desk.

It may be practicable to accept calls direct from your switchboard rather than route them through your secretary.

When you place a Long Distance call, stay near your telephone, ready to talk as soon as your call is completed.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

No one cause has been found for migraine or one-sided headache, despite long searching investigation everywhere. The fact that the great majority of cases can be promptly relieved by the use of ergotamine tartrate, taken by mouth or injection, only stimulates research workers to further investigation as to why ergotamine tartrate will relief migraine headache and give no relief, in fact may increase symptoms, in other forms of headaches.

In addition to the severe one-sided headache, there may be eye symptoms, skin symptoms, nausea and vomitting, numbness or loss of feeling in hands and feet. The attacks may occur once a day or only once in several months, and may last for hours or days. They occur more often in women which is in line with the theory that disturbance of the glands of the body is a factor in causing migraine.

As migraine headache may not always be on one side and headache ons one side may not always be migraine, Dr. T. J. C. Von Storch, in New England Medical Journal states that there are four cardinal or outstanding symptoms of migraine, (a) regular attacks of one-sided headache, (b) eye symptoms, (c) disturbances of stomach and intestine, and (d) family history or tendency to migraine. A case to be definitely called migraine must have the headache anyway, and at least one of the other three symptoms mentioned.

What are the theories as to the cause of migraine?

Most physicians have their own theories as to the cause, such as mental and physical overwork, sluggish liver and gall bladder, wrong diet, and others. However, in searching for the cause in various individuals three definite groups of patients have been discovered. There are (a) allergic individuals in whom food, dust, or other substances causes migraine, (b) those in whom there is some gland disturbance—pituitary, thyroid, sex, or others, (c) those of high strung and ambitious personality.

However, until the cause in any case is discovered, ergotamine tartrate is the best known treatment and unfortunately, taken by mouth is effective in many cases.

Just how ergotainine tartrate gives relief is not known. It is thought that spasm of the bloodvessels is present in migraine and that ergotamine tartrate relaxes the bloodvessels.

The Marry-Go-Round

Robbing a Man of His Clothes

When Private Jones comes back home, after winning the war, he is going to have a hard time finding his clothes, if some of the fashion writers and designers have their way.

There he is, away out in Australia, Africa or Iceland or somewhere, dreaming of home and visualizing himself in that nice, soft wooly old bath-robe stretched out in his easy chair or dancing at a night-club, radiant in his evening clothes. He can picture his full clothes closet with all the shoes hats, extra suits and sweaters hanging in their familiar place. Ah, what a relief and joy it will be, to wear a different suit every day instead of the same uniform.

And there's where he will get the shock of his life! For when he gets there, the cupboard will be bare—and what will poor Jonesy do then, do then? Because a lot of bright little women have suddenly discovered that they can "economize" by "making over" their husbands' clothes to fit themselves.

Here are some of the masterly suggestions. By cutting off the tails of your darling's pet dress coat (for which he may have paid $125) and taking it in here and there, you can make yourself the cutest little Bolero, my dear. The pants, of course, can be ripped and made to a skirt. Naturally, only a good tailor could do the job—but just think of the saving!

Then, there is his dinner-coat. A woman can do almost anything with a tuxedo, even though it may have to be cut down from twice her size. And his sports coats and sweaters have endless possibilities! As for his smoking jacket and bathrobe, you've alway wanted them, anyway—they are so much more comfortable than your own lounging-robes. So, here's your chance to reveal in them. Economize — thats what!

Personally, I have never looked in my husband's clothes closet without envy and longing—and planning to have his coats made over to fit me when they get too old for him to wear or he gets tired of them. Such quality, such material, such tailoring! Man-tailored stuff has always awed and fascinated my feminine soul. There is something so finished, so clean-cut, characterful and durable looking about it!

Well, now is the golden opportunity for a lot of women with the same longing for a perfect man-tailored effect, to get what they want in the name of "economy"; but, personally, I think it's a dirty trick to play on the man in uniform.

Of course, his clothes may not fit him when he comes back or the moths may get into his dinner coat if you don't take it out and air it regularly. But, the very sight of his old clothes closet, just as it was, college sweaters and all, will give him the thrill of his life. There is nothing to which a man clings so passionately as he does to his old clothes!

And it's a pretty hard-hearted woman who can rob her dear, absent husband of anything so dear to his heart as even an old moth-eaten sweater! Economy—my eye!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Best Thing to do About "The Other Woman" Told By Fairfax

Perhaps there has never been a marriage—no matter how happy — in which the spectre of the "Other Woman" hasn't at times raised a worrisome head.

The girl who marries a handsome man has her troubles cut out for her. Handsome Harry is fair game for every woman. If she's young, "Himself" (as the beloved Irish call the husband) makes an impressive addition to the scalps dangling at her belt. If she's not so young—old, older, oldest—she may take a purely aesthetic interest in his good looks, also there may be something about him that reminds her of the man she didn't marry.

Often the other woman is purely spectral—a figment of wifely imagination. Again, she may be slightly more corporeal—the platonic friend "Himself" just talks to and thinks good for his soul. If the Little Woman is wise she won't break up this high dilution comradeship. For when there is a wifely uprising on the Home Front, because of the platonic pal—where things never go deeper than a fervid clutch of the hand—"Himself" may bolt the traces and decide to have the game as well as the name.

Platonic affairs seldom run a fever temperature, and many a foolishly jealous wife raising Cain over them, drives "Himself" from the temperate into the torrid zone of some waiting siren.

The third "Other Woman" menace is where "Himself" is really caught, literally hand and foot, even as a fly on fly-paper. Then must the Little Woman summon all her intelligence to avoid applying wrong remedies—fears, nagging, complaints about stinginess, threats to go home to mother.

All these bad medicines have only the effect of driving "Himself" to the waiting siren's arms. That lady is too smooth to nag, cry, complain of stinginess (likely she's no cause for that). As for the threat of going home to mother, it may seem a solution to the distraught male, trying to hold a course 'twixt Sycila and Charybdis.

No, there is only one way to deal with the Other Woman menace—treat her as a joke. If there are several of them, think them as a whole posse of jokes. Let them pass into the annals of family pleasantries. Finesse, tact and a gossamar hand will be required in dealing with this situation. If the Little Woman has any hurt feelings, they must never be shown. She should greet "Himself" when he returns from Elysium Fields, with smiles and when any hint of the Other Woman arises, say something like: "What can you expect, Darling, with that kind of downright Apollo beauty you have?"

The fact that he's come home to the Little Woman is what she should regard as the most important thing.

No Reason for Modern Girls to Whine, Considering What Grandma Had to Do.

A couple of weeks ago, we compared the life of grandma, in what used to be known as the good old days, with that of her granddaughter, who complains because the war effort has curtailed so many of her conveniences. We've been hearing plenty of comebacks.

While the modern woman fusses and fumes over household "gadgets" cut off in the war effort, she certainly writes herself down as a poor sport if she can't work the arithmetic of point rationing and devise attractive well-balanced meals for her family without resorting to Black Markets.

The good old days, from a modern point of view, offered very poor pickings for our feminine forebear. To begin with, if she hadn't caught her man and tethered him in the bonds of matrimony by the time she was 25 years old, she was regarded as an old maid.

The only alternative then was to go into the home of some married relative or friend as an unpaid drudge. There "Aunty" was engaged endlessly in heavy or not so heavy housework, according to the social status and financial standing of the family. If she didn't scrub, wash, iron and cook, she at least took over all the darning and mending. And she wore the cast-off garments of the family in lieu of wages and was supposed to give thanks for the good fortune of having a roof over her head and not going hungry.

She might be convinced that her brains weer as good as the man in whose house she lived as a dependent. But she could not earn her own living and taste the sweets of independence because unless she taught school or had a job as governess, there was nothing else for her to do.

She couldn't even speak for herself when she had achieved eminence. Florence Nightingale, who established war nursing for women, and made a report to Parliament about it, had to sit in a little room while some man made the report in her name. "Maiden Auntie" could not even, like Nora in Ibsen's Doll's House, bang the door after her on conditions that had grown to be intolerable, because there was nowhere for her to go.

Marriage was her only hope, she was reduced to taking anything that turned up, and the girls were married for strictly utilitarian objectives. She was a husky lass, who could keep house well in those days of wood fires for cooking, washboards instead of washing machines, candles and lamps instead of electricity, when the can opener had not been invented and bread was baked at home. No wonder that headstones in old churchyards furnished mute testimony of the hard lives women led.

Grandpa, who was quite as frisky as his present-day great grandson, got by on the slogan: "Boys will be boys," and the headstones reveal that he sometimes had three or even four wives to keep his house, bear his children on his earthly pilgrimage. Yes, all said and done, in spite of all they have to put up with "for duration" women of the present day have a much better time than they had in those "good old days."

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bride is Never Congratulated — It's the Bridegroom Who Is.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: .. ..

I am going to a mid-afternoon church wedding to be held on a Sunday soon, and to the reception following immediately after at the bride's home.

1. Would this costume be correct for me to wear: a light-colored street length dress, light-weight coat, and harmonizing hat? 2. What do I say to the bride and groom when I congratulate them at the reception? 3. How long does one stay at the reception? 4. I am attending the wedding alone. What should I do besides (1) thanking the bride's family for the invitation; (2) congratulating the newlyweds, and (3) meeting any other relatives present?

— P. B.

1. Yes, this is the proper type of costume for a woman guest at an afternoon wedding, either formal or informal. And your dress needn't be "light colored" unless you so choose . . . a dark shade of dress is correct too.

2. Only the bridegroom is "congratulated" . . the bride is never congratulated. As you pass along the receiving line, you'll probably have only a minute or two, to shake hands with the bride (or kiss her, if you know her well) and say, "Polly dear, every good wish in the world to you," or "I wish you every happiness, dear Polly. It's a beautiful wedding . . . and you're a lovely bride!" Whatever else you say to them depends on the length of the guest line, and how well you know either or both of the newlyweds. But whatever you say, you must talk about them and their day . . nothing about yiurself.

3. How long you stay at the reception depends mainly on your own wishes and convenience. Customarily the guests, or at least the majority of them, stay to say "farewell" to the couple as they depart on their wedding trip. But if it isn't the couple's plan to leave during the reception, the guests are in some way informed about this, and gradually disperse.

4. There are, in general, your social responsibilities,—these, and the duties of guests on any occasion—being gracious and co-operative, being delightfully responsive to introductions and to general conversation, and "pulling their own weight" socially by being able to take care of themselves in any situation. Have a good time — and show you're having a good time!

Correct Form for "Jr."

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it equally correct to write "jr." or "Junior" after a boy's name? I have always been confused about this.

— KATE

You may either write out the "junior", not capitalizing the "j", —John David Forbes, junior, or abbreviate it and write a capital "J" —John David Forbes, Jr. (Watch this larefully, for you did just the reverse in your question.)

"Stationery" Incorrect

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Yesterday, in class, my teacher corrected me when I called my letter paper "stationery", and she said "stationery" is only used by stationers. Will you please explain this to me?

— SIXTEEN.

Your teacher meant that you should call your letter-paper "letter paper" or "note paper" or "writing paper". And the reason you shouldn't call it "stationery" is because stationery is a trade term, meaning the writing-items sold at a stationer's — pencils, pens, blotters, ink erasers, and so forth, as well as elitter-paper.

SOLDIER HELD ON CHARGE OF THEFT

Following the theft of motor rugs from parked automobiles in Belleville this week, Pte. Stanley Vallier, of the Algonquin Regiment, Toronto, was arrested by city police on Friday and held on a charge of the theft of a motor rug from the automobile of Lee Grills, Trenton. Vallier, who is also reported by police to be absent without leave from his military unit, was remanded in custody on the theft count. A charge of the illegal possession of liquor was also preferred against the soldier, Deputy Chief Harman revealed today. Police stated that Mr. Grills' motor rug was recovered.

Chicken en Casserole

Stewing fowl makes a tasty, economical dish done this way

In times of peace, chicken—especially a fine roast capon or a broiler, fried southern style—is a dish for special occasions. But now, in wartime, stewing fowl can often provide a useful alternative when other meats are scarce. And done "En Casserole," it makes a delicious dish for a family meal or a party.

First, disjoint the bird, dividing the breast into four portions (or five, if you count the wish bone). The legs will, of course, be two portions each, but the wings are generally left whole. Dredge in flour, then brown in hot fat. Slice two onions fine and cover the bottom of a glass or earthenware casserole or covered stew pan with them. Arrange a layer of the browned chicken on the onion slices. Next a layer of peeled, sliced potatoes. Another layer of chicken. If you have meat stock, fill up the casserole, cover and simmer for two hours in a slow oven. If you have no meat stock on hand stew the carcase and giblets of the chicken for an hour or so and use the liquor. A cup of cooked peas, diced carrots, or ½ lb. of peeled mushrooms can be added with advantage to this dish.

Provision Made for 17 Times as Much Ammunition, Bombs for Army as in 1942

MANPOWER DEBATE

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, May 25 (CP)—Provision this year for 17 times the quantity of ammunition and bombs provided the Canadian army last year, disclosed in the House of Commons last night, was taken by observers here as an indication of expected activity by the Canadian overseas army in the near future.

This figure was shown in a breakdown of the army's share of $1,764,000,000 in the $3,890,000,000 war appropriation bill for the fiscal year which began last April 1.

It showed that the appropriation for ammunition and bombs would be $273,325,890 as compared with $17,327,320 in the last fiscal year.

Appropriation For Armament

The appropriation for armament, including rifles, machine guns, mortars and guns of all kinds, was doubled—$123,070,907 as against $63,832,169.

This year's army appropriation is about $700,000,000 greater than last year. Another large increase was for pay and allowances—$539,730,211 as against $383,411,422 last year.

The figures were given the House late last night after it had spent a day's sitting on the war appropriation bill during which, for nearly two hours, defence Minister Ralyston was under fire from Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) who conducted what was almost a one-man blockade. There was no opportunity to discuss the figures in detail.

At one stage in his discourse Mr. Pouliot declared that "When I am through with him (Col. Ralston) he will be finished.

Information by Prime Minister Later

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, replying to Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said he hoped that at a later date he would be able to give the House some information regarding his conversations in Washington with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Answering Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East), Justice Minister St. Laurent said there had been no time yet for the government to consider any action that might be taken by the government as a result of Moscow's action in recommending dissolution of the Third Internationale.

During debate in committee on the War Appropriation Bill, there were several full-dress speeches lasting 40 minutes on general army affairs, with many suggestions for betterment and considerable praise.

Criticism From Pouliot

But there was little praise from Mr. Pouliot and much criticism. At one time he called Col. Ralston "a Fascist" and described him as suffering from "amnesia," bringing himself into conflict with the chair on several occasions.

Col. Ralston at one stage referred to Mr. Pouliot as "this wild man," and at another stage said "I don't know if he wants to be the bad boy of the party or not."

He said Mr. Pouliot's line of attack, diverging widely from the subjects under discussions and had the effect of "making a shallow sham" of the work the committee was attempting to do.

The Minister was objecting, on a point of order, to Mr. Pouliot's discussion of selective service under an army appropriation item.

Mr. Pouliot said it was significant that these points of order were called "precisely when the member for Temiscouata has the floor."

Col. Ralston said the reason was that "my honorable friend is taking just twice the time taken by any other member of the committee."

Letters Read

Mr. Pouliot read numerous letters and other documents concerning the army's use of men who, he said should be left on farms, but he covered a wide range of other matters associated with defence activities.

W. Rodney Adamson (Prog. Con. York West) and Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South) both war veterans, urged the Minister to keep the Canadian army intact when it goes into action.

W. Ross Macdonald (Lib. Brantford) was scored by Mr. Adamson and by John Diefenbaker (Prog. Con. Lake Centre) when he suggested that Canadians who are called up but refuse to volunteer for service overseas be sent to Alaska to release Americans for fighting fronts.

Mr. Diefenbaker described this as "astonishing" and unlikely to aid Canadian-American amity and Mr. Adamson said no Canadian would dare show himself outside the Dominion if such a suggestion were adopted.

Mr. Adamson suggested that possibility of invasion of Canada was now "more and more remote" and troops held in Canada for that contingency could be released for service overseas.

Defence Minister Praised

R. T. Graham (Lib. Swift Current) paid a high tribute to the Defence Minister and the government for setting up the Dependents' Board of Trustees which he said was rendering a great service to the families of those in the forces and about which too little was known.

Mr. Graham, a veteran of the First Great War, made a number of suggestions for improving the lot of the army man and the service generally.

Mr. Diefenbaker declared the government as yet had no specific manpower policy and while assurance had been given that adequate reinforcements for the overseas army were available no figures had been given to support that assurance.

He said that some 300,000 young men in Canada had failed to answer compulsory services calls and that instead of using police to apprehend them the government had engaged a Toronto credit bureau at $2.50 per head for defaulters located.

Mr. Diefenbaker described the government's man-power program as a "nibble-nibble policy" and said the time had passed when "palliatives can be administered to avoid cures," and when postponements could take the place of decision.

"It is axiomatic to say that in this country no man should be the master of his choice of service in our war effort, or as to the decision as to where and when he will serve," he declared.

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Intensification of Japanese military operations in the area of the strategic port of Ichang on the Yangtse River appears to hold unpleasant potentialities.

Observers in Chungking figure that the Japanese are out to consolidate important territory along the Yangtse, and perhaps to make a drive against the Chinese provisional caupital itself. In either event rich agricultural provinces—vital to the maintenance of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's regime—would be at stake.

The Japanese early this year threatened to go all-out to smash Chungking and knock Gen. Chiang out of the war. Whether this is the inauguration of such a campaign remains to be seen. It hasn't gone far enough yet to warrant us in assuming that the Chungking area is involved.

However, it's a harsh fact that should the Nipponese succeed in capturing the capital, and in overrunning the provinces of Hunan and Szechwan, with their wealth of rice and other vital resources, it would place a terrific strain of unpredictable effect on the hard-pressed Chinese. This isn't cited in any spirit of pessimism but as representing the possible goal of the Rising Sun barbarian.

Chinese "Well Prepared"

Official quarters in Chungking say that "the Chinese are well prepared" to meet a fresh onslaught, and one hopes that this is a correct estimate of the position. Certainly there is no doubt of Chinese bravery and, apart from other considerations, nature has set down some great barriers in the path of the Japanese.

The bomb-torn mountain city of Chungking lies less than 300 miles by air to the west of the strategic Yangtse port of Ichang which is in Jap hands. However, Ichang is at the eastern entrance of the Yangtse gorges. West of this city are mountains through which the mighty river has cut the famous gorge that in some places is 2,000 feet deep in solid rock.

May Drive Westward

Meagre reports of the fighting indicate that the Japs may be calculating on driving westward to the south of the Yangtse in an effort to reach Chungking. They also are operating to the north of Ichang, which might represent an effort to get at the capital by a route north of the Yangtse. Yesterday's Chinese communique reported a successful counter-attack against the Japs in this latter zone.

Of course, General Chiang still had a vast hinterland into which he could retire with his government and his armies. However, he would be leading his people out into a comparative wilderness. Thus it is essential that Chungking and the agricultural area in neighboring territory be held.

42nd District Annual Women's Institute Held at Wallbridge

The forty-second district annual W.I. was held May 19, at Wallbridge with the president, Mrs. West, in the chair. After the Institute Ode, community singing was led by Mrs. Sam Nicholson with Mrs. Edgar Love at the piano.

Roll call of the branches was given by a five-minute talk on "Being Institute Conscious in Wartime" by Wallbride, Mrs. J. White stressing personal responsibility.

Uniondale: Mrs. K. Paul, "We should be institute conscious in peace time as well as war time."

Chatterton: Not run away with too many war efforts; work with the Red Cross, keep the idea "for home and country."

Pine Grove: Mrs. W. Rodgers, various ways of helping our war effort; food an essential. The strength of a nation is in its homes and people.

River Valley: Carry on on home front as well as doing war work.

Mrs. Sherey Extends Welcome

Mrs. F. Shorey welcomed the various branches and Mrs. Bonisteel replied.

Messrs. Wilson and Tummon gave short addresses with the idea of organizing the township with a committee for comforts for service men.

Financial report showed $109.81 on hand.

Standing committee conveners reported as follows: Agr. and Can. Industries, Mrs. J. White; Citizenship, Mrs. Chard; Social Welfare, Mrs. C. McInnes; Publicity, Mrs. L. Rodgers.

Dinner was served in the form of a cafeteria lunch and much enjoyed.

Talk by Mr. Fair

Mr. Fair then gave an address which was very timely, subject, "Meat Rationing." He explained why it was necessary and how it worked. We must all work together to win this war.

Mrs. F. Campbell reported on war work.

Mrs. Hayes, from the Dept. of Agr. led a discussion on these reports and stressed that we make further studied on citizenship. Publicity is an important factor in our institute work. Make the most of it.

Mrs. Chard reported on the area convention and gave a wonderful digest of the two days and evening session in Belleville last fall.

Mrs. H. Wicks, our Prov. Board director, reported the board meeting held last November in Toronto.

She stressed that resolutions be properly signed; communications should have sufficient postage and that federation fees be paid on time, Feb. 1st. Every branch should have a liaison officer to receive new rulings of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Reports must be sent in to conveners of standing committees.

Two ladies from Stirling sang "Flow Gently Sweet Afton" which was a real treat. Mrs. F. Finkle, of Pine Grove read Edgar Guests' poem, "Tomorrow."

Loyalty Stressed

Mrs. Hayes in her address stressed loyalty to the Institute and the right form of publicity. Co-operation with the school, the church and other women's organizations was stressed.

She explained the co-operative program and showed that this year the service is brought into the home branches.

Moved by Mrs. E. B. Finkle that household accounting be the project for the district this year, seconded by Mrs. L. Rogers, carried. This is to be held in the late fall.

Moved by Mrs. F. Campbell that a rally be held this fall, seconded by Mrs. Boulton, River Valley and Stirling together, Chatterton and Pine Grove, Unionvale and Wallbridge.

Mrs. Hough and Mrs. V. Bush pleased all with a musical selection.

Historical Research report read and recorded.

Miss Jean Scott gave an interesting talk on girls' work. A musical number was given by the boys and girls of Wallbridge school.

Election of Officers

Report of nominating committee and election slate of officers as follows: President, Mrs. F. Hease man; 1st Vice, Mrs. B. Kleecker; 2nd Vice, Mrs. S. Nicholson; Sec.-Treasurer, Mrs. Morley Sine; Agr. and Con. Industries, Mrs. J. White; Citizenship, Mrs. Chard; Historical Research, Mrs. B. Bush; Home Economics, Mrs. B. Bonisteel Social Welfare, Mrs. G. Irvine; Publicity, Mrs. L. Rogers; War Work, Mrs. West; Area Delegate, Mrs. F. Campbell with alternate Mrs. McInnes; Federation Rep., Mrs. Casey Ketcheson will alternate Mrs. K. Paul.

Carried by a show of hands that federation fee be increased to 15.

President and secretary of each branch to act as delegates at meeting in town hall Wallbridge on Friday evening May 28th as an executive meeting.

Mrs. E. B. Finkle then outlined her work this year with the girls entitled "Cottons May be Smart." She is doing a grand job.

Courtesy Committee Report

Mrs. Boulton presented the resolution and courtesy committee report. As chairman of the courtesy committee I present these courtesies which I feel you will all endorse heartily:

Mrs. Hayes from Department of Agriculture for presentation of co-operative programs and discussion of reports.

Mr. Fair Agricultural Representative for his informative talk on "Meat Rationing."

Hostess branch for hospitality, flowers and dinner.

Mrs. Wicks prov. board director for her full report of the board meeting.

Mrs. C. Holmes prov. president of whom members are justly proud.

All who contributed musical numbers and all others who have contributed to the success of this district annual.

Moved by Mrs. E. B. Finkle, seconded by Mrs. Boulton that we send $50 to the Central Fund to be used, half for seeds and half on mobile kitchen.

The National Anthem was sung and meeting adjourned.

Maynooth District Has Potato Club

Twenty boys and girls in the Maynooth area will learn the factors entering into the economical growing of potatoes this year it has been revealed by H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative.

Girls and boys in the above area have organized a potato club, the objects being to demonstrate the value of certified seed, the practice of good cultural and marketing methods and disease control with attention being focused upon production costs.

Each member of the club has received one bag of certified Katahdin potatoes and will keep records of productions costs.

Club Leader is Joe Davis of Greenview with club members being Lorne Lebow, Gordon Lebow and Edmund Hinse of Maynooth; John Freymond of Hybla; Archie Stewart, Stanley Watson, Gordon McAlpine, George McAlpine and Ross Bross of Maynooth; Sadie Davis, Roydon Davis and Trevor Davis of Maple Leaf; Sheldon Reeves of Monteagle Valley, and Edgar Prentice, Emma Prentice, James Fitzgerald, Joseph Fitzgerald, Leonard Cassidy and Leola Douglas of Greenview.

Baltimore, (AP) — Alf (Big Boy) Brown, colored Detroit scrapper, was no match for Lee Q. Murray in a heavyweight bout here Monday night. The Connecticut battler won by a decisive knockout in the eighth round.

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE

Freedom's Fires Must Be Fed Our COAL!

CANADIANS must dig and deliver coal that we may sail convoys, power vital war plants, keep our railroads rolling, preserve the nation's health!

The coal mining industry—miners and management alike—have done wonders to provide coal, but they need help. More workers must be provided, or we falter—possibly fail—in this grim hour. Nature has been generous but we must help ourselves. Our mines are rich, but undermanned.

By Proclamation, His Excellency the Governor General in Council has declared that labour supply for coal mines ranks as a national emergency. Further, in order to provide manpower for coal, the Governor in Council has issued an Order in Council aimed at swelling the flow of coal from mine to firepot.

This Order is of vital interest to everyone in Canada. Every Canadian should read and study its provisions, to see whether it demands any action on his part:

1 EVERY EMPLOYER, REGARDLESS OF HIS INDUSTRY, must advise his employees of these Regulations, and he must assist in discovering whether any of his employees have had previous experience as coal mine workers.

2 EVERY EMPLOYEE, REGARDLESS OF HIS INDUSTRY, who has had previous experience as a coal mine worker, must report that fact to his employer not later than Tuesday, May 25th, 1943.

3 A "COAL MINE WORKER" FOR THESE PURPOSES is anyone who, since January 1st, 1935, has worked under provincial certificate or license in or around a coal mine, or who, since the same date, has been employed for a total of at least 24 months in the production of coal (except at office work).

4 EVERY EMPLOYER, NOT A COAL MINE OPERATOR, must report in writing to a Selective Service Officer not later than Tuesday, June 1st, 1943, full details on any of his employees who are ex-coal mine workers.

5 SELECTIVE SERVICE OFFICERS ARE AUTHORIZED to require ex-coal mine workers to report for interview and to accept work at a coal mine.

6 SELECTIVE SERVICE OFFICERS MAY REQUIRE any man in any employment, if subject to Mobilization Regulations but rejected for Military Training, and certain others excused from Military Training, to accept employment at a coal mine.

7 NO COAL MINE OPERATOR may terminate the services of any coal mine worker without written permission from a Selective Service Officer.

8 NO COAL MINE WORKER may leave employment at a coal mine without written permission from a Selective Service Officer.

9 EVERY EX-COAL MINE WORKER, returning to the industry under these Regulations, will be paid wages at the established rate for the job at which he is placed; and the Government will pay wages of 40 cents an hour, 8 hours a day and 48 hours a week, to any ex-coal mine worker required to leave his present employment under these provisions, but not placed immediately at coal mining.

10 A BOARD ALLOWANCE of not more than $7.50 a week may be paid an ex-coal mine worker now returning to a coal mine, if required to live away from the residence of his dependents.

11 PRESENT AND FUTURE COAL MINE WORKERS will be granted postponement from Military Training to February 1st, 1944, by virtue of their occupation; and no coal mine worker will be accepted for voluntary enlistment in the Armed Forces of Canada, prior to February 1st, 1944, except under permit to enlist from a Selective Service Officer.

12 NO EMPLOYER IN CANADA, EXCEPT A COAL MINE OPERATOR, may solicit for employment or hire any ex-coal mine worker.

13 REGARDLESS OF ANY DOMINION OR PROVINCIAL LAW, male persons at least 16 years old may be employed as coal mine workers, and female persons at least 18 years old may be employed as surface coal mine workers.

14 WAR EMERGENCY TRAINING CLASSES will be available for training men as coal mine workers.

Such is the substance of the new regulations. Full details may be had at any Employment and Selective Service Office. If these provisions require action on your part, you are urged in the national interest to act immediately. Severe penalties are provided for non-compliance, but the Government relies on the co-operation of the citizens of Canada to make prosecution unnecessary by prompt action as required. This is a grave emergency. Assist if you can.

ATHLETIC FUND MILITARY DIST. $3,122.25 RICHER

Audited Account of Greco-Young Battle in Montreal Given Press

DRAWS $16,301

Montreal, May 23 — (CP) — The athletic fund of Military District No. 4 will be $3,122.25 richer as a result of the Johnny Greco-Terry Young fight here two weeks ago, Lt.-Col. Arthur G. White has announced.

Colonel White received the audited accounts Saturday and called newspapermen in to look them over. Announcement of the result comes after a week of discussion over the question of whether the Army would receive any money after various expenses of the bout were made good.

The audit shows that 9,367 fans paid a gross of $16,301, of which the Montreal forum got $1,746 or 15 per cent. Publicity expenses were listed as $1,187, railway transportation $447, preliminary bout expenses $602 and the semi-final feature $1,831.

In Canadian funds, Terry Young drew $2,854 for the bout in which he bowed to Pte. Greco in 10 rounds, while Greco got $2,328.

Federal, provincial and municipal taxes totalled $2,480, of which slightly more than $800 went to the Montreal Athletic Commission which draws five per cent.

"Out of Greco's amount," said Col. White, "comes all his expenses in New York including hotel accommodations for himself and his trainers, payments of sparring partners and their meals, phone calls and all the rest. An itemized report was sent to Ottawa.

"I'm not happy over the expenditures rung up by the boy's retinue. However, it was judged impossible to train properly here without suitable sparring partners or training conditions."

2 Service Teams' Are Defeated In Hull League

Hull, Que., May 25. (CP)—Two service teams went down to defeat before a pair of civilian clubs as the Interprovincial Baseball League swung into action at Decosse Stadium here Saturday Hull Volants soared to a 9-3 triumph behind Lefty Barbaro's pitching in the opening game with PO. Johnny Lalonde's Rockcliffe Flyers.

In the second game, Royal Canadians' Pete Bazinet absorbed 13 hits but went on to win, 9-8, over Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. Barbaro got off to a bad start in the opener, allowing five of the first six batters to hit him, but from then on held the airmen to a single run in the fifth, after they hat counted two in the first.

BRODA HAS NOT ENLISTED

Toronto, (CP) —Walter (Turk) Broda, goalie of the Toronto Leafs, says it's all a mistake about his enlistment in the Canadian Army along with Billy Taylor. Taylor is now a warrior but the 29-year-old Broda says that he merely accompanied his former team-mate to Manning Depot. Broda is married and has one child—also a job with a sand and gravel company of which Coach Happy Day is in charge.

ARMSTRONG BEATS SHAPIRO

Philadelphia, (AP)—Henry Armstrong of Los Angeles, ran up his string of victories since retirement a year ago to 19 when he slammed out a seven-round technical knockout win against Maxie Shapiro of New York before 8,800 customers. The bout was witnessed by Philadelphia Bob Montgomery who may take on the ex-champ in due course.

TAKES ON TOUGH OPPONENT) CLAIMS CHAMPIONSHIP

It's Yvon Robert, the Montreal grappler, who not only lays claim to the world's wrestling championship, but also to the British Empire Crown. Robert tangles with a veteran in Earl McCready to top an all.star rasslin' show at the Hume Arena, Wednesday night. McCready is also shooting for a chance at the Empire title. An added feature sees "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the colored sensation, meet Maurice Robert, of Montreal, in a special bout. A guaranteed Queensbury A.C. preliminary opens this star-studded show. Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff WRITER)

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Sport has become just a side issue now but after the war it will flourish again. One of those trying to see into the peace-time future is Hal Cole of the Guelph Mercury. He figures that in this global conflict forces of all countries are so widely scattered that they're bound to spread their own sports around the world and learn new games to take home. The result will be an increase in international games.

"Instead of the annual yacht races or motorboat races being just about the only international sport, aside from the Olympic games every 4 years, you are likely to see soccer, baseball and hockey all move to the fore, with games between teams from different countries a regular occurrence."

Modern transportation will facilitate international sport, says Cole. "It isn't difficult to picture a baseball team from this side of the ocean taking off on a Friday night and getting to Britain in time to play Saturday and Sunday and returning here before the weekend is over."

CLUBS CONTINUE TO TRAMPLE ON CUBS AND REDS

Siege of Illness and Injuries Cuts Into the Clubs' Effectiveness

SWING THRU WEST

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

With the major leagues getting ready to resume action tomorrow with their second round of International firing, the question that has everybody puzzled is how long can the other National League clubs continue to trample on the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs.

The Bruins, particularly, have impressed every rival manager as one of the standout teams in the senior circuit. Yet they are deep in the cellar with only nine victories and 19 defeats.

Chicago has been getting generally good pitching and is third in the league in hitting. In fielding it has made fewer errors than the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers and is among the leaders in double plays.

A siege of illness and injuries has cut into the club's general effectiveness, no doubt, but on the basis of the records it is hard to see how the Cubs lost nine straight in the East.

They will be joined by Lou Novikoff, their celebrated holdout, when they open a home stand tomorrow against New York Giants, who are in seventh place. The combination of Novikoff and Wrigley Field may put them on the upgrade, but they will need to sweep all three games from the Giants to ooze out of the cellar.

Cincinnati's predicament is almost equally puzzling. The Reds' pitching has been as good as expected and the hitting has been better than manager Mill McKechnie dared hope. As a club only the Dodgers are hitting higher. Yet in two games last week-end the Reds left 24 runners stranded.

At present the only thing familiar about the National League standings is the battle between Brooklyn and St. Louis Cardinals for first place.

Boston Braves and Philadelphia Phillies, who have held on to the other berths in the first division, will be put to strenuous tests in their first swing through the West.

BRISTOL LASSIES OPEN SOFTBALL YEAR WITH WIN

Defeat Reliance Girls 8-6 With Pee Wee Colden Whiffing Ten

ALWAYS ON TOP

In the lone holiday sports attraction in Belleville, the Bristol Aircraft girls pried off the Belleville Ladies' Solftball lid with an 8 to 6 win over the Reliance A.C. lassies at the Armouries Lawn Monday night.

P. COLDEN

Bill Davis' Bristol girls scored all of their counters in the first three frames and coasted in behind the strong pitching of Pee Wee Colden, who struck out ten Reliance batters and allowed but seven hits. Harold Kurtz, Reliance girls, started the season off with three runs in the initial frame, none of which were of the earned run nature, as Bristol kicked in with two errors on the first two batters, but settled away to play steady ball. Taking into consideration the majority of the girls on both squads, particularly Reliance, were playing their first league game before an audience exceptionally good girls' softball was dished up to the patrons that lined the Armouries Lawn to welcome the lassies back to that popular summer softball centre.

Both Score Early

Each team scored a trio of counters in the first, with Doris Waite getting the first home run of the season when as the initial batter for Bristol she drove one over the centre field barrier for the circuit. Bristol came back to score four more in the second and then settled away, although Reliance rallied in the fifth for two and were outlucked in the sixth.

Doris Benn, with a circuit blow and a double, placed the winners on the attack, as Bea Zebedee collected two singles while Beat Dalrymple was the only Reliance batter to get more than one hit off the veteran Pee Wee Colden, getting a double and a single. M. McKenna scored after her three base swat inside the park.

Pauline Colden struck out ten and walked two while M. Foster, hurling for Reliance, whiffed one and issued only one walk. Some fine fielding plays resulted in a strong defence being afforded after the teams once shook the stage fright of an opening game. On Wednesday evening at the Armouries Belleville Sargent and the American Optical tee off.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, May 25—(CP)—Seasons don't mean a thing up in the hockey hotbed of Scotland, where a Canadian Navy team just completed a post-season tour of six games witnessed by more than 16,000 screaming enthusiasts.

The boys are back at their training centre Niobe now, telling of the swell times they had at the hands of the citizenry, and of how, playing against picked Scottish teams, they won four, lost one and tied one. The defeat came to Dunfermline where they were whipped 10-6 and the draw, 6-6, was in the last game at Kirkcaldy. The victories were registered at Paisley, Dundee, Ayr and Falkirk.

A smooth-working club, the Canadian unit was led by such stalwarts as Sub-Lieut. Ron. Perowne of Montreal, AB'S H. Millen of Winnipeg and F. Alf of Dauphin, Man.; Stokers R. Smart of Calgary and R. Kennedy of Windsor, Ont.

Other team members included Leading Seamen K. Ross of Schreiber, Ont., and A. J. Mulhern of Montreal, Lieut. J. P. Dewis of Canmore, Alta., and AB. J. Forbes of Port Colborne, Ont.

From Flt. Lt. John Clare, former Toronto newspaperman now with the R. C. A. F. Public Relations, comes this bit:

"If a three-bagger with tht bases loaded is baffling to an Englishman, think what a touchdown pass on a fake and run does to an Arab."

John writes from a bomber station deep in Tunisia that Canadians in the R. A. F. and American fliers have been putting on a bit of touch rugby. The boys compromise on Canadian and American rules by the simple procedure of agreeing that the main thing is to get the ball over the goal-line.

It's tough going, this running on sand, without being bothered by a lot of committee-room rules.

The airmen also play softball—and the Arabs don't know what to make of that game either. Translated freely from Arabic, they think the flying lads are "whacky."

Playing their first official game of softball overseas, "A" Company of the Cape Breton Highlanders whitewashed an Army Field Regiment 8-0.

Prominent in the triumph were Ptes, F. Poirier of Invernesss, N. S.; J. L. McIssac and E. I. McKinnon of Sydney Mines, N. S., and Lieut. A. G. Spence of Moosomin, Sask.

For the losers, Gnr. F. D. Laycock of Vancouver, L. Bdr. J. W. Townley of Toronto and Sgt. A. B. Bulmer of Regina, stood out.

David Morrice of Montreal, one of the better doubles played produced in Canada during the days of Willard Crocker and Jack Wright, hopes to get enough time from his duties to swing out on a tennis court. Dave holds the post of air liaison officer with an R. C. A. F. Army Co-operation Squadron and holds the rank of captain. A few years back he played twice in the Wimbledon championships.

TENDERED OVATION

Windsor, England. (CP) A throng of 30,000 tendered an ovation at the Royal Windsor race track to Jockey Gordon Richards when he rode his 2,750th horse to victory—one more victory than the record made by the famous Fred Archer back in the '80's. Richards is 39 years old.

WHIRLEY BEING PREPARED

New York, (AP)—Whirlaway has been groomed for a comeback after four months of idleness because of an injury to his left foreleg in the $25,000 New Orleans handicap. The fabulous horse is expected to start next month at the Arlington Park meeting, Chicago.

LEAFS DIVIDE DOUBLEHEADER WITH THE ROYALS

Take First in 12 Frames by 9-8 Score but Lose Second 3-0

PLAYING .700 BALL

By The Associated Press

Toronto has found the top of the International League so much to its liking that Maple Leafs have just finished the iron-man stunt of playing doubleheaders on three consecutive days.

Leafs could not better than divide their Victoria Day twin bill with Montreal yesterday, taking the first by a 9-8 score in 12 innings and then dropping the aftermath, 3-0, when they were unable to solve the southpaw slants of veteran Wes Flowers.

That gave the club a 50-50 break for the three days and didn't deal too harshly with the Leafs' huge first place lead although the pace was a far cry from the .733 speed they have shown for the season as a whole.

In other games yesterday, Newark bested Jersey City, 2-0, on the high grade pitching of rookie Walt Dubiel. Syracuse retained second place by downing Baltimore, 4-1; and the Buffalo-Rochester contest was delayed.

Toronto entered the ninth inning of the first game with what appeared to be a safe lead but the Royals, playing before 8,000 home-town celebrants, reached Nick Strincevich for six hits and five runs to deadlock the count at seven. Each team then counted in the 10th with Toronto repeating the tally-making in the 12th.

Wild Pitch Wins Game

At that, it was a wild pitch by rookie Hal Gregg with the bases loaded that provided the impetus for Harry Davis to cross the plate.

The nightcap was all Montreal, especially after the Royals bunched three hits with a walk for all their runs in the fourth frame.

Dubiel, making his first start for the Meyermen and had a one-hitter until he retired in the eighth. He walked two Jersey City batters and fanned five.

Lefty Arnold Carter was the hero of the Syracuse triumph. He scattered the Orioles' nine blows so effectively that they were able to score only once. In addition, he contributed nine assists as the Chiesf totalled 27.

All teams will be idle today, a majority of today's contests having been played off previously.

Lachine Scores One-Sided Win

Montreal, May 25 (CP)—Lachine opened the Senior Group of the Quebec Lacrosse Association with an 18-9 victory over Lachine Manning Depot R.C.A.F. at Lachine arena Sunday.

The Lachine outfit outscored the Flyers in the second and third periods, and held them even in the first and fourth. The home team sewed up the game in the third when they scored seven times without a reply.

Payette led the winners with five goals, while Charlie Phillips, Tommy Angle, Bill Davies and Aubtry getting two apiece. Frankie Eddolis and McKenzie paced the Flyers with three goals each.

CALLURA GETS A DRAW

Toronto, May 25. (CP)—Jimmy Callura of Hamilton and Frankie Brancetti of Toronto fight five rounds to a draw in the main bout on the weekly fistic program at Massey Hall last night.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Didn't Even Look

With tears in her bonny blue eyes, the girl faced her father.

"And when you refused Jack your permission to marry me," she sobbed, "did he go down on his knees?"

Father picked up the newspaper he had been reading before the interruption.

"I don't know," he said grimly; "I didn't notice how he landed."

Softball Moves In

Had it not been for the opening of the Girls' Softball League at the Armouries Monday evening, the conventional Victoria Day sports program in Belleville would have been a minus quantity. True enough, the weatherman smiled for the day, but previous inclement weather had halted all other sporting activities. At the two golf courses players mucked around, but were forced to keep on the higher levels as it was impossible to negotiate the gullies.

Bill Davis' Bristol girls pounded out all of their runs in the first three frames to eke out a narrow margin, 8-6 win over Harold Kurtz' Reliance lassies to pry off the ladies' softball lid and judging from the brand of softball dished up last night the patrons can look forward to a season of fine entertainment at the Armouries.

Look Better Later

With the armed forces having priorities on all wearing materials, uniforms for the girls' teams have not arrived in the city as yet. Only Deacons and the Alemite have uniforms and these are leftovers from the previous season. However, when the lassies get on their diamond glad-rags and a few more practices, some real tussles can be expected, that is if last night's game can be any criterion.

Bill Davis, coach of the Bristol nine, has signed the pick of the players from the Corbin Lock and Bristol teams of 1942 and seems to have the nucleus of a contending nine. Harold Kurtz' Reliance team is composed of first-year players for the greater part, only two or possibly three having ever played before a gallery before last night. Incidentally Pee Wee Colden was up to her old mound tricks, whiffing ten last night, but M. Foster, Kurtz' mound find, held the winners scoreless after the third inning. Tomorrow it's Belleville Sargent versus Optical.

Robert Not Satisfied

It seems Yvon Robert is not satisfied with claiming the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world, but since coming into Ontario last week he now lays claim to Billie Watson's British Empire title. However, Earl McCready and John (Badman) Katan claim priorities on the first shot at "The Whipper's crown and haven't any love for the French-Canadian's boasts.

With this fact now established in Promoter Tunney's office, Wednesday night's Robert-McCready main bout at the Hume Arena takes on a new slant. The winner of this important bout will definitely have the inside track on the Empire title challengers and their meeting should be interesting to watch.

Not satisfied with presenting such an important bout, Marse Tunney added "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, of Cape Town, to meet Maurice Robert, of Montreal. Now, strangely enough, both of these men are British subjects and the time may come when either could challenge Watson, if and when he gained sufficient prestige.

Biggest Plate Upset

Before the largest crowd ever to witness the running of the King's Plate, upwards of 40,000, Charlie Hemstead's rank outside filly, Paolita, won the gallop for the guineas on Saturday. The fact Paolita paid $37.50 just about proves the three-year-old filly was far from being considered as the horses went to the post. Arbor Vita, the favourite was second and Tulachmore third.

Not since 1924, when H. S. Wilson's Maternal Pride won the plate, has there been such an upset. However, we might add here that several of the local bang-tail addicts had the odd deuce down on Paolita and "cleaned house." The strange part of Saturday's program was the fact Charlie Hemstead had his filly entered in the sixth race, as well as the plate. But when the muddy track presented itself, Charlie went out on the limb and it didn't even so much as crack. Such is the sport of kings.

Count Wins Again

That Hertz hurricane, Count Fleet, romped home to win the Withers mile at Belmont track on Saturday, thus giving Mrs. Hertz' great runner the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Withers in succession. Now all Count Fleet has to do is win the Belmont Stakes next month to become the second horse in history to accomplish this great turf feat. Back in 1919 J. K. L. Ross' Canadian-owned horse, Sir Barton, won the quartette and crown, but until Count Fleet accomplishes this American turf feat, Sir Barton is still alone. However, there is no doubt but that Count Fleet will join Sir Barton to become the second to win the Derby, Preakness, Withers and Belmont stakes when the time comes.

Back-Room Pilots Keep 'Em Flying

Tribute Paid to Dare-Devil Fliers Behind the Scenes in British Air Tests

London (CP) — Every bomber raid or fighter sortie carried out by the Royal Air Force is a tribute to the "back room boys" of the R.A.F., a group of dare-devil pilots who risk their lives daily in tests to make the air safer for Britain's fliers and improve her aircraft. They help to keep the R.A.F. on top.

Many are peace-time civilian airmen and they work at a secret experimental station somewhere in Britain. Numerous improvements in aircraft and aircraft devices were first tried out and perfected by these experts who work outside the glare of publicity.

The latest tests include one aimed at reducing the danger of icing in high altitudes. Pilots flew specially equipped planes many miles high to watch icing conditions and test new equipment. They have experimented with pressure cabins to enable aircraft to fly in rarefied altitudes without injuring the crews and with new types of fuel for aircraft engines.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 64

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A dillar, a dollar, an expert or scholar, what makes you be so clever? You used to play a rotten game. But now you're worse than ever.

What gives you the most partner trouble? The opening bid? Or the first response to an opening bid? Most likely it is the first response to an opening bid of one.

Never be in doubt as to what is correct for such a response. Horse Sense rules give it to you straight from the shoulder. There are no exceptions. They never change.

With not more than two tricks, you should pass. That's all there is to that. There are no excepts. There are no in-cases. There are no unlesses. Stand pat on it.

Only when you have more than two tricks should you consider sticking in a responding bid. And then only if you have the other needs for your bid.

What are the other needs? If you respond in a suit, you need two high cards among your tricks and the suit values promised. If you respond in no-trump, you need three high cards.

What are your suit needs? If you assist your partner's suit, you must have adequate support for that suit. If you takeout to your own suit, your suit must be biddable.

Suppose you have more than two tricks with two high cards among them and not adequate support for partner's suit. Then you should not assist.

Suppose you have more than two tricks with two high cards among them and not a biddable suit. Then you should not takeout to a suit.

Suppose you have more than two tricks and a biddable suit but not two hight cards. Then you should not takeout to your suit.

Suppose you have more than two tricks and only two high cards among them but no assist or takeout suit. Then you should not bid no-trump.

If you follow that strictly, you will be a sound bridge partner. Most of your troubles with a partner will disappear. Most of your subsequent bidding wil be safe.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠Q 7
♥9 6 3
♣8 6 4 3 2
♦Q 9 5

You have three tricks with two high cards among them. But you have no biddable suit for a takeout. Nor have you adequate support for your partner's heart suit.

If you have any bid at all, it would have to be in no-trump. And you have not three high cards for three no-trump tricks. So, you should pass.

Hold to that policy and see how fast your bridge improves. It will save you a lot of heartaches, too.

LESSON NO. 65

You know Mrs. Jabberpuss. She talks a good game. She is a verbal glossary of a heterogeneous mass of misinformation. She misquotes it, with abandon. But definitely.

She wins every argument because she talks louder and faster than you. If she is cornered, she drags in her favorite authority. It is that old, anemic, unreliable fraud: "They say."

If she underbids and you stop too soon, she cries: "Why dintcha keep it open?" If she overbids and you go too far, she exclaims: "I was signing you off."

She got her bridge by dint of hard study. She memorized several long tables of fractions. She learned many complex rules that have since turned handsprings. But she knows not what is why when.

She should get a touch of Horse Sense in her brain. It would tell her the facts of bridge. Her whole outlook on the game would then change quickly. It wuold give her know-how.

She needs to know three basic rules. One is that an opening bid of one shows five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. Another is, a responding bid shows more than two tricks with two high cards.

The third basic rule has to do with the order in which the first bid should be selected. Just follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump; in that order of preference.

With those three rules, a player has a good start. With those three rules, the first bid will always be correct. That would save much futile bickering with jabberpusses.

You have this hand:

♠K 10 8 4
♥9 6 2
♦A Q J 5
♣8 5

If partner starts with an opening bid of one spade, your first response is two diamonds. You have enough tricks and high cards for a bid. Takeout first to your suit.

You may huff. You may puff. You may try to blow the house down. But even a wolf looks first for a takeout.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, May 25 — (CP) — After months of cold weather stove-hugging in dispersal huts, Canadian fighter pilots with the advent of warm breezes have taken to volleyball in a big way.

The Spitfire boys play the game hard and have developed plenty of skill and tricks while waiting for the signal that sends them into the skies to challenge Nazi planes. The coming of longer days means much longer periods of waiting "at readiness" and volleyball relieves the boredom.

On a grassy sward only a few hops and jumps from their planes, members of the City of Oshawa squadron play on a court marked out by an enterprising pilot, Sqdn. Ldr. Fos Bolton, D.F.C., London, Ont., leader of the unit, thinks it's a great idea.

Last fall Canadian bomber and night-fighter squadrons in the Midlands fell for the game so hard they organized inter-squadron championships.

Squash, too, is widely played by the R.C.A.F. boys, practically all permanent R.A.F. stations were equipped with courts long before the war came along, now courts are considered almost standard equipment on any new stations under construction.

Local Athletes Win Trenton Athletic Meet

Trenton Rotary Stage a Successful Holiday Youth Program and Sports Meet

Trenton, May 25 — (Special) — Young and old residents of town entered into the week-end of activities sponsored by the Rotary Club. On Friday afternoon local juniors took over the town offices, holding a session of council and passing some very worthy suggestions along to their superiors. The office of mayor was taken by Bruce Ireland, son of W. H. Ireland, who for many years was mayor of Trenton. Serving with Mayor Bruce on the council were Bill Weaver, Vic. Ryan, Barney Lesperance, Edward Simmons, Percy Gitelman and Rod Campbell.

Eddie McDonald took over the office of Chief Constable and Ted Snider the Town Clerk. The boys, following their council meeting, made a tour of the police station and town offices.

Sunday was set aside as a day in the Churches and many Rotarians and children attended, being well rewarded by splendid services. It was said, however, by one local minister, that while this year a Sunday had been set aside by Rotarians and children urged to attend service he thought it would be a wise idea if next year the children would set aside a day and invite Rotarians to come and worship.

Monday afternoon and evening marked the culmination of "Youth Week" by the Hobby Fair held in the College St. School, the results of which will be made known tomorrow.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, May 25—(AP)—The democratic game of tennis . . . sounds kind of funny, doesn't it? But that's one of the things they try to impress on you at the United Lawn Tennis Association offices these days. . . "Tennis," says President Holcombe Ward, "has come a long way since the old Newport days." . . . And what Ward wants is for more kids to learn the game, no matter which side of the tracks they live on. . . "We're trying to encourage public parks play and to persuade high schools to engage competent coaches, not only for teams but to teach the boys and girls the right way to hit the ball and how to place their feet. About 1,500 high schools have such coaches."

One-Minute Sports Page

The Yankees drew 62,742 cash customers during their two weeks in the west, or about as many as they used to get for a Sunday doubleheader at the Stadium when they were going good. . . Bob Plaxico, the Canton, O., reinsman, has enlarged his stable of harness horses to 26 and figures to have a big season, since many rivals are cutting down because of the shortage of grooms. . . Within a couple of weeks after he first tried playing squash tennis Pierre Etchebaster, the pro court tennis champ, was able to play on even terms with Joe Lordi, the squash tennis boss. And about the only resemblance between the two games is that they're played with balls and racquets.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Desperadoes"

Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes and Edgar Buchanan head the top-flight cast of Columbia's "The "Desperadoes," new Technicolor western at the McCarthy Theatre. A motion picture jammed with the excitement of smashing fists, crashing bullets and thundering stampedes, "The Desperadoes" is a breathless, beautiful example of entertainment at its best.

Charles Vidor directed the new film, story of a range outlaw's fight to bring law and order into a frontier town, in order that he himself might reform. Riding into Red Valley in order to do a bit of safe-cracking for the town banker, Cheyenne Rogers discovers first that the job has already been done, and, second, that the daughter of Unle Willie, the banker's conniving partner, is an exceptionally charming young woman. He learns, too, that the sheriff of the town is a former outlaw with whom he once rode the desert trails, and the Countess, proprietor of Red Valley's most lavish gambling palace, was his childhood sweetheart.

These are the principal characters of "The Desperadoes;" the principal elements include not only romance but riot—hard hitting blows and swiftly-sped stampedes, lynch law and lightning triggers. On the technical side, "The Desperadoes" presents to McCarthy Theatre audiences one of the most beautiful displays of hues and scenery ever captured by Technicolor, brilliant characterizations and flawless direction.

FFastest-climbing star in Hollywood today, Glen Ford adds to his laurels as the soft-spoken Cheyenne, who couldn't stop once he started killing. Randolph Scott appears as the sheriff, and Edgar Buchanan as Uncle Willie, a shootin' fool who never could find his gun. Claire Trevor is the Countess and lovely Evelyn Keyes appears as Uncle Willie's daughter. Lesser roles are equally well-played by Porter Hall, as the banker; Guinn Williams, as a dynamite-loving bad man, and Bernard Nedell, as a villain of deepest dye.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Lady Gangster"
(First Belleville Showing)

A distinguished trio made up of Faye Emerson, Julie Bishop and Frank Wilcox have the stellar roles in "Lady Gangster", a hard hitting, fast-shooting, swiftly moving story of crime and its consequences. The thrilling film opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

There follows in order for Dot Burton (Faye Emerson) arrest, conviction, the Big House, despair, disillusionment and the belated realization—through the devotion and unselfish aid of Kenneth Phillips (Frank Wilcox)—that the simple homely virtues alone are worth while.

"Tales of Manhattan"

A capacity audience at the Capitol Theatre last night saw stars. They saw Charles Boyer and Rita Hayworth, Ginger Rogers and Henry Fonda, and their double-barrelled romance thrilled them. They saw, too, Charles Laughton and Edward G. Robinson— and how they were moved by the compelling dramatic adventures of those topflight favorites! And the audience chuckled continuously at the grimly humorous predicament of Paul Robeson Ethel Waters and "Rochester".

All of this audience at the Capitol Theatre saw last night in 20th Century-Fox's monumental motion picture achievement, "Tales of Manhattan". And how they loved it! They were awestruck by the magnitude and prestige of the cast.

An interesting news reel includes the program.

AT THE BELLE

"IMMORTAL SERGEANT"

John Brophy's immortal war romance, "Immortal Sergeant" co-starring Maureen O'Hara, Henry Fonda and Thomas Mitchell is now on the Belle Theatre screen. This first great story of a man in love—and in war will be preceded by the Belle Latest World Events, a colorful cartoon and an entertaining screen miniature "Climbing the Peaks."

"THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD"

Anne Revere is Jack Benny's secretary in 20th Century-Fox's "The Meanest Man in the World," next at the Belle Theatre, and she gets paid in laughs. Benny is a lawyer with only one client in the hilarious comedy which co-stars Priscilla Lane and features Rochester, Edmund Gwenn and Helene Reynolds.

MOST EXCITING ROLE

Carole Landis has her most exciting role in 20th Century-Fox's "Manila Calling", stirring story of America's first heroic guerilla fighters. In the film annotmced for the added feature attraction, she is featured with Lloyd Nolan, Cornel Wilde and James Gleason.

2-REEL COLOR CARTOON

"Flying Jalopy" a multiple-reel Walt Disney color cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

Glenn Ford shares romantic honors with lovely Evelyn Keyes in Columbia's new technicolor drama, "The Desperadoes," now at the McCarthy Theatre. Story of the old west, the film also features Randolph Scott, Claire Trevor and Edgar Buchanan.

Inflation . . . that's when prices go skyrocketing up so's wages can never catch them . . . is caused by a lot of people wanting to buy more things than we can spare the men, machines or material to make—especially in wartime. PASSING DREAM

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 23

The apartment of McCormick's friends was a comfortable, conservative one on the second floor of an old town house. A fire was burning low in the fireplace and the Sunday papers were scattered over the hearth rug.

He took Temple's coat and hat and put them in the hall closet. When he turned to the living-room she was sitting in a chair beside the fireplace. She looked at him as he poked at the fire and emptied the ash tray of last night's dead cigarettes. She was thinking how purposeful he was. How quick and deft and decisive were his movements. He made her uncomfortable and put her on guard. Why? She did not know why. Suddenly she was angry that he had disrupted her plans for the day.

But when he sat opposite her, he said gently, "You've no idea how good it is to enjoy the comforts of a home again, however briefly. If I was brusque, I'm sorry, Temple. The little authority that has been vested in me hasn't made me that way with my friends. You see, I haven't forgotten you."

"I haven't forgotten what you said to me the night before I came to Washington —about the light of learning and the lights in American homes."

He smiled. "Yes, I remember that little speech, too. I still feel the same about it. That's been almost a year, hasn't it?"

Her eyes stirred. "Only that little while? It seems much longer to me."

"I'd have seen you before if I had known where you lived. Virginia Reynolds got your address from your mother and sent it to me. This year 1941 has been for me all action and little else. But I've loved action so much that I know I can never go back to that other life again. Where there is action and creation in chemistry in the future is where I'll have to be."

"You're thinking of the future? I'm glad to hear someone speak of it. I—I don't know where I'll be."

"I know where I want you to be."

Temple looked at him, smiling, her eyes questioning again, and she asked with a short laugh, "Where?"

"With me."

He nodded. Then he arose and went to the fireplace and rested one arm on the mantel. "Temple, I think I'm so delighted to find you free that I'm shooting off long before I intended to. This is no build-up. This is it. It goes back to two people who sat next to each other several times and never got to know each other at all. I might have stopped the car on one of the quiet university lanes and made love to you. I thought of it. Then we would have got to know each other pretty well in that respect. But that would have been dangerous and unsatisfying. To you I'd still have been a teacher making passes at a former student. I knew that we could never make love to each other until we got out of the town and met as equals.

"You've probably forgotten I told you that I feared you more than any girl I'd ever known. . .I feared you because I loved you before you were ready for it. This is sudden and violent. I know that. I've been away almost a year. I haven't written to you. I haven't seen you. But I've been away learning how to be an officer and I wouldn't write nice polite letters to you. Now that I've said all this I've nothing to offer you. But I told you because I want you to think of me as a man in love with you. I won't have you thinking of me as a former teacher who happened to turn up in the same place where you happened to be. Not the old relationship between us, Temple. We've certainly outgrown that. The relationship between men and women reaches a climax much sooner now than it would have a few years ago. These are sudden and violent and unpredictable times. At least we can be honest with each other now."

She sat there looking at him, her heart beating fast, her eyes fascinated by thoughts and feelings not quite formed.

McCormick smiled. "If there's a waiting list, just put me on it. I'll wait my turn. I've never been good before at waiting for what I wanted. I've always gone after it and gotten it, the hard way, usually. I have known many girls and I've often wondered why you topped them all. You're my peculiar fixation, the way you look, the way you walk and speak and use your hands, and yours is a fine and lovely mind. For two years I've carried in my own mind the firm belief that one day you and I would have the finest love affair of this or any year."

"You're offering me a love affair?"

"Not in the popular sense of the word. I want to marry you when this war is over. You're the only girl I've ever wanted to marry. You're the only girl I've ever known who could go on being exciting and interesting to me. But for now I just want to see you. I had to say this, Temple. I had to be sudden and violent. Else we'd have gone back to the old way of not understanding each other."

She was cold. The fire did not warm her. She shook her head slowly.

"What does that mean, Temple?" She looked up. "The times have made you honest with me. They've made me—silent. You need not be concerned about our going back. You can never go back. That's one very important thing I've learned."

She and Jud could never go back to last May.

"You're not happy."

"I'm not free. I should have told you that immediately. I'm not free. I can't see you again."

"You're seeing me now. You're seeing me today."

"Then we'll have to make it all today."

He nodded. "All for today then." He smiled. "Very well. We're going to a wedding at five. Not a young couple. They're quite middle-aged, in fact. It seems she's been putting him off for years. He's a superior officer and I'm supposed to be in evidence."

"But I'm not dressed for a wedding." Temple did not want to go to a wedding. She did not want to hear the same words that had been said over Jud and her repeated over other people, strangers.

"You gave me today, you know. I'll take you back to your place and pick you up. The wedding is in Alexandria." He passed his hand over his forehead. "I've said my piece that has been in rehearsal for a pretty long time. Tell me about you after I get some wine and cigarettes. It seems to me we did this before, had wine and a cigarette."

When he returned from the dining-room with wine and cigarettes, she was standing beside the fireplace. They stood there together with glasses in their hands.

Temple said, "Keep them flying."

"You feel very strongly about that, don't you?"

"I want to live in a world where there are not so many good-byes, where there is peace and order and the right to be an individual. Isn't that why they're flying?"

"Don't ask me. Tell me."

"Then that's why they're flying. It's one of the few things I'm sure of now."

He looked over the rim of his glass. His eyes were smiling. "This is the closest I've been of kissing you except the last time we were together."

She smiled. "You may not kiss me."

"I didn't say I was going to. I won't until you want it as much as I. You're my cross as well as my fixation, Temple."

"You're . . ."

"I'm the complement of you. That's the one thing I'm sure of. And about the future—well, I'm neither a blind optimist nor a dreary pessimist. I think we'll win because eventually we'll be able to deliver the goods. And after we've won I hope we're simpler, humbler people than we were before. It's going to be tough on those who've lived on superficial, passing, sensations and waiting for somebody to die and leave you his money. It's going to be mighty tough on those who've lived for the gratification of personal wants and accumulating useless possessions. They are not lying so that old international disputes over boundry lines and tariffs and personal grudges and graft, all silenced now, can start all over again. They're not flying for financiers or—for any political party or for any royal family. They're flying so that little people can live in peace and be individuals."

"It isn't difficult for you to speak of your patriotism."

"Is it difficult for a preacher to speak of God? It is often very difficult and embarrassing for his flock to hear him speak of God. I'm not as confident as I sound, Temple, or, perhaps, as I look. This past year of training and rubbing shoulders with all classes of people, of getting away from the quiet walls of a university has opened my eyes to many of my own shortcomings. You can't rub shoulders with the masses and not feel small and humble.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were standing around the letter box talking and arguing and Shorty Judge said, Where's Glasses Magee, let's get him to bring out his basket ball and have a game of pass.

And we went and rang his bell to see if he was in. Which he was, proving it by opening the door himself, saying, I cant come out. I came home with tar on my hands and clothes and my mother wouldn't believe I got it just by watching some men working, so I have to stay in, he said.

Well G, if she believed it would she let you come out? I said, and Glasses said, Sure, but she's not going to believe it.

Then lend us your basket ball a while, will you, Glasses? Shorty Judge said, and Glasses said, Nothing doing, that basket ball goes where I go.

Meaning stays where he stays, and Puds Simkins said, Well tell her again and maybe she'll decide to believe it.

Sure, Glasses, maybe you didn't tell her right, Sid Hunt said. Tell her you were standing so close to the men you couldn't help getting some on you, he said, and Glasses said, That's what I did tell her, and she claimed it was impossible to stand that close.

Tell her one of the men was so friendly he invited you to sit on his lap and watch, I said, and Glasses said, Who's going to believe that?

Meaning not his mother, and Puds said, Tell her somebody must of hipmotized you and the tar was on you when you came to.

Aw, tell her yourself and see what happens, Glasses said.

Which just then his mother started to call him in a mad voice and he quick shut the door, and us fellows went around to the firehouse to see if Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver felt like talking.

Nice Specimens Of Trout Caught In Northern Lakes

Holiday anglers from Belleville came out of North Hastings with smiles on their faces on Monday as some splendid catches of the elusive finny beauties were recorded.

In the Weslemkoon area J. E. Shortt, president of the Belleville Anglers' Club, caught as beautiful a speckled trout as any disciple of Izaak Walton could wish to have rise to the bait. Angling with a small minnow Mr. Shortt hooked a "speckled beauty" measuring 16½ inches long and 9½ inches of girth. The fish weighed two pounds eight ounces and Mr. Shortt is naturally elated over his catch as it was the largest speckled trout reported by the Belleville fishing expedition. Those in this party included Mr. Shortt, L. V. Hefkey, Jas. Haggerty, Dr. Van Blakslee, "Cap" Bottum and J. B. Boyce. Other lesser catches of a good size were reported.

At Salmon Lake A. H. Ketcheson, Capt. Morse and Fred Deacon, Jr., struck fishermen's luck while angling for the battling lake trout and after a successful morning over the lake reported a splendid catch of these elusive finny beauties weighing from three to seven pounds, which is "good fishing" in any man's waters.

HOUSE-TO-HOUSE SEARCH

Stockholm, May 25—(AP) — A Berlin dispatch to the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet reported today that Nazi troops had made a house-to-house search for guerillas in Minsk, German-occupied Russian city of 130,000 population.

Every resident of the city was reported examined and all apartments and homes were searched. A large number of persons were arrested and a quantity of arms seized, the dispatch said.

Fair Quantity Of Asparagus Sells Readily

Asparagus was quite freely offered on the Belleville produce market Saturday with half-pound bunches retailing at 20 cents or 35 cents the pound, a drop in price of five cents the bunch from last week.

Morrell mushrooms were offered for the first time at 15 cents the berry box.

Egg prices were steady with grade "A" bringing 38 cents the dozen, mediums 35 cents and specials 40 cents the dozen. Dairy butter sold at the usual 40 cents the pound. Broilers bringing up to 45 cents pound with mature fowl selling at from 38 to 40 cents pound. Large well-finished birds brought up to $2.85 each.

Transplanting stocks of cabbage, tomatoes and onions were freely offered on the outside market at from 90 cents to $1 flat and up to $1.50 per flat for onions. Potted plants in season brought 25 cents each.

Rhubarb and onions brought 10 cents a bunch or two for 15 cents, while carrots and parsnips sold at 40 cents a peck. Russet apples sold at 65 cents the peck and Red Seeks at 50 cents a half peck. Ben Davis sold at 75 cents a peck. Horse radish sold at two bunches for 15 cents.

Only a few potatoes were offered and were quickly bought up at the ceiling price of $2.44 per bag for the table variety. Peck lots sold at 55 cents.

Fresh mudcats saw good demand at 25 cents the pound, while white fish sold at 35 cents a pound. Suckers were three fish for 25 cents.

Farmers displayed the largest offering of young pigs to be seen on the local market this season, claiming that lack of help and scarcity of feed was responsible for the many pigs offered. Prices ranged from $7 to $8 for six weeks' old porkers up to $10 each for ten weeks' pigs.

Car Accessories Disappear From Parking Lots

The stealing of automobile accessories from motor vehicles left parked on city parking lots has increased to such proportions that police authorities are of the opinion that some parties are attempting to completely remodel a motor car by means of stealing such accessories as desired.

Over the weekend two chrome headlights were stolen from a used car at the rear of a garage operated on Front Street by Mr. C. R. Clapp. In order to steal the headlights the robbers had to scale an eight foot wire fence placed around the rear parking lot. Mr. Clapp is now considering charging the wire fence with electricity in an effort to keep marauders from prowling about the premises and stealing motor vehicle accessories.

The headlights were removed from a 1932 model used Ford sedan and were of chrome finish and practically as good as new. Police investigated and are of the opinion that the same party to take Mr. Clapp's headlights recently stole other motor vehicle accessories off Belleville parking lots.

POLICE BLOTTER

Saturday night police were called to Highland Ave., where it was reported that a man was molesting women along the public thoroughfare. Before police could arrive at the scene the party had disappeared.

A. F. Lazier, 24 Hillcrest Ave., reported juveniles had trampled on and about his private flower bed over the weekend destroying young growing flowers. Police later learned the names of several lads seen loitering in that area and they will be summoned into Chief Probert's office for further reprimands.

Property Damage Results

Property damage resulted to an automobile driven by Thomas Hill, Shannonville, when his motor car was struck by another vehicle at the intersection of Dundas and George Sts., on Saturday. The other automobile is said to have been driven by Edwin Dunnett, 256 Coleman St., and who failed to observe the stop street sign when proceeding north on George Street with the result his car was in collision with the west bound hill vehicle. Extensive damage to the right running board and fenders of Mr. Hill's car was reported by Plainclothes Constable Wright following his investigations.

ONLY TWO RUNS OVER WEEKEND

Gasoline appliances suddenly breaking into flames at 212 Coleman Street and at Doyle's Drug Store caused the local fire department two runs over the weekend. Only slight damage was reported by firemen.

Early Sunday morning the department was called to the Coleman Street residence of Mrs. Royle, where her gasoline stove had sudden burst into flame causing damage to the oilcloth on the kitchen floor and causing burns on Mrs. Royle's hands. Monday afternoon a gasoline torch used by workmen in laying a new floor at Doyle's Drug Store broken out in flames and the department was called as a precaution. No damage resulted, it was reported.

Three of Family Enlist in CWACS

Feminine members of the Floyd Watson family, 52 Octavia Street, show a very definite preference for the well-cut khaki uniforms worn by the girls on active service with the Canadian Army it was revealed here over the weekend when it was learned three of the Watson girls had enlisted simultaneously in the C.W.A.C. at Kingston.

Ranging from 18 to 25 years, the three local girls, Ida, Evelyn and Isobel, returned home over the weekend on a brief enlistment leave before reporting back to Kingston on Friday. From Kingston they will proceed to Kitchener for their six weeks' basic training course.

Just why the Watson girls all chose the C.W.A.C. was not disclosed by their mother when she was speaking with the Ontario Intelligencer this morning. "They all seemed to prefer the army," she said, "and when one decided to enlist they all went."

The idea of enlisting to "do their bit for their country" has been entertained by the girls for some time but a recent illness suffered by their mother delayed their departure. No other member of the Watson family is on active service.

Popular among the younger set in the city, the Watson girls have been working in the city and resigned their jobs to enlist. Ida, the youngest, has been working as a clerk at the local Zeller's store, while the two older girls Evelyn, 20, and Isobel have been working as telephone operators. Recently Evelyn has been working as a clerk at Doyle's Drug Store.

Trenton and District

High School Students Give Fine Concert Sun.

Trenton, (Special.) — Pupils of the Trenton High School presented a very fine concert in the Trent Theatre on Sunday evening in aid of the Chinese Relief. A capacity crowd was in attendance and a considerable sum was raised for this worthy cause.

Chairman for the evening was Rev. J. L. Hutchinson and musical numbers included several selections by the orchestra, led by Don Mawson. A clarinet solo by Bill Weaver, trumpet solo by Ted Snider, a solo by Ken Ryan, cornet and trombone duet by Don Mawson and Ted Snider, vocal solo by Alice Wilkins, euphonium "Monogram Polka" by Robert Blakely and saxaphone solo by Edward Simmons.

A feature of the evening was an address on "Incorporating Food in Allied Strategy" by Percy Gitelman, winner of the Senior Oratorical Contest held during the week by the Trenton Rotary Club.

Mayor H. R. Cory on behalf of the Chinese Relief Committee thanked the High School staff and all those who had taken part also the large audience present for their much appreciated support.

Tea and Sale Held

St. George's Girls' Branch of the Women's Auxiliary held a most successful tea and sale in the Canterbury Hall on Friday afternoon, when despite unfavorable weather, a large crowd attended.

The guests were received by Mrs. J. L. Hutchinson, and Miss Alma Goodsell, president of the Club. Miss Mary Salisbury took the tickets.

The tea table which was artistically decorated with Spring flowers and green tapers in silver holders, the work of Mrs. (Dr.) Crowe, was presided over by Miss A. Hayes and Miss H. Bensley. Serving the guests were Miss Shirley Burke and Miss Helen Booth assisted by girls of the Junior W.A.

Miss Margaret Barry had charge of the fancy goods sale while Mrs. R. Burke convened the Home Cooking and Miss Mabel Orrill the potted plants.

The local Independent Order of Oddfellows attended Grace Church on Sunday morning and were addressed by Rev. J. L. McKee, minister of the Church. They were accompanied by the Lions' Club Boys' Band headed by Mr. V. P. Carswell.

Two bicycles were reported to local police as stolen during the weekend. A C.C.M. maroon, with brown handle grips owned by Gordon Beatty, Sidney Street, was taken from the East side of Dam No. 1 on Saturday and a Majestic Red with double frame was taken from the outside local armouries. The latter bike belonged to Byron Elmey of the York Road.

Small Boy Hit

A small boy age 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, College Street, was struck on Sunday by a car owned and driven by Arthur McCaskey, Consecon, as he was driving west on Dundas Street, opposite Brown's Drug Store. The lad is said to have darted from the sidewalk directly into the path of the car. He was taken to the office of Dr. E. A. McQuade where he was found to be suffering from slight abrasions on the left side of the face.

Ninety-Nine Receive First Inoculation For Whooping Cough

At the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Victorian Order last week, Nurse Soutar stated that ninety-nine pre-school children of Belleville recently received their first whooping cough inoculation at the V.O.N. Clinic. During the winter months inoculation clinics against diphtheria were conducted, eighty-four infants and pre-school children receiving the full benefit of the work.

In April 550 visits were made to 161 patients. Of these visits 195 were to mothers and babies, 271 were of medical or surgical nature including pneumonia, cancer, chicken pox, flu and assisting the doctor in minor operations. The balance of the calls were of an educational nature, chiefly child hygiene visits, which means visits to infants who are over six weeks of age and pre-school age.

In the absence of the president, Mr. H. B. Fetterly conducted the meeting and complimented Miss Soutar on the interesting and detailed report of the local work.

Nurses' Convention Report

An interesting report on the Ontario Registered Nurses' Association Convention was presented by Miss Soutar. Reference was made to the Ontario Registered Nurses' Association convention was presented by Miss Soutar. Reference was made to the Ontario nurses' contribution of $27,920 sent to the aid of the British Nurses' War Victims' Fund. Outstanding speakers at the convention included Dr. Coutz, Toronto surgeon; Miss Edna Moore, Chief Public Health Nurse for Ontario Department of Health Dr. Blotz, Director of the St. George Nursery School, University of Toronto, and Dr. Weir, Director of the Post War Rehabilitation Program.

Miss Soutar said of the banquet there were enough Belleville nurses present to fill a ten-seat table, one of those being one of the Belleville graduates, Miss Jennie Ives, recently appointed assistant superintendent of the Toronto General Hospital. Reference was made to the address of Miss Edna Moore, who urged more preparation of those chosen for administrative posts. Of the post war era Miss Moore said that "health needs at home and in other lands will require the services of many public health nurses. We must be ready to supply many well-prepared, experienced nurses who can apply the principles of public health nursing under varying conditions." Miss Edith Young of Peterborough said that the changing of private to semi-private wards had helped to reduce overcrowding in hospitals from communities which had an influx of war-workers. Dr. Blotz spoke of the opportunity of the public health nurse in pre-school education.

Dr. Weir pointed out in his address to the nurses that health insurance was coming and that nursing was on the threshold of greater expansion. After the war a great many more public health and institutional nurses will be needed, particularly when health insurance is adopted. "We must plan now for after the peace—we must see that this Province adopts health insurance. We must consider women returning from the military services."

HOW TO COMBAT
Rheumatic Pains

Rheumatic pains are often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pains. Treat rheumatic pains by keeping your kidneys in good condition. HOW TO RELIEVE
PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

Panic-Stricken Crew of Blockade Runner Scuttle Ship Killing 112

(By ALFRED E. WALL)

(U.S. Naval Correspondent with the British Fleet)

A Northern British Naval Base, May 18 (Delayed) (AP)—The panic-stricken crew of the German blockade runner Regensburg set off scuttling charges and caused the deaths of almost the entire ship's company when intercepted in Denmark Strait recently by the British cruiser Glasgow.

(The Regensburg was one of two Axis ships attempting to break the Allied blockade of the continent which were scuttled after interception by British warships, an Admiralty communique said last Monday. The other was the 4,793-ton Silvaplane, which was sent to the bottom 200 miles off Cape Finisterre, Spain. The entire crew of the Silvaplane was rescued.)

Aboard the Glasgow today Captain E. M. Evans-Lombe and other officers told the story of how they were able to rescue only six members of the Regensburg's 118 crewmen.

"I am convinced that the captain, officers and crew of the Regensburg must have been completely panic-stricken," Capt. Evans-Lombe explained.

"Survivors told how confusion reigned aboard the Regensburg when we intercepted the ship. When we fired a warning shot at the beginning of the action they said they thought they were being attacked by an airplane. It was sheer madness to scuttle the ship in such a terrific gale in a temperature which was below zero."

"I schtop," the Regensburg signalled after the Glasgow fired the warning shot.

The Glasgow then signalled the Regensburg to follow her, but, soon scuttling charges were seen to burst out and the crew started leaping overboard into the icy sea in the face of a biting blizzard.

No further signal came from the Regensburg and after a while the Glasgow opened fire with her four-inch armament. The Regensburg, loaded with rubber, did not go down immediately and Glasgow polished her off with two torpedoes.

In the mountainous seas it was impossible for the Glasgow to launch boats for rescue operations. Only one officer and five ratings were fished from the sea with great difficulty.

Some other members of the Regensburg's crew drifted alongside the Glasgow on floats, but they were already frozen stiff in the intense cold. Those rescued were turned over to military authorities in Iceland.

The Regensburg sailed from Rangoon, Burma, three months ago.

'GREAT BOMBER STRENGTH' BLASTS DUESSELDORF

400 PLANES POUND ITALY'S OUTER DEFENCES

Heart of Battered Ruhr Is Main Objective of Raid

Force Sent Over Nearly as Strong As One Which Hit Dortmund Sunday

27 BOMBERS LOST

London, May 26 — (CP) — An armada of R.A.F. heavy bombers, probably as strong as the force which unloaded more than 2,000 tons of explosives on Dortmund Sunday night, blasted Duesseldorf last night in a continuing offensive apparently aimed at obliterating Germany's arms centres one by one.

Observers estimated that perhaps 500 bombers — at least three-quarters of them giant, four-motored craft capable of carrying a tremendous weight of high explosives — participated in the assault.

Duesseldorf is an old target for Canadian airmen, and members of the Canadian bomber group lent weight to last night's attack, supplying a goodly proportion of the total planes engaged.

Twenty-seven bombers were lost in the attack, said the announcement, which reorted the assault was carried out "in very great strength." Several other targets in Germany also were reported bombed, though Duesseldorf, in the heart of the battered Ruhr, was the main objective.

It was the second great attack on Germany in three nights, and gave force to the threat emanating from the Churchill-Roosevelt conferences that Hitler's war power is to be destroyed at its roots.

Duesseldorf is situated on the Rhine 24 miles northwest of Cologne and 50 miles southwest of Dortmund, target of Sunday's record-smashing raid. It is Germany's third largest inland port and has iron and steel works comparable to the great Krupp organization.

Duesseldorf has been raided 51 times before — the last time on Jan. 27, when a strong force of Halifaxes and Lancasters dropped several hundred tons of bombs on the city in a space of 20 minutes.

Tanks, guns, torpedoes and parts of submarines and aircrafts are among the products of Duesseldorf's factories. The city, which had a pre-war population of 429,000, also is an important communications centre.

Last month Sir Archibald Sinclair, British Air Minister, told the House of Commons that 380 acres of the city had been laid in ruins.

Medium bombers were out during daylight yesterday with an escort of Spitfires and again battered the oft-bombed Nazi airfield at Abbeville behind the French coast. Fighter squadrons, in supporting sweeps, strafed other objectives in Northern France. Two bombers and two fighters were reported lost.

Stabs Cost Enemy Eight Planes

Four were brought down — three by anti-aircraft fire and the fourth by R.A.F. fighter planes — as the Germans struck at two southeast coast towns in mid-afternoon with a force of some 25 planes, the largest concentration of enemy daylight raiders in some time.

The Nazi attackers dropped a number of bombs and then turned their guns on buildings in the towns. In one town, several homes were flattened, burying some persons and killing at least 12.

A flight of Focke-Wulf 190's, heading toward a southeast coast town at dusk last night, was ambushed by lurking R.A.F. Spitfires. Four of the enemy planes were sent spinning into the sea and others were believed to have been damaged.

Up to last night, the month of May had brought four great saturation raids against the heart of Germany's war production in the Ruhr Valley. Two — at Dortmund and Duisburg in which the RCAF. contributed — were top-weight bombings of the war. A summary yesterday showed that the four attacks cost the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. 145 planes.

2 Canadian Bombers Missing

R.C.A.F. headquarters announced two Canadian bombers are missing from last night's raid.

Edsel Ford, 49-year-old president of the Ford Motor Co., who died today from undulant fever, a persistent painful disease.

Four Settlements Taken by Reds In Small Action

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, June 26 — (AP) — Land action moved today from the south to the north central sector of the Soviet front, where the Russians reported they had captured four settlements, but on the whole an uneasy calm continued to prevail over the long battle lines.

The great airbattles of the current softening-up campaign continues, with Red airmen hammering again and again at German communications and supplies—particularly railway stations, supply dumps and truck columns.

As on numerous previous occasions, Russian bombers struck behind the German lines. Rosvavl, Yelnya and Spas Demenskoe — central front junctions through which pour supplies to the vital salient not far from Moscow — suffered damage from heavy bombs.

The midday communique also reported a flare-up on the approaches to Leningrad where it said eight enemy planes were shot down by Red Baltic Sea pilots.

Col. Nikolai Akimov, reviewing the military situation, said: "The Germans evidently have been unable to recover fully from the blows inflicted on them at Stalingrad, the Middle Don and Northern Caucasus.

"It would be a mistake, however, to think the military might of the Germans has already been smashed and that they will make no attempt to resume active operations on a broad scale.

"On the contrary, there are a number of signs indicating that the Germans are preparing intensively for the summer campaign of 1943 on the Soviet-German front."

EDSEL FORD DIES AT DETROIT HOME EARLY WEDNESDAY

Only Son of Founder Of Vast Industrial Empire Critically Ill Ten Days

PRES. OF COMPANY

Detroit, May 26 — (AP) — Edsel Ford, 49, the only son of Henry Ford, founder of the vast Ford industrial empire, died today at 1:30 a.m. at his home at Grosse Pointe Shores, a Detroit suburb.

The younger Ford, who was chief executive of the Ford Company for 24 years, died from a condition developing from a former stomach malady. Edsen became seriously ill 10 days ago.

His four children were here at the time of his death. The three sons, Henry, Benson and Williams, all of whom are in the armed services, had been granted leaves so that they would return to the family estate. The daughter, Josephine, lives here.

His father, now 79, had done that before him, when he was head of the Ford Company during the first great war.

It was under Edsel's guidance, however, that Ford performed its tremendous conversion to war production, and from its plants flow 4-engined bombing planes, tanks, jeeps, amphibious jeeps, anti-tank units and much other war equipment.

Edsel is regarded as one of the leading executives among the world's industrial leaders, despite the fact that his father's fame overshadowed him.

In addition to his duties as President of the Company, the younger Ford was also its Treasurer and performed the duties of General Manager, although that office did not actually exist in the executive setup of the company.

He was born in Detroit Nov. 6, 1893, when his father was completing his first automobile in a brick barn in Detroit's Bagley Avenue.

Edsel began work in the plant of the Ford Company in 1912. After five years of factory work he was elected vice-president and in 1919 after the Ford family had brought out all minority stockholders he was made president.

Besides his automotive interests, Edsel Ford was President of the Detroit Institute of Arts, a trustee of National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, member of the National Advisory Committee of the American Red Cross; Vice-President and Trustee of Henry Ford Hospital; Director of the Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit; Chairman of the Board of Detroit University School, and President of the Ford Foundation.

Edsel was the only child of Henry and Clara Bryant Ford. He was married in 1916 to Eleanor Lawthian Clay, daughter of a Detroit merchant.

Edsel Ford had many of the physical characteristics of his father. He was of serious appearance, of average height, slender and of wiry build. He did not always see eye to eye with the elder Ford on matters of business policy but there was a deep-rooted bond of affection between them.

Diplomatic Observers Doubt Italy Will Be Invaded This Summer

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(Former Chief of The Associated Press Bureau in Rome)

Washington, May 26—(AP)—Diplomatic observers expressed doubt today that Italy would be invaded by the Allies this summer, although they said the threat of invasion would hang constantly over that unhappy peninsula.

These observers said the major drive in Europe would almost certainly be made against the Germans, with Italy a secondary factor in the invasion planning.

Since Berlin is the major objective in Europe, it was believed here that easier roads lie through countries other than Italy-France and the Balkans for instance—because of Italy's peculiar geographical formation with the alps blocking the upper end of the peninsula.

Pending the invasion of the continent, probably at several points, the Anglo-American policy apparently is to bomb Italy out of the war.

It Italy collapses, deserted by the Germans, three major developments are expected:

1. The Italian army would offer only brief resistance to Allied occupation, with the Italian people accepting it as a deliverance from fascism.

2. Permier Mussolini would take his government to Germany, to escape retribution and to avoid the surrender of his last vestige of personal power.

3. King Vittorio Emanuele would abdicate, probably in favor of his 6-year-old grandson, the Prince of Naples, in the hope that he, too young to be tarred with the brush of fascism, could keep the monarchy alive.

The War Today— Bombing of Germany Does More Damage Than Earlier Aerial Attacks on Britain

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

If Hitler couldn't knock Britain out by bombing, what chance have the Allies of blasting Germany into submission now?

That question has been put to me, and this looks like an appropriate time to try to answer it in view of the further devastating raids on German and Italian territory.

Actually, of course, nobody in authority has claimed that Hitler could be beaten by air alone, although Mr. Churchill says it's an "experiment well worth trying, so long as other measures aren't excluded" — with accent on that last clause. There has been no indication that the Allies intend to wait for air power to turn the trick.

On the contrary, it's reasonable to expect them to start invasions of the continent as soon as the raids have reduced Axis strength so that armies can be landed without being mowed down.

But Hitler's bombing of Britain and the Allied bombing of Germany involve different circumstances. Take, for example, the distribution of war industries.

Britain's plants were largely decentralized — scattered all over the country. This was by deliberate plan which was calculated to meet just such an emergency as arose.

The Nazi bombers did terrific damage here and there, but knocking out one manufacturing city or half a dozen couldn't disrupt the country's production.

War Industries Centralized

Many of Germany's essential industries, however, are centralized because of circumstances over which Hitler has had no control. His greatest armament works are concentrated in the Ruhr, because both iron and coal are there. He can't get away from that district, and the endless miles of factories there make a prime target for the bombers based in Britain. Closing down of the Ruhr manufacturing zone would be a major catastrophe which the all highest could scarcely survive.

Then, too, the Fuehrer banked too much on breaking British morale. He had the idea that if he could lay London in ruins, the people would fold up automatically. So he kept on sending big fleets of bombers over the capital although he was doing very little industrial damage. London is a great rail centre and port, but even if he had levelled it, that wouldn't in itself have beaten Britain.

One of the biggest elements in John Bull's favor was the fact that he was able to depend on North America for supplies. As fast as Hitler destroyed resources with bombs, convoys dumped fresh cargoes ashore in Britain.

U-Boats a Menace

That produced the German U-boat campaign which, like its predecessor in the First Great War, crowded the Allies into a corner but didn't succeed in controlling the Atlantic. Despite bombs and U-boats, the Allies have continued to pile up striking-power in the British Isles until we are now able to unleash the hurricane of bombs which we hope will whittle the head gangster down to the size where we can handle him nicely.

There is still another vital difference between the job which we are doing over Western Europe and the Nazi bombing of Britain. Far greater explosive power is being unleashed against Hitler, it's being done more systematically and the objectives selected are vital parts of his war machine. The Germans loosed some terribly destructive bombs over Britain but the latest Allied bombs are both blockbusters and heart-busters. It is, as Mr. Churchill suggested, an interesting experiment.

CHURCHILL BIDS ITALIANS TO GET OUT OF THE WAR

With President Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Gives Press Interview

SEES TURN IN TIDE

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 26 —(CP)— Formation of another fighting front in Europe appeared to be in the somewhat indefinite future today as observers pointed out that Prime Minister Churchill said at a press conference yesterday that no steps had been taken to appoint an Allied commander for such a stupendous task.

However, on other points the Prime Minister, who took over President Roosevelt's press conference for the day, was more definite. For one thing, he extended to the Italian people a blunt invitation to get out of the war while they still have time to save themselves from destruction.

Mr. Churchill declared the tide of battle has definitely turned in favor of the United Nations, and his advice to the Italian people was to dismiss those who have been leading them on the road to catastrophe and throw themselves on the justice of those they have so grievously offended.

Other than offering them that advice, the Prime Minister said the Allies could do little for Italy but apply physical stimuli—by which it was generally agreed he meant the aerial pounding to which Italy has been subjected recently would be continued and intensified.

No Clues Yielded

The conference yielded no clue as to when his war talks with President Roosevelt would result in opening new land and sea offensives.

Pointing to the manner in which Russia had been holding back the weight of 218 enemy divisions, the Prime Minister said he certainly had not felt that he should request his government to ask more of the Soviet Union. Then he added:-

RECOMMEND WAGE INCREASE FOR U.S. RAILWAYMEN

1,000,000 Will Receive 8 Cent Hourly Increase if the Recommendation is Adopted

RETROACTIVE TO FEB. 1

Washington, May 26 — (AP) — An emergency board of the National Railway Labor panel recommended today a general increase of eight cents an hour for more than 1,000,000 of the railroad employees in the United States.

The 15 so-called non-operating unions involved had asked an increase of 20 cents an hour with a minimum wage of 70 cents on hour, and the union shop. The board declined to recommend these proposals.

The recommendations are not based on the Little Steel Formula of the War Labor Board, but the Emergency Board said "we certify" that the increases are within the National stabilization program.

The increases, said the report, are "the minimum, non-inflationary adjustments necessary to correct gross inequities and to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

The W.L.B., in addition to its Little Steel Formula, may justify further increases under the same language.

The Emergency Board's report is not subject to action by the War Labor Board. Only Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, acting for the President, may modify it.

An executive order provides that unless the Stabilization Director otherwise directs, the recommendations shall become effective 30 days after they are filed with the President.

The report estimated the increases would add about $204,000,000 to the carriers' annual payrolls and added:—

"It is the considered judgment of the Board that the recommended wage increases do not, under prevailing circumstances, provide a basis for increases in railroad rates or for resistance to justifiable reduction in such rates."

CANADIAN ARMY REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVE OVERSEAS

Lt.-Col. H. M. Jones Of Belleville Arrives In Convoy for Tour Of Training

UNEVENTFUL VOYAGE

By DOUG AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A British Port, May 26— (CP Cable) — Reinforcements for the Canadian army overseas have arrived in Britain to take their places beside Dominion troops already awaiting the opening of an European front.

Among a group of instructing officers on their way to Britain for a tour of training facilities there were Lt. Col. Ernest Ansell, Chatham, Ont., and Lt. Col. H. M. Jones, Belleville, Ont. They had been stationed at training camps in Ontario and will return there after their duty tours are completed.

Bronzed by the sun and sea breezes, Canadians from every province and representative of every branch of the armed services disembarked here after a calm and uneventful Atlantic crossing.

Speedy Crossing

The troops had been wished Godspeed by Defence Minister J. L. Ralston in a message read before leaving their Canadian embarkation port.

The contingent was comprised chiefly of general reinforcements for infantry and armored division, but ancillary units such as artillery, ordnance, army service corps, medical corps and engineers were also represented.

The Atlantic crossing was speedy and uneventful in a calm sea and warm weather.

Many New Fliers

An East Coast Canadian Port, May 26—(CP)—News of the smashing United Nations victory in Tunisia ringing in their ears and with hearts set on joining the forces they hope soon would storm the European fortress, another large contingent of Canadian, Empire and Allied fighting men sailed from here recently.

The arrival of these reinforcements for sea, air and ground forces in Britain was announced today.

This latest of many movements that have funneled through this port was equally as varied as any that have preceded it. Fighters of Nations and Dominions scattered about the globe dumped their knapsacks by adjoining bunks or slung their hammocks side by side in the teeming transports.

Auxiliary and reinforcements troops for Canada's compact, keenly-trained overseas army and new fliers and ground crew for the R. C. A. F. were in the majority.

With them were smaller groups of British, Australian and New Zealand airmen trained on Canada's far-spread fields, Royal Navy personnel, Royal Canadian Navy Medical Officers, fighting French seamen, Poles, Netherlandesr and the usual polyglot of Nationalities that has become such a common sight here in more than three years of war.

A small group of six army nursing sisters and a few auxiliary officers from the Canadian Legion, Salvation Army and Knights of Columbus completed the group.

Returning to Britain after several weeks leave in Canada was Douglas Amaron, Canadian Press War Correspondent and Staff member of the London bureau. He will join the other ccredited war correspondents of The Canadian Press in chronicling the activities of Canada's fighting forces when the long-awaited European offensive opens.

Sicily, Sardinia And Pantelleria Are Chief Targets

23 Axis Planes Destroyed—Docks, Power Stations and Airfields Attacked

11 PLANES MISSING

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 26—(AP)—Allied aircraft, including large forces of four-engined bombers, gave Italy's outer invasion defences—Sicily, Sardinia and Pantelleria—what was officially described as "a terrific hammering" yesterday and destroyed 23 Axis planes in air combat.

Nearly 400 planes from the northwest African Air Force bombed and gunned docks, shipping, airfields, suplies and communications lines in the smoking, fire-grimed Italian strongholds in the Mediterranean.

A large force from the northwest African command pasted docks, railroad yards, power stations and the naval base at Messina, Sicily, and other bombers of the Middle East comand stirred up the ruins there by dumping 175 tons of explosives in a separate raid.

(The Italian communique claimed 44 planes were shot down during the day. Rome also claimed that Italian torpedo bombers sank two medium sized steamships and damaged a third along the African coast.)

Ship and Tug Set Afire

The missions undertaken by the northwest African force, an announcement said, resulted in "great damage to important industrial and military targets and a supply ship and a tug were set on fire."

The raids began early in the morning, and almost continually throughout the daylight hours bombers and fighters were over at least one of the three Italian islands.

The fiercest air fights took place over Sicily and it was there that the 23 Axis planes were shot down.

Authoritative sources said that yesterday's extremely heavy pounding of the outer Italian defences was evidence of the increasing might of the Allied air forces and indicated that even this scale of attack would soon be dwarfed by blows now being prepared.

The Allied loss of 11 planes was described as "remarkably small in view of the large attacking forces and proof of the superior tactics, equipment and leadership."

The two-day blasting of the Sicilian ferry terminus of Messina was the high point of the day's assault and the blasting given the city was described as "one of the most successful attacks of the North African campaign."

Fell in Military Areas

Photographs taken during the raid showed that all but a few bombs fell in military areas.

Direct hits were scored on ferry slipways, railroad yards, supply dumps, railway shops, military stores and heavy explosions were seen when a string of bombs fell on the naval seaplane base. Thick, black smoke rose in a tall column.

Anti-aircraft fire was intense, but the greatest trouble came from enemy fighters. Near Trapani, Sicily, a pack of 40 German fighters pounced on 10 bombers en route to their target. Twelve of the Nazi planes were shot down and all bombers came back safely.

(Today's Italian communique acknowledged that Messina "was repeatedly attacked and important damage was caused.")

R. A. F. Wellington bombers struck again Monday night at Olbia, Sardinia.

26 Planes Shot Down

The Allied communique reported that 26 enemy aircraft were shot down on the night and day attacks —three by the Wellington bomber force on Monday night and 23 during yesterday's widespread operations.

This raised the total of enemy aircraft destroyed in this theatre in the past week to at least 355.

The medium bombers registered hits on the dock area at Licata and on sheds on the quays.

Sulphur works at Empedocle were blasted and other explosives were dropped among vessels concentrated at the docks and on a powerhouse in the city.

Power Station Strafed

The war bulletin said that a supply base and a power station were strafed at Portoscuso, airfields were attacked at Terranova and Bobba Di Falco. Many bombs were reported dropped among dispersed aircraft on the Bobba Di Falco field.

Many hits also were registered on the hangars and administration buildings at the Milo airfield.

Fighter bombers and medium bombers roared to the attack on battered Pantelleria, Italian isle off Cap Bon which has been a favorite Allied bombing target in the past week of heavy raids against the invasion stepping stones. Bomb hits were scored on the airfield and docks.

Sit-Down Strike Staged in Bush By 56 Prisoners in Burwash Farm

Toronto, May 26—(CP)— Premier Nixon said today that 56 prisoners at the Burwash Industrial Farm in the Sudbury district staged a sit-down strike Monday night, remaining in the bush under guard for 24 hours.

Mr. Nixon said he was informed by superintendent W. L. McJanet that the men were working in the bush when they suddenly declined to continue and also refused to return to their dormitories or state their grievances. However they went to the dormitories last night.

The Premier added that he sent word to the men yesterday urging them to return to the buildings.

"They have refused to state their grievances, but I have agreed to go myself to Burwash if they wish to state them," said Mr. Nixon. "So far we have heard nothing further."

His appearance frightened the trio, who escaped under cover of darkness. Provincial Police were notified of the incident.

3½-POUND SPECKLED TROUT CAUGHT BY GERALD DELONG

Speckled beauties were really biting in the northern streams over the holiday according to parties from the city returning from fishing haunts yesterday.

The largest speckled specimen caught was reported by Gerald DeLong, Catherine Street, who caught a three-and-a-half pounder while the same party reeled in several that tipped the scales between the two and three pound mark. All in all a really successful trip was reported by the party which, besides Mr. DeLong, included Russell Smith, Ralph Weese and Lieut. Lawrence Pastorius.

Harold Youth Wins Bull Calf

Master George Heagle, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Heagle, Harold, Ontario, of Rawdon Township was the lucky ticket holder in the draw for a pure bred Holstein bull calf sponsored by the Rawdon Junior Farmers and drawn for at a May 24th dance held in Stirling on Monday evening.

The pure bred Holstein bull calf was purchased from the estate of Donald Longwell at Foxboro, its dam being Posch Colantha Jessie with a junior two-year-old record of 13,819 pounds of milk with an average test of 3.4 percent butterfat.

In keeping with the May 24th celebration, the draw for the bull calf was made by Miss Helen Sine of Wallbridge, whose birthday is that of former Queen Victoria's. The Rawdon Junior Farmers realized $225 from the sale of tickets on the calf, the proceeds to be devoted to war charities.

Alleged Deserter Held by Police

Bancroft, May 26 — Emerson Doubblestein of Bangor Township was arrested Friday by Constables McKenzie and Duncan of Belleville at the home of Gordon Dupuis. Doubblestein was arrested on a charge of vagrancy and lodged in the Belleville County Jail. Other charges are pending. He will appear in Bancroft police court on June 9th. Doubblestein has been a deserter from the army since November 1941 and admitted he had been hiding in the bush nearby ever since.

D.D.G.M. Visits Madoc Chapter

On Friday evening, Mrs. Stella Kinnear, District Deputy Grand Matron, Order of the Eastern Star of District No. 12, paid her official visit to Madoc Chapter, No. 143. At the conclusion of the proceedings of the chapter, the D.D.G.M. congratulated the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Blanche Keller, on the splendid manner in which she and her officers had exemplified the work. Mrs. P. McCoy, Assoc. W. M. presented Mrs. Kinnear with a gift from the chapter. Following the close of chapter a social period followed. Guests were present from Tweed, Havelock, Bancroft and Consecon Chapters.

Impressive Window Display

During the recent Victory Loan campaign, Mr. Albert Maynes, owner of the 5c-$1.00 store in Madoc, had a most attractive store window, which drew crowds during the three weeks of the campaign and the week following its close. Around a chart showing the daily progress of the loan in Hastings County were some 177 photos of men and young women on active service from Madoc and surrounding district, with the exception of twelve photos who were men of the last Great War. Mr. Maynes is to be congratulated on the splendid display and those who enjoyed seeing the photos begin to realize just what Madoc's contribution to this world war has been. Parents and relatives were most willing to help make this effort of Mr. Maynes' a success.

Not a Seed In a Bagful?

It happened in Peterborough the other day.

It seems a woman purchased a bag of potatoes, but after delivery she was greatly disappointed.

Calling the Wartime Prices and Trade Board the woman protested her grievances thusly: "I cut the entire bagful of potatoes up and didn't find a single seed in them. Now I have no potato seeds, to plant in my Victory Garden" she lamented.

The lady was then put on the right trail after being informed potatoes didn't carry seeds in the manner of apples or oranges. What happened to the entire cut-up bag of potatoes was not reported, however.

Rotary Club Holds First Meeting

Picton, May 26—Peace can never be legislated into existence; only it can come when people understand and respect other people, declared Dr. Bert Howard, Principal Albert College, addressing Picton Rotary Club yesterday. "I look forward to the future to believe that association of people of varying races, languages and religions can be so effective that peace and progress will prevail," Dr. Howard said.

Speaking on the Four Freedoms, Dr. Howard said until the world finds itself living on the terms of the Atlantic Charter we will be living at "second best."

Speaking of freedom from fear, Dr. Howard declared that governments do not introduce a Gestapo system until they have the will of the people under control. "This country could have its Gestapo much easier than you might think," asserted Dr. Howard. "So if we are going to have the world we want to have, the basic principles of the Atlantic Charter must have our backing and bodies such as the Rotary Club must understand them and interpret them to the world at large."

This was the first meeting of the new club here. President Lloyd Hicks of the Belleville Rotary Club presided for the opening, the local president, Edwin Williams, later taking charge. Mackenzie Robertson, Belleville, introduced the speaker. J. O. Herity, of Belleville was also present. Dr. C. A. Bronson was at the piano for a sing-song led by W. Cavers. Letters of congratulation on the formation of the club were read.

Two Picton Men Return

Two Picton men were among those arriving from overseas recently. They were Sgt. R. Hudgin, Hastings & Prince Edward Regt. and Sgt. Beldon Tripp, R.C.A.F. Sgt. Hudgin, known throughout the Bay of Quinte district as a star member of local hardball teams, went overseas with the local regiment in December, 1939. Sgt. Tripp graduated at Mt. View, going overseas in December, 1941. He had taken part in many raids and was injured in one crash but has fully recovered. Both young men will act as instructors in Canada.

EVANS—ROSE

The marriage of Victoria Rose, daughter of Mrs. and the late H. N. Rose, and LAC. Henry Evans, R.A.F., Picton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Evans Stoke-on-Trent, England, was solemnized on Monday at the home of the bride's aunt, Miss P Welsh. Rev. J. Cantrell officiated. The witnesses were Miss Annie Benn and W. A. Rose.

Branscombe Barn Burns

Fire of unknown origin totally destroyed a barn owned by James Branscombe and located in the southern part of the town. The blaze had gained considerable headway before being discovered and spread rapidly. The Branscombe home is very near and it was saved only through the efforts of the firefighters. Until the fire brigade made the mile run, a garden hose kept the roof saturated and extinguished sparks. A henhouse adjoining the barn was burned along with fifty hens. Contents of the barn included a quantity of machinery and some feed. Animals were outdoors in the fields.

Several Meat Shops Sold Out In Rush Before Rationing Starts

Thursday will see the beginning of meat rationing in Canada, and according to Belleville butchers they have been kept busy supplying meat to customers who want to get in as much as possible before they have to begin counting their coupon.

As one Front Street butcher put it, "they are buying all they can but they can't get much." Several shops were sold out of meat during the morning.

A few had not observed any noticeable change in business, but all were agreed that the citizens of Belleville are making few complaints about the coming rationing. People think it is "kind of tough" but that it will work out all right."

Lady Tweedsmuir Acknowledges Gift Of Seeds From Horticultural Soc.

Members of the Belleville Horticultural Society established a precedent among other such organizations across Canada this spring when they responded to the appeal of the Department of National Revenue in their "Seeds for Britain" campaign, it has been revealed.

Realizing the need for vegetable seeds in Britain in 1942, the Income Tax Division of the Department of National Revenue, organized the "Seeds for Britain" drive, the campaign being continued this year when the Belleville Horticultural Society donated a 15-pound carton of seeds. The Belleville Society was the only such organization in Canada that responded to the appeal. Seeds were shipped from Belleville in February.

Total value of seeds sent to Britain this year by the Income Tax Divisions across Canada was $544, the seeds being received and distributed in England by Lady Tweedsmuir, who states that Canadian seeds are much sought after by vegetable growers in the Old Country.

Appreciation from Lady Tweedsmuir has been expressed to the Canadian Income Tax Division and to the Belleville Horticultural Society in a letter received by G. B. Monk, chief treasurer officer. Copies of the letter were forwarded to this city.

"I cannot help feeling that the money contributed by the staffs of Income Tax offices throughout Canada is a most generous gesture," wrote Lady Tweedsmuir in appreciation. "Canadian seeds are greatly sought after in this country for they produce the most wonderful crops. Whenever I am to distribute any among the members of the various women's institutes which I visit, they are hailed with delight and gratitude."

"Again, may I send you my most grateful thanks for this magnificent gift."

Moira

Tribute Paid To Late Dr. Welsh

Moira — The long awaited Spring has returned to Moira but its loveliness is dimmed by the saddening news of Dr. Harold Welsh's passing.

His boyhood years were spent on one of its loveliest farms. On a clear day from the brow of Welsh's, now McInroy's hill, you can look southward for twenty miles to Mountain View and eastward the White Church of Roslin appears only a few hundred yards distant. The green wooded hills melting into a haze of blue to join with the blue of the sky helped to give this man a vision, which in his later life, he translated into those ideas and suggestions which spread and will continue to spread in ever widening circles benefiting people far beyond the sphere of his daily life.

From his late father, Mr. William Welsh, he inherited the desire and ability for plain hard work and also the strength to go that extra mile so necessary to attain success for his life has fully exemplified those lines:

"The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight
For they while their companions slept
Were toiling upward in the night."

From his lovely mother he possessed that sweetness of disposition, which apart from his marvelous medical skill, made his presence a blessing in many a sick room and to his mother the hearts of all Moira people turn in sympathy and also in grateful remembrance of her goodness and kindness when she lived amongst us.

Though he had risen in the world to a position of importance, his affection for his home community never lessened and in return he drew to him not only those who knew him in his boyhood but also all those, who, coming here as strangers came under the influence of his unfailing kindness.

And so Moira is proud to unite with those who mourn his sudden passing and each one feels an inspiration to live a little more bravely and cheerfully to help bear the burden which he has laid down.

For Mrs. Harold Welsh whose unfailing loyalty and sympathetic care have been of such great assistance in his work and for Helen and Ted our prayer is that the Comforter will enter their lives to take the place of the one they loved so dearly.

At the Sunday morning service Mr. Stewart spoke feelingly of Dr. Welsh's passing and of his early and continued association with Moira Church. A prayer was offered for his bereaved family and the hymn "Brief Life is Here Our Portion," was sung.

Speedsters To Be Haled Into Court Authorities Warn

Complaints that motorists are using city streets for speedways have been investigated by city police with the result that Chief Probert stated today that the police traffic motorcycle would be employed in an effort to curtail fast driving in this city.

"The police motorcycle has been completely over-hauled and is radio equipped. Immediately it will be pressed into service as we intend to put a definite halt to the fast driving in Belleville before serious accidents result," warned Chief Probert.

Several of the city main thoroughfare arteries are said to be tempting motorists to drive at excessive rates of speed. Some of these streets to be patrolled are Dundas, Bridge, Victoria Ave., Station Street, Bleecker Ave., Moira and North Front Sts. Future offenders for speeding will be summoned into court upon apprehension and without further warning, police added as a final warning today.

62 Belleville Boys Sent Cigarettes Thru "Fag" Fund

Sixty-two Belleville boys serving overseas sent letters of appreciation containing messages of hope that the flow of Canadian cigarettes would continue across the oceans, Chairman Matt Currie of the Kinsmen Fag Fund announced today.

Some of the newcomers to receive fags were Jack Stock, D. H. Barnhart, Morris Sallans, P. S. Christopher, M. Lynch, W. L. Soderberg, Jack Morgan Bob Graham, Ken Barriage and others. With the list of names of Belleville boys going overseas increasing rapidly the need of money to carry on the fund also mounts weekly and can only be met through voluntary contributions.

The list of Belleville boys sent individual packets of 300 cigarettes each through the fund this week included George E. Barnett, Kenneth Barriage, F. G. Belsey, J. D. Betts, R. L. Bird, Horace Bowler, J. B. Calbury, Douglas R. H. Carr, E. M. Cole, L. H. Cole, C. B. Coleman, P. Deruski, E. O. Doyle, Ray Dracup, Kenneth Edgecombe, G. Farquharson, G. D. Fraser, D. H. Frink, J. Wage Rates and Farm Prices Are Called Two Major Cost Factors That Can Make, Break Price Ceiling

Ottawa May 26 (AP)—Wage rates and farm prices are two major cost factors which can "make or break the price ceiling and the whole stabilization program," Donald Gordon, Prices Board Chairman, said Tuesday before the National War Labor Board.

In a brief prepared for presentation to the Board in its general inquiry into labor relations, wage regulations and the cost-of-living bonus, Mr. Gordon said it was important to prevent any general rise in wage rates so as to protect the price ceiling.

"I believe that if we Canadians cannot hold down food and labor costs and all other controllable costs at the same time, we shall have to abandon the price ceiling," he said.

Wage and Price Control

In a lengthy brief supported by appendices which included statistical data, Mr. Gordon described wage and price control as essential and interlocking parts of the government's program to control living costs.

"If wage increases were to become widespread there would be small chance of preventing a comparable rise in the price of farm products," he said. "Through its effect in increasing the cost-of-living bonus, this would raise wage levels generally and Canada would again be launched on the inflationary spiral.

"It is not for the Prices Board to say that maintenance of the price ceiling is more important than allowing increased wage rates or, for that matter, increased farm prices. But it is the duty of the Board to point out that such increases will, in all cases, weaken the price ceiling and, if carried far, destroy it.

People Will Have to Decide

"The people of Canada will have to decide which they want more. If any group feels that it can get wage increases without threatening the whole stabilization program it must assume that the rest of the people will refrain from seeking concessions for themselves and that the rest of the people will be willing to take on a greater share of the war burden.

"To my mind, the core of the problem lies in this question—what wage adjustments are considered so obviously desirable by the rest of the community that it is, in fact, prepared to pay the price in these two ways just mentioned?

"Wage policy must be based on a realistic answer to this question if the price ceiling is to be maintained."

British Children Talk, Wonder About Bananas They've Never Seen

One Little Girl Forgets What Bananas Taste Like

MYTHICAL THINGS

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 26 —(CP)— Bananas, grapefruit and bright lights have become things of a mythical world to British children who were babes in arms when war started. They have become subjects to think, talk and wonder about, but not to see — at least until after the war.

Just how rare tropical fruits are in the minds of children was portrayed when two boys in a London hospital thought a bunch of bananas was a new type of medicine. They had to be shown how to peel them and it was only after lengthy encouragement that they reluctantly consented to taste the "medicine."

Do Not Know What Bananas Look Like

There are nearly 2,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of five and seven in Britain who have heard about oranges and lemons, but don't know what they look like. And there are a lot of oldsters, too, who are beginning to wonder after nearly four years of war.

In a representative section of children in a London county council school at West Kensington none of a class of 40 could remember having seen shop windows lit up at night, the unshaded beams of car lights, grapefruit or Brazil nuts.

Remembers Bananas But Not Taste

Little Brenda Witts frowned and thought deeply when asked if she had ever seen a banana. Suddenly her face brightened.

"When I was very little I once had a banana," she answered. "I know it was soft to eat, but I can't remember the taste. If it had been juicy like an orange I would remember."

"Once my daddy took me somewhere in London where there were lots of red, green and blue lights dancing about on front of big buildings," said Michael Davidson, seven. "I have never seen them again. I don't know what they were for."

A school teacher told this story:

A sea shell was shown to a class of young children, who were asked to name it. None could.

"It is a shell," said the teacher.

"It can't be," cried a pudgy-faced boy who knew a lot about shells. "Shells come from guns!"

Canadians to Have $400,000,000 More to Spend in 1943 Than Last Year

But There Will be Three or Four Hundred Millions Less Civilian Goods to Buy

UNSPENT INCOME

Ottawa, May 26—(CP) — Canadians as individuals, are going to have about $400,000,000 more to spend in 1943 than they had in 1942 and there will be from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 less in civilian goods available for them to buy, Donald Gordon, Prices Board chairman said Tuesday.

This surplus earning power constitutes a serious threat to the government's stabilization policy, Mr. Gordon said in a brief prepared for presentation to the board.

In a statistical table Mr. Gordon submitted the income received by individuals was estimated at $7,600,000,000 for 1943 as compared with $6,850,000,000 in 1942 and $4,100,000,000 in 1938. Personal taxes which would be deducted from the 1943 figure would amount to about $950,000,000, compared with $600,000,000 in 1942 and $150,000,000 in 1938.

Net Disposable Income

This would leave a net disposable income for individuals of $6,650,000,000. The corresponding figure for last year was $6,250,000,000 and for 1938, $3,950,000,000, Mr. Gordon said.

Expenditures on goods and services by individuals totalled $4,450,000,000 in 1942, leaving an unspent income of $1,800,000,000. In 1938 the unspent income was $500,000,000. No estimate was made of what the unspent income would be in 1943.

Included in the unspent category was income deliberately saved and income being held for some specific purpose or because of indecision and no statistical breakdown in these divisions was possible, the brief said.

"Obviously, however, unspent income has very definite inflationary implications. This is the surplus earning power which could lead to the development of black markets on a scale sufficient to constitute a real breach in the price ceiling.

"Judging by the pressure of demand on the price ceiling in 1942, there was already a shortage of deliberate saving at that time. In 1943, indications are that the pressure will be very much greater.

"It seems likely that consumers' income, even after deduction of higher direct personal taxes and rates, will increase by $400,000,000 over 1942. At the same time the output of civilian goods and services will probably fall by $300,000,000 to $400,000,000.

"Individuals will need to increase their deliberate saving to a greater extent than in 1942, even after they have paid much higher taxes, if the price ceiling is to be held. This is a tremendous challenge to every individual in Canada, in particular to those with modest income."

C.N.R. April Revenue Shows Good Increase

Montreal, May 26 — An increase in operating revenues of $10,128,000 and an increase in net revenue of $2,256,000 for the month of April, 1943, as compared with April of last year, are reported in the official monthly statement of operating revenues, operating expenses and net revenue of the Canadian National Railways all-inclusive system issued today at Headquarters.

Operating revenues for the month of April, 1943, totalled $38,444,000, as compared with $28,316,000 for the same month in 1942. The net revenue for April last amounted to $9,334,000, as against $7,078,000 for April a year ago. Operating expenses were $29,110,000 for April, 1943, as against $21,238,000 for the same month in 1942.

CHURCHILL BIDS

Their strength may grow as time goes on and they must know that Japan has watched them with a purely opportunist eye.

Britain's war leader was speaking in answer to a question whether he thought it would be to Russia's self-interest to fight Japan after the conflict in Europe is won.

The Prime Minister put in a guest appearance at President Roosevelt's regular Tuesday press conference, and Mr. Roosevelt, interrupting briefly at only a couple of points, let his ruddy, cigar-smoking friend take over.

Speaks Optimistically

Mr. Churchill spoke optimistically of the conduct of the war since he last was in Washington a little less than a year ago. But he fell back on generalities in answering an inquiry about plans for the future, particularly in Europe. Those plans, he said, are to wage this war until unconditional surrender is secured from all those who have molested us, and that applies equally to Asia and Europe.

Declaring he was anxious to incease the intensity of the war efforts against Japan and that these must be prosecuted with the greatest vigor, the Prime Minister said it was with that in mind that he had brought the three top commanders in India with him to Washington.

He said the conferences here had dealt a great deal with the battle against Japan end that the conclusions had been reached which he considered sound and good.

Pays Tribute to Russia

He paid tribute to the Russians as grand allies and said they had struck and endured blows that no one else could have. He expressed his full confidence that they would hurl back any new attack on them.

To a request for comment on the breaking up of the Communist International, the Prime Minister replied that, well, he liked it.

Mr. Churchill made it clear that he was counting on the force of arms rather than an internal crack-up to knock out the Axis powers, although he asserted that any windfall would be gratefully accepted.

Emphasizing the importance of heavy bombings, the Prime Minister said it was poetic justice that the United Nations should be achieving superiority in airplanes—a weapon on which he said the Germans had counted to subjugate the world.

While Mr. Churchill had told Congress in a speech last week that it was well worthwhile to experiment with attempts to bomb the Axis into defeat, he said at his press conference any interpretation that he favored postponement of other measures would be a most distorted deduction.

There is no reason why the experiment should not be continued, he said, provided other simultaneous or current methods are not excluded.

Mr. W. J. Davis of Maple Leaf motored to Belleville and Stirling on Friday and on his return he was accompanited by his daughter, Unice, who spent the holiday at her home.

Miss Mountney, Mr. Kenneth Barker, Mr. Lawrence Leedy of Peterborough and Douglas Jones of Lakefield spent the holiday at their homes in Bancroft.

O-S. M. A. W. Moxam of Cataraqui, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Moxam of Bancroft.

Mr. Arnold Walker of Apsley spent Sunday at his home in Bancroft.

Mr. William Woodcock of Cobourg spent the holiday visiting relatives in Bancroft.

KILLS MOOSE WITH AXE

Hamilton, Ont., May 26 — (CP)— Wilfred Guay, foreman of a lumber camp near Pine Falls, Man., and a visitor to nearby Burlington, tells a Paul Bunyan sort of tale about killing an enraged moose with an axe. He and Homer Wilcox walked into the path of the big animal and it charged, head down, only to be brought to its knees by a lucky blow landed between the eyes.

KEEPING COUNT

"I'M NOT TOO YOUNG to do war work," says 7-year-old Linton Carter. "I help Mummy carry bundles of material for people to sew, and I make lists of the things they make for folks who have been bombed or hurt." Lin helps Mother by eating Kellogg's Corn Flakes, too, because Kellogg's take only 30 seconds to prepare, leave no pots and pans to wash. "Taste so good they're my favourite," says Lin. Kellogg's are the favourite in most Canadian homes. Get some tomorrow.

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE

Second Compulsory Employment Transfer Order

Notice to Certain Employers and Employees

Notice is hereby given that men employed in certain specified lines of civilian employment, who are in age and marital classes already designated under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, must report for interview not later than June 15th, 1943, to an Employment and Selective Service Office.

A. Objective:

This Second Order makes available for essential employments the services of men in age and marital classes designated as callable for Military Training under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, who are presently employed in the non-essential employments now specified.

B. EMPLOYMENTS COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

Men, of the specified categories, are covered if now employed in any of the following:

(1) Any occupation in or associated with retail stores; (2) any occupation in or associated with the manufacturing of feathers, plumes and artificial flowers; chewing gum; wine; lace goods; greeting cards; jewelry; (3) any occupation in or associated with distilling alcohol for beverage; (4) any occupation in or associated with the factory production of statuary and art goods; (5) any occupation in the operation of ice cream parlours and soda fountains; (6) any of the following occupations: bus boys; charmen and cleaners; custom furriers; dancing teachers; dish washers; doormen and starters; greens keepers; grounds keepers; porters (other than in railway train service); private chauffeurs.

C. AGE AND MARITAL CLASSES OF MEN COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

(a) Every man born in any year from 1917 to 1924 (inclusive) who has reached age 19.

(b) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, at July 15th, 1940, was: (i) unmarried; or (ii) divorced or judicially separated; or (iii) a widower without child or children.

(c) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who has, since July 15, 1940, become a widower without child or children now living.

(d) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, since July 15, 1940, has been divorced or judicially separated.

D. Procedure to be Followed:

All men as defined above must report to an Employment and Selective Service Office not later than June 15th, 1943. Men resident outside a city or town having an Employment and Selective Service Office, who are too far removed to call personally, may write to the nearest office in the first instance, and await further directions.

E. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEES:

When directed to accept employment, subsequent to the interview referred to, men described in Paragraphs B and C above are required by the Regulations to follow the direction given.

F. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYERS:

It will be illegal for an employer to retain in his employ after June 15th, 1943, any men referred to in Paragraph C above, at any of the employments set forth in Paragraph B above, unless a special permit has been obtained from a National Selective Service Officer, permitting such action.

G. Transportation:

Special provisions will be made for the transportation of men moved to work at a new place of residence.

H. Appeals:

If directed to transfer to employment subsequent to interview, a man may, if he objects, enter appeal with a Court of Referees, within 7 days of receiving such direction.

I. Penalties in Case of Employers:

Penalties are provided for any employer who retains in, or takes into, his employ after June 15th, 1943, any man covered by the Order, except under special permit.

J. Penalties in Case of Employees:

Penalties are provided for failure on the part of any employed man affected, to register under this Order, or to follow a subsequent direction to employment, and in addition to other penalties, refusal to comply renders a man liable to compulsory labour service in an Alternative Service Work Camp.

K. Special Request to Employers:

Each employer with three or more men covered by this Order in his employ is requested to co-operate by getting in touch with the Employment and Selective Service Office, to arrange a time for the interviews of his employees.

L. Authority:

This Order is issued under authority conferred on the Minister of Labour by National Selective Service Civilian Regulations (P.C. 246 of January 19th, 1943, and amending Orders in Council).

M. This Second Order is Additional to First Order:

Employments listed in Paragraph B above, declared non-essential in this Second Order, are additional to the non-essential employments contained in the First Order. The First Order, issued May 4th, 1943, required compliance by May 19th on the part of employees designated under Mobilization Regulations, and also of their employers, in the following lines of work:—

(1) taverns or liquor, wine and beer stores; (2) retail sale of candy, confectionery, tobacco, books, stationery, news; (3) barber shops and beauty parlours; (4) retail and wholesale florists; (5) service stations (gasoline-filling stations); (6) retail sale of motor vehicles or accessories; (7) retail sale of sporting goods or musical instruments; (8) waiter, taxi driver, elevator operator, hotel bell boy, domestic servant; (9) any occupation in or directly associated with entertainment including but not restricted to theatres, film agencies, motion picture companies, clubs, bowling alleys, pool rooms; (10) any occupation in or directly associated with dyeing, cleaning, and pressing (not including laundry work); baths; guide service; shoe shining.

2,431,949 Bond Purchasers

Nearly two and a half million investors, to be exact 2,431,949, or more than four hundred thousand above those who bought the previous issue, have bought Fourth Victory Loan bonds amounting to $1,291,051,150. This is very strong participation. This is a very satisfactory participation in the bonds, which means an income in interest, a safeguard against inflation, and the providing of the men of the armed forces with the means of attaining victory. It shows an alert and ready people, doing their task.

Britain's War Bill

Britain is spending on the war daily thirteen and a half million pounds, of which eleven millions are spent on the fighting and supply services, says Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Throughout the war the British people have been bearing a large burden due to the war but the people do not complain, they know that liberty is the most precious thing. Whatever the price, liberty and the freedom of all the ages yet to be is the ideal that guides her. So the cost is just incidental to the great goal.

Tribute to Britain

A Portuguese newspaper says that Britain in her four centuries as a world power has developed and perfected a "sixth sense" which enables her to foresee instinctivly and intuitively the evolution of events.

This is noble praise and it comes from a newspaper published in a country which has been the friend of Britain for centuries and which has been able to see how this instinctive quality of the British people has been demonstrated in history.

It is something to have this instinctive genius for it proves that the fundamental British principles are sound. Britain is satisfied that her course of democracy is just and history as it is written and as it is unfolded in events shows that it is true. The perfect balance and fairness of the British people, their readiness to face a crisis as they know they are in the right lend them vision and courage so that they assume the responsibility of their course and time proves them correct.

The British people, blessed in their unique island kingdom, have been privileged, to be allowed to work out their own idealism, their sense of justice and fair play among other qualities, their system of government with courage and enterprise and appreciation and understanding of peoples with whom they are brought into contact through their expanding commerce. All these things came to and remained with the British people because their course was the true one.

If Britain has a sixth sense or intuition of foreseeing the unfolding development of history it is because she has tried to measure up to the responsibilities which are hers and because she is sure of her foundation.

Britain has an instinct for the development of democratic institutions and her influence has been felt around the wide world. Today among the United Nations stand peoples and races who have benefited by the model of British liberty.

The same instinct is at work in the development of the British Empire. Her idea of empire is not that of ancient Rome which was power. In empire Britain feels responsibility and the history of the development of her Dominions and Colonies is a proof of this. In them there is evolution and they too move instinctively towards the widening of the freedom of the world.

This century has been forced to see twice the horrors of the evil result of aggression and lust for power as shown by Germany. German authority aims to dominate and make people conform to a low standard which admits no moral law and obligation but is the very spirit of evil like Nazism today. This is not Britain's way. Her Dominions are free and Britain's aim with them is that they may be the finest development of the spirit of democracy.

Britain can foresee the evolution of events for she in her attitude towards international society does what she is certain is just and in that knowledge she is strong. Her history and her influence upon the world are the outcome of her sane outlook upon humanity and the rights of man and peoples.

The whole course of history moves in that direction despite the Hitlers, Mussolinis and Ex-Kaisers. Hitler is allied with every evil force, recognizes no sense of honor among nations and he is going to be crushed along with Mussolini and the warlords of Japan.

It is the proud knowledge of men of the United Nations today that they see democracy writing the doom of tyranny. Humanity is working intuitively to the ideal though Hitler dug up from the abyss every crime and evil, political method he could to try to subjugate the world. The nations overrun by Hitler too prove their faith in "the divine event towards which the whole creation moves" according to the words of an English poet, Alfred Tennyson. The spirit of man has shown itself.

When a nation does as Britain did in 1940, face the world alone and take the consequences for right and liberty she can judge history and mould history for she thinks and works towards freedom of mankind and the rights of man the world over. What the evil conceptions of Hitler could do has broken and will break down before democracy because Hitler represents something that does not endure. That nation is invincible which like Britain follows the course of justice.

Farm Manpower

(Chatham Daily News)

There would be no manpower problem if all Canadians had the matter-of-fact ambition, energy and endurance possessed by Mrs. Mary Hawkins and her sister, Miss Lida Van Ausdale, of Keokuk, Iowa.

Mrs. Hawkins is 93, Miss Van Ausdale 82. Together they care for and milk two cows and keep a flock of 200 hens, raise a garden and can its surplus, and do their own housework. They not only raise almost all their own food, but sell enough to pay most of their other simple needs.

There ought to be some moral to this. Perhaps there is.

Volcano Rages On

The volcano that burst into eruption in the cornfield of an Indian near San Juan Paricutin, Mexico, last February, continues its fiery freaks. It has killed hundreds of cattle, ruined crops within an area of 25 miles and driven between 8,000 and 10,000 peasants from their homes. Dr. Baz, Minister of Welfare, rushed to Michoacan aid that saved from starvation livestock deprived of pasturage by lava and white-hot ashes. Thousands of tourists have flocked to see the volcano, and the government is paving the road out of Uruapan that connects with the volcano village. The Indian complains bitterly that after his cornfield had been taken over from him "foreigners" overran his land.

Lakes Are High This Year

(Detroit Free Press)

The delayed spring has held up lake navigation, but the reports on lake levels may be a partial compensation before the season is over. It is no small matter that Superior is at its highest point since 1860 and Michigan and Huron were nearly 1.35 feet above the ten-year average in March.

This news gives promise of floating room for deep-load lines, and a few extra inches of water underneath the keel of a big freighter can mean hundreds of tons more cargo above it. The snowy, rainy winter and spring haven't been completely detrimental.

THE BAREFOOT BOY, 1943

(After Whittier)

Blessings on thee, little man,
Barefoot boy, with cheeks of tan,
Skipping gaily round about,
Up and down and in and out.
Be the weather dry or damp
Saving father's ration stamp.
Though your feet are never clean
Saving coupon seventeen.

Blessings on thee, little boy,
Father's pride and father's joy.
Were you not content to go
Bare of heel and sole and toe
To provide you now with shoes
Father would his coupon use,
And in that case, little lad,
You would have a barefoot dad.

Yes, I'm sure 'tis better so
That a boy should barefoot go
Than his father should disclose
Just how ugly are his toes,
And his bunions should be seen.
So with coupon seventeen
I'll get shoes today for me
And still barefoot you may be.

Mr. Bert Carr of Winipeg, an old Belleville boy, is here on a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Holley and young son, Lawrence, are visiting relatives here.

Mr. Alf. Smith of Kingston spent the 24th. of May in town.

Mrs. D. Laval of Minneapolis, Minn., is the guest of her niece, Mrs. H. Galloway in this city.

Miss Helen Palen spent the week end in Toronto.

Mr. Bruce Bottum was home from Hamilton to spend the holiday.

Mr. Henry Emmerson of Regina, Sask., formerly of Belleville, is visiting friends here.

Mr. A. P. Allen and Mr. B. L. Hyman motored to Toronto on the holiday.

Mr. Archie Bales spent the holiday in Berlin, Ontario.

Mr. Arthur Cole of Perth spent the holiday here.

Mr. Harry Elvins spent the holiday in Toronto.

40 YEARS AGO

MAY 26TH., 1903.

Mr. John Taylor has returned home after spending the past eight months in British Columbia.

Mrs. Corham, George Street, has left to visit her daughter, Mrs. W. J. Ridley, in Midland, Ontario.

Mr. E. W. Rathbun, Deseronto, was in town today.

Mr. W. H. Campbell is visiting friends in Rochester, N.Y.

The road race on the holiday, which was celebrated on May 26th attracted many spectators. The start was made from in front of the bandstand at Victoria Park and the course was a distance to a given point five miles east on the Kingston Road. The following entered and were allowed the handicap set opposite each name: J. Dorion, 4 minutes; A. Davis, 3 minutes; E. Geen, 2 minutes; E. Henthorn, 2 minutes; A. Finkle 1 1-2 minutes; P. Barrett 1 1-2 minutes; H. Weller, 1 minute; F. Butterfield, 1 minute; A. B. Astle, scratch. Thirty- two minutes was set for the time prize, but this was not met as it was a little past this time when the first rider came in sight. Following is the order of finish: First, H. Weller and he won a set of tires; second, A. Davis and he won a mandolin; third, Geen, won a wringer; fourth, Henthorn, won a fishing pole; fifth, A. B. Astle and he won a Y.M.C.A. membership ticket; sixth, Dorion, won half a dozen photographs of himself; seventh, A. Finkle, won a rocking chair in which to take things easy; Barrett and Rutherford did not make the turn. Officers of the race were: Handicappers, Ald. Marsh, W. J. Wilkie and J. 70 YEARS AGO

MAY 26TH., 1873.

An error was made in giving the amount of Miss Davenport's salary as assistant teacher at School No. 2; it should have read $250 per annum instead of $200 per annum.

A cricket match here on the Queen's birthday between the First Eleven of the Belleville club and Twenty Two All Comers, resulted in victory for the First Eleven by eight wickets. The First Eleven were evidently rusty from lack of practice but exhibited some very fine batting, Robertson being not out and Thomas contributing the only double figures. The bowling and catching of the All Comers were commendable, but they could not withstand the fast straight-bowling of Milburn and the well directed "round arms" of Savage. The following were the players: First Eleven—Englehardt, Clarke, Milburn, Robertson, Savage, Garrett, Thomas Biggar, Reeves, Menzies and Borradaile. All Comers—Dean, McEvoy, Way, Wills, Titus, McMahon, Comer, Skinner, Davis, Shaw, Alport, Hooper, Corby, Pursington, Wilkins, Gordon, Garrett, Pope, Neal, Newberry, Force and McDonald.

The Dissolution of the Comintern

New York, May 26 — The debate as to whether the liquidation of the Third International — the International Communist Party — is sincere or insincere is completely beside the point.

First of all, it is a fact, and a fact of very great importance.

Secondly, it is an absolutely logical culmination of previous developments. It is not made as a "gesture toward the democracies." It is made for Russian interests, and in order to free the hands of Russian nationalism. It is also, in all probability, a part of a general agreement which Stalin is trying to reach, in respect of post-war arrangements, involving such questions as Russian borders, spheres of influence, and alliances with the Western powers.

Such arrangements have long perspectives. To assume that Stalin is "temporarily" suspending the Comintern, at a moment when he is trying to reach agreements for a period of decades, is childish. The Russian - British treaty, made for 20 years, is a proof that Stalin is thinking in terms of decades.

It is the move of a nationalist statesman who is thinking wholly in terms of the future of Russia, and not in terms of the future of the working classes of the world.

Basis of Stalin's Power.

That is the way he has been thinking for many years, and the evolution of the Comintern has proved it. In fact, the issue: Russia versus the International Revolution, was the basis of Stalin's coming to power, and it is a law of politics that people maintain their power by the same means through which they achieve it.

Previous to the Russian revolution there were International Socialist and Labor movements with affiliations in every European country. But since there was no Socialist country, there was no leading power or visible national leadership.

In 1919, after the success of the Bolshevik Socialists in Russia, Lenin founded the Third International. This was completely logical, for in Lenin's concept the Russian revolution was only the start of the world revolution, and Russia was not even the main object in the world revolution. This attitude was illustrated when Trotsky concluded the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk with Germany, under which large portions of the Russian Empire—notably the Ukraine — were given up. The theory back of this was that it did not matter whether the Ukraine was under Russian or German control, because the world revolution would wash out nationalism anyhow.

The concept of Lenin and Trotsky was that it would be impossible to maintain the Russian revolution in a capitalist world. They awaited the outbreak of the revolution in all the highly industrialized European countries, and the Comintern was a genuinely revolutionary instrument. But by the time of Lenin's death, in January, 1924, it was clear that his calculations had failed. Astonishingly enough, from the viewpoint of Communist theory Russia had been successful in defeating the internal and externally inspired counter-revolutions, while not even the strongest Communist parties in Europe, not even those in defeated and chaotic countries, had achieved their own revolutions.

Stalin Versus Trotsky

In the fight over the successorship to Lenin, between Stalin and Trotsky, is to be seen the nucleus of the developments of this week. Stalin's idea was "socialism in one country," as a master-picture of what could be achieved. Trotsky clung to the Marxian theory that this was both impossible and a betrayal of the world revolutionary idea. In Trotsky's opinion the Comintern took precedence over the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union was but one victory of the Comintern, and even the life of the Soviet Union was worth risking for greater purposes.

The successive purges in Russia have been purges of this idea, and, historically, it was not by chance that the first man to be shot as a result of the trials was Zinoviev, the first president of the Comintern.

Under these circumstances, considering the fact that the Russian Communist Party has always controlled the Comintern, with stern authoritarian leadership, why was it not dissolved after the final victory of Stalin over Trotsky, 15 years ago?

Transformations of Policy.

It was not dissolved because Stalin saw in it a useful instrument for a quite different purpose than that for which it was originally formed.

Stalin transformed the branches of the Comintern into outposts of Russian policy in the capitalistic countries. He feared an attack of the capitalistic world, by one country or a coalition, on the Soviet Union. The sole task of the Comintern, therefore, was to prevent this by awakening sympathy for the Soviet Union among the workers, and, in case they failed to prevent war, to upset the war machinery by strikes, sabotage, and, if possible, revolution. During this phase Communist policy was for military preparedness in Russia, and anti-militaristic and pacifistic in every other country.

During this phase many "front" organizations were built up among liberal and pacifist groups, such as the organization whose name is completely revealing: "The League Against War and Fascism."

But this policy, in its turn, was overthrown by the historical events.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

The Treatment of Epilepsy

A few years ago the recognized treatment for epilepsy was the use of the bromides. Bromides are drugs which depress or quiet irritable nerves, thus preventing convulsions, preventing vomiting and producing sleep. They are useful drugs. However, as they had to be used continuously in epileptics to prevent or relieve attacks, the patient was usually in a depressed and often a melancholy condition.

While the cause of epilepsy is still unknown, thousands of epileptics now have no attacks and the attacks in others are so mild that little thought is given to them. However, the great advance in the treatment of epilepsy did not occur by chance. Patient scientific investigation of all the circumstances that could possibly enter into the cause of epilepsy and the trying of methods of treatment has, in most cases, made the lives of epileptics much happier and less embarrassing and distressing.

Dr. D. S. Polk, in the Pennsylvania Medical Journal, states that a broad or all round investigation should be made in seeking the cause of epilepsy in children. There must be careful investigation of the child's adjustment to his surroundings and any physical defects of abnormal conditions removed. Infected teeth, diseased tonsils and adenoids, gland disturbances should be removed or corrected, and nourishing food assured.

What is called the ketogenic diet is still the basis of treatment; this diet increases the fat foods—butter, cream, egg yolks—and decreases the starch foods—potatoes, bread sugar.

The drug used by Dr. Polk to prevent or control the attacks in children living at home or as patients in the Philadelphia Children's Hospital Clinic is sodium dilantin. This drug—sodium dilantin—sometimes causes a reaction which has prevented some physicians from using it despite the fact that phenobarbital has failed to give satisfactory results in their cases. Dr. Polk states that sodium dilantin is very effective in preventing or decreasing the convulsions in epilepsy and in "ordinary" doses does not depress the other brain processes; that there is a wide margin between the ordinary dose and the dangerous dose. Further, even where there are mild reactions from sodium dilantin, the physician and patient may feel confident that these mild disturbances will disappear. In the diet treatment, liquids are decreased, as too much liquid in the tissues may bring on an attack.

DEEDS OF DERRING DO

Feats of "derring do" are feats of daring and acts of bravery.

In the light opera entitled "Ruddingore" and written by Gilbert and Sullivan occurs the line: "Desperate deeds of derring do."

"Derring do," in this sense is largely the result of an error made by Edmund Spenser and copied by Sir Walter Scott and other writers of the romantic school.

Literally "derring do" means "daring to do."

Chaucer and other early English writers used the phrase in various forms.

In "The Hystory, Sege, and Destruccyon of Troye," which was written between 1412 and 1420, John Lydgate spelled the phrase "derryng do."

In the printed edition of the same work dated 1513, as well as in the edition of 1555, it was spelled "derrynge do."

Chaucer, who antedated Lydgate, described Troilus as second to none "in dorrying don that longeth to a knyght," that is, "in daring (to) do what belongs to a knight."

This apparently misled Edmund Spenser, a lover of the quaint and curious in English phrases, who picked it up and misconstrued it as a noun phrase in his "Shepherd's Calendar," published in 1579. A note in the glossary explained that the phrase meant "manhood and chevalrie." Later he employed it again in the "Faerie Queene. In Book II, Canto IV, section 42, the poet wrote:

So from immortall race he does proceede,
That mortall hands may not withstand his might,
Drad for his derring doe and bloody deed;
For all in blood and spoile is his delight

Sir Walter Scott revived and accentuated this erroneous usage in "Ivanhoe," first published in 1820. In Chapter 29 is this passage: "Singular," he (Ivanhoe) muttered to himself, "if there be two who can do a deed of such derring-do." Scott, in a footnote, gave the meaning of "derring-do" as "desperate courage."

Thus, says the Oxford dictionary, by a chain of misunderstandings and errors "derring do" has come to be regarded as a kind of substantive combination meaning daring feats.

— WEEK OF ASSEMBLIES —

WORDS:

To hear a speaker who enlivens his topic with wit is always a pleasure. That is why Mr. E. H. Johnson, B. Sc., B. Th., who lectured to the school last week on "China Today", proved to be so popular. Mr. Johnson, who has been a missionary in the Far East for several years, was introduced by Rev. J. G. Hornsby.

Mr. Johnson mentioned how important it is for us to know our Chinese allies; not only for China's huge size and population (450 millions) but for her unique, four-thousand-year-old civilization. He touched upon the many differences that a visitor to China encountered: physical appearance, walk, dress, manners and customs. He demonstrated the Chinese method of writing, mentioning the deep philosophy that one finds in the written Chinese language.

He described how shocked the Chinese people were by the 'barbarians' whose dress and mannerisms were so different. To the delight of the male portion of the audience, he repeated the Chinese observation to the effect that Occidental Women's hats are "a mixture of geometry and botany." He finished his lecture with the appeal to the students to do something. China needs doctors, nurses, engineers and teachers. "In making contributions to their (the Chinese) happiness, you can make yourself happy by making yourself count."

Mr. Johnson's lecture included many anecdotes and observations that amused the students very much. One could detect at times a touch of pathos, although Mr. Johnson did not dwell upon the horrors of the Eastern theatre of War.

After the lecture, Mr. Johnson invited students to ask him questions pertaining to China, and the school proceeded to show a keen interest in the politics, language, drama, economics and other factors of the East. It is this reporter's opinion that the ovation given Mr. Johnson at the end of the talk was the greatest ever given to any speaker this year.

WAAFS:

During the regular Assembly period on Wednesday, we were entertained by the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, who showed us movies in connection with the current recruiting drive. "That Men Might Fly" showed the work done by the W.A.A.F.'s that free men for active service. Besides office work, there were diverse occupations such as photography, mechanics, cooks, etc. It was unfortunate that the loudspeaker went dead for a short time, but the show went on, with one of the W.A.A.F.'s pinch-hitting as narrator.

Before the movies, Mr. Hill read the stamp-report. We are going to set a quota for each class. Let's get these sales over the $10,000 mark!

AND WAR:

The last periods of the week were taken up by a very illuminating Empire Day sketch on the current struggle. Participating in this stirring spectacle were: as narrators, Kaye (Our Town) Martin and Beaver (Vicioan) Beavis. Other notables were Bob Sprague as Churchill; Gordon Bankier as the King; Joan Hunter as the Queen; and Jim Watson as the Canadian Prime Minister. It was a resume of the war sent out by the Department of Education.

The Glee Club ably assisted the actors by rendering such beautiful ballads as "Waltzing Matilda" and "O Canada", and were joined by the school on occasion. Miss Merry directed this patriotic pageant with her usual deft touch. It was the climax to an unusually active week.

Prince Edward County Women's Institute Holds Annual Convention

Picton, May 25 —(Special)—Mrs. Ross Bush of Consecon, president, presided on May 21, when 65 members answered the roll call in the Presbyterian Church at the 35th annual district convention of the P. E. C. Women's Institute.

The address of welcome was given by Mrs. John McNally of Cherry Valley, and emphasized the ideal of "information and inspiration for the year ahead."

In her address the President urged members not to let war work become an obsession, but to remember that total wars are not won by arms alone, but also by the spirit of the people back home.

Guest Speakers

Outside speakers were Mrs. Holmes of the Belleville area, Provincial Pres., Mrs. Hayes of the W.I. branch of the Dept. of Agriculture, Mrs. Wicks of Cobourg, a provincial board director and Miss Scott for Girls' Work.

Prince Edward Institute branches voted for the Dept. program "The Family Co-operates on Good nutrition" to be held at various centres in the late Fall.

Musical numbers interspersing the program were: piano solos by Miss Muriel Howe of Consecon, a vocal solo by Mrs. H. Hogle of Picton, and community singing led by Mrs. A. Beckwith.

Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

Stirling, May 24th—The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Carlisle on the 10th Concession of Sidney Township was the scene of a great deal of pleasant activity on Monday night as the family and friends gathered to celebrate the 50th wedding anniversary of the honoured couple.

Both natives of the district, they were married 50 years ago by Rev. Campbell at the home of the bride's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John Weaver, further east on the same concession. May the 24th was a bright sunshiny day for them as it was when they began their married life together. Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Carlisle was Miss Mary Elizabeth Weaver.

Reviewing with pleasant recollection their happy years together with their family of eight children was part of the interesting entertainment as the family gathered again at the old home to proudly honor their parents. A sumptuous wedding cake and dinner party was thoroughly enjoyed by the family and many friends conveyed personal good wishes. Messages were also received by telephone during the day and evening. Well known as loyal citizens of the district, the entire family have for years, been faithful workers in the United Church at Carmel and active members in the Stirling Agricultural Society of which Mr. Carlisle and his son, Ernest, are still directors.

Along with neighbours and friends from all parts of the district who gathered for the party last night were their four sons and four daughters and their grandchildren; Mr. Albert Carlisle and family of Frankford; Ernest Carlisle at home; Messrs George and John of Stirling; Mrs. Cecil Bedell (Rada); Mrs. Ed. Wilson (Retta), and Misses Nina, Marion Carlisle of Belleville.

Friends of Stirling and throughout Rawdon and Sidney Townships join the family in wishing the honoured couple continued good health and much happiness.

ZION W.M.S.

The May meeting of Zion W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. R. Bunnett with ten present. The worship service, which was taken by the president, had as its central theme, "The Christian Home and Mother." Mrs. McKenzie had charge of the Mother's Day program and she also gave a reading entitled "The Two Religions." Mrs. Tufts gave an excellent paper on "Mother." Mrs. Ralph Sills led a discussion on the chapter in the Study Book, "Community Neighborliness," assisted by Mrs. Tufts and Mrs. Bunnett. She said, "In this time of crisis we see clearly that one of the most hideous phases of Nazism is its hatred and persecution of non-German peoples, particularly the Jews. We know we must be on our guard for Canada, or this thing will wreck our national life. We are by no means free of these prejudices and there are many serious divisions between Anglo-Saxon Canadians and those of other nationalities. 'Building Canadian unity through friendship is the only way to build it and it is a lifetime task. Community neighborliness is the basis of national unity."

Mrs. McKenzie closed the meeting with prayer and a social half-hour was spent.

R.T.H. Club Holds Dance

The Belleville Red Triangle Hostess Club presented a gay and colorful Air Force dance on Monday evening at the Hume Arena with delightful dance music being furnished by the popular 6 R. D. Orchestra, the proceeds to go for revue costumes. Hostesses for the evening were: Misses Helen Symons, Catherine Murphy, Mary Moult, Irene Walsh, Muriel Wardner, Hilda Murray, Mae Thompson, Grace McAuley and others of the Hostess Club. The honored guests of the evening were Group Captain and Mrs. Keddy, 6 R.D. and Squadron Leader and Mrs. Snetsinger, No. 5 I.T.S. The boys from the Air Cadets of the Belleville squadron performed their duties of ushering, checking and taking tickets under the leadership of Sergeant Wilson.

A sparkling floor show, literally bubbling over with talent and artistry, was enthusiastically received by everyone present. Zena Cheebers, one of Toronto's most versatile artists, performed three outstanding numbers as a drum majorette and she proved her proficiency in baton work and in acrobatics. Again, as a fan dancer, her supple and lithe figure showed its ready adaptness to acrobatics and in her finale she displayed marvellous technique in a South American tango.

Sixteen-year-old Ethel Smith, Belleville's songstress, once again delighted an appreciative audience with the popular vocal selections of "Brazil" and "Coming In On a Wing and a Prayer."

In a duet tap routine, Madeline Walden and Barbara Diment danced themselves into the hearts of their listeners. Madeline followed up with a ballet number, "Stardust" and Barbara gave her rendition of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," both of which were very well executed.

Congratulations are extended to the stars for their outstanding performances and to the Y.M.C.A. supervisors in all stations for their co-operation. Gordon Stevens, 6 R.D., Y.M.C.A., is also commended for his capable and gracious manner as master-of-ceremonies

Prizes of War Saving Stamps were drawn by Group Captain Keddy and presented by Mrs. Keddy to Iva Empey and Cpl. Wilson, of the No. 5 I.T.S.

Appreciation was expressed on behalf of the Red Triangle Club to all present by Ron. Hupfield, supervisor of the club.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Graves' Disease the Result When Thyroid is Unbalanced

One of the important regulators of body activity is the thyroid gland. It may be considered the governor of metabolism. When it slows up or when it speeds up abnormally, serious trouble results. When the thyroid gland races we have the disease hyperthyroidism.

One form of this trouble is known as Graves' disease, also known as toxic goitre. In this disorder there are loss in weight, rapid heart beat, increased perspiration, nervousness and irritability. Sometimes the thyroid gland in the neck is enlarged and in many cases there is protrusion of the eyes.

Dr. James H. Means of Boston, says that in treating Graves' disease the first thing to do is to determine the patient's basal metabolism—the rate at which the chemical activities of the body go on when the patient is at rest. This is done by having him breathe into a machine which measures the amount of oxygen he uses up in a given period of time.

In toxic goitre the basal metabolism rate is increased. Then the patient is given iodine in the proper dose and from time to time the basal metabolism is checked. If the rate falls more than would be expected with such treatment, Dr. Means believes that the patient will recover from the toxic goitre without any further treatment and, what is more important, if such patient is given iodine regularly and continuously the toxic goitre will not recur and sooner or later treatment with the iodine may be stopped.

Dr. Means believes that in a number of patients with toxic goitre the outstanding symptom is the protrusion of the eyes. These patients are best treated with iodine. Many of the other patients, however, do better if their condition is treated with X-ray. A number of the patients treated with X-ray recover completely. Still another group gets along better if they not only have X-ray treatment but also operation with removal of most of the thyroid gland. Now and then treatment may be carried out by tying off the blood vessels to the gland.

It usually isn't difficult to make a diagnosis of toxic goitre. The patient's symptoms are so typical that as a rule the condition may often be diagnosed without even making a basal metabolism test. However, this test should always be made so that the effects of the treatment can be checked from time to time. It is particularly necessary when operation is not carried out and the only treatment is with iodine. These patients also should have plenty of rest and should receive a diet containing all of the necessary vitamins and minerals as well as proteins, such as meat, eggs and fish. The heat value of the diet should also be high, since a great deal of energy is burned up by these persons because of the excessive secretion from the thyroid gland.

Once a diagnosis of toxic goitre is made there should be no delay in having the proper treatment carried out.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y. P. U. was held in the Carmel United Church last week. Mrs. Wootten opened the meeting with quiet music. Miss Hazel Hicks gave the meditation. Miss Eleanor Lenard gave the Scripture reading. Topic was given by Miss Hazel Hicks. Miss Luella Homan read a poem. Rev. Davis then led in prayer and Mr. Earl Dafoe took over the business. Recreation was in charge of Mr. Douglas Shaw.

ROLE OF CANADA'S OVERSEAS ARMY NOW DECIDED

This Information Given to the House of Commons by Defence Minister

LONG DISCUSSION

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, May 26 (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons yesterday that the role of Canada's overseas army had been decided by "those who have to do with major strategy in consultation with the Canadian government and with our military advisers," and that it would not necessarily form "the spearhead" of an offensive.

The Minister made this statement during an all-day discussion of army in which there were some sharp interchanges as the House, in committee, considered with little progress the $3,890,000,000 war appropriation for the current fiscal year.

John R. MacNicol (Prog. Con. Toronto Davenport) had asked if Canadians were to be thrown into the offensive as a "spearhead" without battle experience.

Col. Ralston said troops could get battle experience only by going into battle.

"The term spearhead has been used frequently but it does not necessarily indicate the operation or role which Canadians will play," said Col. Ralston.

Depend on Circumstances

"The role which Canadians will play will depend upon the circumstances but I assure my honorable friend that those who have to do with major strategy in the war have decided, in consultation with the Canadian government and with our military advisers what is the best way in which Canadians can help either as an army or as individual formations."

Further discussion of the Dieppe combined operations of last year was a feature of the day's discussion with Dr. H. A. Bruce (Prog Con. Toronto Parkdale) in sharp conflict with the Minister.

In the course of this interchange Col. Ralston told the House that the appointment of Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, who commanded at Dieppe, to head all reinforcement units overseas, "had nothing to do with his conduct at Dieppe."

Replies to Question

He was replying to a question from Hon. R. B. Hanson (Prog Con. York-Sunbury) who asked if there was any truth in rumors that Gen. Roberts had been "demoted—kicked up-stairs."

Col. Ralston said it might be true that such an impression was abroad but that Gen. Roberts was chosen for the post he now occupies because of his fitness for that task.

Dr. Bruce raised a storm when, in what Col. Ralston said was a "sneering" tone, he suggested that Canada's army's "battle honors" after nearly four years of war consisted of the "tragic failures" of Hong Kong and Dieppe—failures due to incompetency in the high command and not to the officers and men in the action.

Comment Not Worthy Claim

This comment, Col. Ralston said, was not worthy of Dr. Bruce and he forecast that those words might some day "choke in his throat."

Dieppe had never been claimed as "a complete success," but it was far from "a tragic failure," he said. It had accomplished the purpose for which it was planned with great care by the high command.

When Dr. Bruce criticized the high command for incompetency he was "singling out the chief of combined operations, the men who had to do with that command beginning with Gen. Montgomery, (commander of the British Eighth Army) who was in the southeast command at the time, the chief of the general staff and all those who had to do with making the plans for that operation," said Col. Ralston.

Withdraws Remark

"If we are going to have the people conducting these operations called incompetent and the operations called tragic failures; if that is to be the general feeling, I am afraid we are in a fair way to lose the war."

At Dr. Bruce's request, Col. Ralston subsequently withdrew his "sneering" reference.

The discussion ranged over a wide field and brought full length addresses from J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) and from T. L. Church (Prog. Con. Toronto Broadview) with shorter speeches and numerous questions from many others.

Mr. Pouliot continued his criticism of Col. Ralston's administration with which he occupied the House nearly two hours Monday, particularly with reference to recruiting farm workers and failure properly to disclose expenditures in estimates and annual reports.

Not Abusing Member

George Cruickshank (Lib. Fraser Valley) assured the Minister he was not going to "abuse him," and said he had "listened to 80 minutes of it yesterday and another 40 minutes today."

He said the sentiments he referred to did not represent the opinions of "any other members of this House nor do they widely represent opinions in any other part of Canada."

There was considerable discussion of the suggestion made Monday by Ross Macdonald (Lib. Brantford) that draftees who do not volunteer for service overseas be sent to Alaska under authority of the order-in-council by which they are sent to areas outside of but adjacent to Canada.

Mr. Macdonald made the same suggestion again yesterday and said the draftees should be sent to Alaska to replace Americans who were free to fight in any part of the world.

Replying to criticism that his original suggestion was likely to prejudice relations with the United States as indicating a desire to have American soldiers do the fighting, Mr. Macdonald said he had been thinking of the fighting against the Japanese in the Aleutians which Canadian draftees could do instead of Americans.

Rodney Adamson (Prog. Con. York West) asked the Minister if there was authority to send draftees called for compulsory service in Canada only to such a distant point as Attu or Kiska even if they were actual part of Alaska.

Col Ralston said it could be authorized by order-in-council but he did not comment on the merits of the suggestion.

Chinese Steward Survives 131 Days Aboard Liferaft

Miami, Fla., May 25 — (AP) — Stoical Poon Lim, who spent 131 days adrift on the Atlantic aboard a liferaft, disclosed here that his long, lonely and aimless voyage made him dizzy several times.

The torpedoing of his ship, a British merchantman on which the 25-year-old Chinese was a steward, launched him on his one-man odyssey on Nov. 23, 1942. The old year ended and three months of the new year passed before his rescue on April 3 off the coast of Brazil by a fishing boat.

This was 48 days longer than men ever before were known to survive on a raft or lifeboat. Basil D. Izzi, of South Barre, Mass., and two Netherlanders survived 83 days on a raft in the South Atlantic in 1942 after their ship was sunk.

Fever Attacks

In addition to several dizzy spells, Poon Lim said he had slight attacks of fever and an empty feeling in his stomach, but he climbed aboard the rescue craft and walked off under his own power three days later in Brazil.

He rested up in a Brazilian hospital, then came to Miami last night.

Much of his strength Poon Lim credited to the effectiveness of a bent nail as a fish hook and the shiny spring of a flashlight as bait. He caught several small fish and in turn used them for bait for larger fish, some weighing as much as 50 pounds.

On Raft Alone

The fish diet began after the liferaft's food supply ran out after 55 days and the water after 65 days. Poon Lim was on the raft alone from the start, having been washed overboard from his sinking vessel, he related, and never seeing his shipmates again.

Frequent rains provided water, and a canvas gave him shelter. He was nude except for a life jacket when he took to the sea. When not fishing, he passed the time by humming folk songs of his native Hainan Island. Once he fell overboard but had no trouble regaining the raft.

$3,000 of Federal Taxes Remitted Says Gazette

Montreal, May 26 —(CP)— The Gazette said today that "a remission of nearly $3,000 of federal taxes" allowed the army sports fund to show a profit of $3,122 in its staging of the Pte. Johnny Greco - Terry Young fight here May 8.

The paper said the information came from reports of army authorities, the Canadian Arena Company, the Montreal Athletic commission and the amusement tax division.

(Lt.-Col. Arthur White announced Saturday that the fight grossed $16,301 and that the sports fund was $3,122 richer after all expenses had been met in the boxing card in which Greco took a 10-round decision.)

The Gazette said that "all parties concerned agreed that a gross gate of $16,301 was reached for the army show," but that "on other questions, however, there were slight divergencies especially where amusement taxes were concerned . . ."

Kingston Taxi Operators Decide To Postpone Strike

Kingston, Ont., May 26 (CP)—Kingston taxi operators at a meeting yesterday decided to postpone strike action until further information was received from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The local representative of the Prices and Trade Board has insisted that several of the operators submit a profit and loss statement over a certain period before an application can be made for an increase in the taxi tariff.

All the operators have instructions to charge 25 cents per passenger and not 50 cents which was approved some months ago by the Board of Police Commissioners.

BUILD 100 NEW HOMES

Kingston, Ont., May 26 (CP)—Building permits for te immediate construction of 100 permanent homes in Kingston have been granted by the Federal Controller of construction, according to an announcement made Tuesday by Thomas A. Andre, representative of Kingston Building Contractors Association. The new homes will cost from $4,000 to $6,500 and will be built where sewer and water services are already available.

POST-WAR PLANNER

"Sure there will be changes after the war . . . some are overdue. But I'm no robot. Whatever our post-war plans, I still want to see hard work rewarded and dividends paid on brains and initiative. I want the privilege of going into business for myself if I choose. Above all I want my kids to grow up where success depends on work, native ability and enterprise."

Canada has grown to rich nationhood through the courage, resourcefulness and initiative of individual citizens. These qualities must be preserved in the challenging days ahead.

Summary Judgment Against Associated Press Asked For by U.S. Government

New York, May 25 — (AP) — In Anti-trust procedure without precedent, the United States government today asked Federal Court for summary judgment against The Associated Press — without the taking of testimony by witnesses in open court trial.

The motion was made in a civil suit pending before a special three-judge court. It seeks an injunction which would require The Associated Press to furnish its news and picture services to any newspaper willing to bear its proportionate share of the cost of gathering news.

The government's motion asked that as one of nine decisions sought from the court the court cancel the existing agreement between the AP and The Canadian Press, and enjoin the AP from entering into any agreement with The Canadian Press or any other press association under which the AP would agree "not to deliver its news reports to any other association, newspaper or individual in any particular territory, area or region."

AP Declines Comment

Counsel for the Associated Press declined to comment on the government's latest move but it was understood that the government's contention that there were no material facts which remained incontroverted would be vigorously challended by the AP.

It was also understood that probably 30 days would be required to prepare and file answering affidavits in support of the AP's position.

Enjoin the AP from entering any agreement under which it would obtain the exclusive right to receive the news report of any association, newspaper or individual.

The three-judge court receiving the government motion was established at the request of Biddle for the earliest practical handling of the case as a matter of "general public importance."

In its motion, the government repeated many of the allegations made in the complaint, particularly its assertion of the pre-eminence of The Associated Press."

"Neither United Press Association nor International News Service," the government said, "supplies to newspapers of the United States a news-reporting service of domestic news events comparable in speed, scope and thoroughness of coverage to that supplied by The Associated Press to each member newspaper. . .

"The Associated Press renders a pre-eminent news picture service but non-members of the association are barred from receiving it."

Charges Anti-Trust Law Violated

Near the conclusion of its 22-page motion, the government said:

"The proof now on file with the court, or filed herewith, also establishes that during a period of over 30 years The Associated Press was a party to agreements with foreign news agencies under which in plain contravention of the Federal Anti-Trust Laws, it barred itself from delivering its news to newspapers or other persons in major areas of the world, in exchange for agreement by these foreign agencies to furnish their news to newspapers or other new agencies in the United States."

The government contended that such a contract still is in effect between the AP and The Canadian Press.

SLOWED DOWN FARMING

Blenheim, Ont., May 25. (CP)—Recent wet weather not only slowed down farming in the district but also served to help dethrone Blenheim's cribbage stars. Farmers representing South Raleigh made the most of their spare time, practiced pegging, and out-counted the locals 594 points in a two-tourney series.

POLICE UNDERSTOOD BETTER

Windsor, Ont., May 25. (CP)—Police Inspector Albert Mainsonville understood better the grounds for the inscription "compassionate leave" on an R.C.N.V.R. pass in a lost wallet claimed by Able Seaman Steve Meyers when Meyers signed the police book almost illegibly. "Don't tell me you're that happy to get it back?" he queried. "No", came the reply, "but I'm getting married in a few minutes".

DEER KILLED BY TRUCK

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Joe McGrady, a transport truck driver, pulled into his company's head office at nearby Long Branch yesterday with the carcass of a 125-pound deer tied to the front end of his truck. The animal was killed when it jumped in front of the truck at Clappison's Corners, near Hamilton. The carcass was given to public institutions.

160,000 PEOPLE ARE HOMELESS

Mississippi and Illinois River Floods Cause Millions of Dollars Loss

Chicago, May 25. (AP) — The turbulent Mississippi and the smaller Illinois rivers today threatened further disaster to an already flood stricken section of Illinois and Missouri.

Damage to crops, property and livestock, already in the millions of dollars, mounted hourly as the waters from the two rivers laid waste new areas of rich farm lands, seriously interfered with industry and transportation and drove thousands from their homes. Homeless in the flood zone were estimated by the Red Cross at about 160,000 while the death toll stood at 17.

Beardstown (Ill.) remained one the several river towns described as critical. With an estimatedq 4,500 of the Illinois River town's 6,500 already removed, there was danger the town would be completely abandoned should the river continue to rise. A 30-foot river crest was predicted for tomorrow or Thursday and last night reached 29.6.

The chief concern along the Mississippi today was at Nameoki, Venice and Chouteau, on the Illinois side.

There was no immediate problem in the other flood states—Indiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

In Indiana there was a break in the Brevoort Levee system, 12 miles south of Vincennes and less than three miles from the city, but no alarm was felt.

Pictured as Hero, Young Sheepherder Charged With Murder

Trinidad, Colo., May 25 (AP)—Young sheep herder, two weeks ago pictured as a hero who was burned severely in an attempt to rescue members of his family from a fire, was charged today with murdering them.

John N. Mabry, District Attorney, said the 21-year-old sheep herder, Harry Hartley, had signed a statement admitting that he beat his wife, Maybelle, 18, until she became unconscious because she refused to help him corral his sheep and then cremated her and their two small sons by firing their trailer camp home.

NOT EVEN THANKED

Meaford, Ont., May 26 (CP)—Two occupants of an ancient coupe didn't so much as thank Melville Maloney and Harold Sugget, both of Meaford, for saving their jalopy from collision with a C.N.R. freight train Friday. The unidentified pair stalled their car on the tracks before the oncoming freight, and abandoned it to save their own skins. Maloney and Sugget shoved it off the track seconds before the train whistled by.

FINALLY FOUND SHOE

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 26. (AP)—The flames from his burning fighter plane and the thrill of a life-saving parachute leap were secondary to Lieut. John R. Richards. What he wanted was that shoe he lost on the way down. He finally found it about 75 feet from the wrecked plane.

WATCH CARDINALS IS TIMELY TIP GIVEN BY EXPERTS

Open Long Home Stand Playing Every Team in the Loop

YANKS AT HOME

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

Today's timely tip is watch out for the St. Louis Cardinals from here on.

The Redbirds have been fluttering along in second or third place in the National League standings most of the spring and they are 2½ games behind the Brooklyn Dodgers at the moment, but every sign indicates that they are ready to soar now that they are back in Sportsman's Park for a long stay.

They may already have taken off. They won two doubleheaders in two days from New York Giants to close their Eastern invasion and in these four games made 52 hits for 26 runs. Their blows included five home runs.

Beating the Giants has been no momentous feat for any club this season, but the manner in which the Cardinals dispatched their business at the Polo Grounds was the most convincing show of strength any club in either major league has yet given.

The Redbirds don't have to be rated off their series with the Giants alone, however, for they won nine out of 13 games on their Eastern swing, split even with the Dodgers in four games, and previously had won eight of 14 against the other Western clubs.

Without exception every National League manager interviewed has rated them more powerful than the Dodgers.

Home Until June 21

Starting with tonight's game with Boston they will be on their home ground continuously until June 21 and in the interim will meet every other team in the league.

The Dodgers can be counted upon to put up a battle before yielding the lead. They, too, have won four straight and in the first round of intersectional play also captured nine out of 13 games. They have been getting exceptional pitching and timely extra-base hitting.

But the baseball sages shake their heads over the Dodgers' lack of speed, Albie Glossop's work at second base and the question of how hot weather will affect the old men who comprise the Brooklyn lineup.

The American League also is looking forward to fireworks over first place.

It is beginning to be recognized that New York Yankees no longer can dominate the junior circuit as they have in other years.

Cleveland Indians took three games from the champions last weekend and moved into first place, but the Tribe may have difficulty holding this edge through a two-week Eastern invasion while the Yankees are operating in their own stadium.

Complete Card Announced For Tonight's Bouts

With two feature bouts already assured, Promoter Frank Tunney announced he had signed "Irish Pat" Flannagan to meet Jan (Dutchman) Gotch to open tonight's all-star wrestling show at the Hume Arena.

It's quite a collection of muscle-bending pachyderms Mr. Tunney will turn loose in the Hume Arena ring tonight, featuring Yvon Robert, Montreal's claimant to the world title, versus "Big Earl" McCready, the Aurora farmer who once held the Empire crown.

Then to add spice to the picture, Marse Tunney pleased the weekly rasslin' clientele by bringing back "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the Cape Town colored sensation, who meets "Little Brother Maurice" Robert, also of the Quebec metropolis.

BALTIMORE FANS SORRY TO LOSE THIRD BASEMAN

Hal Sieling Will Return to Coast to Work in War Plant

ALL TEAMS IDLE

By The Associated Press

Just as Baltimore Oriole fans were all set to watch their infield calm down with the return of the veteran Hal Sieling to third base, the utility player told manager Tommy Thomas he was leaving the club June 1 to return to war work.

Sieling, who started the season in the outfield, came with a rush after being returned to his favorite infield spot last weekend.

The Orioles pepper pot has accepted a position with an aircraft company near his California home and will leave shortly.

Sieling is married and the father of a son. He spent the past winter in a defence plant.

After starting the season slowly in the outfield, he burned up the diamond after being brought to the hot corner. The Birds tumbled Newark Bears in the first two games Sieling played third and he helped engineer several fast double plays, stole home in one and clouted two homers.

All the teams in the league were idle yesterday and for once the weatherman wasn't to blame. All the games carded for the day had been played previously, enabling the clubs to spend the time in travelling to the sites of the new series which get underway tonight.

For the first time this season, all four of the games are scheduled under the lights with the pace-setting Toronto Maple Leafs ready to pounce on the tail-end Rochester Red Wings.

The day of rest was welcomed by the leaders who had played six games in the previous three days.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Amusement Tax Remitted

Montreal—(CP)—Rebate of nearly $3,000 in taxes on the $16,301 gate for the Johnny Greco-Terry Young fight allowed the army sports fund to show a profit of $3,122 in its staging of the scrap won by Greco in 10 rounds. The Montreal Gazette was the authority for the information that the amusement taxes had been remitted.

Postponed Till June 10

Pittsburg—(CP)—A shake-up in boxing dates came when weather forced a second postponement of the 10-round affair between Fritzie Zivic, former Welter Champ, and Jake Lamotta of New York Tuesday night. It was postponed to June 10, causing cancellation of a fight in Chicago for Zivic on June 4 and one for Lamotta in the Windy City June 11.

Will Handle 20 Horses

Camden, N. J.—(AP)—Rated leading trainer in the U. S., Hirsch Jacobs will handle a string of 20 horses at the 50-day meeting at Garden City Park, opening July 7. Jacobs has won more races in nine of the last 10 years than any other U. S. trainer.

Herman Leading Loop

New York—(AP)—William J. Herman, infielder of the Dodgers, is leading the National Loop with a .356 batting average, exceeding his best previous season's average of .341 in 1935 with the Chicago Cubs.

Novikoff Ready to Play

Chicago—(AP)—Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Chicago Cubs watched former-holdout Lou Novikoff go through his paces at Wrigley Field and then announced that the left-fielder would go into action today against the Giants—without further conditioning.

Armstrong Meets Angott

New York—(AP)—Right after his eight-round technical knockout of Maxie Shapiro in Philadelphia, Henry Armstrong signed for a 10-rounder with Sammy Angott in Madison Square Garden June 11. Armstrong and Angott are former lightweight champs—Angott voluntarily relinquished the title last fall but quickly returned to the resin.

Int. Bike Racer Dies

Revere, Mass.—(AP)—Famous in his own sphere for a quarter of a century, Nat. Butler, 73, international bike racer and promoter, died suddenly at his home here. Born in Nova Scotia, Butler earned renown by winning the big road races of Europe for seven consecutive years, then opened the Revere beach velodrome.

Grand Circuit to Operate

Cleveland, O.—(CP)—The grand circuit season is scheduled to open June 29 at the North Randall Track here under the auspices of the trotting club of America. As many as 43 entries have been registered for some of the coming stake events. The season will be somewhat restricted because the government has taken over some of the mile tracks.

Will Hold Championships

New York—(AP)—The National Court championships will be held at Forest Hills if they do not interfere with the war effort, it has been announced by Holcombe Ward, President of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, predicting a big season—with the supply of balls and racquets assured.

150 in Armed Services

New York—There are now more than 150 players from the American League in the Armed Forces, it has been announced by the league office. Ball-tossers of the loop have been joining at the rate of 10 per month, it was stated.

"Y" Boys Show Form in Indoor Athletic Meet

Last week additional events were run off in the Spring Indoor Athletic Competition at the "Y". The Junior and Employed Boys ran the 60 yard potato race and the Prep Boys the standing broad jump. Very few good times were made in the potato race, but in the jumping competition some surprising jumps for small boys were made. Three very small ten year olds jumped over the six foot mark, George Locke with 6 feet one and five eighths inches, John Batchelor with six feet and one eighth and Gerry Batchelor with an even six feet setting the pace. Benny Legate, a 12 year old jumped six feet six and five eights inches to make the best mark of the class.

The big five in the various classes were:

Junior Boys: Roger Cornell, 110.6 points, Colin Cameron, 107.3 points, Dick Flynn, 101.8 points, Bill Anderson, 99.6 points and Bill Jackson, 96.6 points.

Prep Boys: George Locke, 125.1 points, John Batchelor, 124.5 points, Gerry Batchelor, 123.9 points, Ben Legate, 116.4 points, and Jim Arnott, 114.8 points.

The best times and distances in the various groups were:

Potato Race, Group G: Bill An-Anderson 18 1-5 seconds; H Roger Cornell 17 2-5; I Bob Best 17 4-5; J Colin Cameron 17; K Don Claus 17 3-5; L Jack Connell 18 1-5; M Jim Rapino 18 3-5; N Vince Massey 16 4-5; O George Wonnacott 16 3-5; QQ Percy Marcus 18 2-5.

Most of these boys should be running this event in something under 16 seconds, although in the lower groups some of the boys did fairly well.

Broad Jump, Group B Glen Cornell 4' 7"; C Ron Donovan 5' 3 1-8"; D John Batchelor 6' 0 1-8"; E Geo. Locke 6' 5 1-8"; F Bill Scrymgeour 5' 9 5-8"; G Bill Muirhead 5' 7"; H Brock Stackhouse 4' 10 3-8"; I Ben Legate 6' 6 5-8".

The class average for this event gave 75.58 points, a very high average.

This week's events will be high jump for Junior and Employed Boys and 60 yard dash for Prep Boys.

Reliance Elect Softball Officers

Organizing for the 1943 season of play in the Belleville and District Softball Association, the Reliance Aircraft Softball Club elected officers at a special meeting.

Heading the Reliance nine, one of the older clubs in district softball circles, will be Captain J. H. Lizotte and practices will commence as soon as weather conditions warrant the use of the plant athletic field. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—J. H. Lizotte.
Sec.-Treas.—Eric Hoare.

BOB MONTGOMERY LIKELY HOLDER OF THE CROWN

Commission May Recognize Him as the Lightweight Champion

READY TO BATTLE

New York, May 26 (AP)—Among the more timely questions of the day is the one about what happened to the lightweight tournament. Well, folks, it's been found.

It seems that in the confusion it was being held all the time, although not even the beak-busters realized it. And Bob Montgomery is the only one to come out of it in one piece.

A rundown of rough Robert's more recent victims showed today that the brand new world champion of New York and New Jersey has knocked off, either directly or indirectly, 10 of the dozen or so swatters first listed for the elimination.

The result is that Pennsylvania commission figures his record is close enough to par for the course, so the Keystone State swat solons probably also will put the title okay on Bob next Wednesday.

This was the shindig that really proves there was a lightweight tournament all the time, even though any resemblance it has to the original is purely coincidental.

The original was thought up when Sammy Angott retired permanently for a couple of months last fall. Then, it "opened and closed in one," as the result of a series of off-again, on-again antics by the New York State Athletic commission. After starting the tourney, the wise New York beak-busting bosses, who insist they never confuse either themselves or the general public, turned an about face and decided to hand the title to the bouncing Beau.

Originally, they had listed about a dozen thumpers they thought rated a shot at the crown. And Bob, who was one of 'em, has cleaned up on virtually all the others directly or indirectly.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 26 (AP)—These spring days there's nothing quite like goin' fishin'—even if you can only sit and think about it. Which leads up to a letter just received from sports editor Wendell Lalime of the Newport (Vt.) Daily Express.

Newport, Vermont, is right up in the fishing country on Lake Memphremagog. That's the lake where they made a record catch last week, hauling in 18 landlocked salmon with a total weight of 100 pounds within 90 minutes. . . "To begin with," Lalime begins, "sportsmen fish for salmon right in the heart of the community from a railroad bridge adjacent to the local depot . . . They can arrive from Boston or New York on a morning train, catch their fish and take a noon train back to wherever they came from. If they wish to stay longer, the city's only hotel is only 100 yards away. No gasoline needed here."

A Tall One

"Fishermen here," adds Wendell, "like to tell the yarn about the time the Boston-Montreal train pulled into Newport and during the usual 15-minute stop a spectator in the observation car jumped to the bridge and hurried to the rail, where he managed to borrow someone's rod. Within five minutes he had hooked a salmon, hopped back on the train, had the chef cook it, and was sitting down to a delicious dinner as the train left Newport." . . . That's fast fishing, but from here it sounds like a lot faster cooking.

APPROVES DECISION

Montevideo, May 25. (AP)— The executive committee of the Uruguayan Communist Party approved yesterday Moscow's decision to dissolve the Third International. The committee announced it was preparing a statement which would be submitted to the National Committee later in the week.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

The trucker was very much surprised to get a call from a man who said he had to have a dead horse, but nevertheless offered to help. The dead horse was found.

Client—Now, I want you to drive over to my house with the horse.

By now the trucker thought the man was crazy, but he was getting paid for the job, so off he went. Arriving at the house, he was told to take the dead horse in and up to the bathroom and put it in the bath tub.

Trucker—You mean to say you want this dead horse put in your bath tub?

Client—That's what I said.

So the dead horse was placed in the bath tub, with much effort. But when he had been paid, the trucker could stand it no longer.

Trucker—Now, look here, just why did you want him put in your bath tub?

Client—Well, it's like this: I've got a brother-in-law living with me, and he's too darned smart. Everything you tell him, he knows it first. Now, he's going to come home pretty soon, and he'll go in the bathroom and then he'll come running down to me and tell me there's a dead horse in the bath tub and I'll say, "Sure, I knew that an hour ago!"

Local Athletes Good

Youthful Belleville track and field stars covered themselves with glory by winning the annual Trenton Rotary Club athletic meet on Monday, garnering in 70 points to Trenton's 63. The Belleville team was under the direction of Ed Shortt, popular physical director at our Y.M.C.A. and came home with three of the four individual championships of the day. Mr. Shortt only took along two girls, Margaret Taylor in the junior class and Beatrice Gannon in the intermediate group. Both won their respective class championships. George Wonnacott won the junior crown and Taylor of Trenton, the intermediate. Despite the heavy rains the junior boys were reeling off the century dash in 11 2-5 secs. which is good time for teen-aged lads. Belleville won the intermediate relay with a team composed of Dick Fitzpatrick, Vince Massey, George McNally and Jerry Moher. Trenton won the junior relay. Much credit is due Ed Shortt and his collection of Belleville track and field stars in winning the day's honors. Frankly, more attention should be given track and field competition in Belleville.

Look to Future

In reviving track and field events among the teen-aged of the district, the Trenton Rotary Club is making a move in the right direction, one that in years to come will provide the Trenton service club with an annual sports event that i time may draw competing athletes from considerable distance.

All spring Ed Shortt has been conducting an indoor athletic meet at the local "Y" and the dividends paid in Trenton must have been gratifying to him.

Incidentally most of the Belleville youngsters will be eligible for competition in the same series next year, only two of the local boys being over the 17 years age limit. Beatrice Gannon, who won the junior Trenton honors, will step up to intermediate next year. While on the subject of track and field events, would it not be a good idea to stage a spring interscholastic track and field meet between Albert College, St. Michael's Academy and the Belleville Collegiate athletes?

Softball Siftings

Unless this (censored) weather abates soon, the Men's Softball League won't get on the Exhibition Park diamond much before Dominion Day. However, the Reliance square is available and with eight or nine teams already in the fold, Prexy Chris Knott and his cohorts should be lending thoughts towards getting under motion in some manner or other.

Secretary Ted Schwab has obtained Belleville's quota of O.A.S.A. certificates and they are available at his office, 249 Front St.

'Tis rumored that Reliance A.C., recently organized with Captain J. H. Lizotte as president, are negotiating with Johnnie Bawden for pitching duties. Both Clarence Tuttle and Murney Green are being sought by Coach "Spike" Pryke to bolster the Reliance catching department, which would almost indicate the "plane-makers" will be the team to beat to the barrier.

Did You Know—?

Sheldon LeJeune, of the Evansville Club of the Three I League, threw a baseball a distance of 426 feet 9½ inches, October 9, 1910, for a record never surpassed? He had four trials, making 385 feet 3 inches, on first, 383 feet 4 inches, on second, both against wind. Then requesting permission to throw in opposite direction, thus getting the benefit of fair wind blowing, he beat the record previously set by John Hatfield at Brooklyn, October 15th, 1872, by little less than foot with 401 feet 4½ inches, then on fourth throw made the long standing record!

Trundlers Play-off

It was play-off time at the Recreation Alleys last night. In the Major "B" League the Nomads (formerly known as the Printers) edged out the Just Us gals for the league title. It has been nip and tuck between the Major "B" girls "Just Us" quintette and the champion Nomads all season and we believe the "Just Us" gals aree the only women's team playing in a major bowling league in this part of the province. The Nomads are repeaters as champions.

In the Major "A" Recreation League, history repeated itself. The Belleville Golf won out in the regular schedule, but last night in the play-offs the C.N.R. maple knockers not only toppled the pins, but also the Golfers, as was the case in 1942.

The Major "A" play-offs consisted of a five-game series played last night and at the end of five full games it was found that the C.N.R. had triumphed by one pin. And if that isn't too close for comfort, just ask some of the boys. The Major "A" League will hold its annual meeting and election of officers tomorrow night.

THIEVES FINISHED JOB

Acton, Ont., May 25. (CP)—A car parked near the cton Creamery gave them the tools—and eight gallons of gasoline—and thieves finished the job. They broke into the creamery last night and stole 17 cases of butter, some meat and chickens in cold storage, and a radio belonging to one of the employees.

VERY BUSY on WAR WORK

WE are very busy on munitions, the utmost production of which is the chief job of our men, women and machines.

We are ready, however, through our 2300 C.C.M. dealers in Canada, to supply genuine repair and replacement parts for the hundreds of thousands of C.C.M. bicycles already being ridden by fortunate people.

In these days of a bicycle scarcity "a bicycle saved is a bicycle made," and so we are making and distributing as many and as complete a range of replacement parts and safety accessories as materials available to the industry will permit.

We are doing this because it makes for a great saving of critical materials in so far as the bicycle industry is concerned. For example: if a thousand bicycles can be put back on the road, to carry essential workers, by the replacement of a pedal, crank, seatpost, chain or rim, a worthwhile amount of steel will be saved over the making of 1,000 new bicycles and the need for 1,000 bicycles will be met.

If you have a bicycle in your household that is not being ridden because of a needed repair part, take it to your C.C.M. dealer who will either have, or can get, the part needed to put your bicycle on the road again.

On the other hand, if you have such a bicycle, and do not need it, sell it to your C.C.M. dealer, who will give you a good price for it. He will condition it for use and sell it to a war worker or other qualified person.

Or, if you wish to buy either a new or used bicycle, and are a qualified applicant, see your C.C.M. dealer who will give you a Bicycle Purchase Application form to fill out. Such applications will be filled by dealers in order of priority if and when bicycles are available.

SERVICE PARTS FOR YOUR C.C.M.
In order that C.C.M. bicycles may be kept in good repair, C.C.M. are maintaining the best possible service on genuine C.C.M. parts and safety accessories by apportioning their available stocks to the 2,300 C.C.M. dealers across Canada. Every dealer gets his full quota in proportion to the parts available.

PRECISION-BUILT FOR EASY RUNNING

Horse Sense Bridge

RELEASE NO. 66

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Get acquainted with his nibs, a takeout. No other bid in bridge is more important to you. It is the kingpin in all good bidding. Yes, verily, and then some.

Time was when "a takeout" was a very liberal moniker. It used to be a term that included any response in something partner has not yet named. But nowanights we give it a distinction.

Suppose a player bids a suit and his partner responds in no-trump. We no longer call that a mere takeout. We give it the works. We call it "a takeout to no-trump."

That glaringly admits when a takeout is not to a suit. What other kinds of takeouts could there be? Only the suits which partner has not yet mentioned.

So we now use the word "takeout" in streamlined brevity for one purpose and one purpose only. We employ that word by itself to designate a takeout only when it is to any suit not bid by partner.

For instance, suppose you bid one heart and partner responds in no-trump or with an assist in hearts. It is not a takeout. But it is a takeout if partner responds in spades or diamonds or clubs.

When a suit is mentioned for the first time in any deal, that suit should be biddable. That is, the suit needs four cards with two faces; five cards with one face; or any six cards.

Without a biddable suit, you have no takeout. Even with a biddable suit, you have no takeout if you have too few tricks for any bid.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠K J 7 5
♥8 5 3
♦7 5
♣9 8 4 2

Your spade suit is biddable. But you have not more than two tricks. So, you have no bid of any kind. Not even a takeout.

Misguided microbes may tell you to make a courtesy response with a hand like that. Courtesy, my eye. It is no courtesy to lie to a partner.

LESSON NO. 67

Said a bridge player living in Yakima, when his wife was his partner: "By crackima! You get us in Dutch by talking so much. You takeout to suits when you lakima."

In a bridge game, you and your partner talk back and forth to each other. You tell each other how many tricks you can take. You tell each other what you like for trump, if any. Mostly that.

When your partner starts with a bid of one, he says he has five tricks, four of which are high cards, two of which are sure tricks. If he bids a suit, he says his suit is biddable.

He implies that he expects two tricks in your hand. He expects you to pass if you have not more than two tricks. If you bid, he expects you to have more than two tricks with two high cards.

You have a choice of only three kinds of bids. In their order of preference your bids follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

A takeout means a bid in your own suit. It means a bid in a suit that your partner has not yet mentioned. It means a suit that you announce as one that may be the possible trump.

When should you takeout to such a suit? Not merely to hear the sound of it. Not because you do not like the suit your partner has named. Only when it is strong enough to show. When it is biddable.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠A K J 5
♥Q 4 2
♦J 9 5
♣7 6 3

You have more than two tricks with at least two high cards among them. So, you bid something and follow T-A-N. You have a biddable suit. So your first choice is a takeout to spades.

You may prefer a no-trump bid before a takeout. You may like an assist before a takeout. But if you takeout first, you will never be wrong. Never, never, never. Not ever.

However, you should never takeout unless your suit is biddable. That is, if you know what is good for you.

AT THE BELLE

"THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD"

Jack Benny, that amiable comedian, is amiable no more.

In "The Meanest Man in the World," which opens today at the Belle Theatre, the nation's number one gagman, it is being whispered, is a scourge to kiddies and a veritable ogre to old ladies. But moviegoers will quickly sense that this revolution — any change in character is calculated solely as a change for the better — better laughs, louder laughs and more of them.

If Benny had been left alone, this picture might very well have earned the title, "The Kindest Man in the World," on the strength of its star's genial nature. Ah, but there's the rub. Benny was not left alone. Back in his home town he was starving gracefully as a lawyer, when — plunk! — Cupid sneaked up and tagged him.

Moonlight and roses! Jack Benny, the past master at romance, in love with Priscilla Lane, and she with him. Then, outrageous misfortune! Priscilla's prudish pop, it develops, has someone else in mind for her, a man more successful than Benny and more unscrupulous, too.

Leaving behind him no practice whatsoever, Benny and his faithful man, Rochester, remove the law office to New York. A man of the world, Rochester convinces his naive chief that in this world kindness and success just don't mix. Gotta get tough, he declares.

Benny sees the light and strives to become "The Meanest Man in the World." With Rochester egging him on, he embarks on a wave of "meanness" calculated to make moviegoers guffaw. All told, it would seem that Jack Benny, as "The Meanest Man In the World" means to set new marks for high hilarity and chucklesome fun.

The 20th Century-Fox picture, which features Edmund Gwenn, Anne Revere and Helena Reynolds, is based on the uproarious stage hit.

LLOYD NOLAN "Manila Calling"

"Manila Calling" the 20th Century-Fox action thriller announced as the added feature shows how Filipinos hope to oust the Jap from their island home with American aid. The film features Lloyd Nolan, Carole Landis, Cornel Wilde and James Gleason.

A two-reel Walt Disney colorfun cartoon "Flying Jalopy" completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Desperadoes"

It used to be: "Thar's gold in them thar hills."

Today, "thar's gold . . .and silver and copper, as well as just plain ordinary reds and blues and greens and yellows and lavendars and every other possible color or shade ever dreamt of by an artist.

Columbia's magnificent new Technicolor film, "The Desperadoes," is proof thereof.

An outdoor action epic produced in Utah, the picture now at the McCarthy Theatre with Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes and Edgar Buchanan brings to the screen some of the most breath-taking scenic vistas ever revealed. Color runs riot, as do the actors in this gun-flaming epic of the Old West.

At the same time, according to director Charles Vidor, color had to be as carefully watched and directed as any member of the brilliant cast.

Thus, in the indoor sequences particularly, there is what to director Charles Vidor, color Walls and general backgrounds are neutral and cool; the actors wear the warmer hues and thus are able to stand out.

It was necessary to see to it that colors were co-ordinated, so that minor set accessories blended with Evelyn Keyes' dresses; so that Claire Trevor's particularly extravagant costumes were not to lose their effectiveness in a garishly ornate setting.

Colors run riot in "The Desperadoes," but the riot is, as is typical of motion picture production, always under perfect control!

AT THE CAPITOL

"Idaho"

Republic has rung the bell again in its latest big-budgeted western, "Idaho," starring the ever-popular Roy Rogers, which opens next at the Capitol Theatre.

Styles in films may come and go, but the blood-warming, pulse quickening western goes on for ever, and according to all boxoffice reports, the "oaters" are more popular now than they ever were, with more and more fans realizing the pleasure and relaxation to be found in a wholesome drama of the Great Outdoors.

"Idaho" is a typical example of why westerns are more popular today than they ever were before. In addition to the conventional western thrills and action, it is packed with romance, pictorially beautiful photography, and music which is recognized as tops in its field. The Sons of the Pioneers, accredited with making an unique contribution to our musical folklore, render their songs in an unforgetable manner, and the boys of "The Robert Mitchell Boychoir" also merit much praise for their excellent work.

Virginia Gery is pretty and charming in the feminine lead, and Ona Munson scores as a villainess de luxe.

Smiley Burnette delivers his full quota of laughs, and amply lives up to his reputation as a top notch comedian.

"Wings For The Eagle"

A timely film, crammed with action, romance and excitement, will open at the Capitol Theatre as the added attraction when Warner Bros.' "Wings For The Eagle" makes its local debut. The picture features Ann Sheridan and Dennis Morgan in the top roles with an impressive supporting cast made up of Jack Carson, George Tobias and Russell Arms. The realistic setting is the huge Lockheed Aircraft Plant where the constant fight against time surpasses all personal conflict.

Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson are all workers at the Lockheed Plant who constantly are at odds among themselves until Pearl Harbor puts their own problems into the background. Lloyd Bacon, who has directed many a hit film, comes across with another in "Wings For The Eagle."

A pepeye cartoon and the serial "Secret Code" complete a grand bill for the whole family.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was drinking my milk slow on account of not feeling even as much like school as usual, and I said, Hay ma, do you believe in superstition?

Naturally not, superstition is a relick of the barbarous ages where it belongs, ma said, and I said, Well if you broke a mirror dont you believe you'd have 7 years bad luck?

I'd have bad luck breaking the mirror and that would be the long and the short of it and no use crossing future bridges before you come to them by crying over spilt milk, ma said, and I said, Well I'm glad to hear it, because I broke my little round mirror with the avvertizing on the back and I thought maybe you might want me to stay home from school today because I'd be safer in the house than anywheres else.

Such an idea for land sakes, I dont want to hear another word on the silly subject, ma said, and I said, Okay, ma, I'll be careful as anything, I'll look both ways before I cross every street, so you certainly dont need to worry about me getting run over.

Who said I was worrying about any such perposterous thing, now keep quiet, ma said, and I said, Of course if it's not my fault I wont be able to help it, I mean it wont be my fault if an airoplane crashes down in the middle of the street while I'm looking every way except up.

Will you kindly stop that meaningless talk immediately? ma said. Why can't you be more careful with your things? Where did you break it? she said, and I said, What, the mirror? Oh, the other day, I mean the other week, I said.

Well then it did mean bad luck, you crazy silly thing, and this is it, ma said.

Meaning a medium size slap, and the only bad luck I had was being late on account of stopping to listen to two men arguing about the war and sounding as if they were going to get into a fight but not actually doing it.

CHAPTER 24

"The humility that the army will teach thousands of cocksure boys will be good for them. It taught me humility; it disciplined me and it gave me great respect for men who've been in the army for years, unheard of until now. In the army your days are hard and you go to bed early. Some nights you lie awake and think back. The 'break' in your life makes the thinking back clearer. And you think of your mistakes and the things you wish you had done, but didn't do.

"I've heard so many of the boys say, 'When this is over, I'm not going back to the thing I was doing before the war. I was making out okay, but it wasn't what I wanted to do and I didn't have the nerve to get out while I was making money and having a fairly good time.' There are a lot of angles to it, but the fact remains that many of them were sidetracked and they are going back to their original idea when this thing is over. But I'd rather talk about you."

"There isn't very much to say about me. I'm not being coy or modest. It's true. There isn't very much to say about me. More than ever it's a man's world and women have been put back in their original place."

"I don't know about that. The women of England are doing the work of men very well."

"Yes. I know. And more and more I want to do something. But what I meant was that women are in the background now. The men are the fighters and the women feel that they want to be soft and feminine again with men. They may work in a factory all day, but at night they are more conscious of their femininity than they were before this happened."

"You don't like your job, do you?"

She looked up with a start. "I don't dislike it. I don't ever think about it. It doesn't mean anything. You never have the satisfaction of finishing one thing and starting something new. You do the same thing, typing and filing. It goes on forever."

She looked at her watch. "If I'm going to a wedding . ."

"I'd forgotten how long it takes a girl to dress."

When he returned with her jacket and held it for her, his hands lingered ever so briefly upon her shoulder. But the moment was long enough for her to reach back in her memory to recall her first realization of the humanness and warmth of his touch. Harry, then Jud, then Harry again. Only two, the only two in her life.

He turned her around.

"Temple, one of these days your reserve is going to let go. It will be as though a lid were blowing off a boiling vessel."

"It did. But I put the lid back on and turned the fire down low."

"You're warning me. But you're running away from something. Don't take too long a time to discover what it is you're running away from. Get the regrets over."

"I haven't any regrets."

"Haven't you?"

When he left her at the boarding house he told her he would be back at 3.

As she took a shower and changed from the brown wool dress to a black afternoon dress, she thought, "This is his day. I'll give it to him. He's in love with me. Dr. McCormick who isn't Dr. McCormick any more. All that is the same about him is his touch that I remembered. Not the Dr. McCormick whom all the girls at home used to wonder about, but a positive, commanding man in uniform, standing beside that fireplace, telling me all those things about himself and the way he feels about me, telling me to get my regrets over soon."

Regrets? In the mirror she saw her color rise. She had no regrets. She loved Jud. She loved him deeply. Jud who had given her so many highlights, the Jud of last May, the dream they had had then. Dream . . In Florida Jud had said, "That was a dream, Temple." No, it was not a dream. It was real. It had happened.

McCormick was waiting for her and his eyes, amused, followed her as she walked down the steps. He did not look at all like a man who has told a girl that he loved her and who in turn has been told she had nothing to give him but her silence.

How odd it was for her to think now of the rocks on the coast of Maine, the rocks that seemed to say to the pounding surf, "You have slashed at me for centuries, but still I stand and I will continue to stand." Harry, straight, arresting, his overcoat over his arm, reminded her so queerly of the rocks along her favorite coast, while to think of Jud made her think of the placid surf and the blue skies over Florida.

In the car Temple turned her head and looked at McCormick through the misty veil of an absurd little black hat.

He chuckled. "I'm not difficult, Temple. I'm so uncomplicated a person that people insist on making me complex. A lawyer, you see, takes a certain pride in presenting a good case even when he knows he stands a good chance of losing it. A friend of mine took a case to the Supreme Court recently. He lost it, but he did go before the Supreme Court." He smiled, the wrinkles deepening around his eyes. "The court is still in session."

She heard the words again in a large, flower-filled room in an old, dignified house in Alexandria. She heard them from the lips of a bishop who was saying them to a lovely older woman and to a tall distinguished man. And the roses in the room gave generously of their fragrance; the candles on the improvised altar flickered with grace upon the people gathered there.

The words . . she heard them much more distinctly today when they were not meant for her. She heard them with her eyes lowered so that Harry could not see her tears. She heard them with regret and with her mind ready to admit the truth she would not admit before.

Jud and she had not the right to take their love like thieves in the night and sneak away with it. They had dishonored it now to let themselves be known as free when they were not free. She tried to make it right for them, to make excuses for them, but the words now being said told her . . She and Jud could never have this. They could never anticipate the first night of their marriage again. To sneak away like thieves with their love had made her a wife for three days; now her wedding ring was locked away.

It had been wrong to rush love and to take it in one large bite. Why had they not had the strength and the farsightedness to wait until the words could have been said over them in beauty and dignity? Why had they turned their love into a secret marriage, a war marriage? Regrets. Only a little while ago she had said she had no regrets. In Florida she had felt that immense, dreary sadness that is the forerunner of deep regret.

She had been married before she had been ready for marriage.

Temple was trembling. She could not stop it. Fearful that McCormick see it, she turned her head a little and looked at him. It was too late. He was looking at her, frowning, not with displeasure but with puzzled concern. She did not know that her look was an appeal that made him take her hand and hold it fast. She felt that she would surely die if she did not get out of this room.

When the ceremony was over, he said, "I'll be only a minute, Temple. Wait for me by the door."

She was waiting outside on the steps when he joined her.

"I thought you were going to faint," he said. "Are you all right?"

"I'm all right. It was a little—overpowering."

He took her arm and led her to the car.

"I don't want to take you home, but I shall if you'd rather."

"No, I don't want to go home."

"A cocktail and some food probably. I'm terribly sorry. I'd never have asked you to come if I'd known a wedding would upset you. You didn't tell me. I stood there and watched you go through hell. I don't know what it meant, but I felt responsible."

"It isn't your fault. It has nothing to do with you."

"I'm sure it hasn't. If I had, I wouldn't let you suffer."

"I can't tell you what it is. Please don't ask me. I knew today that it has been dishonored enough. I won't dishonor it more by breaking my promise."

"I don't want you to break your promise for me, Tempse. I'm not going to ask you what has you bound up in a ball of silence and suffering. I'm not entitled to any special privilege, my own silence for a year doesn't give me the right to expect anything from you. I probably deserve your contempt for crashing in on your happiness."

"You're on the outside of it. You can't come in."

"Thank you for telling me where I stand. But there are still cocktails and dinner, the court is still in session and it's quite a long while before my day is over." He mentioned the name of an inn in Maryland. "Have you ever been there?"

She and Jud had often talked of going there.

"No."

"We'll go there. I don't want to take you to a place where he has taken you. That was meant kindly, Temple, however it sounds."

They had cocktails in what once had been the music room of a country house. It was still a music room, for the same furniture remained and a young man played the piano softly in a far corner and by a window. There was nothing in the room to suggest that cocktails were served to the public or that dinners were served in another room that had once been the drawing-room of the family of this house.

Temple lifted her veil. She felt better. She had to feel better she told herself. The room was lovely and quiet except for the soft music. Such a lovely room and soft music made you return to life, made you love life and value it and cherish it whatever else lay deep and sore in your heart and mind.

KNOWN BY SIZE OF FEET

Brantford, Ont., May 25 (CP)—"Shoes size 13, Brantford Post Office, Ontario" reads the address on a letter destined for a Princeton dsitrict man who is known to a Brantford shoe dealer by the size of his feet.

If You Suffer Distress From Monthly FEMALE WEAKNESS
Which Makes You Cranky, Nervous

If you suffer from cramps, backache, headache, "irregularities", periods of the blues — due to functional monthly disturbances—

Start at once — take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It not only helps relieve monthly pain but also tired, weak, nervous feelings. This is due to its soothing effect on ONE OF WOMAN'S MOST IMPORTANT ORGANS.

Pinkham's Compound is one of the most effective medicines you can buy made especially for women. Taken regularly—Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such symptoms. Also a fine stomach tonic! Made in Canada.

Two Huge Plants Imperilled By Rising Waters

Chicago, May 26 — (AP) — Two huge industrial plants in Southern Illinois, as well as several small communities in that region and in Eastern Missouri, remained imperilled today as the flood-choked Mississippi River showed no material drop in the lower reaches.

However conditions upstream on the Mississippi and the Illinois rivers were reported improved with drops recorded.

At Wolf Lake, 125 miles south of St. Louis, six inches of water covered the town and fear was expressed by officials that the Atlas Powder Plant, covering 2,000 acres of low land, was endangered by the spreading Mississippi waters. The plant manufactures industrial explosives.

About 25 miles north of Wolf Lake, at Grand Tower (Ill.) the Illinois Central Public Service generating plant, a $9,000,000 project, was menaced by the ever-rising Mississippi waters. The plant, which supplies power for Illinois south of Tuscola, including many coal mines, also covers 2,000 acres.

Mayor C. D. Gardiner, who reported that water covered 80 per cent of the town, urged the immediate evacuation of 50 per cent of the 800 inhabitants and the 400 refugees.

Thousand Guineas Won by Lord Derby

Newmarket, England, May 26—(CP Cable)—Lord Derby today won the one thousand guineas for the sixth time when his filly, Herringbone, defeated the favorite ribbon with Cincture third. Herringbone started at odds of 15 to 2, ribbon at 6 to 4, and Cincture at 100 to 7.

Walter Earl had not previously trained a winner in this classic race for three-year-old fillies but Harry Wragg, the sucessful jockey, won on Campanula nine years ago. Wragg also had the mount on the winner of yesterday's two thousand guineas, Kingsway.

Tuesday's Rain Causes Damage in Kingston

Kingston, Ont., May 26 (CP)—Heavy rains yesterday resulted in extensive damage in the Kingston area, it was reported today. City officials said they could not remember when more damage was caused by flooding.

In the nearby village of Portsmouth, 11 persons who were living on the ground floor of the town hall were forced to move to the second storey when four feet of water inundated their living quarters. They were the village constable, Nelson Wilson, his wife, eight children and one grandchild.

Ald. C. P. Dalton of Kingston said heavy damage was caused to properties in the King Street west residental area with water in cellars rising as high as two feet.

The fire department was kept busy throughout the night in an effort to relieve conditions. Two large pumps were used to drain water from a tunnel between Kingston General Hospital and the power plant.

RAF Continues Sweep Over Jap Positions

New Delhi, May 26 — (AP) — R.A.F. fighters continued their sweeps into Japanese-occupied Burma yesterday, making low-level attacks on enemy objectives in the Upper Chindwin district, a British communique announced today.

Bombers also struck Buthedaung in Western Burma and blasted at road transport in that area, the bulletin said.

Two planes were lost during the sweep.

LOOKS FOR LEAK WITH MATCH

London, Ont., May 26 — (CP) —A London plumber was looking for a gas leak in the basement with the aid of a match. Fumes suddenly ignited in his face and shot thru to an adjoining basement, resulting in an explosion which blew out part of a brick wall and shattered window panes upstairs. The fire department hurried to the scene, but no blaze resulted.

WEATHER DELAYS ONTARIO SEEDING

Operations in Most Counties Between 10 and 35 Per Cent Complete

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Weather conditions have delayed planting of crops by farmers throughout the province, the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture said today. Seeding operations in most counties are between 10 and 35 per cent complete.

In Bruce county the report said "delay in seeding operations is alarming." "A few farmers on lighter soils have considerable seeding completed, but well over 75 per cent still is incomplete.

Many counties reported seeding operations at a complete standstill last week. In addition, Perth County said about 50 per cent of the fall wheat would have to be reseeded with spring grain.

The best prospects appear in Northern Ontario where Algoma reported seeding progressing favorably. In Kenora the weather has been good and seeding is being hurried. Farmers in Temiskaming report they have never seen the ground work up better.

Meat Supplies Give Out In Pre-Ration Buying

Brantford, Ont., May 26—(CP)—Introduction of meat rationing Thursday has been preceded by an almost unparalleled rush on the part of local citizens to stock up on all kinds of meats, according to a survey of local butchers today. Meat supplies in all butcher shops dwindled this morning following Tuesday's deluge of customers.

"When the government decides again to put on a restriction on a certain food product, I hope it will do it overnight and sort of sneak up on the general public" observed one butcher. "We were simply swamped all day Tuesday and things are shaping up that way again this morning."

St. Thomas, Ont.—(CP)—Unusual buying activity in meat was seen here yesterday, and there was no decrease in demand today but dealers were unable to meet it owing to depleted stocks.

Kitchener, Ont.—(CP) There was little if any meat to be bought in Kitchener stores after noon today. Starting yesterday morning, housewives staged the greatest run on meat in the history of the city and stocks just could not meet the demand. A meat dealer in a large store stated people who ordinarily buy 50 and 60 cents worth of meat were placing orders for $3 and $4.

Smoked meat could not be had at any price.

Boarding House Have 2 Choices In Meat Rationing

Ottawa, May 26—(CP)—Prices Board officials said today that boarding house operators serving meals to more than two boarders have two choices of procedure under meat rationing: They can operate as quota users, the same as hotels or other organized meal establishments, or they can carry on as ordinary householders

As an ordinary householder, a boarding house operator who serves meals can collect all the ration books of the household, like any housewife, and use the meat coupons from them to make all necessary meat purchases. The ration book of anyone leaving the residence permanently must be returned.

As a quota user, the boarding house operator must have quotas fixed by the Prices Board's ration administration, and must open and use a meat ration coupon bank account. To the boarder, it doesn't matter what method is used. He gives up two meat coupons a week in either event.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 26 — (CP)—Golds had a mild slump this afternoon on Toronto stock exchange. Other groups were strong. Industrials showed top form with an index gain of .42. Turnover totalled 156,000 shares.

Brazilian was a heavy trader and price firmed 3/8 to 23. C.P.R. also moved in volume at a gain of 1/4 and fractions were added by Imperial Oil, International Petroleum, Consolidated Paper, Dominion Steel B, Bell Telephone, Canadian Car and other issues. Fanny Farmer and Dominion Stores were moderately weak.

Soft spots in golds included Macassa, Wright-Hargreaves, Lamaque, Kerr-Addison, East Malartic and Central Patricia and in base metals Normetal, Steep Rock, Noranda, and Hudson Bay were higher.

WALL STREET

New York, May 26—(AP)—Stocks advanced today to the highest average levels for more than three years but active profit selling whittled away part of the gains.

Drawing inspiration from the brisk upturn near the close on Tuesday, the market moved ahead spiritedly through the first hour on good volume. Rails were heavily favored in the buying and advances generally, at the best, ranged from fractions to more than a point.

The trading pace slowed as prices backed away from peak levels. Near the fourth hour fractional advances were well distributed among key industrial groups and the carrier issues.

Bonds and commodities showed irregular trends.

Canadian issues were steady. Canadian Pacific, Hiram Walker, Distiller Seagram and Canada 4s rose fractions of a point, while Dome Mines and Lake Shore were unchanged.

Among stocks on the improved side were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Can, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, Oliver Farm, Douglas Aircraft, Eastman, U. S. Gypsum and Texas Co. Santa Fe and N. Y. Central changed hands in large blocks at the opening and the former recorded a new top for about two years. Southern Pacific and Great Northern also attracted bids at better prices.

HOGS

Toronto, May 26—(CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $12.

Dressedweight: Hamilton $16.65 delivered, Hull, $16.10 plus transportation, Stratford, $16.50 delivered.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 26—(CP)—Cattle trade was fairly active at firm prices on the Livestock Market here up to mid-session today. Veal calves were firm. Hogs, sheep and lambs were steady. Unsold from yesterday was 200 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle, 380, calves, 500, hogs, 700, sheep and lambs, 50.

Prices in the trade were:

Cattle: Weighty steers $11.50-$12.65 with a few up to $13, butcher steers, $11.50-$12.50, heifers, $11.50-$11.75, butcher cows, $8-$10, canners downward to $6, bulls, $9-$10.50, fed yearlings, $12-$13.

Veal calves: $15-$16 for choice with others downward to $11 and the bulk of sales from $13 to $15.50.

Choice spring lambs, $18 cwt.

Sheep, $5-$10.

Hogs, $16.75 dressedweight.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, May 26—(CP)—Livestock receipts: Cattle, 20; sheep 1; hogs, 97; calves, 136.

Butcher cows, $7.50-$10; canners, cutters, $5-$7.25. Bulls, $8-$10.50.

Veal calves, $12-$15; good veals mostly $14.50; medium around $14. Bulk of veals, $13-$13.50. Drinkers, $9-$11.

Hogs, $16.85-$16.90, B-1 dressed. Sows, $11.50-$12, liveweight. Grade A drew $1 per hog premium, with discounts on off grades.

Kiwanians Hear Aviation Talk

Membership in the Kiwanis Club was increased by one at Tuesday's luncheon at the Quinte Hotel, when Ted Schwab was introduced and initiated into the organization. The club also heard an interesting talk by C. R. "Pat" Patterson on the possibility of an airport in Belleville after the war which will be part of the Post-War planning. Mr. Patterson spoke recently to the Chamber of Commerce and his subject matter was the same as on that occasion. He expressed the opinion that flying would make rapid strides after the war and that many of the boys under thirty would like to remain in the industry. He showed there were 200,000 in the Air Force and 100,000 in aircraft industry and all would have to be found positions after the conflict. He was introduced by Bill Hopson and appreciation expressed by Jack White.

Bruce Lattimer presided at the luncheon with Glen Thompson as song leader and Mark Vanner collecting the fines. Alec Gordon presided at the piano. The attendance prize winners were Mark Vanner, Bill Hopson and Ernie Finkle. Ben Ogilvie passed the cigars due to a new arrival at his home and the boys appreciated the smokes. Ted Schwab was introduced by Charles Richardson and initiated by Eddie Logan. Ted was born in Ireland and came to Canada at an early age settling with his parents in Toronto. Since coming to Belleville in 1939 he has entered into the life of the community taking an especial interest in sports.

The Sims shows under the auspices of the club for the next week was represented by Mr. Goeke and members were asked to support same.

Japanese Position In Chicagof Valley On Attu Wiped Out

Washington, May 26 — (AP)—United States troops have wiped out the Japanese position in Chicagof Valley, one of three major areas held by the enemy on Attu Island, the Navy Department announced today, and were reported following up with a drive against a second main position around Chicagof Harbor.

Army heavy and medium bombers and fighter planes supported the continuing assault, a navy communique said. The planes bombed and strafed enemy positions in the Chicagof area and started fires.

The Chicagof Valley sector was cleared of enemy forces on Monday. Although there was no report of enemy casualties, it was assumed here that the dwindling Japanese units on the bleak North Pacific Isle had again lost heavily and that those which survived the attack fell back upon Chicagof Harbor for a final stand with their comrades in the ridge overlooking the narrow coastal plain.

Fuel Problems Fully Discussed As Mayors Meet

Ottawa, May 26 (CP)—Topics dealing with municipalities and the war, civilian protection and defence, salvage and local ration boards were scheduled for discussion as the sixth annual conference of the Canadian Federation of Mayor and Municipalities continued here today.

Though the federation's executive committee was prepared yesterday for a full discussion on post-war reconstruction, and brought with it a comprehensive draft brief for presentation to the parliamentary committee on reconstruction after approval by the conference, most of the deliberations centred about the problem of next winter's fuel supply.

Other chief magistrates joined Vancouver's Mayor J. W. Cornett in pressing for action on the fuel problem, and the federation named a special committee to consider it. The executive committee's brief was laid over for further discussion, but its members, Mayors Stanley Lewis of Ottawa, Fred Conboy of Toronto and Adhemar Raynault of Montreal, were authorized to act as a post-war committee and add to their numbers.

Confer With Administrator

Before formulating its recommendations on fuel, the special committee is expected to confer with J. McGregor Stewart, Fuel Controller, and Selective Service Director Arthur MacNamara. Manitoba has plenty of wood, said Mayor J. V. Young of Brandon, but manpower was a difficulty. He suggested the Federal government should establish wood-cutting camps on public lands, using prisoners of war, conscientious objectors, evacuated British Columbia Japanese and forestry battalions of the Canadian army.

Mayor Lucien Bourne of Quebec forecast a severe wood shortage there, and Mayor Paul Pratt of Longueuil, Que., complained that a black market existed in wood. The only woman delegate, Mrs. Anne Shipley, Reeve of Teck Township, Ont., suggested lots close to urban communities should be opened for cutting, and wood-cutters allowed extra gasoline coupons to enable them to drive to the bush.

The Mayors heard Sir William Beveridge, British Social Security expert, outline some features of his plan for Britain, and welcomed a delegation of United States Mayors and municipal officials, headed by Mayor Cornelius Scully of Pittsburgh.

RUSSIANS CRACK KUBAN BRIDGEHEAD LINE

ITALIAN ISLAND BASES POUNDED BY U.S. BOMBERS

Germans Yield Ground Over One Mile Deep

100,000 Red Army Infantry and Tanks Strike After Heavy Artillery Barrage

67 PLANES SHOT DOWN

By JAMES M. LONG

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 27 — (AP) — Attacking nearly 100,000 strong, Red Army infantry and tank men have forced the Germans to fall back from a front line sector of the Kuban bridgehead several miles long and two kilometres (1.24 miles) deep, D.N.B., the German news agency announced today in a dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio.

The agency said Nazi defences all along the Delta stronghold were battered. The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.

The attacking force, which struck after thunderous artillery preparation, was reported made up of six Soviet rifle divisions and three tank regiments.

D.N.B. said the main attack was delivered "against German positions between Moldavanskoje and Kijevskoje, in the area of Krymskaya," which lies 20 miles above the port of Novorossisk. Other attacks were reported pressed to the south in the Novorossisk sector and to the north, along the banks of the Kuban.

The Russians announced in their midnight communique that they had smashed back two counter-attacking German battalions totalling about 1,600 men, and a special broadcast from Moscow later reported 67 German planes shot down in the area northeast of Novorossisk, with a loss of 20 Soviet planes.

Heavy Fighting

The German radio asserted 400 Russians had been killed and 600 captured in fighting near Temryuk, but acknowledged that the Russians had regrouped their forces and that heavier fighting was in prospect.

The Germans, too, issued reports that other sectors of the long Russian front had come alive, with heavy Russian attacks that dented the German lines southwest of Velikie Luki and large scale Soviet scouting activity south of Staraya Russa.

The Germans said their troops were forced to withdraw temporarily from the main defence line below Velikie Luki but that a counter-attack re-established the position. Velikie Luki is 270 miles west of Moscow and 90 miles from the Latvian border.

The Germans also declared a Soviet scouting party had invaded their lines south of Staraya Russa before being repulsed. Staraya Russa is 285 miles northwest of Moscow and 140 miles south and slightly east of Leningrad.

Question Prisoners On Sit-Down Strike

Toronto, May 27 (CP)— C. F. Neelands, deputy provincial secretary of Ontario, said last night that officials are questioning 56 prisoners at the Burwash Industrial farm in the Sudbury district in an effort to determine the cause of the sitdown strike they staged in the bush Monday night and Tuesday.

The men responded to an appeal by Premier Nixon Tuesday to return to their dormitories after spending 24 hours in the bush under guard.

"Superintendent W. L. McJannett is questioning the men one by one and he has uncovered some complaints, but until he has questioned the entire 56 it would be better not to tell what he has been told", said Mr. Neelands. "After he has interviewed all the men concerned we will probably know what was behind it all".

A NEW RAT TRAP

Rochester, N.Y., May 27 (AP)— William J. Vincent and C. M. Stanton have invented a trap that electrocutes rats. The rats run through a series of openings, which automatically shut behind them, until they reach an "execution chamber." An electrically controlled flap drops the victime into a container.

MEAT IN LOCKERS TO BE REPORTED

Statement Should be Accompanied by Meat Coupons

Ottawa, May 27—(CP) — The Prices Board announced today that under meat rationing, now in effect in Canada, consumers who had meat stored in lockers when the rationing order came into force are required to report their holdings before June 30 to the nearest branch of the board's ration administration.

The board said such reports should be accompanied by meat coupons from the ration books of members of the households to cover the meat at the rate of one coupon for each two pounds, gross weight, which are stored. This regulation applies also to farmers.

The number of meat coupons to be detached and forwarded need not exceed 50 per cent. of the total number of meat coupons attached to the ration books of the consumer and those of all persons in his household.

Those operating or managing meat storage lockers for others may be required by the ration administration at any time after today to report stocks of meat held in storage and to hold the meat if required by the ration administration to do so.

Bombing Major Feature of Drive To Cripple Nazis

London, May 27. (CP Cable.)— Clement Attlee, deputy Prime Minister, told the House of Commons today that no attempts by neutral countries would divert the United Nations from their considered plans to bomb Germany.

Apparently referring to recent Spanish moves condemning bombings and urging their outlawing by both sides, Mr. Attlee said:—

"The destruction of the Axis war potential by air bombing is a vital and indeed a major feature of our offensive and neither the enemy nor anyone else will divert us from it. Nor shall we relax our vigorous prosecution of the war by this and other legitimate methods until the complete victory of the Allied nations is achieved".

When R. R. Stokes, Labor referred to "indiscriminate bombing of civilian centres as both morally wrong and strategic lunacy" Mr. Attlee replied: "This is no indiscriminate bombing. Bombing is on those targets which are most effective from the military point of view".

HEBREW TYPEWRITER

Chicago, May 27 (AP)—William Mercur believes the thief who stole his typewriter is going to get a mild surprise when he starts to operate it. In reporting the theft of the machine to police, Mercur, New York theatrical producer, showed Sgt. William Murphy a sample of the machine's work. The printing was in Hebrew characters.

74 Nazi Planes Destroyed in Day Record of U.K.-Based U.S. Planes

By LEON BRANHAM

Associated Press Staff Writer

U. S. Air Headquarters, England, May 27 — (AP) — British-based United States heavy bombers established a record for a single day's bag by Americans by destroying 74 German planes May 21 during the unescorted raids on submarine construction yards at Emden and Wilhelmshaven, it was announced today.

Twelve bombers were lost in this joint action.

The record bag of enemy craft brought the total to 301 destroyed in eight American raids which embraced 16 targets during May.

The previous high by the U.S.-A.A.F. for a single day was 64 shot down during the four-way attack on Kiel, Antwerp, Courtral, France, and Velsen, Holland, May 14 by medium and heavy bombers. Eleven heavy bombers were lost on those raids.

With four days remaining in May the bombers, out in greater strength than ever before, have dropped a greater weight of bombs on Nazi targets in Europe than they had in any month since the first United States raid was made from Britain Aug. 17, 1942.

Also the month's operations have produced the highest losses for the Americans, 49 heavy bombers failing to return from their missions.

In view of the far greater strength of the raiding forces, however, observers considered the losses not out of line. Seventeen bombers were lost in nine raids covering 12 targets during March.

STRIKE IS ENDED AT THREE AKRON RUBBER PLANTS

Workers Comply With Roosevelt's Order to Return to Work by Noon

50,000 INVOLVED

Akron, O., May 27 (AP) — C.I.O. union workers ended strikes at three major Akron Rubber Companies today, complying with the noon deadline set in an ultimatum by President Roosevelt concerning a five-day production stoppage that threw more than 50,000 into idleness.

A small shift returned to war jobs at the B. F. Goodrich Company just as the deadline approached after United Rubber Workers Unionists there decided to observe the President's order.

The back-to-work movement started earlier at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company employees straggled into the plants throughout the morning and six hours after the first men reported on the 6 a.m. shift, Firestone guards estimated that 50 per cent of the force was on the job.

A Goodyear spokesman said it would take "all day and a good part of tomorrow to balance up our production," adding that it was necessary to start from scratch after such a shutdown.

Only General Tire and Rubber Company reported a full working force on the job.

Hardly any employees entered the gates at Goodrich and United Rubber Workers Union members there said their president George H. Bass had called on them to meet at 10 a.m. and 7 p. m. — the first meeting being scheduled two hours before expiration of President Roosevelt's deadline. Workers are instructed not to remain away from jobs just to attend the sessions.

Bass and presidents of locals at the other companies made radio addresses late last night, urging their members to observe the noon deadline. Some Goodrich workers usually report at noon, but the next full shift after 6 a. m. normally is 2 P. M.

Termed Flagrant Breach

The President, acting as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, termed the work stoppage a "flagrant violation of the no-strike pledge" and asserted:

"If this strike is not ended by 12 o'clock noon, Thursday, May 27, your government will take necessary steps to protect the interests of the nation..."

Executive boards of U. R. W. locals at Goodyear, Firestone and Goodrich promptly adopted a resolution urging immediate resumption of war work, and their presidents then made radio appeals.

Walk-outs at Akron's "Big Three" and the General Tire and Rubber Company started — spontaneously, union leaders declared — with news last Saturday that the National War Labor Board had reduced to three cents an hour its panel's recommendation of an eight-cent wage increase.

Acting soon after the Union's International executive board urged a return to work with promises the A.L.B. would reconsider the case, President Roosevelt telegraphed the rubber workers' leaders last night:

Thousands Honor Late Dr. Welsh At Impressive Funeral Rites Held at Thomasburg United Church

Tribute from the sorrowing countryside, from his riding of East Hastings which he had represented in the Ontario Legislature since the year 1936, from the Ontario Legislature, the Government of the Province and the Provincial Department of Health, from party leaders and members of both political groups, from political organizations and various public bodies throughout Ontario and of his own community and from numberless friends was paid on Wednesday afternoon when the late Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.P.P., was laid to rest in Thomasburg Cemetery. At his home at Roslin many assembled, there to pay their last respects as the cortege proceeded along the highway to Thomasburg. For a long distance north from Roslin and from far south of Thomasburg the throngs of people stood on both sides of the highway and on the walks, while many were in the Thomasburg church where the last service was held. It was a deeply personal tribute to a great man and a friend. It was in Thomasburg church he was accustomed to worship.

Sorrow, natural at the passing of one who had served his native community in the calling of doctor and was honored with a seat in the Legislature, was made poignant by the manner of his death in a drowning accident in Algonquin Park last Thursday.

Sense of Personal Loss

The tribute was the more impressive in the sense of personal loss which everyone of those four thousand or more persons attending the last rites felt at the passing of a native of the community. It was not far from the scene of Wednesday's service that he was born and it was in this district he had spent all his years. He was content that in these parts his life should be spent for here he found the widest opportunity for serving. From this community he reached and touched the life of the province.

School Flags in Mourning

As people wended their way to the scene of the last rites, an impressive sight was seen in numbers of school grounds and over schoolhouses where flags were flying at half staff. This was a symbol of the life interest of Dr. Welsh in education and in the boys and girls of the community for he had himself once taught school.

The floral tributes which banked the casket in the familiar home of the doctor at Roslin silently represented those who mourned, the members of his family and lifelong friends from far and near, various organizations and bodies of the community and district, the Ontario Government, members of the Legislature and political organizations.

Before the family residence at Roslin many had gathered to pay their tribute. At Thomasburg, where the public service was held there were large crowds lining the road and the walk and the steps leading to the Thomasburg United Church, while in the church many early had been seated while the organist, Mr. Fred Porter, softly played hymns. The full choir was assisted by Dr. M. G. Dales and Mrs. Dales, of Tweed.

When the cortege entered, the members of the Legislature and the bearers took their seats at the front while the mourners occupied seats south of the aisle on the right side of the church.

At the residence a brief service had been held by the Rev. G. J. Crabbe of Thomasburg. At the service at the church Mr. Crabbe was in charge. Rev. Dr. James Semple, Bridge St. United Church, Belleville, delivered the eulogy for the late Dr. Welsh and Rev. J. W. Platt of Belleville, who had been for four years minister at Thomasburg, read the lesson from Second Corinthians, chapter 5. The hymns sung during the service were: "Jesus, Thou Joy of Loving Hearts", "Forever With the Lord" and "Thou Gracious God," while the choir rendered the anthem "The Garden of Prayer" and Mrs. Nelson Welsh sang "My Task." The Rev. Mr. Crabbe at the close paid tribute to the life of the late doctor.

The bearers were six members of the medical profession: Dr. S. R. Beatty, Madoc; Dr. G. S. Cronk and Dr. G. H. Stobie, Belleville; Dr. E.

HAND-TO-HAND BATTLING UNDER WAY ON ATTU IS.

U. S. Troops Hacking and Blasting Way Thru Jap Traps

POSITION NOT CLEAR

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, May 27 —(AP)— Fierce hand-to-hand battling is believed to be under way in the wilds of Attu Island today, with United States troops presumably hacking and blasting their way through Japanese death traps with bayonet and grenade.

Pending further combat reports the exact situation on the island battleground was not clear, and authorities said the final clean-up might take a few days more.

The terrain known to be in enemy hands on the basis of last reports is ideal for defence. Rough, mountainous and affording much natural protection, it necessitates an inch-by-inch advance with the burden of combat falling on bayonet-wielding, grenade-throwing infantrymen.

A United States navy communique yesterday said that army ground troops had cleared out both sides of Chicagof Valley Monday. That was one of the three defence positions to which the enemy remnants had fallen back after they lost their main base in the Holtz Bay area.

Two other areas which, on the basis of the navy communique, are still in enemy hands, are Chicagof Harbor, lying north of the valley and the extremely rough country around the north shore of Lake Nicholas, southwest of the harbor.

The ridge flanking the approach to the harbor was under assault Monday, according to the navy report which said the action was "continuing." There was no report of attacks in the lake sector but it was assumed that steady pressure was being exerted against the Japanese hemmed in there.

The entire area of combat has shrunk until it embraces only a few square miles.

N.L. NATHANSON, GENERALTHEATRES HEAD, DIES AT 57

Native of Minneapolis He Came to Toronto in 1907

FOUNDED CHAIN

Toronto, May 27 —(CP)—Nathan L. Nathanson, 57, president of General Theatres and former president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited, died here today.

Mr. Nathanson who had been in ill health for six months, died at his home here.

A native of Minneapolis, he came to Toronto in 1907 and was employed at the amusement park at Scarboro Beach for several years later going to Dominion Park, Montreal. He returned to Toronto to enter the outdoor advertising business with the Connor-Ruddy Company, now E. L. Ruddy Co., as an advertising salesman, and later formed his own advertising agency, Nathanson-Wadsworth, Co.

In 1916 he entered the theatre business when with his associates he purchased the old Majestic Theatre and when it re-opened as the Regent it was acclaimed the first de-luxe motion picture theatre in Toronto.

First Coast-to-Coast Chain

This was the first of a coast-to-coast chain which he and his partners built up in the succeeding years. Shortly after the opening of the Regent, he formed Regal Films of which his brother, Henry, now is president.

Mr. Nathanson was president of Famous Players from 1916 until 1929 and returned to the post from 1933 to 1941, when he retired to form General Theatres Corporation, Ltd. He was president of General Theatres and also of General Theatres Investment Co., Ltd.

He was a director of Odeon Theatres of Canada and Empire Universal Films, Limited, and was a governor of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

DAVIES RECEIVES STALIN'S LETTER FOR ROOSEVELT

Former Ambassador Will Leave Russia Immediately For United States

LETTER IS SEALED

(By DANIEL DE LUCE)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, May 27 —(AP)— Joseph E. Davies announced today he had received a written and sealed reply from Premier Stalin to the secret letter from President Roosevelt which he delivered at the Kremlin last week.

The President's emissary said he did not know the contents of Stalin's message and that it was solely for Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Davies said he was leaving directly for the United States.

Mr. Davies conferred with Stalin again last night at the Kremlin in the presence of Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov. A Tass announcement of the meeting gave no details. A picture of Stalin, Davies and Molotov at the Kremlin was published on the front page in a four-column space today by Isvestia, government newspaper. Observers agreed that all appeared delighted about something, but there was no explanation of what that something was.

London Papers Feature Rumors Of Strikes, Invasion Fears in Italy

London, May 27 (CP)— Front pages of London newspapers carried headlines today pointing up rumors of Italian collapse, but these rumors had little support in known facts.

Propagandists of the Rome radio were heard declining Prime Minister Churchill's invitation for Italy to quit the war.

The Daily Telegraph carried a headline "Big Strikes in Italy's Arms Factories" over a story which declared Italy was "on the verge of invasion panic."

The reports were based on yesterday's order to striking Italian workers to return to their jobs.

Financial circles buzzed with stories that sensational developments were imminent in Italy. The same quarters a week ago were reporting that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt had delivered an ultimatum to Premier Mussolini to quit Italy and that this ultimatum expired May 17.

In broadcast beamed abroad, but held back from its own people, the Rome radio declared today "public opinion in Italy is not easily intimidated." Yesterday the tune was "Churchill is going too fast."

The broadcasts were recorded here by the Ministry of Information and Reuters News Agency.

London listeners were unable to hear any broadcast that indicated the Italian people had been let in on stories of the Churchill-Roosevelt press conference at which the Prime Minister extended the invitation to the Italian people to get out of the war and throw themselves on the mercy of the United Nations.

Italians who listen to Allied broadcasts behind closed doors, however, had ample opportunity to weigh Mr. Churchill's words against the steadily growing strength of the Allied air assault on the peninsula's outer islands.

The news flowed to them from the BBC which carried both Mr. Churchill's statements and the threats of what air war will do to the Axis. The Algiers radio also continued to beam aerial war threats at the Italian people.

Sicilian Air Base At Comiso Receives Full Force of Raid

Grounded Aircraft Given Pummeling And Supply Vessels Set Afire

POWER STATION HIT

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 27 (AP) — American bombers struck savagely again at Italy's southern island air defences on Sicily, Sardinia and Pantelleria yesterday, blasting the big Sicilian air base at Comiso from substratosphere height, it was announced today.

Medium bombers at the same time swept into attack enemy air fields at Ponte Olivio. They were escorted by fighter planes.

Bomb-loaded fighter planes kept up their assaults on Sardinian targets, hitting grounded aircraft at Villacirdro air field and leaving a large supply vessel burning Golfo Aranci.

Other aircraft bombed the isolated island of Pantelleria again.

Five enemy aircraft were destroyed in this theatre in 24 hours, making a total of 348 Axis planes destroyed in eight days in the air and on the ground by the Northwest Africa air force squadrons alone.

The actual total undoubtedly is higher, air sources said, because no figures have been given out since early in the week regarding planes destroyed on the ground.

Total May Run to 36

(With 12 planes listed by Middle East and Malta fliers, the total for the period runs to at least 360 planes destroyed.)

Today's headquarters communique also announced that direct hits were spored on the power station at the Tirso dam, largest on the island.

(The Italian communique, broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by The Associated Press, acknowledged Allied air raids on several places in Sardinia and on Pantelleria and said seven were killed and 21 injured. It said eight Allied planes were shot down, six by anti-aircraft fire and two by Axis fighter planes.

(Italian torpedo planes which attacked a Mediterranean convoy hit one destroyer, and Axis bombers attacked the road and railway line between Mersa Matruh and El Daba, in northern Egypt, the Italians claimed.)

3 Interceptors Shot Down

The bombers encountered the only major enemy resistance over Sicily. They shot down three of 50 Messerschmitt-109s which intercepted them. From all operations of the Northwest African Air Forces two planes are missing.

Co-ordination of Allied air power in the Mediterranean was revealed by details of two separate raids Tuesday on Messina, Sicilian ferry terminal. One was carried out by a heavy force of Northwest African bombers while the other was made by bombers from the Middle East.

Reports of crews who blanketed Biscari and Ponte Olivio air fields with fragmentation bombs indicated that air resources kept by the enemy in Sicily at present are slender.

Ravage Sardinian Targets

Roaring through a 60-mile-an-hour wind, the Northwest African aircraft dumped heavy cargoes of fragmentation bombs yesterday on Comiso, starting four or five fires and spraying steel among dispersal aircraft.

Fighter-bombers ravaged Sardinian targets. A large transport at Golfo Aranci burst into flames after a direct hit and small boats nearby also caught fire. Three storage tanks believed to contain oil were ignited. Dockside buildings were shot up.

Dispersed aircraft and hangars at Villacidro air field were hit by bombs. A train was shot up.

After scoring direct hits on the Tirso power station, which supplied a large part of Sardinia with electricity, fighters sped on to shoot up Axis gun emplacements and small vessels.

Quays and shipping at Porto Ponte Romano, a harbor of southwest Sardinia, suffered from a Warhawk sweep.

Fragmentation bombs were strewn on other targets in the centre of Pantelleria Island and troops and gun emplacements machine-gunned.

The coastal Air Force patrol shot down one Heinkel-111 Tuesday night.

Britain's Bells To Ring Anytime

London, May 27 (CP)—Britain's bells, reserved as an invasion signal during the early war years, may now be rung at any time, Herbert Morrison, Home Minister, informed the House of Commons today.

The ban was partly lifted April 20 to permit the bells to ring on Sundays and religious holidays, but now, Mr. Morrison said, they can be rung "for any purpose at any time provided their sound is not liable to be mistaken for a signal in connection with air raids or a gas attack."

DRUNK DRIVING CHARGE IS LAID

As the result of a truck-car collision on Dufferin Ave., late Wednesday afternoon, Wm. J. Morris, 67 South Front St., was arrested on charges of drunk driving and also of operating a motor vehicle without first obtaining the proper licence.

Morris was driving a truck on said by police to have collided with the rear of a parked motor car owned by Herchel Hamilton, 184 Dufferin Ave. The rear trunk, fenders and tail lights on the lighter vehicle were badly damaged. Police later escorted Morris to the police station where he was detained.

JUVENILES EXTINGUISH EXCAVATION LIGHTS

Mischievous lads carried out a rather dangerous practice at the intersectiol of Herchimer and Yeomans Streets late Wednesday night whec they extinguished light put out for the purpose of warning the publio of an excavation. City Engineer C. A. Mott reported the matter to police and P.C. Evans went to the scene to relight the warning beacons.

City employees had commenced an excavation at the intersection and placed three lighted lanterns in strategic positions at sundown in order to warn and protect the general public of the dangerous excavation. Boys, apparently not realizing the seriousness of their act, extinguished the lights. Fortunately no person was injured as the result of the prank however.

CHILD HIT BY CAR, LEFT LEG FRACTURED

Trenton, May 27 (Special) — Falling forcibly to the pavement when struck by a car driven by Claude Waddell R.R. 4 Trenton, Ronald MacDonald, aged 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred MacDonald of this town suffered a compound fracture of the left leg Wednesday afternoon.

Waddell was driving south on Front Street in Trenton when the lad dashed out in front of the car as his sister called to him from across the street. The driver of the car had no chance to stop his vehicle, according to police, as he was watching the girl at the curb and failed to see the lad run into roadway from across the street.

The injured lad was taken to the surgery of Dr. J. F. Farley, Trenton, who later had him removed to the Belleville General Hospital.

Failed to Report, Man Sentenced

The first case of a conscientious objector in this area was heard before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in county police court here today when James H. Mantiffel of Hermon, Ont., appeared before the court charged with failing to report to his draft board, contrary to the National Selective Service Military Regulations. Mantiffel was convicted and sentenced to one month in the common jail in default of the payment of a $25 fine imposed. At the expiration of his jail term Mantiffel will be escorted to Kingston by military authorities to face the district military draft board.

The Magistrate told Mantiffel he must obey the laws of the land.

Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson presented the case on behalf of the R.C.M.P., after Constable Wm. Beatty apprehended Mantiffel at his home in Hermon yesterday.

Intermittent Light Trouble

Unsanctioned by local Civilian Defence authorities, the downtown district in Belleville was darkened in an unofficial blackout shortly before ten o'clock Wednesday evening. Street lights on Front Street and on other streets on which lights are controlled from the Front Street circuit suddenly "blacked out" for a period of approximately one half hour.

Public Utility officials did not elucidate on the cause of the blackout terming it "intermittent trouble." Pedestrians were inconvenienced however during the short period the lights were off and felt their way slowly along the streets and over the darkened out bridges.

Tomato Season Two Weeks Late State Packers

Although the first of the tomato transplanting got under way in the Bay of Quinte district on May 24th, present indications are that the tomato season this year will be at least two weeks later than in the normal year.

This was the outlook presented by officials of the Canada Packers plant at Belleville when contacted Thursday regarding prospects for the tomato crop this season.

According to canning factory officials the transplanting season is already ten days later than usual and with Tuesday's heavy rain there is now no prospects of transplanting again being started until June 1st or after.

The lateness of the season will now meant that tomatoes will in all probability not all be harvested until there is danger of frost next autumn, according to officials.

Poor Outlook for Peas

Although inclement weather has already seriously retarded the tomato season the season's pea crop in many cases is a complete washout, it was stated. Flooded fields made it impossible for farmers to sow their peas, while in many cases where they have been sowed heavy rains have washed them out.

"It is now too late for farmers to sow peas," stated Mr. Adams of the Belleville plant of the Canada Packers. "We are hoping, however, that farmers having missed out on their pea crops will turn to tomatoes."

"Acting against an alternative increased tomato crop, however, is the fact that the season has been backward for growing tomato plants. Therefore no great quantities of additional plants will be available for farmers."

Peas planted now would run into hot summer weather and their harvesting would interfere with the haying season it was claimed. And farmers in any case are more interested in sowing what late grain possible rather than concentrate their efforts on peas as a canning crop.

No hope was held out that farmers would turn to canning corn if tomato plants were unavailable, according to canning factorp officials.

"City people will realize the effect of the current rainy season when they are unable to purchase their usual quota of canned vegetables this fall and winter," stated officials.

B.C.I. Girls' Cadet Corps Praised by Inspecting Officer

Former male collegiate cadets were forced to stand on the sidelines and watch 150 members of the Girls' Cadet Corps of the Belleville Collegiate strut their stuff Wednesday afternoon as the corps paraded before their inspecting officers at the annual cadet inspection exercises held on the Collegiate campus.

Captain Kenneth R. Holmes, adjutant of the Argyll Light Infantry acted as the inspecting officer and took the salute as the Girls' Cadet Corps swung smartly past both in platoon and column of route formation. With Captain Holmes were 2nd Lieut. "Nick" Nicholson of the Argylls and 2nd Lieut. D. R. Kalbfleisch of the 4th Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, now stationed in Belleville in an instructional capacity with the Argylls.

Sea, Air Cadets Attend

Although male students of the Collegiate were denied active participation in the cadet inspection ceremony, student members of the local sea and air cadets in uniform were drawn up in square formation at the edge of the campus to watch proceedings.

The bugle band of the Belleville Sea Cadets acted as duty band for the march past and drill period on the campus and led the march in a colorful cadet parade down Front Street at the conclusion of the inspection ceremony.

"I want to congratulate you on the excellence of your marching and drill," stated Captain Holmes as he addressed the cadet corps on the campus following inspection. "I was indeed surprised by your very proficient performance and must add my congratulations both to you and to your commanding officers and instructors."

"B" Company Wins Cup

"B" Company under the command of Captain Evelyn Allison, was adjudged the best unit on their marching ability and was presented with the Argyll Light Infantry silver cup up for annual competition for the best Collegiate cadet company. The cup was presented to the company captain by Major B. C. Sisler, chairman Collegiate Management Committee.

"Your inspecting officer has expressed surprise at the excellence of your performance today," stated Major Sisler as he made the presentation of the silver cup, "but I am not surprised because I knew you could do it."

School Principal W. S. Turner added his congratulations to the cadet corps and complimented Miss N. Merry on the girls' performance. The Girls' Cadet Corps this year had been under the handicap of there being no Boys' Cadet Corps to give guidance and also because of the inclement weather making regular outdoor drill periods almost impossible. Only through concerted effort on the part of Miss Merry had the girls become proficient in drill and marching, he said.

Assisting Miss Merry in an instructional capacity were C. M. S. Lionel Blaker and R.Q.M.S. W. C. Harden of the Argyll Light Infantry.

Calesthenics Demonstration

Although the actual inspection and march past of the cadet corps was the high point of interest during the afternoon's ceremony, a drill demonstration given by detailed precision squad under Lt. Vera Flindall, and an exhibition of calesthenics by a P. T. squad under the direction of Margaret Taylor drew complimentary remarks from a large crowd of interested spectators.

Stretcher drill by the Collegiate girls' first-aid squad indicated considerable training in this art. Flag signalling under the direction of Lieut. Nora Ellis concluded the afternoon's program.

Corps' Officers

Machinists' Union Quits A. F. of L.

Washington, May 27—(AP)—The International Association of Machinists with a reputed membership of more than 500,000, announced today it is quitting the American Federation of Labor as of May 31 because of a long standing jurisdictional dispute.

The A.F.L. thus lost almost the same numerical strength it stands to gain by the prospective readmittance of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

The jurisdictional fight involves chiefly L. Hutcheson's Carpenters Union, which the machinists contend has been "muscling in" on its field with the sanction of the A.F.L. executive council.

Machinists' president Harvey W. Brown said the break after 48 years affiliation is regrettable, but "if we are going to continue to get a beating we are not going to pay for it."

The machinists' per capita tax payments to the A.F.L. has averaged about $60,000 a year. The union has grown rapidly, however, because of organization in the aircraft field and tax payments on the full, claimed membership would exceed $60,000.

Brown said the I.A.M. would remain independent, "with the hope that the machinists will be given the same consideration as other unions."

Handicraft Exhibit Displays Fine Skill of O.S.D. Pupils

The skill of the pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf was shown in the display of handwork seen Wednesday afternoon in the Battery Building, Church Street. Articles in the woodworking exhibit varied from pen-trays which are the first things the boys are taught to make, to tables made by boys who have had two years of this work. The boys, most of whom are 13 and 14 years of age, are taught by Mr. A. J. Clare.

Evidence of the interest of the boys in their work was a toy locomotive and sled made by one of them in his spare time.

The work done in the agriculture classes under Mr. J. N. Hodgson included such things as looking after the grounds of the O.S.D. properties. On display were tin articles such as funnels and cooky cutters. Because of the lack of sheet tin, the boys have been using tin cans for much of this work.

Iron work was also shown, as well as a complete harness made by the boys as a group project.

An interesting feature of the sewing display was articles made by the girls for Polish and Russian relief, and for the bombed areas in Britain. These included quilts, dresses, hoods and sweaters, for which the materials were donated by the Belle Shirt Co., and the I.O.D.E.

Among other things on display were embroidered hand towels, bridge covers, and aprons. A few coats for small girls testified to the real ability of these seamstresses, who are taught by Mrs. Florence Lovering.

Sgt. Testifies He Saw Soldiers Jabbing Bayonets

Sussex, N.B., May 27. (CP)— Inquest into the death of Pte. D. M. Bennett of McKellar, Ont., was scheduled to resume tonight, following a five-hour hearing that ended early this morning after 13 witnesses had given evidence.

Seventeen witnesses remain to be heard in the inquiry into the death of Pte. Bennett who died after he was wounded in the hips during a clash between members of the Voltigeurs De Quebec Regiment and the Dufferin and Haldimand Rifles Regiment on the night of May 6.

Medical evidence showed that Bennett died two days after the affray from gas gangrene that developed after a bullet, probably of .303 calibre, entered his left hip and emerged from the right.

Sgt. Albert Bowman testified that he himself had been wounded six times during the riot and said that he had seen two members of the Quebec Regiment jabbing fixed bayonets at soldiers of the Ontario unit.

Capt. C. W. Illey, adjutant of the Dufferins, testified that the trouble broke out while a dance was being staged in honor of a group scheduled to go overseas. He said the Dufferin canteen had been closed all day.

Sgt. Albert Pocious, orderly sergeant at the Voltigeurs canteen said some soldiers were "a little drunk" that night and that some of the Dufferin men had disobeyed an order saying that no beer could be taken outside the canteen.

Heard Single Shot

C.S.M. Bert Roshier said he had heard a single shot about 9.35 in the evening and then saw a "large milling around" by two groups of men who were shouting. He said he tried to get permission to obtain fire horses to disperse the men. After other shots had been fired, a bugle blew "Fall In"

R.S.M. Albert Rioux of the Voltigeurs said that a group of men he believed were Dufferins had started shouting epithets at the beginning of the trouble and one man in the group "most drunk" wanted to fight. A group of men who looked like Voltigeurs also wanted to fight, he added, and soldiers from his regiment ran through a hut trying to get more support from others.

Rioux said that in all about 25 shots were fired, and stones smashed through the window of the hut he was in.

R.S.M. Vitol Morin, also of the Voltigeurs, said that "the English" came to a hut in his lines and appeared to be opening the door. Then he heard shots and saw a man clap his hands to his side and fall down the hut steps on his back.

GOV'T WILL TAKE STEPS TO PROTECT ALL SERVICEMEN

Will be Protected From Foreclosures, Evictions and Seizures

MAY FIX QUOTAS

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 27—(CP) — Measures to protect service personnel from foreclosures, evictions and seizures while they are absent on the King's business are being considered, Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons yesterday.

But he said the government was not prompted to do this by any action taken at the Conservative convention in Winnipeg last December, when Hon. R. B. Hanson (Prog. Con. York-Sunbury) suggested this was the case.

The minister's announcement was made at the end of an afternoon of debate on a suggestion by Howard Green (Prog. Con. Vancouver South) that some such action be taken.

The suggestion was made by Mr. Green during consideration in committee of the whole of the $3,890,000,000 war appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Late in the afternoon the committee turned to other matters and J. C. Diefenbaker (Prog. Con. Lake Centre) initiated a debate on the method of fixing military district quotas for the compulsory service call-up, suggesting that there was no equality of demand as between the various districts.

Hanson Astonished

Mr. Hanson said it was a fact and one that "astonished" him, that the quotas were fixed not on the number of men available in each district but upon the percentage of enlistments from each district.

Col. Ralston said he did not believe this to be a fact but in any case the committee could get no information from him on the subject because it was not within his jurisdiction. He said he merely stated his requirements in recruits and the National Selective Service issued the call. He had nothing to do with fixing the quotas.

Labor Minister Mitchell said in reply to questions that he believed the labor needs of the coal-mining industry were more important than those of shipbuilding. He was answering inquiries by Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity North-Battleford) and Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South) on reported Selective Service plans for the movement of 200 Pictou, N.S., shipbuilding workers to coal mines.

Wins General Approval

The request for government legislation to protect soldiers from any losses of property through the fact that they were serving in the forces won general approval from numerous members of all parties.

Mr. Hanson said the government would have not only the whole house but the country behind it in a move to carry out Mr. Green's suggestion.

There was considerable discussion of the constitutional angle in view of the fact that Statutory legislation to this end might intrude upon provincial rights as defined in the British North America Act.

Several members, including Arthur Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound) and Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, suggested that constitutional barriers should not be permitted to stand in the way of this reform.

The proposal was on the lines of the Sparkman Act in the United States which provides protection of civilian rights of citizens while serving in the armed forces.

Before the House got down to this discussion Liguori Lacombe (Ind. Laval-Two Mountains) attacked the government for alleged failure to circumvent profiteering in war industries and for wastefulness of food and other materials in the army camps.

Develops Argument

Mr. Lacombe was proceeding to develop an argument that the government was "deceiving" the people regarding the rise in consumer costs of essential commodities but was stopped on a point of order.

The Green proposal was supported in order by T. L. Church, (Prog. Con. Toronto Broadview) New Democracy leader Blackmore, L. P. Picard (Lib. Bellechasse), Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South), Mr. Graydon, Mr. Slaght, John R. MacNicol, (Prog. Con. Toronto Davenport), T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn), G. B. Isnor (Lib. Halifax), Alfred Bence (Prog. Con. Saskatoon City), G. K. Fraser (Prog. Con. Peterborough West) and others.

Col. Ralston said that in adopting the suggestion there was no question but that it would mean invasion of the field of jurisdiction held exclusively by the provinces and it was a matter upon which the provinces should be consulted.

A number of the provincial legislatures had adopted legislation of this type but the legislation was not uniform.

These measures had been studied by a committee headed by the Deputy Minister of Justice (F. P. Varcoe) and representatives of the armed services, the Pensions Department and the insurance branch.

This committee had reported and its report would be considered very soon. "I anticipate that action will be taken along lines which I feel ought to meet the situation," said Col. Ralston.

Creditors Should not Contribute

He said it should not be assumed that in dealing with measures to protect the servicemen from economic losses due to their service their creditors should be the ones to make the contribution.

In the discussion of enlistments Mr. Diefenbaker said it was a "coincidence" that since he had used figures published in the February issue of the government's booklet "Canada at War" to support his arguments about inequality of service, that booklet had ceased to carry the figures for enlistments and call-ups.

The last figures, published in February, indicated that in those districts where the voluntary enlistments were the highest percentage of the available eligible manpower, the callup quotas were the highest, he said.

He mentioned the Halifax district where he said the voluntary enlistments were 39.8 per cent of the available eligible manpower—"a remarkable record"—and the call-up quota was 10.54 per cent of the remaining available eligibles.

In Quebec district, where the voluntary enlistments were 9.9 per cent only 4.59 per cent were called under the National Resources Mobilization Act, he said.

Mr. Hanson declared he was "shocked" to find that the more men volunteers from a district the more were called up for compulsory service, while in those areas where the voluntary response was small the call-up quota was similarly low.

Col. Ralston said he was convinced that this was an error but Mr. Hanson said he had checked his information and that it was correct.

"I was shocked to find this was the case", he said. "It is not fair".

The same subject will be discussed in the House today.

Legislature Represented

The Ontario Government was represented by the Hon. Harold James Kirby, K.C., Minister of Health and Public Welfare, and the Hon. Wm. L. Houck, B.S., Niagara Falls, Minister Without Portfolio.

Members of the Progressive Conservative Party in the Legislature present were: Col. George A. Drew, Simcoe East, Leader of Opposition; George S. Henry, former Premier, York East; Leslie M. Frost, Victoria; George Challies, Grenville-Dundas; George H. Doucett, Lanark; Thomas A. Murphy, Toronto Beaches; William J. Summerville, Toronto Riverdale; William Duckworth, Toronto Dovercourt; A. H. Acres, Carleton; James deC. Hepburn, Prince Edward-Lennox, and Richard D. Arnott, Hastings West.

Harold N. Carr, Liberal M.P.P., for Northumberland, was among those attending the last rites.

Among the members of the Commons were George H. Stokes, M.P., Hastings South, and George S. White, M.P., Hastings-Peterboro, with former members of the Commons, William E. Tummon and Dr. A. T. Embury of Bancroft.

The Department of Health of the Province of Ontario was represented by Dr. J. T. Phair, Chief Medical Officer of Health; Dr. B. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister of Health and Hospitals; Dr. Montgomery, director of Hospitals for the Province of Ontario, who was a classmate of Dr. Welsh; Dr. A. E. Berry, Director of Sanitary Engineering for Ontario.

Dr. S. S. Lumb, Bancroft, Warden of the County and the representatives of the municipalities attended the last rites.

Alderman H. J. Clarke and Mr. Harold Bateman represented the City of Belleville in the absence of Mayor Harry Rollins.

"Thou Shalt Be Missed"

In his eulogy of the life and work of the late Dr. Welsh, Rev. Dr. Semple said: "I pay my tribute to him this afternoon in the words of the First Book of Samuel, chapter 20, verse 18, "Thou shalt be missed because thy seat will be empty."

"Dr. Welsh's seat will be vacant in the home. He came of a great family, who were devoted to one another. There comes the great test of being beloved at home, and that is the test every man would covet for himself and his friends. For the man who faces the public, it is a great thing to come back to his family circle, to come home, no matter what criticism there is in the world outside, and sit down in the family circle.

"His seat will be vacant in his chosen profession. Others will come; they will never take his place. There is a special place reserved for him in this community. The country school teacher, the country doctor, the country preacher have much to do with molding public thought but to the doctor more than to any other person is given the great opportunity of continuing the healing ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ. Great as is the profession of the ministry, the doctor comes into the home and holds locked up in his heart the confidence and trust of the people.

"His seat will be vacant in parliament. Dr. Welsh occupied no ordinary place at Queen's Park. He fought the good fight. He kept his faith. These roads lined with people today are a testimony to that. He was respected by all, a man of great courage and manliness, a man who always played the game and played it fairly.

"When he rose in the Legislature he had something to say. He was progressive and creative as the representative of this constituency. He shall be missed.

Service Keynote of His Life

"If I should pronounce his eulogy in one word, it was this: Service was the keynote of his life. Ah! the services rendered by doctors in their wonderful devotion to their people! He always sought to help. I think of what the poet said: 'Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man.'

"Behold a friend, counsellor and friend to all in this community. Service was the keynote of his life. People think of him in many ways.

"And of his spiritual life as I talked with him during the days of his illness some time ago—what a change in poise he had after that illness.

"This is my tribute to one I admired greatly and whose fellowship I shall remember."

Joy in Service

Rev. Mr. Crabbe's tribute to the late Dr. Welsh was based on the words "I am among you as one that serveth." He said that there is no life that is not service and many instruments have been given man by God who expects a great deal from man as man expects a great deal from Him. Men of high talents have consecrated their talents to God and we enjoy the fruits of their work.

"I think there is a great deal of pleasure in service.

"It is said that God has furnished us with the raw materials. For a solid foundation for the structure we build in our lives we must build on Jesus Christ."

His Sympathetic Touch

The minister then stated: "Today I represent with you the patients of Dr. Welsh and I look to see him as he entered my sickroom. I think most of you who are Dr. Welsh's patients know what he brought into the sickroom, his smile and sympathetic touch and we felt better and thanked God. He wore himself out day and night going up and down these roads, alleviating suffering and bringing joy and comfort as he passed along. Yes, as Jesus Christ served His day and generation, so the doctor served us And we cannot forget him. It is an impossibility to forget him and so he lives for he lived well.

Example for All

"Yes, he is an example for every one of us. He used the powers God had given him for the uplift and benefit of mankind and so we can say from this time we will do and make the best possible use of the blessings God bestows.

"While we mourn his loss, let us not forget we shall meet him in the Great Beyond."

The service closed to the strains of the Dead March the cortege left the church and proceeded directly across the highway to the beautiful cemetery where in the presence of a vast body of people the committal service was read by the Rev. Mr. Crabbe.

Native of Moira

The late Harold E. Welsh was born at Moira on May 5th., 1896, son of Mrs. Carrie M. Welsh, and the late William F. Welsh. His early education was obtained at Moira Public School, where he already revealed the qualities which have been so marked in his career, keenness and brightness of intellect, warm sympathies, and love of the life of the country and of the people of the countryside. He later proceeded to Stirling High School and later to Belleville Collegiate. For a time his services were given to the education of the young as a teacher, thereby deepening his knowledge of the fundamentals of education and of human life through study of those whom he taught. To complete his education he studied at Toronto University and graduated in medicine. He then established himself in that service to the people of the community that knew him so well and who now mourn his passing.

Dr. Welsh was married in 1924 to Miss Mabel Annie Brown, daughter of Dr. W. E. Brown of Peterboro.

It was in the year 1936 that he first entered public life in the Provincial riding of Hastings East in a by-election in the Conservative interest and in the following year he was again elected in the general elections.

Dr. Welsh is survived by his widow and two children, Helen Barbara, who has been attending school in Toronto, and Charles Edmund, at home; his mother, Mrs. Carrie M. Welsh of Toronto, and four brothers, Albert of Windsor, and Roy, Norman and Howard of Toronto.

He was associated with the Masonic Order, the Orange Order and the I.O.O.F.

Yugoslav Patriots Assisted by RAF Says Nazi Radio

London, May 27 — (CP) — A German broadcast said today RAF planes have been aiding Yugoslav patriots in their battle against Axis occupying armies.

The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, quoted the Belgrade newspaper Novo Vreme as saying prisoners reported Britain had promised aerial assistance and "a few British planes did arrive. Some were shot down and others brought only propaganda material."

London authoritative sources refused to comment. It has long been assumed that Britain is helping resistance groups in most occupied countries.

Meanwhile Swiss newspapers reported from Budapest that the two factions of Yugoslav anti-Axis forces, the partisans and the troops of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, had joined forces. It said the partisans withdrew into Mihailovic territory in resisting the general Axis offensive in Bosnia, Hercegovina and Montenegro.

Mihailovic was said to be concentrating his forces in the high mountains of Central Montenegro.

Delayed information from Albania by way of Jerusalem said Italian officials were sending their families out of Albania in the face of increasing unrest. Albanians were reported to have demonstrated in the town of Prizren on the Yugoslav border, hanging in effigy Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel.

Advices reaching neutral countries said troops fired into the demonstrators and arrested about 200 persons. Later outbreaks became so widespread police closed all public institutions and imposed martial law and curfews in some areas, it was reported.

Rt. Hon. J. Coates Dies Suddenly In Capital N.Z.

Wellington, New Zealand, May 27—(AP)—Rt. Hon. Joseph Gordon Coates, War Minister of the New Zealand cabinet, died suddenly in his office today of a heart attack.

Coates had been a prominent figure in New Zealand public life for at least 20 years. Premier from 1925 to 1928, he also served at various times as Minister of Public Works, Transport, Finance, Unemployment and External Affairs.

He was named War Minister in New Zealand's five-man war cabinet in July, 1940.

Coates attended the British Imperial Conference in London in 1926.

Rt. Hon. Joseph Gordon Coates had a career of more than 30 years in the public life of his native New Zealand. First elected to the House of Representatives from Kaipara, in 1911, he was that constituency's member continuously until his death, except for the years of the First Great War when he served with the New Zealand forces in France. He attained the rank of major and was awarded the Military Cross and Bar.

He achieved cabinet rank in 1919 as Minister of Justice, and advanced steadily, holding a number of portfolios in turn, until 1925 when he became Prime Minister. Three years later, when labor was victorious at the polls, Mr. Coates became leader of the opposition. In 1927 he toured Canada as Premier, visiting Niagara Falls, Ont.

In 1931, when New Zealand turned to a coalition form of government, Mr. Coates became Minister of Public Works and subsequently Minister of Finance, serving in that capacity from 1933 to 1935.

When the war cabinet was formed in 1940 he was chosen Minister for the Armed Forces and War Co-Ordination.

Mr. Coates was born at Matakohe, N. Z., in 1878, son of the late Edward Coates. In 1914 he married Miss Marjorie Coles of London. They had five daughters.

Complete Long Tour of Garrison Duty at Jamaica

Hamilton, Ont., May 27 (CP)—The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Princess Louise's 1st Battalion, were home again, fit and well-trained after garrison duty in Jamaica.

An order of the day issued by the commanding officer at Jamaica on the day the Canadians left said that during their stay the battalion maintained a high standard of discipline and had enjoyed close and friendly relations with the people of the island in the British West Indies. Their comradeship with other units had raised the efficiency of the island garrison.

The order added: "Wherever they serve I am sure they will be staunch friends and formidable enemies. They need only the chance of action to win the honors they deserve."

Lt.-Col. I. M. R. Sinclair, commanding officer of the regiment, said today that in Jamaica "they conducted themselves like the gentlemen they are."

The men today were at Camp Niagara unpacking their equipment.

Helicopters Land, Take Off From Deck Of Merchant Ship

Washington, May 27 AP)—Announcing a successful test of the ability of helicopters to land and take off from the deck of a merchant ship, the U.S. War Department says "a new anti-submarine weapon is available."

Rear-Admiral Howard L. Vickery, Vice-Chairman of the Maritime Commission and Deputy War Shipping Administrator, was quoted as saying these agencies are convinced that the demonstration in Long Island Sound "sufficiently proved" the feasibility of operating helticopters from the decks of tankers.

PUT SUGAR IN GASOLINE

Chicago, May 27 (AP)—Six high school boys who admitted in jury court they played a prank on their teacher, don't think it's so funny, now. They told Judge Cecil Smith they had poured sugar into the gasoline of Irving Gross' car after he had told parents of one student he was cutting classes. The teacher said it cost $296 to rid the motor of the sirrupy condition and put the auto back into circulation. Judge Smith ordered the boys to compensate Gross—which they agreed to do.

Meat Under Ration

Meat rationing has begun in Canada. On Wednesday stores were crowded for the last unrestricted buying the people are going to see for the duration at least. And as yet it is too early to see the pattern of the new order of buying meats for the first week will be one of novelty, due to the new system, which allows the purchase of several meats on the one coupon by taking part under one grouping and part under another.

Meat is a commodity which has to be purchased often. It is not like sugar nor like butter. It cannot well be conserved for a long time.

The varying weights may puzzle some but in time they will get used to the system and the butchers will help in the understanding of this problem. All in all housewives and cooks may be expected to prove themselves able to make meals of meat as attractive and appetizing as ever. Some of them will introduce new cuts to their households and this will prove a novel experience. A chart showing the various cuts of beef, lamb, veal and pork has been sent to every household and published through the press.

In a few days customers should become more accustomed to ration purchases.

One change is seen by some dealers as likely—that as women have the ration books in most instances as they have the making of the meals to look after, there will not be so many men buying meats in the shops. Some look for heavy weekend buying.

Advice to Italy

Italians should get out of the war while they have yet time to extricate themselves from destruction was the blunt advice of Prime Minister Churchill.

Italy has secured nothing except defeat by the act of Mussolini and his Fascists which plunged Italy into the war in 1940. To a selfish gambler like Mussolini it then looked like his last chance to join the Axis in hostilities and in grabbing loot. That act was quite characteristic of the bombastic fellow who would like to be a second Julius Caesar. It struck at falling France and stabbed at the best friend Italy has ever had, namely Britain. They were difficult days then for the British as they had to battle a new enemy but Britain did battle them and then at length the tide turned against both Germany and Italy. Today this brace of nations are up against powers they never expected to see develop, mighty air forces, potent victorious Allied armies in North Africa and a mighty Russian machine which rolls on in the east. North Africa was a definite proof of the weakness of Axis airpower.

Sicily, Sardinia and Italy are being pounded by air by the United Nations' air fleets seeking the destruction of Axis factories and transport systems and their war machine.

The direction to Italy to get out of the war to escape the certain destruction of herself as a military power comes at a time when Britain and her Allies can strike with staggering blows, which show Hitler's and Mussolini's threats as futile.

The British master of language used striking words as he said that other than offering her advice the Allies could do little more for Italy than to apply physical stimuli, which phase is said to mean that the air offensive will be intensified.

Edsel Ford

Edsel Ford, son of Henry Ford, founder of the great empire which goes by the family name, is dead at the age of 49. His death came after a rather short illness. He held the office of chief executive of the Ford Motor Company and filled other offices.

His passing comes at the time when the company has turned its full effort to the manufacture of weapons of war against the Axis nations and is rolling these out at great speed.

He was possessed of proven ability and was considered one of the greatest of industrial leaders in the world.

Henry Ford is now seventy-nine years of age with a name that is known all over the earth. His son inherited the great gifts of the father and both were markedly successful men.

Cost of Living

On the North American continent the cost of living depends not so much on which side of the railroad track you live but on which side of the river. This assumption is based on a recent article which appeared in the Detroit Free Press quoting food prices recently being paid in Detroit and prices for corresponding commodities in Windsor.

The Detroit paper states, "Our Canadian cousins have been in this war far longer than we have, yet they have the benefit of controlled prices. It is in the United States and not in Canada that prices have soared and food scarcities have developed."

To prove their point they point out the following comparative prices for food stuffs in the two cities:

Two pounds of top grade loin lamb chops cost 84 cents in Windsor, the paper says; In Detroit the same costs $1.72 plus tax, plus 16 ration points, same wrappings, same string.

Small can of soup costs 11 cents in Windsor and sells for 17 and 18 cents in Detroit, plus six points.

The best butter on the Windsor market costs 38 cents a pound as compared to 57 to 60 cents for butter in Detroit.

Eggs, of top grade and size, sell for 41 cents a dozen in Windsor and range in price from 50 to 60 cents a dozen in Detroit.

Oranges "seem to have taken on the value of solid gold nuggets" in Detroit, bringing as high as $1.20 a dozen for California navels and the same sell for 60 to 65 cents a dozen in Windsor.

Windsor's fancy B.C. apples retail at 29 cents a dozen or just half the price of fancy apples in Detroit which sell for 29 cents for two pounds, an average of six apples.

According to the Free Press, "You see the counter solid with succulent rib roasts, oozing rich juices, luscious porterhouse steaks, tantalizing lamb chops, plump sausages, the kind of spare ribs you dream about, priced at 50, 43., 42, 33, 29, and 22 cents respectively in one of Windsor's largest markets while the same cuts, if you can hunt them down, bring anywhere from 25 to 105 per cent more in Detroit."

Such commodities as bread and milk are correspondingly high in Detroit.

Canned Cans

(Christian Science Monitor)

President Willard H. Dow of the Dow Chemical Company reports that in the not distant future we may be eating the container in which food is stored. He points out that we have synthetic sausage casings and tasty ice cream cones. As he says, "Why stop there?" The possibilities are gargantuan in scope and citizens ought to do some thinking on the problem.

For example, why shouldn't we have a plastic, edible container of sweet corn flavor to use in preserving shell beans? The whole thing could go into the pan and after a few minutes the result would be that incomparable dish — succotash. Some intransigent folks may prefer lima beans instead of shell beans, but, after all, the opinion of minorities should be respected.

Or perhaps you would prefer to contemplate an edible can of whipped cream flavor to go with preserved strawberries. One could then chop a can to pieces in the salad bowl and use the contents on home-made biscuits. The union of rhubarb and cream appeals as a happy possibility. A can flavor of baby onions to accompany potato hash (you remember potatoes?) has definite possibilities, and a tomato ketchup flavored container to surround canned baked beans should appeal to a wide public. The whole field needs thorough exploration.

POSTHUMOUS MEDAL

This purple heart they give to me
So late, perhaps, may finer be
Than any thing I might have gained
Had I, for old age, safe remained.

Had I been left with years to spend
And dawdled on to life's long end
By only common fears assailed,
A hundred times I might have failed.

But death may greater triumph give
To us who die that truth may live
Than all the years which must be spent
With ease and plenty and content.

To those who after me will live,
No richer memory could I give
If I had lived my lifetime through
Than this, the heart of purple hue!

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Duodenal (Peptic) Ulcer

In the early days of sanatorium treatment for tuberculosis patients, many physicians considered home treatment safer as the patient would not have to live amid all the patients in the institution who would be coughing and thus sending the germs (tubercle bacilli) into the air being breathed by others.

Now so much is known about the care of patients in the institution, and the patients have learned so well how to take care of themselves and prevent the spread of tuberculosis, that the sanatorium is considered a safe place not only for patients but for visitors also. A patient who has learned how to take care of himself and others goes home after he ies cured and in most cases lives in the same manner as when in the sanatorium.

Physicians are now suggesting that as ulcer of the duodenum (the part of the small intestine into which stomach empties the food) is now very common, patients would do well to enter hospital and learn how to live properly and so avoid serious complications such as perforations which often cause death. Of course, the stay in hospital would be very short, days or weeks instead of months and years as with tuberculosis. The short stay in hospital for observation teaches him how to live safely thereafter.

In the Journal of the Medical Society of New Jersey Dr. Manfred Kraemer points out that where there are no complications requiring surgical operation, duodenal ulcer (peptic ulcer) is a "medical" disease. The patient must learn that he is suffering from a chronic illness, that he will always have the tendency to develop an ulcer and so must be careful of his diet and other habits of living always.

The first lesson he must learn is to try to avoid tension—emotions such as fear, anxiety, depression—which is hard enough for everybody in these days. He must learn to live on the diet prescribed for him when he was leaving the hospital, which permits of considerable variety. He must learn that any infection of nose, throat, and chest may strike him harder than others so must immediately go to bed when they occur. Smoking and strong alcoholic beverages are to be avoided.

Physicians also advise that as infected teeth are often a cause of peptic ulcer, that a visit to their dentist once or twice a year is advisable for these ulcer patients.

Exchange System in Education Advocated by British Member

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 27. (CP)—Suggestions have arisen that part of the education of British boys and girls after the war should consist of visits to the dominions and colonies.

This presumably would be along the line of the exchange system used by some universities. One of its strongest advocates is Col. H. P. Mitchell (Conservative, Brentford and Chiswick).

Cpl. Mitchell suggested that at least part—it would probably turn out to be a small part—of the pupils in their final years of school should be sent to other parts of the Empire and supported while there.

"They would acquire a knowledge of the life and work of the land they visited", he said. "As a result they would take an intelligent interest in the probems of that land. . . . In the end there would be few 'Little Englanders' who, through ignorance or prejudice would refuse, as in days gone by, to take any interest in any country but this island.

"We oght to get rid of the ignorance which has been so prevalent in the past".

He thinks the plan should be started on at least a small scale even before the end of the war.

Lord Barnby has made a personal statement before the House of Lords about his conviction and fine of £50 when charged with a breach of Defence Regulations in a letter to Canada.

He told the Lords that the letter had been written to the managing director of a Canadian Aircraft Company (he did not name the company) of which he is chairman, and that the contents had been designed solely to guide and assist in furthering the war effort made by the company.

He said he was making the statement "to correct any mistaken impression which you might otherwise have formed".

Group Captain William Helmore, Watford's new member of Parliament, has achieved success in three careers. Still only 48 ,he embarks on the fourth: Parliament.

Helmore has gained distinction as a scientist a pilot and a radio commentator. He was a pilot in the First Great War, continued with the R.A.F. in peacetime, and retired in 1937 after 21 years service during which he flew in King's Cup races, did research in mid-air refuelling.

In 1940 he went to the ministry of Aircraft Production, and a year later became the Air Ministry's official radio voice. As a scientist he took a degree at Cambridge and later won the Groves Memorial prize for research. Some of his nightfighter and anti-submarine inventions are in use now.

Lobby Notes: To planitarianism is the latest portmanteau word, used by Sir Ernest Benn to stigmatize what he dislikes most, the Beveridge report. . . It's a combination of planning and totalitarianism ,although he did not say what he disliked about planning, except along the Beveridge lines. . . .The first Communist M.P. in Britain, Walton Newbold, has died at Glasgow at the age of 54. He sat for Motherwell division of Lanark in 1923-24 but was unseated by a Conservative. Soon afterwards he resigned from the Communist Party and as a Labor candidate opposed Mr. Churchill unsuccessfully at Epping in 1929.

The Homemaker: Maj. Neven Spence (Cons. Orkney and Shetlands), pleading for a rising birthrate: "Babies are like ashtrays You cannot have too many about the House".

HEIFER HAD 13 RIBS

Chatham, Ont., May 27—(CP)—Good news in these days of meat rationing comes from W. E. Lumley, wholesale butcher of Dresden, 12 miles north of Chatham. Last week he delivered to R. A. Lockhart a choice heifer with an extra prime rib roast — one side of the animal sported 13 ribs instead of the regulation 12.

SENTENCED

Theodore Donay is pictured as he was lead from the Detroit, Mich., court room after hearing sentence of six years and six months and a $1,000 fine for concealing knowledge of the escape of a Nazi flier, Hans Peter Krug. This constituted misprision of treason.

FAMOUS FASTS

According to the Bible, Moses lived on Mt. Sinai forty days and forty nights without eating or drinking.

The New Testament tells us that Jesus fasted in the wilderness forty days and forty nights.

Scientists say that ordinarily forty days is about the limit that a human being can live without food.

Total abstinence from both food and drink leads to death by starvation in eight days or more, depending on the original condition of the individual.

One of the most prolonged fasts in history was that of Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, Ireland, in 1920, who was sentenced to two years in prison on charges of possessing seditious documents.

As a protest against his confinement in Brixton Prison, London, on August 12, MacSwiney went on a "hunger strike" and refused to eat food of any kind while in prison. He did not however refuse water and medicines. His death occurred October 25th of the same year—the 74th day of his fast. Although from time to time he was subject to fits of delirium he retained consciousness until within a few days of his death.

Most fasts notable for their length have been contingent upon the use of water.

Last year a conscientious objector in a Maryland camp went on a hunger strike that lasted 46 days. A doctor who examined him at the end of the 46-day period pronounced him in remarkably good physical and mental condition, although considerably "dehydrated and underweight."

Mohandas Gandhi, the Indian Nationalist leader, has always taken water and some other nourishment in his famous fasts.

It is said that Frederick August, 18th century Duke of Anhalt-Zerbst in Germany, died of starvation after a fast that lasted 43 days.

The length of time that a human being could go without food would also be affected by the physical activity of the individual and his mental state.

Some religious devotees in the Orient seem to be able in their fasts to simulate a condition comparable to hibernation in animals.

In hibernating animals the low rate of metabolism prevents starvation.

Early this year Prof. J. P. Bhansali, a Gandhi follower and a Yogi, fasted for 61 days, but doctors kept him alive during the last week of the fast by injecting glucose into his body.

How deadly Yankee 'Mustangs' bust up Axis trains

These episodes reveal where Allied rail-skinning, hell-raising planes are one of Adolf's biggest pains-in-the-neck, for they do everything but pluck off the engineer's necktie

By FRANK CHAPMAN

THERE'S one American fighter plane (name not to be bandied about just now in a very marked manner) which takes off practically straight up in the air and lands 90 miles away, it's THAT fast.

There's the Flying Fortress which has the speed to climb from five to seven miles in a few minutes: the power to lift a load of one-ton bombs and the armor to cause enemy bullets to bounce off, like they were pebbles from a tin roof. There are also American transport and cargo planes which can carry virtually anything up to a General's bed, with canopy.

Then, there's a third or a fourth or, as the case may be, a ninth type you seldom hear about, the Mustang, maintaining a speed of 400 m. p. h. only fifty feet from the ground.

That one derails, deranges and practically disintegrates railroad trains, speeding along Continental rails toward German war industries in one direction and the Russian front in another.

You don't hear so much about that.

You hear of the Wilhelmstrasse being bombed; and Rommel on the run in North Africa, because that's theatrical. It catches and holds the eye and the ear. Whereas a plane, roaring up and down the length of a railway train, almost on top of it, raking as it goes, and perforating the locomotive boiler, causing the train to blow up and plunge into a tangle of metal on a siding, seems in these times routine and prosaic.

But what was it Ludendorff said in the last war?

"There is a time in war," said he, sententiously, "when locomotives are more important than guns."

With 1,000,000 tons of coal alone being shipped in each month through the Brenner Pass to the vast industries in Italy; with communications to the Russian front taxing the capacity of French, Belgian and Holland rail lines; with the supply lines to Africa being vital, it is not surprising either that the RAF and the AAF devoted a great deal of unannounced attention to this feature.

Or that the Kassel and the Schneider Works at Le Creusot have been running 24-hour shifts, trying to keep rolling stock turned out at the required production.

In the first place, the German railway lines are now reputed to be five times as long as they were in 1939. In the second place, inland waterways not only cannot take up more than 30 per cent of the transportation burden; they're also vulnerable to air attack, as can be testified by the key spots at Dusseldorf, Karlsruhe, Mannheim and Duisberg.

In the third place, new rolling stock is constantly needed because the United Nations air force, with its low-flying, tough-hitting Mustang—the kind of thing that goes over you like an estimate—is constantly knocking the railways out, leaving troops, supplies, munitions, everything, sprawled all over the landscape in the dead of night. Briefly, this is the War you never hear of.

The War within the War.

The War, in fact, in which American engineering virtue has been able to evolve an airplane contraption that can very nearly fly on top of a train, riddling its completion of equipment and personnel—until the locomotive itself is ready for the coup de grâce.

America made the Mustang, and for some time the RAF have been using it for what they call "miniature" sweeps across the Channel. All its operations, so far, have been on ground strafing.

Mustangs usually hunt in packs of two or three, and they are increasingly hated by the German soldiers in Northern France and in Holland.

It is a single-seat low-wing monoplane with the squarish wing-tips and tail remarkably like the Messerschmitt 109. Its features are shown in the drawing (at the right) on this page. Pilots say the Mustang is a "wizard."

It is sturdy. One of the pilots who has been flying a Mustang tells this story:

"On one flight a Hun bullet hit the ammunition box, blew up most of the cartridges, damaged the wing and sent splinters all over the interior. The pilot brought her in for a perfect landing."

At the moment Mustangs operated by Army Cooperation Command, are jointly working with Fighter Command. When our invasion comes off they will be switched to fierce, close cooperation with landing soldiers.

The Nazis themselves are at small pains to disguise the effect of this campaign.

Frantically, they fitted armor plating over the boilers. But these did not stop the shells. The trains continued to be knocked over.

They put anti-aircraft machine-guns in the tenders. These were easily overcome.

Mostly the train-busters fly so low that heavy A.A. guns cannot be depressed sufficiently in time to be of use. One buster followed a train so closely that he carried away a signal arm.

Another, Sergt.-Pilot "Scruffy," blew up an ammunition wagon from such short range that his Boston was thrown almost upside down and came home with his plane holed like a colander.

Says the Herr Doktor Goebbels' Ministry of Propaganda, rather ruefully:

"Railway transport — and the maintenance of same—has become one of the greatest of our problems, as we have learned from bitter experience."

Bitter? Yes, in the last couple of years the loss of locomotives, valued at $25,000,000, must have been bitter. So, also, the destruction or serious damage by fire of millions of tons of war material! And the heartbreaking delay when crucial supplies or a troop train was left stranded somewhere in the French or Belgian hinterland.

But while the Nazis gnash their teeth in despair, to the French, the Belgians and the Dutch, the low-flying Mustang is a welcome sight, a harbinger of the invasion to come.

The other day a squadron leader "dislocated a football match" in Holland.

Coming in from the sea at zero feet, the Mustang flew over sand dunes along the Dutch coast.

As he approached the more fertile and green country the pilot's eye was attracted by the colored shirts of opposing teams in a fairly well-attended football match.

As he flashed low across the field the pilot was amazed to see the players stop the game and start jumping and waving at him, a demonstration in which they were followed by most of the spectators on the field.

Another pilot has this story to tell:

"One Sunday morning I was on my way into Holland looking for trains or barges when I came across a typical Dutch scene—a straight road running alongside a canal with a windmill in the distance.

"On the road was a party of about 30 cyclists, of which there are thousands in Holland. As soon as they saw the Mustang most of them began to wave.

"When I passed over them, what had been an orderly little convoy was a straggling procession covering the entire road. Most of them were waving like mad and the cycles were wobbling everywhere."

On dark nights the "train busters" look for the telltale glow of the firebox or chimney.

The intruders are heartened by the knowledge that the French civilians are forbidden to travel at night. The railwaymen who operate the trains carrying war material to kill our troops and those of our Allies must take their chance, as must the engineers pouring out munitions for Germany in the French factories.

To appreciate the effectiveness of the Mustang, one must accompany the pilot, of course. So let's go, as reported in a London dispatch:

"We are in the pilot's seat of the Boston, and have completed our duty patrols over aerodromes south of Paris. The moon is not far from full. There is a keen wind, the sky is absolutely clear, visibility is marvelous.

"What happens tonight is a typical patrol, with much unmentionable back-chat between members of the crew.

"We are flying down the Seine, with Paris behind us.

"Let's get right down. Ease back level at 50 feet. Any coal barges to sink?

"Whew, look at that flak crossing the river! It's hitting the houses on the other side. Let's go a bit lower.

"Now the guns on the other bank have opened. We can get underneath the cross-fire.

"Just look at that gasometer. It must be two miles away! We'll get a bit closer, then turn in.

"Four hundred yards away, 300. Wheel over hard right. Now she's in sight.

"Squeeze the button. Watch our fire smack into her! Hard left or we'll hit her. Look, she's burning! Let us climb a bit and look back.

"See, she's glowing red hot inside. Wonderful sight.

"Now we turn to the Rouen railway line. Up to 600 feet. No higher, because then the heavies might make it awkward.

"Lovely night. What's that? A goods train! Must be four miles away. Ah, there she is. We'll get behind her.

"Column forward a little. Now the train slides into view. Steady. Keep dead in line. Not too fast. I shan't open fire till we are halfway along, about 30 trucks from the engine.

"Now, squeeze the button. Watch our fire sew up the train, setting the truck ablaze. Check at the locomotive. Hold her. Now away, in a climbing turn. She's stopped. Steam is spreading over the fields. We'll turn back and have another crack.

"What's that? Another train ahead? So there is. Down on her. Steady. Sew up the trucks. Hold on the locomotive. Ah. She's stopped. Turn again, Whittington, and back again down them both. Look, there are some trucks not burning. Give them another squirt. Up they go.

"Well, let's go on to the Rouen-Havre stretch. Down a bit to dodge the heavy stuff.

"We must be running a bit short of ammo. Look, another train. Hold tight. Down we go. Another squeeze. She's burning. See those flashes!

"Up we go over the engine. Turn at 500 feet for another crack, head on.

"Press the bhtton. Damn!

"A short burst and she runs dry. Why don't we carry more ammo?

"Might as well go home now, chaps."

Yes, indeed, the bombing of Berlin and Hamburg and the Channel ports are a great contribution toward the day, rapidly drawing near, when the infidel and his reversion to barbarism shall be eliminated from civilization. But, before we do that we must first take from him the things with which he fights, and the telephone wire-hopping Mustang is certainly kicking the living hijinks out of the factors that make that possible.

Come with us, for instance, on another "Mustang" hunt and see what a train-busting job is. Of course, it might turn out to be something uneventful, though equally important, like sinking a barge full of manganese ore in a canal. But let's assume that we're gunning for something on the rails along the right of way to the Mediterranean. It is night and the moon is gone, so your only hope is to pick up landmarks and then get low enough so you know you're above a railway track.

The plane has its crew tucked away in separate compartments where they can do the most good. You're with the pilot.

"See that blot down there?" he says suddenly. "That long, dark ribbon? That's a train. Look, I'll show you," he adds, and peels off, goes into a dive and swoops along the length of the train. It is plainly visible now. You almost think you hear it above the roar of the 3,200 horsepower motor.

The boys keep giving it bursts as we idle along, apparently making no effort to stay its forward progress.

"We don't waste bombs," the pilot adds laconically, apparently reading our thought. "The 50-m.m. will set anything inflammable on fire. And practically everything of the sort is inflammable. And if it's food, you'll see how that's taken care of."

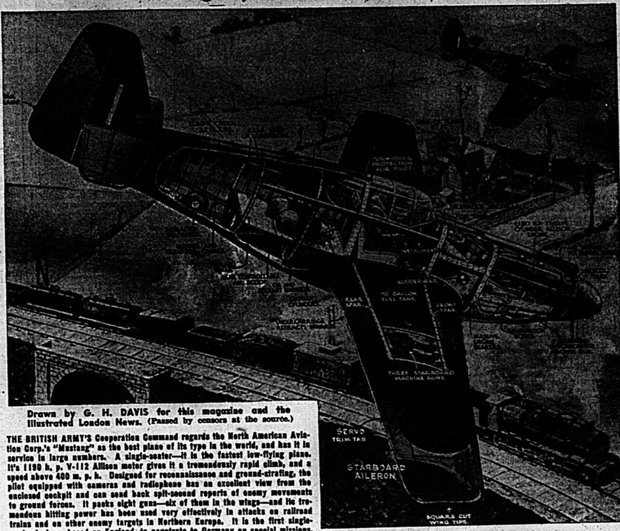
By this time the train has been set afire in a half dozen places.

"Now, the locomotive," says the flier, and we hover there, while the machine guns and cannon put it out of action. If no cannon is aboard, it works just as well. The machine guns burst the boiler, and the whole train goes off the track in great disorder, with explosions and vast disruptions—the extent of which you only dimly sense because your Mustang is climbing again, for once, out of mundane and violent things of the sort.

"See what I mean about the food?" says our pilot comfortably, probably thinking of the date he's going to have with his lady at the Savoy bar. "If much of the food survives intact, all except canned stuff invariably spoils by the side of the track, before they can get all that mess untangled." He whistled silently a moment or two between his teeth.

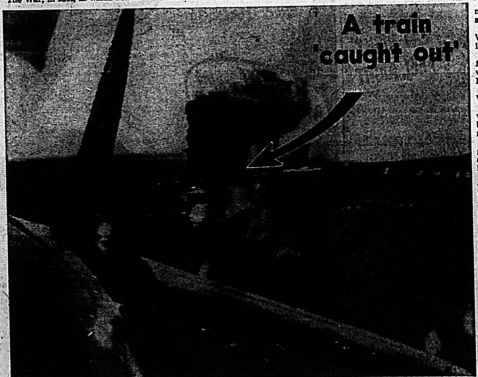
"Do you know," said he, suddenly, "a Mustang really has a train of cars strictly where the latter just can't help itself?"

Yes, sir. Beyond any doubt, sixty years ago the James Boys wouldn't have been without one.



Drawn by G. H. DAVIS for this magazine and the Illustrated London News. (Passed by censors at the source.)

THE BRITISH ARMY'S Cooperation Command regards the North American Aviation Corp.'s "Mustang" as the best plane of its type in the world, and has it in service in large numbers. A single-seater—it is the fastest low-flying plane. It's 1190 h. p. V-112 Allison motor gives it a tremendously rapid climb, and a speed above 400 m. p. h. Designed for reconnaissance and ground-strafing, the pilot equipped with cameras and radiophone has an excellent view from the enclosed cockpit and can send back spit-second reports of enemy movements to ground forces. It packs eight guns—six of them in the wings—and its tremendous hitting power has been used very effectively in attacks on railroad trains and on other enemy targets in Northern Europe. It is the first single-engined plane, based on England, to penetrate to Germany on special missions.



A BLAZING ENGINE and 26 trucks afire, marked this attack on an Axis supply train in North Africa. The Yankee-built "Mustangs" do this sort of job to perfection, diving to flatten off for a scourging from 50 feet up.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. J. S. Wardner and Mrs. C. J. Fisher, of Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Cook in Napanee.

Mrs. G. Chamberlain, Pleasant Bay, visited Miss Ruth Benway at her home in Belleville.

Captain George H. Carver, Field Regiment, Gananoque, was in the city yesterday on official business.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Davies, of Toronto, spent the weekend and holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Boyd, 44 Catherine St.

Mrs. J. D. Collip, of Toronto, is spending a few days in the city.

Mrs. W. H. Lattimer, Bridge St. E., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Grant Taylor, in Toronto.

Miss Reta Beckstead, of Toronto, spent the holiday with her aunt, Mrs. W. Christie, of Foxboro, also Mrs. Clayton Hamilton, of 118 Bridge St. E., Belleville.

Miss Carrie Jenkin, Deloraine, Manitoba, is guest of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Lee, Cedar St.

George A. Lee, State Deputy for the Knights of Columbus, has returned home from the Ontario convention held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. Mrs. Lee accompanied her husband, visiting friends in the Queen City.

Mrs. Earl Boyd, of Ottawa, was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. R. E. Colling, 17 Alexander St., enroute from Cleveland, where she spent the winter with her husband, who is in the employment of the British Government in Ohio.

Mrs. John Laskaris entertained laneous shower in honor of Bessie at a delightfully arranged miscel- Kikes, bride-elect of the month. The evening was spent in games, singing and dancing. Many charming and beautiful gifts were received by Miss Kikes. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess at the close of the evening.

Mrs. Fraser Aylsworth, of Madoc, left today for Toronto to attend the Ontario Women's Liberal Association annual meeting Friday and Saturday at the King Edward Hotel.

A merry throng of racing fans, who had returned from the King's Plate at Woodbine on Saturday, celebrated their winnings or consoled one another on their losses at a supper dance at the King Edward Hotel. Among those present were Group Captain Cavan Carling-Kelly and Mrs. Carling-Kelly from Belleville.

Mr. William Fulton, Church St., has returned home after spending a week's holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Fulton, Toronto.

A very successful Contact Club court whist and bridge was held at the Christ Church Parish Hall on Wednesday evening. For bridge the winning lady was Miss J. Nicol and Mr. T. Hetherington the winner of the men's prize. In court whist, Mrs. S. Halbert and Mr. Neal took the prizes. Douglas Cleland held the lucky ticket on the basket of groceries.

WEDDINGS

PITMAN—THOMPSON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 22nd, in Frankford United Church when Hilda Emma, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Thompson, became the bride of John Willet Pitman, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Pitman, of Corbyville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. H. Lackey, B.A., B.D., assisted by Lieut. Wotton. The altar was tastefully decorated with white and pink crepe paper and fern and baskets of tulips and snapdragons.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal March, played by Mr. Kenneth Peacock, of Foxboro. She looked charming in a gown of white chenille embroidered satin with long pointed sleeves and sweetheart neckline, a finger-tip veil fell from a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a cascade of Johanna Hill roses.

Mrs. Stanley Sills, of Batawa, sister of the bride, was matron of honor attired in deep rose taffeta with flounced skirt, sweetheart neckline and shoulder-length veil of pink net. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. The bridesmaids were Misses Kay Hibbert of Frankford and Grace Pitman of Stirling attired in similar gowns of pale blue chenille embroidered organdie over blue taffeta slips, with sweetheart neckline. They wore picture hats of white and carried nosegays of roses, baby breath and fern. Little Carol Frost, of Frankford, was flower girl, frocked in pink and white organdie over pink taffeta with a halo of pink and blue flowers in her hair. She carried a nosegay similar to the bridesmaids'.

Mr. John Huffman, of Corbyville, was groomsman and Mr. Stanley Sills, of Batawa and Mr. Jack Simmons, of Belleville, were ushers.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Wotton, of Plainfield sang very beautifully "Because I Know Your Heart."

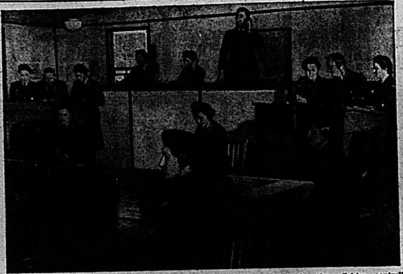
Following the wedding, a reception was held at the bride's home in Murray Township. The bride's mother received in a gown of corvette blue with navy and white accessories and corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, attired in a navy blue ensemble with navy and white accessories and corsage of red roses.

The bride's table, centred by the wedding cake and crystal candelabra, had streamers of pink and white joining to it to the wedding bell in the centre of the room. Smaller tables were also decorated in pink and white and spring flowers adorned the rooms. Misses Ruth Harry, Evelyn Morrow, Mary McAuley and Mrs. Joseph Offenberger, friends of the bride, assisted in serving the buffet luncheon.

Among showers of confetti and good wishes, the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Ottawa. The bride chose a navy blue sailor ensemble with navy and white accessories, with a top coat of tweed and a corsage of red roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver in Adoration pattern; to the matron of honor and soloist, glamor pins; to the bridesmaids, ear rings; to the flower girl, a bracelet; to the groomsman, ushers and pianist, tie sets.

About sixty out-of-town guests were present from Corbyville, Belleville, Stirling, Plainfield and Prince Edward.



Fighter control, the system of directing interception of enemy planes which played a tremendous part in the Battle of Britain, is now being taught in Canada. Above is the "ops" rom at No. 1 School of Fighter Control at Rockcliffe air station, near Ottawa, where girls training to be operational clerks in the Royal Canadian Air Force Women's Division learn the secrets of fighter control behind locked doors. From the large table map in the foreground, the fighter controller (standing) sees at a glance the number, speed, and route of invading aircraft. Thus, he is in a position to direct his squadrons of Hurricanes and Spitfires to the best point of interception. —(R.C.A.F. Photo.)

CARRUTHERS—HOGLE

A profusion of white spring flowers adorned Christ Church on Wednesday afternoon, May 26th, at three o'clock, for the marriage of Grace Mercy Hogle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hogle, to Thomas Albert Carruthers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carruthers. The altar, banked with pink snapdragons and tulips, was a most colorful and lovely setting for the marriage at which Rev. G. G. Wright officiated. Mr. W. P. Youdale presided at the console of the organ.

The bride was a lovely picture in her heavy rainbow blue corded taffeta wedding gown, with blue lace Dutch cap from which fell a matching finger-tip veil of tulle illusion. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Douglas D. Airhart, sister of the bride and her only attendant, was charming in a pale pink sheer frock with white lace Dutch cap. A nosegay of pink roses completed her ensemble.

Mr. Harold Carruthers, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman.

For the reception at the bride's residence, the rooms of which were tastefully decorated with pink snapdragons and tulips, tea was poured by Mrs. Lillian Minns and lunch was served by Misses Florence Carr, Margaret Leslie, Mrs. Lea Elder and Mrs. Berna Sills. The bride's mother was attractively attired in a navy blue crepe suit with navy hat, white accessories and corsage of white carnations. She was assisted by the groom's mother, equally charming in a turquoise blue ensemble with black accessories and corsage of white carnations.

For a wedding trip to Ottawa, Montreal and points east, the bride donned a cocoa brown tailored suit with light brown top coat, brown French felt tam and white accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Doris Long, Toronto; Miss Catherine Walters, Ottawa; Mrs. Jack Sills, Kingston; Mrs. Jack Aitchison, Deloro, Mrs. Phillip Stout, Baltimore, Md. and Mrs. Lloyd Currie, Orangeville.

JUBY—SMITH

A pretty spring wedding was solemnized outside the residence of William Smith, Detlor, Ontario, 'neath a colorful arch of trilliums, white ribbon and paper bells, on Monday afternoon, May 24th, at 1.30 o'clock, when Eva Alta Smith, of Detlor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Smith, became the bride of Pte. William Roy Juby, O.T.C., Brockville, son of Mr. Arthur Juby and the late Mrs. Juby, of Stirling. The Rev. W. H. V. Walker, of Stirling, performed the ceremony.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Bessie Balmforth, of Meaford and "I Love You Truly" was beautifully rendered by Mrs. W. H. V. Walker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a white embossed marquisette over satin floor-length gown with finger-tip veil and bouquet of white carnations.

She was attended by Miss Ila Kimble, wearing a floor-length frock of sky blue sheer with shoulder-length veil and bouquet of pink carnations and tulips.

LAC. John McCaslin, S. F. T. S., (R.C.A.F.) St. Hubert, Que., attended the groom.

For the buffet luncheon, the bride's home was attractively decorated with blue and white streamers and white bells. The bride's table was centred with a wedding cake, on both sides of which were white candelabra. The bride's mother wore a navy blue sheer ensemble with matching accessories and corsage of red roses.

The bride chose a brown corded gabardine tailored suit with brown accessories for the wedding trip to Toronto and points west.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Devolin, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Juby, Stirling; Mr. Arthur Juby, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Smith, Madoc and Mr. and Mrs. H. Lloyd, Hillier. On their return the young couple will reside in Brockville.—Peterboro Examiner and Bancroft Times please copy.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Always Unfair to Call on Persons To Speak Without Advance Notice

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother is chairman of a committee that is planning a banquet. He and I are having an argument about his calling on guests to speak. He says that since all the guests are active in the work of the war activity for which this banquet is being given, it is not necessary to tell any of them that he intends to call on them to "say a few words."

I am trying to tell him that this is unfair, that it is extremely difficult for some people, self-conscious people, or those "unused to public speaking," to think of anything to say on the spur of the moment, and that he should make up his list of speakers and ask each one if he or she would be willing to speak for a minute or two on the idea of the banquet.

Which of us is right about this? He and I have decided to abide by your decision, Mrs. Beeckman.

T. U.

You are right, most definitely right. Calling on people to speak in public without "warning" them in advance, is a thoughtless act, and in some case, many cases, can be a cruel procedure. Your brother should do as you suggest . . . ask certain people to speak, tell them the topic on which he wants to have them speak, and tell them exactly the number of minutes they are to speak. Then they can do their "home work" on what they want to say!

Shall She Take Ticket?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I live in a suburb of a large city, and a young man who is a good friend of mine, lives in another suburb, some distance from my home. He has invited me to go into the city to the theatre and since it is impossible for him to come to my home for me (impossible because of limited time between his finishing work and the time when we must meet), he sent me my railroad ticket with an explanation about the time-difficulty.

Mother has given her consent for me to go, but feels that it may not be proper for me to accept this courtesy. I maintain that since I am going as his guest it is proper for me to accept the ticket. So Mother has asked me to write to you, for your opinion.

Hilda.

Since this imperative question of time makes it impossible for the young man to come for you, he has been very thoughtful to do all he can for your convenience, and to carry out his courteous hospitality. My advice is that you accept his courtesy in the same generous spirit with which he offers it.

Tip on Popularity

Have you been trying for a long time to get people interested in you? With not much success? Give your technic a turn-about, and for the next three or four weeks direct your eyes and ears and heart to becoming interested in other people. Talk "you," not "I." Be alert to listening, real listening. Being interested in others begets their interest in you . . . and you're on your way to the great art of making friends.

My Girl's Ring

A letter from my girl asked why
I left and never said good-bye.
(A clothing store has also wrote
The same about an overcoat.)
I sometimes wonder, now it's past,
Just why I rushed away so fast.

My girl she seems to take it more
To heart than does the clothing store.
For she intended, when I went,
To pull some kind of big event,
She said it seemed just awful hard
To learn it from a postal card,
After the many things that she
Had done to make a man of me!
She hears a lot of nasty flings
From other girls, all wearing rings,
Who wish to know why she is not—
What kind of boso has she got?

I wonder is my girl aware
That I got sergeants in my hair
And don't need bawl-outs from no dame.
But since politeness is my aim
I wrote and said to get a ring,
Provided they would charge the thing,
And tell the jeweler I would pay
The bill right after Victory Day—
But thinking how she loved to blow
Most anybody else's dough,
I told her she would be in dutch
If she picked one that cost too much.

Bride-to-Be Presented With Gift by Friends

On the evening of May 21st., the Goodwill Band of the Standard Church assembled at the home of Miss Helen Brown, 64 Benjamin St., with a very good attendance. It was decided other business would be dispensed with in honor of Miss Ruth Brown, bride-to-be member, whose marriage will take place soon. Miss E. Holden read an appropriate address. Miss Olive McGowan made the presentation of a most useful gift from the band members. Though taken completely by surprise, Ruth responded fittingly. A buffet luncheon was served, the buffet was tastefully arranged, the centrepiece being a miniature wedding cake decorated in pink and white, flanked by white tapers with pink bows. Everyone spent a most enjoyable evening.

Careful Gleaners Class Entertains

Marmora — The Careful Gleaners Class of St. Paul's Sunday School entertained the members of the C.G.I.T. of Saint Andrew's Sunday School and the Junior Institute on May 24th in the Parish Hall. The evening opened with the National Anthem followed by an address of welcome by Miss Gwennie Rundle, president of the class. All joined heartily in community singing with Mrs. R. L. Rundle at the piano, the girls selecting the songs. Two contests, one the naming of songs as illustrated by pictures and the other the naming of proverbs as acted by different members of the class created much pleasure. At the conclusion of the program a very tasty lunch was served by members of the class. The evening was brought to a close by short addresses of thanks being given by Miss Elda Gordon and Miss Joyce Kouri on behalf of the C.G.I.T. and the Junior Institute.

McCready and Robert Battle To Draw in Wrestling Show Provided Patrons at Arena

Each Won a Fall in One of the Cleverest Bouts Seen Here in Some Time

CLAYBOURNE WINS

Promoter Frank Tunney's effort to produce a contender for the British Empire wrestling title is no further today than it was yesterday. The reason for such a statement is the fact that the two main claimants, namely Yvon Robert and Earl McCready, addresses well known to local rasslin' patrons, grappled to a draw at the Hume Arena Wednesday night and before upward of a thousand satisfied fans.

Actually it seemed as though the participants forgot the fact they were shooting for the principal factor of gaining prominence for a title bout and went out on the limb in personalities. After all beating a French-Canadian in Ontario is something of a business and Monsieur Robert wasn't for letting the patrons' favorite (McCready by name) thwart his efforts.

During the first round Robert and McCready put on a tumbling act that would put high-class circus performances to shame, but after such a show Robert tried a double toe hold, with little results and McCready came back with a headlock. However, Robert gained a strong rolling figure-four armlock and that was that for a fall. McCready was the aggressor in the middle round and once had both Robert and Referee Lawson pinned well to the mat, but naturally the official was so well dunked that only McCready was the loser on the count. With a pair of elbow smashes and a strong press McCready came back and Monsieur Robert protested strongly as he was counted out to make matters. all even Robert became rather pugnacious in the third and final round, but McCready weathered the storm of questionable attacks and the hour limit bell sounded to terminate ring hostilities. A return bout, without a time limit, would well please Belleville rasslin' fans.

Referee Busiest Man

In the opening scrap Referee Cliff Faux was the busiest man inside of the ring as "Irish Pat" Flannagan "mule-kicked" Jan Gotch outside of the squared circle and won as the Dutchman was finally counted out.

The semi-final bout gave the patrons the most thrills of the night when Maurice Robert, the younger brother of Yvon, tried in vain to strangle "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the colored sensation from Cape Town. But the "colored boy" proved too agile and following a series of flying headlocks, spun "Little Robert" into submission just like that. Now the grunt and groan artists will return to the Hume Arena next Wednesday and what will happen only remains to be seen. Don't miss 'em, that is if you enjoy good clean fun. And we ain't foolin'.

C.N.R. Bowling Team Wins Major Trophy

In one of the closest playoff series in the history of major league bowling in this city, the C.N.R. team won the beautiful trophy up for competition this season, by defeating the Belleville Golf by one pin, in a five game match, at the Recreation Bowling Alleys, Tuesday evening. The total scores were: C.N.R., 4,961; Belleville Golf, 4,960. The Reliance Aircraft team finished third; Belleville Sargent, fourth; No. 5 I.T.S. fifth and Dennis Grocery, last. The league opened in the early fall and some excellent timber topping has been seen through the regular schedule.

In the regular league competition, the Belleville Golf led the teams by a comfortable margin.

Reg. Arnott, rolling for the winners was the high man for the five string with a mark of 1,092, with R. Lennox second with 1,085, but Evan Barlow of the Golf team, was a close third, with 1,084, with Joe League, 1041; Pat Drumm, 1030, and Les Lennox, 1004, being in the 1000 Class.

Following is the games of the C.N.R. and Belleville Golf.

MAJOR LEAGUE GAMES PROVIDE GREAT CONTRAST

Surprising Braves Within Half Game of Second Place

CARDS BEATEN

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

Somebody must have sneaked a supply of the original Balata balls into the major league parks under cover of darkness last night.

There were two games played in the daylight yesterday and in one Pittsburgh Pirates punished Brooklyn Dodgers 17-4. The two teams made a total of 28 hits. In the other daytime game New York Giants beat Chicago Cubs 4-2 and there were 22 hits.

But after the sun had set, look what happened:

Cincinnati nosed out the Phillies 1-0 and Washington whipped St. Louis Browns by the same score. There wasn't a swat in either game longer than a single and the four teams together made a total of only 19 hits.

Another flood-lighted affair was an 11-inning scramble at St. Louis with Boston Braves beating Cardinals 4-3 and even though it included a couple of Cardinal home runs, it also was a pitching party.

Lou Klein and Walker Cooper hit homers for two of the six hits given up by Al Javery as he counted his fourth victory against one defeat. The Braves touched Mort Cooper for 10 safeties, bunched four of them with an error for three runs in the fifth and then won the game in the 11th when Eddie Joost led off with a single and ultimately came home on a single by rookie Charley Workman.

Nearing Second Slot

This boosted the surprising Braves within half a game of the second place St. Louis Redbirds.

In the other two night games the winning pitchers were the hitting pitchers. At Cincinnati Bucky Walters and Charley Fuchs pitched magnificently and neither team scored till two were out in the last of the ninth.

Walters singled in this inning, went to second on a balk and come home on a single by Eddie Miller, the sixth hit allowed by Fuchs. Walters gave only four.

At Washington the lone run of the game was counted in the sixth inning on three singles, the middle one by Dutch Leonard, who held the Browns to four one-base blows. Senators made just five singles off John Niggeling and George Caster.

The day games were a striking contrast to these duels.

At Pittsburgh the Pirates scored 15 runs in the first three innings off Max Macon and Les Webber, getting five of their runs in the second and in the third frame scoring nine times after two were out. Vince DiMaggio hit two home runs, one of them with one on and the other with two.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 27 — (CP) — Coach Bob Kinnear of Winnipeg Rangers will have nothing left of the Canadian junior hockey champions by next season but those ragged puck uniforms and his memories. Twelve Rangers players are in the services. George Mundrick and Stan Warecki, reserves who saw no action in the Memorial Cup series, are slated for St. Catharines, Ont., where a junior "A" team is a definite prospect. Centre Cal Gardner goes to Oshawa Generals, probably, or Hamilton, possibly. Jack Taggart may go to Hamilton along with Bobby Love, clever forward who helped Portage la Prairie win the National junior title in 1942. Love has another year of junior hockey remaining. Ranger players now in the services are goalie Doug Jackson, defencemen Ben Juzda, Bill Boorman, Jack Irvine and forwards Tommy Fowler, Ritchie McDonald, Joe Peterson, Bill Vickers, Gus Schwartz, Church Russell, Joe McAllister and Eddie Coleman. They're all in the Navy but Coleman who is in the Air Force.

Slab Happy:

Pitching roster of the Canadian Army team in the Vancouver senior baseball league this year carried the name: Charlie Perkins. He isn't well remembered but Perkins pitched for Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, world champions of 1930. The reason Perkins isn't remembered is that the A's mound staff included guys named Grove, Earnshaw, Rommell and Walberg. But Perkins, fresh from a great showing with Baltimore in the International League, was a promising rookie with the Athletics until he injured his arm in 1931 and was forced from the game. Perkins made two starts on the slab for Vancouver Army but his arm is gone. He swears he'll never try again. Alabama-born, Perkins joined the Canadian Army after he was rejected by the United States Army because he has store teeth. Now he's a sergeant.

Incidentally:

The Liverpool Larrupers, Maritime Senior Baseball champions in 1940 and '41, have disbanded for the duration because of player shortages...the Picton, Ont., Golf Club lends clubs to members of the armed forces who can play the Picton course without charge...the baseball shortage didn't worry Cec Cornelius, treasurer of the Kingston baseball league, until a fire destroyed the six dozen balls he had carefully stored away from last season.

Toronto, May 26 — (CP) — The fight fever which has reached epidemic proportions in Montreal is definitely contagious. The germ is getting out of control in Vancouver. Promoters in the coast city could have taken the hint when the recent Wadsworth-Dubs Canadian middleweight title fight at Vancouver barely escaped financial disaster. The gate was something like $3,000 — definitely poor for a title go. But, undaunted, Vancouver is talking up a more ambitious card. The idea is to match Ken Lindsay, Canadian bantam champion, with the world featherweight king, Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont.

There's no assurance Callura would agree to the match but Vancouver sportsmen figure they can land Jackie if he gets the scent of long green. Alf Cottrell of the Vancouver Sun says there's a hope the R.C.A.F. "will Godfather, the bout and might not turn up a too abrupt nose at a cash desideratum for the canteen funds."

Lindsay, of course, is in the R.C.A.F. The Vancouver boy has put on about seven pounds since enlisting and would concede little or no weight to Callura at 125 pounds.

Poile Harber:

Via Jack (Cornwall Standard-Freeholder) Park we learn that Bud Poile, the Toronto hockey star, has landed at Cornwall and is likely to play his hockey there next season along with Johnny Shewchuk of Boston and Red Hamill of Chicago. But Park takes with a grain of salt the report Poile's erstwhile Toronto team-mate, Billy Taylor, will also land at Cornwall. A nice thought, says Park, but more likely 'twill be Toronto Army Daggers for Billy the Kid.

Round and About:

Curtailment of automobile traffic has caused many golf clubs to lure players with special enticements. Montreal Beaconsfield has formed a WAG Club—meaning Wednesday Afternoon Golf. All that's necessary is to telephone the club secretary, who arranges a match...Sgt. Dave Castilloux of Montreal, Canadian lightweight champion, will box a five-round exhibition with Cpl. Joe Brown on an Ottawa R.C.A.F. card tomorrow. Proceeds of the show will buy new sports equipment for Uplands Air Station at Ottawa . . . Albert Staats, 33, formerly a star Indian lacrosse player at Brantford, Ont., died last week of tuberculosis...it will cost about $7,000 to repair the Kingston Yacht Club dock damaged by ice and storm this spring.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

CAMP BORDEN SOFTBALL

Camp Borden (CP)—No. 2 armored Corps Training Regt. registered an 8-7 win over the Grey and Simcoe Foresters in the first set-to of the softball league sponsored by the Knights of Columbus. In the second half of the twin bill No. 3 C.A.T.C. and Saskatchewan Horse fought it out to an 8-all tie.

DAHLGREN PASSES MEDICAL

Philadelphia (AP) — Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren, shortstop of the Phillies, has passed his first medical examination, it was announced, and will be eligible for induction in the next quota, probably in July.

POLO PLAYER DIES

Pal Beach, Fla., (AP)—The last of America's "big four" in international polo, Lawrence Waterbury, 66, died after an illness. He was the remaining member of the U.S. team, organized by Harry Payne Whitney, which won the International Challenge Cup from Britain for the first time in 1909 and revolutionized the sport.

NO GOLF TOURNEYS

New York (AP)—There will be no national golf tournaments this season, it has been announced by the United States Golf Association. Instead, the organization will sponsor a series of weekend club competitions, with proceeds to be turned over to the Red Cross.

FORMER LEAFS TO PERFORM

Toronto (CP)—When the Toronto Congress Service League gets under way Saturday at Viaduct Park, two former Toronto Maple Leaf hurlers will be mound opponents. Both discoveries of Dan Howley, Dick Fowler will be serving them up for the Army Invaders, while Art Calhoun will be on the firing line for Sam Shefsky's Tip Tops.

NAVY PROVES THEIR RIGHT

Toronto (CP)—Navy proved their right to serious consideration in the hunt for the Beaches Major Fastball League title last night when they outscored the champion Peoples by a 6-3 count at Kew Gardens.

CANADIAN GIRLS IN

Chicago (AP)—P. K. Wrigley's All-America Girls Softball League might almost be re-named the "All-Canadian" pro. loop because all of the 14 candidates for playing berths from the Dominion have been assigned to teams. Three Toronto girls, pitcher Thelma Golden, shortstop Gladys Davis and Helen Nelson catcher, have been allotted to Rockford, Ill., along with two western Canadian girls.

SHORTAGE OF PLAYERS

Guelph (CP)—The Guelph Maple Leaf Baseball and Athletic Association is having difficulty over a player-shortage and the senior series may be reduced from six to four teams at a meeting later this week. The organization sponsoring soccer group for which teams have been entered by No. 4 R.C.A.F. Wireless School, The Netherlands Army and Guelph City.

NELSON, TILSON IN CORNWALL

Cornwall (CP)—Coach Lexx Cook of the Cornwall Hockey Club announced that Ron Nelson and Red Tilson, stars of the Oshawa sextette who bowed to Winnipeg in the Memorial Cup final, enlisted in the army here Wednesday. Rhys Thompson, briefly with the Toronto Leafs last winter, also arrived at the Cornwall camp for enlistment. Red Hamill of Chicago Black Hawks and Johnny Shewchuck are already in uniform.

TO HOLD HARNESS MEET

Kingston (CP)—The harness racing season opens at Kingston fair grounds June 2 and already 18 horses are in training for the first card which is expected to attract equines from all parts of eastern Ontario and nearby New York State. Bert Patch, a local favorite, has trained well this spring, it is reported.

ARRANGE BOUT LATER

Montreal (CP)—Johnny Greco of Montreal and Philadelphia and Bob Montgomery will not meet after all in the New York ring June 25, it was intimated in a statement from army sources here to the effect that a previous announcement that the scrappers had been matched was "premature". Mike Jacobs of New York said the bout would be arranged later.

FOUR TEAMS IN LOOP

Kingston—Two military and two civilian teams will make up the Kingston baseball league this season and a schedule has been drawn up starting May 31 with a game between Aluminum and Locomotives. The other squads are from Ordnance and Vimy Baracks.

TORONTO LEAFS LOSE AND VICTIM OF TRIPLE PLAY

Kemp Wicker of Wings Limits Team to Six Hits

ROYALS DRUB BISONS

When Toronto Maple Leafs lose, they lose all over.

The International League leaders not only were lanked last night by the six-hit performance of Rochester pitcher Kemp Wicker 5-0 but they were the victims of a triple play, made the hard way. It was the second triple play of the season for the league.

The three-play killing came in the second inning when, with Toronto runners on first and second, Herb Crompton hit a grounder to third baseman Barnes, who stepped on the bag, then threw to Timko at second. Timko relayed the ball to First Baseman Mack in time to nip Crompton.

Leaf Hurler Luke Hamlin had good control, but he was nicked for nine hits in suffering his second defeat. He's won five. Joe Mack, an ex-Leaf, hit for the circuit with none on in the second for Rochester's second run.

Jersey City also drew a blank last night, being held to two hits by Ed Klieman as Baltimore Orioles won 10-0. Orioles fattened their batting averages with 17 hits off Hugh East and Walter Dyche. Steve Shemo got both hits off Klieman, who turned in his sixth win.

Salex Kimball's big bat was the big noise as Montreal Royals drubbed Buffalo Bisons, 9-2. Kimball accounted for two of the three Royal home runs and drove in five scores. Jack Graham made the other round tripper. The Royals got 16 hits as southpaw Bob Chipman was scattering out six Bison blows.

Skipper Fresco Thompson of the Royals was ousted in the eighth for disputing a decision at first base.

Newark went into a tie for second place with Montreal as the Bears defeated the Syracuse Chiefs 6 to 1, with big Ed Levy leading the attack. Levy connected for three singles and a double in helping southpaw Tom Ananicz turn in his third victory.

Word from overseas informs us that Gnr. Leo Goyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goyer, of this city, is champion javelin thrower of the Canadian Army overseas. Leo was first introduced to the art of javelin tossing at Petawawa Camp by Captain J. L. Stewart, who tutored him until he won the army crown.

It is doubtful if Leo knew which end of a javelin to hold when he was first handed the long narrow spear-like contraption, but in three weeks he increased his throwing distance from 120 feet to 165 feet, four inches and even today is reported to be adding to his javelin throwing prowess by continued practice. Most other field event champions with the Canadian Army overseas had previous experience in either college or interscholastic circles, but not Goyer, which speaks all the higher for his accomplishments.

Well Known Here

Gnr. Leo Goyer played centre for Sergeant Don Thomas' Artillery hockey team that won their division honors and advanced to the Canadian Army hockey semi-finals overseas last winter.

Before the war Leo Goyer showed promise as a junior hockey player with Toots Holway's kids along in 1937-'39, but at that time he played defence, as his dad had nearly a decade previous. Leo was a good puck carrier and a prolific goal-getter, which he proved last winter in his scoring records.

In softball circles he played for Red Townsend's Belleville Juniors, cavorting about in centre field gathering in fly balls with comparative ease. However, his winning of the Army Javelin Throwing Championship is perhaps his greatest athletic achievement as he competed against the best in Canada's armed services.

The Right Idea

Lieut. Harold Holway's Belleville Garrison softball team is holding bi-weekly practices at Queen Mary School grounds. The Garrison team is made up solely of players from the Argyll Light Infantry and the 34th Battery. "We do not intend to deviate from the personnel of either the Argyll or Battery for our playing strength. We entered a team in the City softball series primarily to provide recreation for the members of the local garrison and if we can win the odd game or two it will satisfy us, as we're in it for the fun the boys can attain," related Lieut. Holway, who realizes his team has been entered in stiff company.

With the Exhibition Park diamond literally a sea of mud, the Belleville and District Softball Association could do worse than open as soon as possible, even if they have to play games at the Reliance field or No. 5 I.T.S. diamond, both of which are drained and in playing condition.

Did You Know—?

Torchy Peden, the famed six-day bicycle racer who took his basic physical training course at the Trenton Air Station, is now a sergeant in the R.C.A.F. . . Joe Hoover, Detroit shortstop, who played with Hollywood in the Pacific Coast League last season, says the Coast stadium is so small that players on the field can hear whispers from the spectators in the stands. "It's a little embarrassing," explains Joe, "to hear some big bruiser remark to his neighbor, after you have booted one, 'Why doesn't that bum get himself a job?'" . . SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

(By ALLAN NICKLESON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 27, (CP)—Shortly before the First Great War an officer approached Harry Andrews, athletics trainer for the Irish Guards, and asked track advice. "I want you to test me out and tell me frankly what I'm good for", he said.

Andrews sent the slight officer through the paces, then told him "I think you have the makings of a good miler". The officer took the hint, concentrated on the mile, and won an Irish championship at that distance.

Deeply appreciative, he made Andrews a deed gift of £1 ($4.50) a week for life. The trainer received the sum up to his death recently at the age of 80.

The Irish Guards' officer now is Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, the man who taught the Germans and Italians to run. The story is told in the weekly paper "Cycling".

More than $31,000 poured into the government coffers from the Football League South Cup final at Wembly where a 75,000 crowd watched Arsenal Gunners trim Charlton Athletic. It came from entertainment tax which amounted to slightly more than one-third of the total gate.

Each club received about $11,250 as its share of the proceeds. A similar sum went to the Football League for a pool which benefits the league's 72 clubs. All clubs contribute to the pool throughout the regular season and each club will get an equal share of about $2,250.

Not all contributions are of the same amount. Clubs drawing small gates pay less into the pool than such clubs as Arsenal, probably the greatest crowd pleasers in Britain.

To some of the smaller clubs, struggling hard to carry on, the pool is a godsend that keeps their debts down.

W. R. Jarvis, famed Newmarket turfman who trained racehorses for three Kings, left an estate with net personalty of approximately $42,000. It was willed to his widow. Jarvis, who died last January trained for King George V, King Edward VII, and the present King.

Exchange of sports visits between British and Russian workers' teams was forecast by W. W. Wakefield, House of Commons' member and former England rugby captain, at the inaugural meeting of the International Sports Fellowship in London.

"The air will be used for its proper purpose of carrying ambassadors of goodwill," he said. "I don't think the Russians play rugby but the R.A.F. and Army teams might fly there to demonstrate it, and the Russians could come and show us their sports, of which we know little".

LESSON NO. 68

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Hold still a moment. This is not going to hurt you. It may be tiresome. But it is not painful.

I have been telling you that a takeout is the first choice of bids. To takeout, however, your suit must be biddable. So, let me do a little digging into your biddable suits.

What's in a name. Biddable means able to bid. A biddable suit is a suit you are able to bid. A suit is biddable if it is better than average in length and strength.

Length means the number of cards. Strength means the number of faces. Better than average is four cards with two faces. Example of a minimum biddable suit is Q J 3 2.

That is the mathematical proof of what makes a suit biddable. It tells you the true basis of the biddability of a suit. It is the foundation for all the bidding about suits.

However, the more length (cards) a suit has, the less strength (faces) does it need. There is a simple measure for that. Here it is.

For the biddability of a suit, two small cards are equal to one face. To say it another way, a face in strength is not better than two cards in length.

Take the basis of four cards with two faces. Trade one of the faces for two small cards. What have you? Five cards with only one puss. Example, J 5 4 3 2.

Carry that a step further. A five carder is biddable if it has one face. Trade that one pan for two small cards. You then have a six card suit without a mug in it. Example 7 6 5 4 3 2.

Look at these hands:

SOUTH
♠A 10 3
♥A K 7 5
♦9
♣Q 9 7 6 3

NORTH
♠9 8 6 5 4 2
♥J
♦K 10 8 4
♣A 2

South has a biddable suit in hearts. Also in clubs. North has a biddable spade suit. But the north diamond suit is not biddable. It lacks faces.

Don't bid a nude suit of the short sort.

AT THE McCARTHY

"SHERLOCK HOLMES IN WASHINGTON"

In all his fictional adventures, Sherlock Holmes never had the opportunity of solving a case in the United States.

Hollywood, however, has corrected this possible oversight on the part of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

In Universal's current "Sherlock Holmes in Washington," coming next to the McCarthy Theatre, the lean, gimlet-nosed sleuth flies via Clipper to track down criminals beneath the very shadows of the F.B.I. headquarters in Washington.

Doyle made frequent references in his stories to trips to this country by Holmes, but never permitted his man to pursue his crime detection on this side of the Atlantic.

But in "Sherlock Holmes in Washington," Hollywood has Holmes played by Basil Rathbone, carrying his deductions within the confines of the Senate office building, while his standby, trusty Doctor Watson, portrayed by Nigel Bruce, splutters in amazement at such American phenomena as chewing gum, slang and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"Sherlock Holmes in Washington" was directed by Roy William Neill. Marjorie Lord, John Archer, Don Terry, George Zucco and other film favorites are in the supporting cast.

2nd hit is "The Redhead from Manhattan" with Lupe Velez.

AT THE BELLE

"Meanest Man in the World"

Another entertainment coup has been staged at the Belle Theatre, where Jack Benny and Priscilla Lane are holding forth in the hilarious 20th Century-Fox comedy, "The Meanest Man in the World." Benny's at his best—which makes for plenty of laughs. Assisting in the comedy are Rochester and Helene Reynolds.

Lloyd Nolan "Manila Calling"

A story of violence and high adventure, "Manila Calling", the 20th Century Fox film presented as the co-feature attraction is geared for action and suspense. And it should provide both in abundance, judging from the nature of the tale it tells.

"Manila Calling" features Lloyd Nolan, Carole Landis and James Gleason.

"Flying Jalopy" a funny Walt Disney cartoon in color completes the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Idaho"

Local fans who recall with satisfaction the success of "Heart of the Golden West," Roy Rogers first western in the so-called "big budget" class, will welcome the second of these Rogers Gold Medal productions, "Idaho," which is scheduled to open tonight at the Capitol Theatre.

Rogers portrays a State Ranger in "Idaho," warm friend of Judge Grey, a reformed ex-convict who makes a hobby of rehabilitating wayward youths from the boy-gangs of distant cities on his J-Bar Ranch.

Spike and Duke, two crooks, seek out Judge Grey, confront him with the fact that they know he is really Tom Allison, ex-badman, and demand that he hide them out. When the Judge refuses they wound him superfically and escape, with Roy and the Rangers hot in pursuit. The two crooks are able to escape by abandoning their car and hitching a ride into town with the unsuspecting Frog Millhouse.

Frog takes them to Belle Bonner's saloon, where they soon make the acquaintance of Belle herself. Enraged because Judge Grey is attempting to close her establishment Belle wheedles from Spike and Duke the valuable information that the Judge is an ex-convict; she uses it in a vicious attempt to frame him, a plot which is stymied only by the heroic and quick-witted action of Roy and his friends.

Harry Shannon plays the role of Judge Grey, with Virginia Grey in the feminine lead and Ona Munson in the role of "Belle."

"Wings For the Eagle"

Two of filmdom's top-notch players, Ann Sheridan and Dennis Morgan, have the leading roles in Warner Bros.' action-packed film, "Wings For the Eagle", which opens at the Capitol Theatre tonight as the added hit. Its swift moving story is set for the most part in the large Lockheed Aircraft Plant. The supporting cast is made up of such favorite players as Jack Carson, George Tobias and Russell Arms. Lloyd Bacon directed.

American Optical Lassies Beaten Rather Handily

Scoring eleven runs in the first inning, the Belleville Sargent lassies romped home to a 28 to 1 victory over the American Optical gals in a scheduled Belleville Ladies' Softball League game played at the Armouries last evening. It was little disgrace for Coach Jimmie Semark's inexperienced nine to be beaten as every player on the losing nine was playing her initial game before a gallery and actually in competitive softball itself.

The winning Sargent nine raced through to an eleven run lead in the initial frame and continued to mount their score, as the losers scored their only counter in the sixth frame. Filled with experienced players the winners were paced by Bessie Doolittle on the mound and victory was rather easy. However, the courageous Optical lassies never gave up the fort and battled in the face of defeat to command the respect of the patrons. On Friday night at the Armouries Bristol and Deacons A.C. clash.

Armstrong Ready To Win Back His Lightweight Title

(By SID FEDER)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, May 27. (AP)—It is just a year now since Henry Armstrong started to prove to the folks that he wasn't washed up so the Hammer is having a little anniversary celebration around town for a couple of days before hitting the road again.

He took some time off from his celebrating to give a quick once-over to that year in which he switched from a fellow who was regarded as a nice guy while he had it a beak-buster with a lot of future.

From there, the little buzzsaw went on to outline a tentative schedule for the rest of the summer, beginning with his June 11 party with Sammy Angott here, fights with Willie Joyce in Los Angeles and Jim Garrison in Portland, and some warm-weather ballpark belting against lightweight champ Bob Montgomery in Philadelphia and Ray Robinson in New York, although these last two are still in the "talk" stage.

After that, he expects the road may lead him back to the lightweight title—although "that won't come off until I can get a crack at the undisputed championship". At the moment, Montgomery owns part of the title while the National Boxing Association doesn't recognize anyone, but wants Bob and Angott to fight it out. When all the shooting is over, Henry is going to start taking target practice on the survivor—and he has no idea of retiring.

Manuel Ortiz Retains Title

Long Beach, Calif., May 27—(AP)—Manuel Ortiz, world's bantamweight champion, retained his title last night by punching out a unanimous decision in 15 rounds over Joe Robleto of Pasadena, Calif. A crowd of 4,100 saw the fight.

The hard-punching Ortiz, first Mexican to hold the undisputed championship, chased Robleto all over the ring in the 14th and 15th rounds, but up until that point the Pasadena boy made a surprisingly good showing.

Ortiz weighed 118 and Robleto 117.

New York, May 27 — (AP) — The International League claims to have two of the youngest pro baseball players in captivity in John Henry Moesch, Baltimore infielder who was 16 last December, and Walter Dyche, 17-year-old southpaw pitcher of Jersey City...if they get any bad decisions, the fans can holler "cradle robber" at the umpire.

FOXES REAL HOARDERS

Little Rock, Minn., May 26 (AP)—Four farmers provoked at the nightly raids on their chicken houses, began a search for the foxes they suspect of the thefts. They discovered a den with fox and seven cubs and a sufficient amount of food to last the fox family for some time. In addition to 25 chickens, the animals had hoarded several pheasants, an owl, a hawk, a muskrat, several gophers, a little pig, a weasel—and two toads.

PASSING DREAM

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 25

Harry said, "I look at you with quiet pride, Temple. Don't mind that. This is a room where once people took their time about living and loving. It must be wonderful to be able to take your time about living, to live leisurely, to think things out before you say them, to look at things long and intimately and not have to get it all in one quick glance. Yes, I'm off the beam, as they say now. This morning I was speaking of action. But to have active days and to live in a room like this at night."

"Yes, go on."

He smiled. "You want me to talk about myself, don't you? Because you want me to take you out of yourself, Temple. Very well, you asked for it. It's been a long time since I talked, since I've said anything of importance to myself—I've been giving commands and learning how to give other commands. I was once a little boy in Brooklyn, Temple. That little boy had parents for a time, two vital people who were excited about each other until the end of their too brief lives. The little boy played and fought hard. When his parents died, he was passed on to his grandmother who was a tyrant. Women who are tyrants are usually disappointed women. There was a clash of wills. The little boy ran away several times until he became a big boy.

"Running away from home means living by your wits, picking up knowledge too old and heavy for your mind. But the little boy had a curious mind. He was also as stubborn as hell. He went up to a certain university without a penny in his pocket. He hitch-hiked his way there. He had played football in high school and his body had known the hard labor of a farm hand during the summer. He stayed at the university. They told him that he had made good. He believed it for a time. But it took a war for him to realize he had actually run away from violence and had accepted the university as a sanctuary against violence. He had outgrown violence, but he had not outgrown his curiosity."

"His grandmother died. When he went to see her, before she passed away, she wasn't a tyrant. She was a poor, disappointed old lady who had been touchingly proud of the boy in her last years. Thus he learned tolerance. There's not much more to add except that he's in a fight again which isn't kid stuff."

"There was a girl. He saw her first in his class. He'd always been rigid in disciplining himself where pretty girls in his classes were concerned. But this girl had eyes he remembered, a body he remembered and a mind that seemed to challenge his own curious mind. He had to wait for her. She was young and mixed up and everything was going wrong with her. He had to take the chance that he wouldn't wait too long."

"Then that's the tragedy of his story. He waited too long."

"Temple, you're too young for anything to be late for you."

"What has being young got to do with it?"

"A mistake? You could call it a passing dream."

They were rather long at dinner.

When they were driving back to Washington, he said, "I like you for not pretending. Women, unlike most men, are able to cover their feelings so well. They can be tearing apart inside, but they always feel that they owe gaiety and chatter to a man who takes them out to dinner. When am I going to see you again?"

"You are not going to see me again, Harry."

He turned his head and smiled at her. "I'll use a woman's trick then. They get away with anything on their birthdays. December the seventh happens to be mine and you surely are not going to let me have my dinner alone that day. It comes on Sunday and we'll make it an afternoon dinner because I've got to show up at a cocktail party later. Is it a date? It's my birthday."

She smiled at him, a funny, puzzled little smile. "It isn't fair to take advantage of my sentimental feelings over birthdays and anniversaries. At home all those dates were always celebrated."

"It's a date then."

She had felt the tears of loneliness and longing. Tonight she felt the tears of regret.

She knew that the heart had gone out of it when she tried to write Jud that night and knew that she was only making black marks on clean white paper. When had it happened? It had not happened today or yesterday. It had begun to happen when she had stepped from the train in Florida.

Since then each time she had told herself that she loved him she had been trying to convince herself that nothing had changed. She would never convince herself that what they had had was not good and sweet, tender and ardent. But it had passed as all things pass, as a fire that has warmed you in the night is cold ash in the morning.

Temple stood by the window and looked down at the quiet, dark street, unconscious of physical fatigue. Love does not die. You pass it. You leave it as you leave one place for another place. The place you left is not dishonored because you have chosen a new place. There is no scar, no dispute. There should never be.

She had tried to keep the image of the Jud she had first known real and vivid and warming. But it had slipped away quietly and coolly. It had begun to happen in Florida where she had been content to be his companion and where now she knew she would have been just as happy with any young man as amusing and as personable as Jud.

The things he had said had not rung true. As her words had been only black marks on clean white paper, so Jud's words had been spoken from a vacuum in his heart. But he had said, "I love you more than anyone in the world, Temple." She thought, "And I could tell you, Jud, tell you honestly that I love you. I love you, but the heart has gone out of it, the warmth or the magic or the attraction of whatever it is that holds two people together and sets them apart from all other people for each other."

"I love you for what we had together. That's why you love me, for what we had that is gone. I didn't want to admit that a war marriage and a secret marriage is wrong for two people who haven't known each other long enough, for two people who rush into marriage before they are ready for it. You were right, Jud. It was a dream. It was a passing dream."

December 7, 1941, came as any other Sunday morning in Washington. The lesser traffic moved less frantically and the people took longer to eat breakfast and read the papers, mispronouncing the names of the Japanese envoys in Washington, and talked of Christmas. Everyone felt snug and safe and childishly trustful. Uniforms were still so much in the minority that they punctuated any gathering, like sparse commas. The sun glistened on the dome of the Capitol and the Washington monument looked up fearlessly at the clear winter sky.

Temple came down the steps at her boarding house to meet Harry. She had a small white package tied with red ribbon in her hand. She smiled gravely. She smiled wisely, too. She knew her way now. She knew that mentally she was driving the wrong way on a one-way street and that the street was too narrow and cluttered for her to turn around. She would have to go along the wrong way on the one-way street. That was the answer, the sad true answer.

The half-truths and the misty dreams were gone. She could read his letters with tenderness and understanding, knowing how hard he was trying to amuse her, knowing how hard he was trying to keep her living with the half-truths and the misty dreams. She loved him, but it was because of the dream that they had had. Always she would love him for that. But it had ended there. It had ended in May after a honeymoon of three days.

She could not tell him. If theirs had not been a war marriage and he had been here, observing her, seeing her ffrequently, he would have seen her unhappiness and her regrets. But hundreds of miles separated them and they would have to continue to write in their mood of last May. Because theirs was a war marriage and a secret marriage.

He looked shocked and shamed. Then he shook his head and smiled a little and said gravely ,"I can't accept it, Temple. It isn't my birthday."

"Oh!" She colored. Then she smiled. "They're . . they're imported cigarettes. I suppose we could smoke them at dinner."

"Yes, we could."

She smiled again. "Where shall we have your birthday dinner?"

"You're sweet. Purposely, of course, to make me reproach myself. I do. It was a mean trick. But I do know a place. It isn't elegant but it's—it's cozy."

He stopped to buy a newspaper before he took her to a small place. A few tables and chairs comprised a private dining-room behind a bar. A solicitious bartender greeted them as though they were 'old friends.

Temple said, pulling off her beige gloves, "Now I've been everywhere."

Harry laughed. "Always the original one, I! Someone told me about this place, gave me the pass word. I might even glance at the headlines of the paper here while you are smoking one of your cigarettes." But he folded his arms and leaned across the table. "What have you been doing, Temple?"

What had she been doing? Destroying a dream as a child knocks down a house made of blocks.

"I haven't been doing anything exciting, Harry."

"You look better. Not tied in knots. You're lovely. You're not only a girl to want, Temple. You're a girl to think about."

"I'm also a girl who has been thinking a lot."

"I thought so."

"What have you been doing?"

He frowned and smiled. "Must we? I will if you insist. But must we say the same things everyone says?"

"Why not? Are we so special?"

"I think we are. The people in your town probably would relish this situation, don't you think? Harry and Temple sitting at a table behind a bar in Washington. They've come quite a way. They've picked up a few of the correct answers."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself waiting for ma to remind him to get ready to go around to the Hewses house to play bridge, and ma said, William, I hope you've written a letter of acknowledgement for that lovely smoking jacket my sister Fanny sent you for your birthday.

Well no, not yet, I figured it would keep till you'd reminded me a couple of times, and this is the first you've mentioned it, pop said, and ma said, Well of all the excuses for an inexcusable delay for land sakes. Now I know why men in general are happier than women and less subject to wrinkles and other inroads of age. It's because they never worry. It's because they sit back with a cigar or a newspaper and let their wives do every speck of the worrying about every single little problem that raises its casual head, she said.

You're right, my dear, it's a knack that we've developed to a fine art, pop said, and ma said, Well you dont need to crow about it with such smug righteousness, because now that I've unearthed the secret of your nonchalant attitude tords life, I'm going to turn the tables on you and you'll do all your own legitimate worrying or else take the consequences. I'll develop a carefree teknique of my own and let the devil take the hinemost, she said.

By gollies my dear you've hit on a beauty hint that would put Elizabeth Arden in the poorhouse in 6 months if it was universally adopted, pop said. Let's begin right away. Let me do the worrying about weather or not we'll be late for the bridge game tonight, so then if we're late you can blandly lay all the blame on me, he said, and ma said, Oh dear, I see there are some things in this life that just wont work.

That's too bad, maybe I'm wrong about this being a womens world, pop said, and ma said, You certainly are in this instants.

And she hurry up made him get ready.

Gen. MacArthur Proud of Honors Conferred on Him

Allied Headquarters in Australia, May 27 (CP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commenting today on his appointment as Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, said the honor reflected primarily on his "comrades-in-arms" in the south-west Pacific.

"I deeply appreciate the distinction of this award," Gen. MacArthur said in a statement issued by his headquarters.

"My gratification and pride are only increased by the realization that although it is quite beyond anything that my personal effort has warranted, it truly reflects the courage, skill, devotion and sacrifice of my comrades-in-arms of the Australian, American, Dutch and other forces which it is my fortune to command.

Gen. MacArthur's appointment to honorary rank as a Knight of the Order of the Bath, military division, was made by the King and was announced at London earlier today. A similar honor was bestowed simultaneously upon Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief in North Africa.

The honor permits them, if they so desire, to use the initials C.B.E. after their names. But because of American constitutional practice they cannot use the title "Sir", which the same honor would confer upon a British subject.

A qualified source in Ottawa said last night he did not think Canadians would be able to accept the same honorary rank. He said the ban imposed some time ago by the House of Commons on Canadians accepting certain honors, with or without titles, still stood.

A House of Commons committee last year recommended that Canadians be entitled to receive any awards that do not carry titles. These include Companion of the Order of the Bath; Cross of St. Michael and St. George; Commander of the Order of the British Empire; Officer of the Order of the British Empire and Member of the Order of the British Empire.

POLICE COURT

E. M. Spencer, Centralia, Ont., was convicted in County Police Court today before Magistrate Lloyd, of operation of a motor vehicle without first having procured his individual driver's permit. A fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed.

Several charges of breaking, entering and theft were to have been heard against Chas. Bulpit, Thurlow and Wm. Landry, Belleville, but the cases were enlarged for one week at the request of E. E. Follwell, counsel for Bulpit.

A non-support case heard in camera concluded the morning's proceedings.

AMATEUR CAMERA FANS MAKE GOOD USE OF FAIR WEATHER

Despite the fact that photographic films have been rationed to retail dealers at 50 per cent. of the quantities ordered during the same month in previous years, camera fans in the Bay of Quinte district ar bringing in more films to be developed than ever before.

At least this was the claim this week of Mr. Ernest McCormick, local photo finisher and commercial photographer. With so much inclement weather this spring, amateur camera fans apparently are saving their films for infrequent fair weather and really do a lan. office business over the holiday, it was stated.

According to Mr. McCormick, he developed and finished more films on Tuesday of this week than any day in his experience as a photo finisher.

Hobby Fair Concludes Rotary "Youth Week"

Trenton (Special) — "YOUTH WEEK" which was sponsored by the Trenton Rotary Club under the direct supervision of Mr. Fred Collins, was brought to a final and most successful conclusion on Monday afternoon and evening by the holding of a Hobby Fair in the College Street School. Hundreds of citizens of all ages thronged the assembly hall all afternoon and later on in the evening to view the many hundred entries which had been presented by youngsters of town and vicinity. During the evening the crowds were entertained by the High School orchestra led by Don Mawson.

While it was impossible for Rotary to entertain the prize winners this year to a banquet such as was enjoyed last year, it is understood the children are to be given a picnic at a later date.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 27 (CP) — The gold stocks lagged again in the early Toronto session today while other index groups posted small gains at noon. Turnover was about up to the recent average at 153,000 shares for the first three hours.

Brazilian featured the industrial section, advanced ¾ to 23¾ in active trading. National Steel Car also moved up strongly, adding 2½ to sell at 53¾. Senior oils and foods were steady.

Kerr-Addison weakened 20 cents to 5.85 and other heavy golds were Lake Shore, Pioneer, Bralorne, Lamaque, Aunor, Upper Canada and Chesterville. Normetal and Steep Rock weakened slightly against gains for International Nickel, Noranda, Ventures and Waite-Amulet.

Home, Royalite and Davies were stronger western oils and Ajax at 1.25 was up 5 cents.

WALL STREET

New York, May 27—(AP)—The generally cheerful news picture, plus a slight touch of inflation temperature, spurred selected stocks on another forward jaunt in today's market.

Peaks for three years or longer were touched by assorted issues at a fairly active opening. Profit cashing then cropped up in parts of the list and dealings slackened for a while. Advances ranging from fractions to two points, however, were well distributed near the fourth hour.

While bullishness was the rule, commitments were trimmed here and there in preparation for the extra long weekend. Principal exchanges will recess Monday for Memorial Day.

Bonds were selectively improved. Commodities were narrow.

Canadian issues were firm with Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, McIntyre, Hiram Walker, Distiller Seagram and Lake Shore rising fractions of a point.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—The few cattle offered sold at steady prices up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Veal calves and hogs were steady. No sheep or lambs were offered. No cattle were unsold from yesterday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattel 80; calves 70; hogs 230.

Weighty steers sold at 11.75-12.50, butcher steers 11.25-12.25, heifers $11.50-11.75, fed yearlings $12-12.75, a few butcher cows $8-$9.50.

Veal calves brought $15-$16 for choice with other grades selling downward to $11.

Hogs sold at 16.75 dressedweight.

No Reduction In Value of Gas Ration Coupons

Vancouver, May 27 (CP)—Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle, through his regional representative, Maj. P. A. Curry today described as "made out of whole cloth" reports that the value of gasoline ration coupons might be reduced from three to two gallons.

"Mr. Cottrelle authorized me to say that as far as he knew—and such orders are issued either by him or the Ministers of Munitions and Supply—that the story concerning the reduction in gasoline coupon values was just made out of whole cloth," Maj. Curry said. Previously he had stated on behalf of Mr. Cottrelle that "no such statement has been made by the oil controller's office".

The report appeared in a Toronto paper (Telegram) yesterday and was attributed to "advices from responsible sources in Ottawa and Toronto."

Interment was made in Thomasburg cemetery.

SAYS BRIGHT LIGHTS CAUSED ACCIDENT

When the bright lights of oncoming motor vehicles shone on him Ross Lott, R. R. No. 7, Belleville, became blinded and was unable to see two women walking along the highway immediately east of the Trenton R.C.A.F. station late Wednesday night with the result Lott's car struck one of the women knocking her to the pavement.

Her name was given as AW1 Irene Cheeko, of the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) stationed at Mountain View. The air woman sustained a deep laceration of the head and was rendered semi-conscious but later was revived in the nearby R.C.A.F. hospital. Traffic Officer H. Caldwell investigated and reported that undoubtedly Mr. Lott had been blinded by the lights of oncoming vehicles and was unable to see the two air women walking along the highway. The second girl escaped uninjured.

Warning of Jap Invasion Turned Over to Officials

Washington, May 27.—(AP) — Testimony that Japan would seek a separate peace with China and attack the United States this summer was referred to the United States High Command today by Chairman Samuel Dickstein (Dem.-N.Y.) of the House of Representatives Immigration Committee.

The testimony came from the same man who gave Dickstein's committee two months' advance warning of Japanese plans to attack Pearl Harbor—Kilsoo K. Haan, Washington representative of the Korean National Front Federation and Sino-Korean Peoples' League.

"If only 50 per cent of what Haan told us yesterday is true", Dickstein declared, "this government should heed his warning".

Haan's information so far, Dickstein said, has been "fairly accurate" and has been reported to the proper officials.

Haan told the Committee yesterday that Premier Tojo disclosed during a party at his Tokyo residence that Rear Admiral Katsutaro Miyuazaki had been chosen to command an invading naval force against the United States and that Gen. Shunroku Hata was to head a landing expedition.

Gist of speculative talks in Japan, Haan said in a prepared statement, was that Miyazaki would have at his command 60 per cent of the Imperial Navy in the planned attack, that General Hata would have more than 100,000 picked troops from the Kwantung army; and that submarine and air strength would play the most important part in the attack.

CONSUMPTION OF FATS

Under normal conditions the people of Canada consume, exclusive of butter, about 450 million pounds of fat annually. Imports of oils and fats in peacetime amounted to approximately 200 million pounds every year. Most of these imports were from countries in the Southern Pacific and Africa. With these imports now practically cut off, they must be made up to a considerable extent from such crops of flaxseed, soybeans, sunflowers, and rape seed.

FABRICS FROM MILK

A fibre is now being made from milk casein. It is warm, soft, resilient and will drape well. It can be added to rayon and cotton to improve their adaptability. Most of the important uses of the new fibre made from milk are being employed in women's dress fabrics, shirtings, sweaters, and men's hosiery.

HAD SO MUCH GAS, BLOATING ACIDITY WAS AFRAID TO EAT

"Food Lay Like a Heavy Lump in My Stomach," Says This came Sore and Painful; Re-Woman; Limbs, Back Be-
joices Over Grand Relief
Obtained by Taking Syntona.

"During the past year I suffered so badly with gas, bloating and acid indigestion I was afraid to eat," said Mrs. Minnie Arneil, 809 Queen's Avenue, London, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"Food just lay like a heavy lump in my stomach. I'd belch up hot, sour liquids and have awful dizzy feelings with spots darting before my eyes. Rheumatic pains set in my limbs, joints and muscles and I got a dull aching pain right across the small of my back. Some days I felt stiff and sore all over. This condition got me very worried and nervous and I was often so upset at night that I didn't get to sleep for hours after going to bed.

"After trying one thing and another without getting any benefit, I read about Syntona and wasn't taking it long before my food began to digest better. I was free from all that gas, bloating and acidity. Then, as I kept taking it, my nerves became relaxed so I could rest better. Gradually the aches and pains left me and I found I wasn't having that dizziness or sickening spots before my eyes. Now I enjoy all my meals and feel more healthy and energetic than I did in a long time. I highly recommend Syntona to other people who are suffering from troubles such as I had. It is a fine medicine."

MRS. MINNIE ARNIEL

The good results obtained by taking Syntona are vouched for by hundreds of men and women throughout this city and vicinity. It is made entirely from good old herbs, roots and barks and contains no harmful drugs.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

CHURCHILL MAKES HIS FAMOUS VICTORY SIGN IN WASHINGTON

Health of the British People Never Better Despite Rationing Says Rt. Hon. M. MacDonald

Ottawa, May 27—(CP)—In his first press interview since his recent visit to Britain and Washington, Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, United Kingdom High Commissioner to Canada, said that in spite of severe rationing the health of the British people has never been better.

While the British had less food, the quality was better from a nutritional standpoint. Results had been so satisfactory that the people would be quite prepared to continue to ration themselves after the war, until such time as the European countries have been fed, Mr. MacDonald said.

While in England he spent considerable time in the Health Ministry, going into the studies that have been made of the vital statistics. The figures were "amazing."

They showed the birth rate was the highest for ten years. Despite the increase in births the infant mortality rate was the lowest ever recorded in the country's history. The maternal mortality rate also was the lowest ever recorded and the general death rate equalled the lowest record.

An active campaign against tuberculosis was greatly reducing the ravages of that disease. A miniature X-ray machine had been developed during the past few months and every person joining the services was examined. Many incipient cases were discovered and cured.

Will Extend Service

As fast as these machines can be produced they are being put into use in industrial plants. After the war, Mr. MacDonald said, this health service will be extended to the entire population and every child would be examined.

"There has been a great reduction in mental and nervous disorders," the High Commissioner said. "Doctors who used to specialize on such maladies often have found nothing to do and have turned to other medical activities.

"One reason, in addition to the rations, is that everyone is so busy he hasn't time to worry about himself."

The British people are "well satisfied with the campaign in North Africa," he said, but "while they are looking forward to an invasion of Europe they realize that a reasonable length of time must elapse following the conclusion of the fighting in Africa."

The sinking of German U-boats was increasing and methods of hunting them down were being constantly improved. While no deterioration was shown in the courage of German submarine crews there was a noticeable lessening in the training and experience of U-boat personnel.

"We have turned the corner; we now are getting more new ships than we are losing," said Mr. MacDonald.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DEWITT MACKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The fierce defence being made by the Japanese in the face of the determined attack on their positions among the volcanic crags of Attu provides one of the outstanding lessons of the protracted battle on this tiny, fog-shrouded Aleutian Island.

It's a harsh reminder of what the Allies are up against in their task of smashing the Japanese nation as a whole.

Of course this isn't the first time that the Japanese have exhibited such tenacity.

Still, this Japanese characteristic has been brought closer to home in the hand-to-hand conflict on the queer little American possession.

There could be no more pointed warning of the need of the utmost speed in cleaning up Hitler so that the entire Allied striking-power can be turned against Nipponese at the earliest possible moment. The enormous force which the United Nations will be able to mass, when once the Axis is beaten, will do the job, but it becomes harder with each passing day allowed the Japanese to consolidate their positions.

The Nipponese are pretty well established in their main conquests, and it's going to take a lot to shift them. Their greatest strength outside of the Japanese mainland is in China and Manchuria. A Chinese commentator in Chungking recently estimated the Japanese forces in his country at 30 1-3 divisions—say about 458,000 men. The Japanese have been moving troops from Manchuria, but there may be another 500,000 or more there — watching Russia but available for service in China—and there are others in Korea.

The new Japanese offensive along the Yangtse River towards Chungking has raised a fresh problem for Chinese defence. This drive undoubtedly is aimed at depriving Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek of provinces which provide about his last remaining resources. It may even envisage capture of Chungking itself.

Should such a program be achieved it probably would give the Japanese control of all China. The Allies would have to start from scratch to fight their way onto the continent without the help of the Chinese army.

This would be a task which might take years, but for one thing. That is air power.

The further we go the more certain it seems that air power is going to provide the solution of the Japanese problem. Of course all the other fighting services will be involved in a big way, but in trying to look ahead it would appear that there's only one method to wind up the war with Japan in our time.

That is by bombarding and blockading the Japanese mainland into submission. This presupposes that air bases will be available to the Allies. It also presupposes that the Japanese armies of occupation in foreign territory would capitulate when the homeland has been pounded into impotence—though one admits that there might be the bare possibility of Japanese generals and their armies setting up a new regime on the continent and fighting it out.

Gardening Groups Plan Suggested As Means to Increase Food Supply

With continued wet weather lessening possibility of a normal crop this season and with all available excess food products needed for overseas shipment, a worthwhile suggestion which, if acted upon, would permit city residents growing practically all needed garden produce has been forwarded by Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local National Selective Service.

Inability of farmers to get their crops in will reduce production to such an extent that all produce grown will be needed for overseas shipment and therefore city residents should as much as possible make themselves self-supporting, according to Mr. Reed.

The plan forwarded shapes up in the form of a extensive community garden project which would see city residents group together to rent a field from a nearby farmer. On this field would be planted all needed vegetables with urbanites taking responsibility for their cultivation and harvest.

"Undoubtedly such a project would affect the Belleville market", stated Mr. Reed, "but in view of the serious need for food overseas and the possible decreased production in Canada, I think something of this nature should be attempted."

Choose Land Near City

Fields close to the town or city should be chosen when contemplating such a community garden project so that transportation difficulties would not be experienced in getting workers to and from work. Wednesday afternoons could be spent at the plot, according to the originator of the idea, while if necessary, places of business could be closed for one whole day each week to permit employees giving attention to their garden plot.

The idea is much wider in scope than that of a Victory Garden but would need considerable organization to assure smooth operation. It was suggested that some city organization take the matter up for further consideration.

The idea was thrown out by Mr. Reed merely as a suggestion, but it undoubtedly has possibilities. Does any city organization wish to sponsor such a community garden project enabling city residents to grow their own vegetables and allow farmers to confine their efforts for production of foods needed overseas?

OIL FOR MUNITIONS

Every ship, every tank, every piece of ammunition, large or small, must have a suitable protective coating of which linseed oil is the base. To meet the increasing demands for linseed oil, the 1943 objective produceion of oil-bearing linseed in Western Canada is 20,000,000 bushels, a 67 per cent increase over the 1942 production.

SPECIAL SESSION CALLED

Akron, O., May 26—(AP)—The executive board of the C.I.O., United Rubber Workers was called into special session today to consider a back-to-work plea of the United States War Labor Board as a union work stoppage that halted production in three of Akron's major companies spread to a fourth concern.

Sherman H. Dalrymple, the U. M.W.'s international president, summoned the union leaders after conferring in Washington with W. L. B. officials and obtaining a promise of a re-hearing on a wage decision.

ESSEN AND OTHER RUHR TARGETS HEAVILY HIT
U-BOAT LOSSES REPORTED AT RECORD HIGH

1,000 Tons Bombs Cascaded Into Krupp Works

Raid Officially Described As One Of 'Great Strength' By Air Ministry

23 BOMBERS LOST

London, May 28 (CP)—The greatest force of R.A.F. giant bombers ever to strike at Essen attacked that Ruhr city—the most bombed city in the world—in 10 powerful waves last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

It was the third massive bombardment of Germany in the last five nights.

Squadrons of Halifax and Wellington bombers of the R.C.A.F. shared in the raid, losing three planes. Altogether 23 bombers were lost. The raid followed a daring dusk attack on important German war industries in Jena.

The Air Ministry disclosed that in its new "wave-bombing plan" employed in the attack, bombers went over Essen in 10 waves over a 50-minute period. Each wave was of about equal strength, but the bomb loads were varied so that each load would cause the greatest possible devastation at successive stages of the attack.

Well over 1,000 tons of bombs cascaded into the Krupps munitions area alone, the Ministry said, adding that the vast concern has been practically at a standstill for at least a month during and after three terrific assaults of March and April.

The Canadian bomber group sent a good quota of planes to Essen with the R.A.F., and other Canadians flew in R.A.F. formations.

Twenty-three bombers were lost in the Essen attack and of these three were Canadian. It was reliably learned that the number of planes engaged in the assault was only slightly fewer than were used in the terrific 2,000-ton bombings of Dortmund and Duesseldorf.

The Air Ministry officially described the raid as carried out "in great strength."

Other British planes laid mines in enemy waters during the night.

Essen is the site of the sprawling Krupps Munitions Works, and is 22 miles northeast of Duesseldorf, which was blasted by the R.A.F. in a smashing assault the night before last.

Most Bombed City

Essen became the most heavily bombed city in the world after the last previous raid on April 30—an assault which brought the total weight of high explosive and fire bombs dumped on this target to more than 10,000 tons since the start of the war.

Last night's raid was the 56th on the city and was probably lighter than the 2,000-ton raid on Dortmund Sunday night and the Tuesday night attack on Duesseldorf, both described as "of very great strength."

The Berlin radio said that western Germany had been attacked and reported 20 British planes had been shot down.

The offensive was continued by daylight today, R.A.F. fighters sweeping out at dawn toward northern France.

Most Important in Germany

At Jena, the speedy Mosquitoes struck chiefly at the Carl Zeiss factory and the Schott glass works. First reports said both were sharply damaged. The works are rated as the most important of their kind in Germany.

Darting out 500 miles from their British bases, two formations of the Mosquitoes reached Jena just before dark and swooped down thru a balloon barrage to 200 feet to make the attack despite intense opposition from ground guns. Three bombers were lost.

POST-WAR PLAN FORMED

Johannesburg, May 28 (CP-Reuters)—The South African government was reported today to be preparing a $500,000,000 post-war employment program.

South Africa's four provincial administrations and local authorities would share in the proposed program, designed to absorb men leaving the armed forces and at the same time develop housing and extend public services.

Special Session Of Legislature Urged by Drew

Toronto, May 28 — (CP) — Ontario Progressive Conservative leader George A. Drew last night urged that a special session of the provincial legislature be called to repeal the "idiotic act" now on the statute books concerning the proxy vote of soldiers overseas and to substitute a method which would give a soldier the right to vote directly.

In an address before the Woodbine-Greenwood Progressive Conservative Association, Lt.-Col. Drew criticized what he called the Ontario Government's secrecy in steps taken to ensure the overseas vote, if an election should be held this summer. He said the present act was "absurd" and "unworkable" and claimed it would not permit a secret ballot.

"Mr. Nixon (Liberal Premier Harry C. Nixon) has left no doubt he is anxious to call an election as soon as possible," the Ontario opposition leader said in his prepared speech, "and this makes it extremely important to understand what has been done to prevent the members of the Armed Forces overseas having any effective vote whenever that election is called...

No Obligation to Federal Ballot

"When the Dominion election was held, in March, 1940, arrangements were made for ballots to be cast in the usual way in ballot boxes in Britain. I have not heard a single word of objection to the way in which that vote was carried out.

"But for some reason that has never been explained the government of the province of Ontario introduced an act which provided for an entirely different system and one which has never been tried under similar circumstances. Instead of following the method which had proved perfectly satisfactory from the point of view of the actual method of balloting...the Ontario act provides for a proxy by which the member of the armed forces overseas authorizes some one in Ontario to vote in his or her behalf."

Efforts to Unionize Paid Workers of the American Red Cross

New York, May 28 — (AP) — Efforts to unionize the paid workers of the American Red Cross have been in progress for five months, it was disclosed today.

Local 19 of the Social Service Employees' Union, a part of the Congress of Industrial Organizations United Office and Professional Workers of America, began the organization drive among employees exclusive of the nursing and professional staffs in January.

There are about 12,000 paid workers in the National Red Cross organization and about 3,000,000 volunteer workers.

IMPORTANT AXIS AIRFIELDS HIT IN HEAVY RAID

13 Enemy Fighters Destroyed in Combat And Many Damaged On the Ground

ITALIANS ADMIT LOSS

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 28—(AP)—Allied bombers and fighters slashed again yesterday at Villacidro and Decimomannu, important Axis air fields in Sardinia and the Island of Pantelleria, it was announced today.

Thirteen enemy fighters were destroyed in combat — all from a hornet's nest stirred up at Decimomannu—and many on the ground in the continued softening up of Italy's outer defences.

Speedy American medium bombers unloaded more than 4,000 fragmentation bombs over the Decimomannu airdrome. Crewmen said the explosives smashed a large number of planes on the ground and damaged many more.

Strong enemy fighter groups intercepted the bombers, and a fierce 18-minute running fight ensued. Bomb gunners shot down seven of the attackers. The fighter escort accounted for six others.

Allied Pilot Rescued

The only Allied loss in the battle, in which enemy fighters pursued the bombers to within 25 miles of the North African coast, was a fighter which fell into the sea. The pilot was rescued.

(The Italian communique, broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by the Associated Press, acknowledged Allied raids on Sardinia and Pantelleria, reporting some damage was done to buildings in the Sardinian attacks and that slight damage resulted in the Pantelleria raid.

(The Italians also said Sicily was struck by the bombers. Nine Allied planes were declared shot down during the day. Two Italian planes failed to return to their base, the communique said.

(Bizerte and Sousse were raided by Axis planes and harbor installations and a small tanker were struck, the Italians said.)

Fires and three large columns of smoke resulted from the bombing of Villacidro airdrome. Photographs showed many grounded aircraft to have been destroyed. Fighters escorting the bombers shot up a 150-foot freighter in the Gulf of Palmas.

Fighter-bombers twice raided battered Pantelleria, striking harbor defences and artillery installations.

An explosion was caused when a bomb hit among buildings at the edge of the harbor. In the evening, a small formation blasted targets on the island's south coast.

The attacks yesterday from the northwest African bases were a continuation of the finely co-ordinated Allied air offensive in which this command is teamed with the Allied Air forces of Malta and the Middle East.

The War Today—

Germany in Foggy Speculation Over United Nations' Plans

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Hitler's brain trust appears to be wandering about in foggy uncertainty regarding Allied intentions—a strained state of mind not relieved any by President Roosevelt's unamplified announcement that "the conference of the combined staffs in Washington has ended in complete agreement on future operations in all theatres of the war."

You couldn't blame Hitler if he got mad and called the war off, on the grounds that the enemy is using unfair tactics. As an illustration of the position, important circles in the Boche capital yesterday produced these divergent ideas:

Muddy Speculation in Berlin

The Allies are getting ready for invasion and Germany must go on the defensive. There will be a Russian offensive. There won't be a Russian offensive for at least a month. There won't be any Russian offensive this summer. Stalin won't attack the Nazis first because he isn't sure whether the Anglo-American combination is ready to invade Western Europe.

In the midst of this muddy speculation came word of the successful Red attack against the fiercely-defended German bridgehead on the Kuban delta opposite the Crimea. But while the Nazis knew that they had taken a beating, this didn't clarify the question of who is going to inaugurate the summer's grand slam — if any — and when.

Purpose of Red Drive

The Russian drive is for the purpose of ousting the Nazis entirely from this side gateway to the Caucasus. The Germans have been hanging onto this sector for dear life, in hope of being able to land an army there from the Crimea, which lies just across the narrow strait of Kerch.

Therefore the Red move is in the first place defensive. However, if successful it immediately puts the Russians in position to capitalize it in a major offensive against the entire right wing of Hitler's forces which have their main anchor at Rostov where the Don empties into the Sea of Azov.

That much isn't difficult to figure out. But is Stalin going to undertake a major offensive, or does he indeed intend to wait until Britain and the United States have clambered ashore in Western Europe.

Well, only the Allied High Command knows that — we hope. If Britain and the United States invade Western Europe in the near future, then it wouldn't be surprising if it has been agreed that Stalin shall hold his hand so that concerted offensive can be made on both the Eastern and Western fronts.

Situation in Last War

This would put Hitler in a position similar in some ways to that occupied by the Kaiser in the First Great War, that is, hurling troops madly back and forth across Europe to defend two fronts at once. However, Hitler suffers from a disability which didn't afflict his predecessor — Germany's transport system is pretty well shot to pieces now, and speedy movement of troops and supplies would be a tough problem. It would be particularly difficult because of the terrific air-power which the Allies can bring against communications — something the Kaiser didn't have to worry about greatly.

However, if the Allied High Command isn't prepared to undertake major invasions anywhere in Europe in the near future, then it's likely that Stalin will strike at Hitler, or that the latter will have one more great fling at trying to destroy the Red military machine. One would scarcely expect the eastern front to remain in a state of comparative inaction throughout the good fighting months of the summer.

Sparring Along 1,000-Mile Front

Actually Hitler and Stalin are sparring with each other up and down the entire length of the 1,000-mile battle-front, looking for an opening that may permit of more extensive operations. Hitler must be doubly cautious so as not to get caught with a big offensive in Western Europe while he is launching an attack against Russia.

Relentless Bombing of Axis Nations Will Be Pressed Home Eden Promises

Portsmouth, England, May 28 — (CP) — Foreign Secretary Eden declared today that Germany and Italy would be bombed "until the utter defeat of the Nazi and Fascist regimes and all they stand for."

He emphasized particularly that Italy "now lies wide open to air attack" and that attack "will be pressed home by all the means in our power."

"We are relentlessly determined to destroy Fascism and prosecute the war against Italy with all the force we possess, so long as Italy fights Hitler's war," the Foreign Secretary declared at a "Wings-for-Victory" luncheon here.

Mr. Eden said "We have not forgotten" it was Mussolini who asked Hitler for the privilege of sharing in the bombing of London.

"It is for the Italian people to decide whether they are to endure this bombardment to the bitter end and when it is to stop," he added.

"We shall bomb the Fascist and German military machine wherever it is to be found. We are not prepared to lend an attentive ear to suggestions from any quarter that bombardment from the air is a weapon that shall be yielded up. Least of all are we impressed by any belated conversion to this view. Some of those who cry out against bombing were conspicuously silent when the cities of Britain were being bombarded and destroyed by all the power which the Luftwaffe could muster.

"Today it is the turn of Germany and Italy.

"We did not start this business. It was Goering who gloated over the destruction of Warsaw and Rotterdam...now is the biter bit, and the process will continue until the utter defeat of the Nazi and Fascist regimes and all they stand for. Let no one have any illusions about that."

Situation at Sea Improves

Turning to sea warfare, the Foreign Secretary said the battle against U-boats "continues to be encouraging."

"Our own new construction of merchant ships is still mounting," he said. "Our merchant shipping losses are still decreasing and sinkings of U-boats are still increasing ...more than that I cannot say.

"The Battle of U-boats still rages. It is not yet decided but at least we feel better about it than we have done."

RUSSIANS SILENT ON GERMAN STORY OF KUBAN BATTLE

Sharp Land and Sea Battles Reported With Germans Losing 64 Planes

ATTACKS FAIL

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, May 28—(AP)—Sharp land and air battles are raging in the Kuban Delta area after a period of comparative quiet, but neith official Russian disclosures nor dispatches from the front today confirmed German reports that a Soviet army of 150,000 is attempting an all-out smash to Kerch Strait.

Both the midnight and the noon communiques were silent on the fighting northeast of Novorossisk, where the German radio declared at least ten Russian divisions and a great wedge of tanks are trying to batter through a narrow sector under cover of more than 200 planes.

The German broadcast said the Russians scored temporary gains yesterday which were wiped out in German counter-attacks by nightfall.

Front line dispatches, however, declared the Red Army had repelled a big group of enemy infantry trying to improve its positions and said the Red Air Force and the German plane fleet were fighting great battles in the same area.

West of Rostov the Red Army was reported to have taken the initiative in violent local combats whic hresulted in the capture of an important hill and a general im- The Germans made repeated but provement of the Russian position. vain attempts to recapture the hill, it was said.

London, (CP)—The Red Army is smashing with 150,000 troops and masses of planes, tanks and guns in an all-out effort to drive to Kerch Strait, separating the Caucasus from the Crimea, the German radio declared today, but asserted that initial Soviet gains yesterday had been wiped out.

28 TONS OF BOMBS DROPPED ON LAE BY U. S. AIRMEN

Allies Determined to Blockade Base for Final Assault

LARGE FIRES STARTED

By TOM YARBROUGH
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 28—(AP)—The havoc wrought by more than 28 tons of bombs attested today to the Allies' determination to blockade and deplete the Japanese garrison at Lae, New Guinea, with their air force until the day its weakened defences can be overrun by ground troops.

Bombers have kept Lae, first occupied by the enemy Jan. 25, 1942, poorly supplied for many months by striking at shipping bound for it across the Bismarck Sea at New Guinea coastal roads over which it could be provisioned from bases to the northwest. But yesterday's big raid by swarms of medium and heavy bombers and Beaufighters was the first heavy one poised directly at Lae itself.

Lae is only about 20 miles along the Huon Gulf coast from Salamaua. And Allied ground troops, infiltrating from the scenes of their Papuan Peninsula conquest some 150 miles to the southeast, stand less than 15 miles from Salamaua.

Chary About Risking Ships

Since a Lae-bound convoy of 22 ships was destroyed completely by Allied bombers in March, the Japanese have been chary about risking ships for that purpose. But earlier this week, the same stormy weather which has grounded most Allied fliers provided the enemy with cover for such an undertaking.

Lae was due a raid.

First the Beaufighters came over. At a cost of one fighter, they dove through anti-aircraft fire to pour 12,000 rounds of ammunition from the height of tree tops upon Japanese, their buildings and the anti-aircraft batteries.

WAY TO COMPLETE ALLIED VICTORY NOW MAPPED OUT

End of Churchill-Roosevelt Talks Is Viewed As Marking Final Phase of War

STATEMENT GIVEN

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 28 — (CP) — Observers took it for granted today that the way to a complete Allied victory has been mapped out in detail as Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt ended their strategy conferences here yesterday with the simple but pointed announcement they were in "complete agreement."

In a brief, 22-word communique President Roosevelt announced the completion of the Washington conferences between himself, Prime Minister Churchill, their military advisers and other leaders, including Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Canadian Chiefs of Staff.

The President's statement said only this:—

"The conference of the combined staffs in Washington has ended in complete agreement on future operations in all theatres of the war."

Vital Questions Discussed

The very wording of the President's statement, however, suggested that when the conference began there were questions of vast strategical importance which required answering to the satisfaction of both British and American leaders. The fact that, as Mr. Roosevelt indicates, they have now been answered leaves no doubt that decisions of supreme importance have been made.

That the war against Japan receives the fullest consideration was made clear by Mr. Churchill in his address to the United States Congress. Yet it was equally clear that there had been no change in the grand strategy previously agreed upon to smash Germany first and Japan second.

In the absence of any hints as to what the conference accomplished in either the military or political fields, informed persons here speculated on the probability of several future developments:—

The present strategical bombing of Germany will be followed by an Allied invasion of the continent this summer. It will develop at times and places where the Axis least expects it.

The war in Europe is expected to be won by sometime next year at the latest, but the conflict in the Pacific may run on until 1945 or 1946, according to reliable estimates.

The forces available for use against Japan's Pacific flank have been greatly increased. President Roosevelt revealed at a recent press conference that the bulk of American strength already was in the Pacific.

Byrnes Named to Direct All Efforts Of U. S. Behind Battle Fronts

Washington, May 28—(AP)—President Roosevelt today named James F. Byrnes head of a Compact War Mobilization Board to direct all United States victory efforts behind the battle fronts.

Tersely, the President summed up its duty as to keep "both our military machine and our essential civilian economy running in team and at high speed."

Byrnes in effect thus became what Washingtonians quickly labelled a czar of czars in the war effort.

The Board, small in numbers but large in authority, was told to unify activities of federal agencies and departments "engaged in or concerned with production, procurement, distribution or transportation of military or civilian supplies, materials and products and to resolve and determine controversies between such agencies or departments."

The power to resolve inter-agency disputes means that Byrnes will be the arbiter in any future controversies such as that between Rubber Director William M. Jeffers and the under-Secretary of War, Robert Patterson.

There has been recurring talk in congress, and bills have been introduced in congress to achieve the end, that there should be some central, overall agency tying in the various efforts of making war at home. President Roosevelt's action followed the general pattern, although not specifically going so far as some have suggested in calling for such things as war board with powers to include the drafting of war workers.

Byrnes' board is composed of these officials:-

War Secretary Henry L. Stimson, Navy Secretary Frank Knox, Chairman Harry L. Hopkins of the Munitions Assignment Board, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board, and Judge Fred M. Vinson, who takes over the job Byrnes is leaving, the office of economic stabilization.

Byrnes is a onetime South Caroline Senator who left the supreme court to become director of economic stabilization. Apparently his further elevation leaves the President free to give more of his time to the unfolding problems of war strategy.

Improved Anti-Sub Methods Taking Heavy Toll of Foe

Sinkings by U-Boats In May Also Show Marked Decline Say London Papers

STORY NOT OFFICIAL

London, May 28 —(CP Cable)—The Daily Mail and Daily Express today gave front-page display to stories by their naval correspondents telling of considerably-decreased losses at sea.

The Daily Mail said that modified German claims of U-boat successes confirm news which is "admitted guardedly in Allied circles" that sinkings are steadily lessening while the destruction of U-boats is increasing.

The Daily Express said that sinkings by U-boats in May were at a record low while U-boat losses were at a record high.

Both papers attributed the improvement to a reorganization of anti-submarine methods, including the long-range aircraft patrol between Canada and Britain, more powerful escorts for convoys, and new devices.

Axis Claims Allied Ramp-Boats Hit In Tunisian Harbors

New York, May 28 (AP)—Allied ramp-boats or landing gear were reported in Axis broadcasts today to have been hit by German and Italian warplanes in raids upon the Tunisian harbors of Bizerte and Sousse.

Both ports are possible springboards for any invasion of Italy's outlying island defences, Sardinia, Sicily and Pantelleria.

A French-language bulletin broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press said a small tanker and "moyens de debarquement" — literally "means of landing"—were struck by the Axis explosives.

A Rome dispatch broadcast by the German radio reported ramp-boats were the targets.

Flood Waters Reach 42.4 ft. Peak, Start to Recede

Chicago, May 28 — (AP) — The Mississippi River crested at an all time record of 42.4 feet at Cape Girardeau, Mo., today and started to recede as thousands of farmers prepared to resume wartime food production.

Highest previous flood mark for the Mississippi was 42.19 feet, recorded in 1844.

At Cape Girardeau the river had dropped .15 foot from the crest and the city's power plant, with sandbags holding out 2½ feet of water, continued to operate.

Beardsdown, on the Illinois river, still faced the threat of a break in its concrete seawall, however, although the river was dropping slowly.

At St. Louis the Mississippi stood at 35.8 feet today, a 24-hour drop of 1.2 and 3.14 feet below the crest it hit Monday.

FIRE THREATENS ENTIRE VILLAGE

Dunbarton Calls for Fire-Fighting Aid from the Nearby Towns

Dunbarton, Ont., May 28. (CP)—Fire which broke out today in the general store and post office of S. J. Morish reached serious proportions and threatened the entire village, 20 miles east of Toronto. The blaze still was out of control at noon and volunteers joined town firemen in fighting the outbreak. The cause was not known.

Telephone connections with the village were severed shortly before noon but officials managed to get in calls for aid from nearby Pickering, Whitby and Scarboro.

Italy to Defend Sicily, Sardinia 'To the End'

London, May 28 — (CP) — Mussolini met secretly yesterday with his Fascist party chieftains and decided to continue resistance in Sicily and Sardinia "to the end," the Morocco radio said today in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press.

Reports from neutral centres told of heightened perturbation among the Italians.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

KNIGHTS HOLD SOCIAL EVENING

A social evening held in the Knights of Columbus rooms on Wednesday evening was a big success, enjoyed by everyone present. The main feature of the evening was the showing of the picture, "The Laying of a Pipeline From U.S. to Montreal" which is a very outstanding feature in engineering. It was presented by the Chrysler Corporation through the courtesy of Jack Trudeau. George O'Brien sang a solo. Community singing was enjoyed and refreshments served.

Word has been received from the Supreme Council that the Victory Bond drive for $25,000,000 has been oversubscribed to $89,000,000. George O'Brien, who attended the Ontario State Convention, which was held in Toronto, presented the guest speaker, Rev. Father Lanthier, with a cheque of $50 to the Radio League of St. Michael's in Toronto.

DISPLAY OF NORTHERN LIGHTS REPORTED

One of the most brilliant displays of "Aurora Borealis" more commonly known as northern lights, to be seen in some months was witnessed by late home-goers Thursday evening. According to reports the entire northern sky was brilliantly lighted with dancing and shooting light rays.

What is the omen associated with northern lights? One local resident was heard this morning to say that it means a bit more rain. And here it was thought there had been enough!

NO. 5 I.T.S. ON ROUTE MARCH THRU CITY

In their first official appearance downtown since the conclusion of the Fourth Victory Loan campaign almost two weeks ago, the entire personnel from No. 5 Initial Training School here paraded through the streets of Belleville on Thursday afternoon.

I.T.S. parades through the city were a fairly frequent sight during the Victory Loan campaign, with Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger giving the loan every support from a publicity standpoint. Yesterday, headed by their commanding officer, the boys marched straight up Bridge Street to Charles Street and back to Front Street by way of Victoria Avenue. Turning west on Bridge Street after coming down Front Street the parade proceeded directly up Murney Hill and back to the station by way of Highland Avenue.

CARS DAMAGED

Property damage resulted to two automobiles inside the Exhibition Park late Thursday night when sufficient room for clearance was not allowed by the drivers in passing. Mr. E. Crawford, 274 George Street, was proceeding into the grounds when he met another motor car driven by Bruce Bishop, 34 Catherine Street. The rear fender of Crawford's vehicle caught the rear fender of the car driven by Bishop with the result considerable damage followed. Constable Wm. Evans investigated and reported the incident to police headquarters.

WENT TO THEATRE ON WRONG NIGHT THUS MISSING $160

"Ohhh! I went to see the show the wrong night, I guess," lamented Miss Iola Burkholder, 21 Octavia Street, when told by the McCarthy Theatre management Thursday night that her name had been selected at the regular weekly Foto-Nite contest. Miss Burkholder saw the show at the McCarthy Theatre on Monday evening instead of Thursday and thereby missed the opportunity to collect $160 the amount of last evening's offer.

"Next week, we're going to get a winner if we have to select a dozen names," commented Mr. W. Fawcett, theatre manager, this morning, as he intimated next week's offer of $175 would be given away.

TWO NAPANEE BOYS REPORTED MISSING

Napanee police reported two small boys of that town were missing from their respective homes on Thursday. District police were asked to keep a lookout for 11-year-old William Johnston, who is described as being fair in complexion and wearing a red sweater. The other lad is 8-year-old Ernest Wheeler, who has brown hair and also was wearing a red sweater when he left home yesterday. Chief Thos. Moore of Napanee reported the boys missing.

BOYCE'S SERVICE STATION ENTERED; NO VALUABLES LOST

Would-be robbers broke and entered Boyce's Front Street Service Station Wednesday night and after ransacking the premises left without loot.

A large block of wood was used to break a side window permitting the robbers entrance. Cash drawers and office furniture were strewn about as the marauders searched unsuccessfully for valuables. Chief Probert and Plainclothes Constable investigated the attempted robbery and it was quite evident to all concerned that cash or gasoline coupons were the object of the break-in. Such valuable goods are secured in the large office safe at closing time, however.

'Cap' Bottum Gets 4¼ Lb. Speckled Trout in North

Returning from new successes in the northern districts, W. H. "Cap" Bottum, Catherine Street, well-known veteran follower of Isaak Walton, this week might well lay claim to be the champion speckled trout fisherman of the Belleville district and he has the goods to prove it.

Remaining after other members of a fishing party which visited Weslemkoon Lake district over the holiday had left, Mr. Bottum turned up in Belleville on Wednesday proudly displaying a four-and-a-quarter-pound speckled beauty which measured 19 inches in length and exactly one foot in girth. With two to three pounds being considered a real fine brook trout, Mr. Bottum's specimen is really a 'catch' and is adjudged by many to be a record for this district.

Mr. Bottum stated he caught the beauty by casting from a rock with an ordinary dew worm as bait.

Successful in winning the prize from the local Anglers' Club last year for the biggest speckled trout, a 3½ pounder, Mr. Bottum may be considered well on his way to repeating again this year.

Late JOHN KETCHESON
(Rawdon Township)

The funeral of John Ketcheson took place on Thursday afternoon, May 27th., from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Hiram S. Ashley, in the first concession of Rawdon Township. The service in the home was conducted by Mr. K. Stewart of West Huntingdon and at the cemetery in Roslin the service was conducted by Mr. K. Stewart and the Rev. G. J. Crabbe of Thomasburg.

The bearers were Messrs. Clarence Fitchett, Albert Reid, Earl Morgan, William Weir, Chancey Soules and McAdam Reid.

MRS. NICHOLAS R. HARTT
(Murray Township)

Trenton, May 28. (Special)—The funeral of Mrs. Nicholas R. Hartt took place on Thursday afternoon, May 27, from her late residence in Murray Township. The service in the home and at the graveside in St. George's Cemetery, Trenton, was conducted by the Rev. J. L. Hutchinson of St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton.

The bearers were Messrs. Kenneth Crews, Ernest Ireland, Norris Roberts, Albert Farrar, Gordon Flynn and John Alyea.

The late Mrs. Hartt, who died suddenly in the Kingston General Hospital on May 25, was in her 69th year. She was born in Murray Township and prior to her marriage she was Miss Bertha Elizabeth Hill, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hill. All her life was passed in the district where she was born and she was highly esteemed by many friends. In religion she was a faithful member of St. George's Anglican Church in Trenton and took an active part in the work of the parish.

LATE JAMES LAKE
(Rawdon)

Rawdon — The funeral of James Lake, well-known Rawdon resident was held in Bethel United Church on Wednesday afternoon, May 26th, with a large concourse of relatives and friends in attendance. The service was conducted by the pastor Rev. T. F. Townsend B.A., B.D., assisted by Mr. Belch of Stirling. Bethel choir contributed "The Old Rugged Cross" and Mrs T. F. Townsend sang "Good-Night and Good-Morning", one hymn, "Abide With Me" was used.

The bearers were Messrs. John Green, John Bateman, Fred Sutherland, Roy Wellbourn, John Thompson and Will Drewery.

Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket. Interment was made in Bethel cemetery.

James Lake was sixty-eight years of age and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Lake, Oak Hills. He passed away Sunday evening, May 23rd, and had been in ill-health for some time.

He leaves to mourn his wife, formerly Miss Lillian Hagerman; three sons, Ernest, Rawdon; Wesley, Oak Hills and Everett at home, and one daughter (Alice) Mrs. Ross Ketcheson, Moira, and four grandchildren; four brothers, Alfred, Oak Hills; Samuel, Stockdale; Robert, Rawdon; Charles, Trenton; four sisters, Mrs. Adolphus Sharp, Stockdale; Mrs. Robert Wallace, Wellman's; Mrs. Joe Broadworth, Stirling and a sister who resides in the United States.

WILLIAM J. PARNELL
(Eldorado)

Madoc, May 28 — William J. Parnell, a former Canadian National Railways employee, died very suddenly at his home at Eldorado on Wednesday, May 26th.

The late Mr. Parnell was born 75 years ago in England and as a small boy came to Canada with his parents who made their home at Eldorado, where he has lived ever since. At the age of fourteen years he was employed by the C.N.R. and worked on the construction of the road from Trenton to Bancroft. He remained with the C.N.R. for over fifty years retiring in 1932.

He was well known and highly respected throughout the community. He was a member of Madoc Masonic Lodge No. 48, A. F. & A.M. and also a member of I.O.O.F. No. 179. In religion he was a member of Fox's United Church.

He is survived by two daughters, (Evelyn) Mrs. Leslie Robinson, and (Keitha) Mrs. Stanley Moorcroft of Eldorado; one son, Harry, of Belleville; one brother, Alfred, of Eldorado. His wife predeceased him nine years ago. The funeral was held from his late residence under the auspices of I.O.O.F. on Friday at 2 p.m. to Fox's United Church. Interment in Fox's Cemetery.

MRS. J. W. STAGG
(Brockville)

The death of Josephine Mabel Deacon, wife of the late James Wellington Stagg, postmaster of Brockville, occurred on Wednesday afternoon at her home, 10 Garden street, after a considerable period of ill health.

The late Mrs. Stagg was born in Brockville, a daughter of the late Joseph Deacon, K.C., police magistrate of Brockville and his wife, Amanda Teskey, and resided there continuously. While her health permitted, she was actively connected with a number of women's organizations and in 1923 was elected Regent of the General Brock Chapter, I.O.D.E. She held that office for three years when ill health necessitated her resignation and she was presented with a life membership. During the Great War period she was one of a committee of two belonging to the chapter which had charge of production, collection and forwarding of soldiers' comforts. As a result of their efforts, fully 5,000 pairs of socks were knitted and distributed amongst the troops overseas.

Mrs. Stagg was also an active worker in the Women's Auxiliary of the General Hospital and a devoted member of Wall Street United Church; she was a life member of its Women's Association. In her more active years she was a remarkably graceful skater and was particular fond of that recreation.

Mrs. Stagg is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Matthews, of Ottawa and Miss Evelyn Alexandra Stagg, of Brockville and a former teacher at Belleville Collegiate Institute; three sisters, the Misses Laura E., Mary A. and Lina Deacon, all of Brockville; and one brother, Charles R. Deacon, K.C., Master of Land Titles, Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

The funeral service is being held at the family residence Friday afternoon with burial following in the family plot in Oakland cemetery.

MRS. MORLEY C. POTTER
(Sidney Township)

After an illness of several weeks' duration, Mrs. Morley C. Potter died at her home in the 1st concession of Sidney Township, near Jones' Creek, on Friday morning, May 28th.

The late Mrs. Potter was born seventy-five years ago at South Marysburg, Prince Edward County, and prior to her marriage she was Miss Sarah Eliza Smith. For some years she lived at Demorestville, Prince Edward County, and since 1905 she resided in Sidney Township. She was a member of the Christian Science Society and was highly esteemed.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Morley C. Potter; one son, Mr. Ernest Potter at home; two nieces, Mrs. Elvin MacElwell, Timmins and Mrs. William Dix, Belleville; one brother, Mr. James Smith, Belleville.

BUTCHER SHOPS ENJOY RESPITE

Demand for Cooked and Smoked Meats Shows Marked Increase

(By The Canadian Press)

Butcher stores across Canada enjoyed a respite today from the wave of buying that preceded inauguration of meat rationing in the Dominion but began to prepare for the difficulties that would arise when the coupon system of rationing got underway.

Many stores were without customers for several hours after opening but those with business said the major difficulty was in cutting meat to the exact coupon value.

A Toronto butcher said he could not afford to go one ounce over in his cuts "and if I go under, the housewife is going to be annoyed."

However, the system seemed to be working well and most purchasers seemed to have studied their meat charts sufficiently to buy what they wanted without difficulty.

Poultry in Demand

In Halifax retail meat dealers reported the situation today as orderly with little or no confusion about coupon values. Sales were about normal although the supply of poltry proved inadequate. The demand for cooked and smoked meats showed a marked increase today.

Throughout Ontario many butchers were idle as demand for meat tapered to meagre proportions. London merchants said their customers were "curiosity shoppers" who were buying meat only to find out how the system worked.

Pre-Ration Buying Heavy

In Galt, Woodstock, Brantford and Niagara Falls the consensus was that housewives had purchased sufficient during the Tuesday and Wednesday run to carry them over for the first few days of rationing.

In Cornwall, butchers were thankful for the drop in trade for stocks were seriously depleted in the rush yesterday. Sault Ste. Marie merchants said they did not expect any shortage because of the two-day meat-buying spree.

Many Kitchener meat retailers said they may as well have remained closed judging from what little business they did. The coupon system slowed service but there was no confusion. Chatham dealers said they expected rationing to cause little inconvenience and anticipated no objection from their customers.

A Toronto butcher, who waited patiently for three hours for his first customer, said: "It's what we expected. Most housewives already have their Sunday roast. They just got it earlier and won't feel the effects of rationing until next week".

Some butchers were sold out yesterday and stood behind empty counters today while others had little left after the close of business yesterday.

Washington, May 28 —(AP)— R.C.A.F. pilots flying United States Warhawks, bombed the main camp on Japanese-held Kiska Island May 25, the Navy Department announced today.

Hits were scored in the vicinity of enemy gun emplacements and other areas.

Athletic Bars and COSSA Crests Are Presented at Albert College, Aim of Athletics Is Defined

Amid a setting of highly decorative tables arranged by the House League teams, the annual athletic banquet officially culminated the athletic program for the year 1942-43 at Albert College. All the students were seated with their respective teams namely the DeRoches, Gra-Beaches, and the Bishops.

Jack Lougheed, president of the athletic directorate, acted as chairman, and welcomed Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Turner before the principal of the Belleville Collegiate Institute brought greetings from the sister school.

Mr. Bruce Attridge, honorary captain of the Gra-Beaches, entertained the gathering with piano selections. Thomas Ballantyne, captain of the DeRoches, proposed a toast to the College. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of the College, replied and reviewed again the purpose of the school and the place of athletics within it. A prize for the table decorated in the finest way was awarded to the Bishops by Mrs. Bert Howard.

The feature of the evening was the address given by Mr. Fred B. Rainsberry, honorary captain of the DeRoches. Mr. Rainsberry spoke on "The Aims of Athletic Achievement," seeking to explain certain principles that would lead to a higher spirited and principled House League. He sought out the need for fair play in the restraint of passion and feelings, perseverance and courage in the lesson of human endurance and self-sacrifice in the pursuit of noble ideals and team work in sport and later in the world team contesting the forces of evil. "The idealistic purpose of sport," Mr. Rainsberry pointed out," is to stimulate a spirit of good will, co-operation and fair play. Never should a player or team learn the rules in order to exploit them or play for wealth. Games become only spectacles and not events for spirited sportsmanship."

A vote of thanks was moved for the speaker by Bill Rankin, captain of the Bishops, who expressed appreciation for his work in the past three years and regret over the fact that Mr. Rainsberry was leaving at the end of the term. Mr. Rainsberry is the master in charge of the English and History department.

The second part of the program took the form of the presentation of athletic bars and C.O.S.S.A. crests. Mr. Paul R. Goyette, director of athletics, officiated at the presentation and reviewed the work of each. He congratulated the teams for their spirit of co-operation and commended the junior boys in particular, for their activity. He expressed a word of appreciation to the three House League honorary captains, Mr. H. B. Simpson, Mr. B. F. Attridge, and Mr. F. B. Rainsberry, for their support.

College colors and individual trophies along with the House League plaque will be presented at the convocation exercises on June 10th.

County Council Postponed One Week to Enable Members To Complete Spring Seeding

Motivated through a desire on the part of a majority of council members to catch up on late seeding operations, the 1943 June session of Hastings County Council has been postponed for one week and will convene on Tuesday, June 15th, instead of June 8th, it was stated this morning by Erle S. Denyes, county clerk.

Unusually inclement weather has retarded seeding operations throughout all parts of the county and with council membership comprised of a majority of agriculturists, it has been agreed by Warden Dr. S. S. Lumb of Bancroft to set the date for council meeting back seven days to permit the opportunity of completing seeding.

With council now scheduled to open near the middle of the month, the date is not unusually late as in instances in the past the session has been concluded near the 19th or 20th of the month.

With striking the equalization and setting the county tax rate scheduled for the agenda, the June session of county council is considered one of the busiest and most important of the year.

Parents Responsible For Child Attending School Court Told

The fact that parents are responsible for their children's attendance at school was brought to light in city police court today when Magistrate J. L. Lloyd informed parents they are solely responsible for their children's attendance at school.

The case came about when School Attendance Officer Fred D. Wiggins summonsed the parents of a lad into court charging them with neglecting or refusing to cause a child to attend school. The mother of the child stated she prepared the lad for school, but he failed to get there. Mr. Wiggins told the court the child in question had been absent 44 1-2 days since last September. His Worship, in his usual understanding manner, called the erring lad before him and after cautioning the boy put him on probation for three months. The lad promised the court he would attend school regularly in the future.

Inspector T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society, also presented a juvenile delinquency case when a 12-year-old boy was ordered to report to the police weekly.

DOORS FOUND OPEN

While patrolling the city early Friday morning, city police found two main doors leading into St. Michael's Academy wide open. Monsignor Nicholson was notified and later when all were satisfied the doors had been inadvertently left ajar the building was secured without further incident.

Picton and District

Picton, May 28. —Prince Edward County farmers today are taking stock following one of the heaviest rainfalls in years. During the downpour which began Tuesday and lasted until early Wednesday, a total of three and one-third inches fell in 24 hours. This makes a total of eight and one-half inches of precipitation during the month of May, with the weather still unsettled.

The situation is becoming very serious as far as the farmer is concerned. Very little Spring seeding has been done and this week's rain has further hampered operations. There will be a scarcity of feed grains this fall, no matter what can be sown now, agricultural authorities state. Peas, which should have been well started by now, are not yet sown in most cases, and many farmers are returning the seed to the canning factories. It is hopeless to expect a crop now, they state.

One of Ontario's chief tomato growing centres, Prince Edward County will have a much smaller acreage of tomatoes than previously expected, a survey reveals. To date practically no plants have been set out in the fields and it will be some time before the land is ready for them. Some fields are so wet that it would be weeks before it would be ready for use and farmers are seeking drier land.

The wet weather has been hard on the plants in the cooling beds, and the general quality is not high. Should the frosts hold off this fall there would be a fairly good yield, but with the late Spring season, early frosts would be disastrous. Farmers were not pleased with the price set this year, it being two dollars a ton less than requested, and they point out that this was necessary as cost of plants and labour has increased.

The heavy rains washed out considerable seeding which had been done and farmers fear that potatoes already planted may rot. Seed is very difficult to secure here. at any price.

The most cheerful aspect of the crop situation is the promise of a big crop of hay and good pastures. The latter would mean an increase in milk production at a time when it is urgently needed, as production of cheese has taken a decided slump in Prince Edward this Spring.

Apple orchards promise well but the rain is also making it difficult for farmers to carry out their spraying programs.

Not in seventeen years has water been so high in the Bay of Quinte, the inland lakes of the county or in the rivers. This week's rain flooded many cellars in town, gouged huge holes on the sides of several streets where torrents of water raced toward the town marsh during the storm, and flooded gardens near the creek which flows through the town.

The dock of the C.S.L. is covered by more than a foot of water and ships can only be loaded by using trestles. The famed Outlet Beach is completely covered by water and some cottages have suffered. Marshes, usually dry at this time of year, are miniature lakes.

Unless a prolonged dry period comes, it will be a disastrous year for farmers, authorities state.

Large Crowd Attends Army Hospital Dance

Picton, May 28.—The "At Home" dance given in Picton Armouries, Tuesday night by the 13th General Hospital, R.C.A.M.C., C.A. (A.), attracted a capacity crowd despite the heavy rain and those attending were well repaid since it was one of the most enjoyable dances here in some time.

The local public turned out to extend a welcome to the unit which is completing its training here before proceeding overseas. Joining them were members of the C.W.S.F. under Capt. Harden, Belleville; Nursing Sisters from Trenton R.C.A.F., military men and their wives and friends from Kingston, Belleville, Trenton, Wellington, Mt. View and other points. The R.A.F. was largely represented and the Navy was there too. Every branch of the Service added the color of its uniforms and along with formal and informal dresses of the ladies combined to create a colorful scene.

Capt. Harvie was a capable master of ceremonies and had charge of the Grand March and novelties which provided much fun. Lieut. Wilson was convener of the dance, all arrangements being carried out perfectly.

The dancers were loud in their praise of the 6 Repair Depot (R.C.A.F.) 11-piece orchestra, of Trenton. Billed as Eastern Ontario's most versatile dance band, they left no doubt as to their ability. They played it hot and fast for the jitterbugs or slow and sweet for the waltzers. Their variations made music that kept the floor continually crowded.

Through the kind permission and co-operation of Group Captain Keddie and Flt.-Lt. Mitchell, this band gave their services gratis for this occasion. The objective of the dance was to raise funds to purchase surgical supplies surplus to establishment and the band's co-operation will greatly aid the R.C.A.M.C. in their endeavor. A return visit of this band is keenly anticipated, and it was announced that another dance will be held in the next month.

The Armouries was gaily decorated with flags, pennants which denoted the R.C.A.M.C. had greatly exceeded its Victory Loan quota, patriotic emblems and Union Jack Shields. Hand-painted scenery from the Regent Theatre formed a background for the orchestra, with strings of flags on either side.

The patrons were Col. L. A. Clark, M.C., Group Captain Keddie, Flt.-Lt. Mitchell, Major W. G. Grothier. Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I.O.D.E. assisted with the sale of tickets and dispensed soft drinks from a tulip centred table.

Prizes were donated by the Canadian Department Store, S. E. Teasel, Fred Stafford, N. Yanover, A. Lipson, G. E. Fraser & Sons, Stedman's Store, Wright's Drug Store. The public address system was provided through the kindness of W.O. Snetsinger, I.T.S., Belleville. This co-operation is greatly appreciated and officers and men of the unit were very pleased at the support given them. The R.A.F. cancelled their regular dance and loaned decorations.

Seven hundred people invested Dimes in the Dime for Victory draw which took place at the Regent Tuesday night owing to the Monday holiday. Future draws will be on Monday nights. There were fourteen prize winners with Miss Marguerite McNally, Picton, winning the $20 certificate.

Other winners were Eddie VanDusen, Wellington; Robert Semple, R. 2, Demorestville; Isabel Clarke, Picton; Charles Bailey, Wellington; Frank Dunning, Picton; G. Upton, Wellington; Mrs. H. Channell, Hillier; Leonard Jones, Picton; Mrs. F. Snider, Lake-on-the-Mountain; C. J. Walters, Picton; G. A. Anderson, Waupoos; John B. Dunkley, Picton; Mrs. Helen M. Lindsay, Picton.

In a thought for today Phil Dodds said that it may be raining here more than we like, but at least it is raining liquid rain. Let us thank God that we are not experiencing showers of bombs and incendiaries as many cities are. Keep the bombs from Canada by investing in War Saving Certificates. All money collected in the Dimes for Victory envelopes is awarded in War Saving Certificates, and the speaker urged that everyone support this plan by investing a dime weekly.

Canada Urges Abolition of Tariffs As Solution of Recurring Problem Of Food Scarcity and Overproduction

Hot Springs, Va., May 28.—(CP)—Abolition of tariffs and restrictive measures as one means of obtaining a solution to the recurring problem of scarcity and overproduction in foods was urged today by the Canadian delegation to the World Food Conference in session here.

In a 1,300-word memorandum to the conference, the Canadian delegation also praised as worthy of examination the British proposal to establish internationally-financed buffer stocks of primary products built up in years of plenty to tide the world over in lean years. This proposal was termed of importance to Canada which, the memorandum said, "has suffered in the past from disastrous fluctuations in the prices of these products".

Buffer Stocks

"If, in fact", the memorandum continued, "feasible proposals for moderation of price fluctuations by the management of buffer stocks, internationally-held and financed, can be developed, they would supply an element of stability to the Canadian and other similar economies which it would be very difficult to achieve in any other way.

"Measures for dealing with them must extend beyond the field of primary products. Without such measures agricultural depressions will offer stubborn resistance to policies directed to the expanding of employment. But agricultural depressions will become less likely to occur in the future if the expectations of this conference can be realized and the importance of the device of buffer stocks will be correspondingly reduced".

International Approach

Urging an international approach to the problems arising from the production and distribution of agricultural products, the Canadian memorandum said the experience "of the period between the two wars has shown unmistakably that purely national approaches to the problems. . . . Cannot be successful; except in rare instances". The problems themselves are international, it said, "and in many of their aspects international treatment alone can deal adequately with them".

The Canadian delegation also suggested that an "appraisal of the deficiencies of mankind as regards food and other supplies" be undertaken in the near future as a guide for post-war reconstruction and later as a goal for distribution. It said the application of modern discoveries in nutrition "to the feeding of all peoples would reduce the burden of disease and would promote health, mental alertness and working efficiency".

two enemy fighters and shot up communication targets. One pilot was credited with attacking two locomotives, bombing canal lock gates, damaging two tugs and a barge and strafing a contingent of German troops.

Britain itself passed the night without a single assault.

The new R.A.F. attacks on the Reich sustained a great air offensive which reached new heights in the record-breaking assault on Dortmund Sunday night and the terrific hammering of Duesseldorf Tuesday night.

The attack on Jena was the second of the war, but the night raid on August 17, 1940, was on a small scale.

In addition to the Zeiss and Schott works, other plants producing scientific instruments, chemicals and machinery vital to the Nazi war effort are located there.

Trip of Over 1,000 Miles

The raid, involving a round trip of more than 1,000 miles, was one of the longest ever made by the wooden Mosquitoes, and the Air Ministry said it was carried out only through "skillful navigation in difficult conditions."

Meanwhile, award of the Victoria Cross to Acting Wing Cmdr. Guy P. Gibson, 25-year-old leader of the raid on the Mohne and Eder dams in Germany's Ruhr Valley the night of May 16, made him the R.A.F.'s most decorated man of the war.

It was also announced that 33 other fliers on the dam-bursting raids would receive decorations among them six Canadians and an American in the R.C.A.F.

The Canadians and their awards are:—

Bar to D.F.C.—FO. D. R. Walker, Blaimore, Alta.

D.F.C.—PO. G. A. Deering, Toronto and PO. H. T. Taerum, Calgary.

Conspicuous Gallantry Medal — Flt. Sgt. K. W. Brown, Moose Jaw.

D.F.M.—Flt. Sgt. D. A. Maclean, Toronto, who formerly taught school at Powassan, Ont., Sgt. S. Oancia, Stonehenge, Sask.

The American, Flt.-Lt. Joseph C. McCarthy of Long Island, N. Y., was awarded the D.F.C.

HONORS ALREADY TO NEW AIRPORT IN NORTH WILDS

Toronto Sergeant Wears British Empire Medal for His Work—There's Good Fishing When You Know How Says U. S. Colonel

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose Airport, Labrador, May 28. (CP)—Sgt. R. S. Hole of Toronto, received the British Empire Medal from the governor-general at an Ottawa investiture last month. How he won it is the story of one incident in the establishment of this big new Canadian airbase.

Last June the first platoon of infantry assigned to defence duties here was flown in from Canada. One of the men in this first group was Sgt. Hole, a member of the Royal Canadian Engineers. "The plane ran into difficulty", said the Toronto officer who commands the army establishment, describing the incident to visiting newspapermen.

"The men knew for an hour they were going to crash. Their spirit was absolutely marvellous, and Sgt. Hole must get much of the credit. He kept them busy jettisoning cargo and got them singing songs.

Made Forced Landing

The plane made a forced landing 100-odd miles away from here. No one was hurt. Cpl. S. D. Miller, a New Brunswick woods foreman, took charge of the party, then because of his experience in outdoor living.

"We sent planes out immediately and flew them in", said the army commander. "We commended everyone. Sgt. Hole got the B.E.M."

Sgt. Hole was still on leave in Toronto when the first group of Canadian newspapermen to visit the base arrived.

Army men aboard the plane with him and Miller were Pte. F. McClary, River Hebert, N.S.; Pte. Frank Daigle, Jacquet River, N.B.; Pte. John Saunders, (29 1-2 St. David St.) Saint John, N.B.; Pte. Moses Mabee, (Charlotte St.) Saint John, N.B.; Pte. "Fibber" McGee and a Pte. Parsons (hometowns unavailable).

Col. A. D. Smith, commanding officer here for the United States Air Transport Command, is an ardent trout fisherman. . .He's a bit perturbed because the natives know about gillnets but nothing about flies. . . .Actually, he says, he's "Kind of an amateur at fishing—maybe a little better than mill run", but he was good enough to do a spot of fishing for a movie once. . . He confesses he couldn't get a fish to bite so the thing was faked. . . . Smith threw his line across the pool and a colleague hooked on a fish. . . "I haven't been to a movie since", the colonel says.

REFUGEE

Evacuated from England, shipwrecked en route to Australia, Nigel Evans has had enough hardship in four years to last an entire lifetime. He is now in the United States and is pictured here with arms full of knitted garments made by the Campfire girls and the English Speaking Union, for the United Nations.

Bombing Must Continue

Deputy Prime Minister Attlee has made it clear that no attempts by neutral nations would divert the Allied Nations from their considered plans of bombing Germany.

When Germany and Hitler in the heyday of their feeling of security and absolute power bombed Britain they used the bombs to create terrorism, so they attacked civilians. But today when Britain and the United States have air superiority, these Allied Nations do not bomb indiscriminately but with great care to hit those targets which are most effective from the military point of view according to Mr. Attlee.

Certainly bombing is playing havoc with German industry and it is natural the Germans dread it for it is the stepping stone to further retribution on Germany.

Canadian Y.M.C.A. Overseas

Local Y.M.C.A. officials have received an extensive report on the year's operations of the Canadian "Y" overseas from the senior officer Capt. E. D. Otter. In the past year the total of 203,477 events were held with an aggregate attendance of 17,173,537. The first three years of war have brought 276,414 events with an attendance of over twenty-seven million. These services include entertainment, programs, religious meetings, educational events, sports programs, tea car service and personal services.

In addition to this the "Y" Beaver Club in London shows the number of program events as totalling 1,3340 with 316,686 persons taking part. No fewer than 1,937,040 men visited that club in 1942 and the number of services totalled 2,795,675.

There are 75 supervisors and executives engaged in the work, assisted by 353 airmen, soldiers and civilian helpers and 562 women volunteer workers. Over 1,000 centres are operated.

The equipment used in this work program includes 29 moving picture sound projectors, 481,000 pieces of sports equipment, 36,600 song and hymn books, 14,779,200 sheets of notepaper and 43,500,000 cigarettes.

These figures give some indication of the service which is being rendered by this organization and of the appreciation the men must feel that there are these means of looking after the welfare of the spirit of the men who have gone overseas.

Ban on Bells Lifted

The bells of Britain may ring at any time now, it was announced yesterday "for any purpose at any time provided their sound is not liable to be mistaken for a signal in connection with air raids or a gas attack."

These bells had long been silent and it was last November when the ban was lifted for a short time on a Sunday to honor the heroic deeds of the British Eighth Army in North Africa, especially in the battle of El Alamein. Some time ago the ban was lifted to allow ringing on Sundays and religious holidays.

But now they are free. Their freedom from silence is an assurance of the tremendous improvement in the United Nation's position. They are victory bells for victory has made them free.

Hospital

A square doorway cut in a hillside somewhere in Britain leads 70 feet below ground to an air-conditioned military hospital which can accommodate 400 patients, explains London Chronicle. Wards, dormitories for doctors and orderlies, an operating theatre, kitchens, administrative offices, dininig and rest rooms are all included. A tunneling company of the Royal Engineers completed the excavation in a little over three months. An enemy supply ship seized, by British naval forces provided the panels of grained plywood covering the corrugated iron roofing.

Rations and Health

Apropos of the rationing of meat in Canada, it is interesting to read the opinion of the Right Honorable Malcolm MacDonald that the health of the British people has never been better though there is severe rationing.

Rationing in Canada cannot be called severe. Previous rations have been satisfactory and now the amount of meat allowed will be ample for the necessary nourishment of those who work hardest.

Mr. MacDonald made a point yesterday that though Britain has less food the quality is better from a nutritional standpoint.

Others have pointed to the fact that there is a reduction in some maladies, there is practically no gout in Britain and that there is a marked decrease in overweight.

In the Old Days

(Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph)

Perhaps it is imagination but life in Canada seemed simpler and more spacious during even the '80s and '90s than it is today. People were by no means perfect, but, looking back, in general they appeared to be more kindly, more leisurely and much happier than are the present generation.

It is true that they lived in the golden age of a century of peace and material progress whereas we have known wars and depressions. But perhaps the real secret lies in the fact that with plain living went high thinking. The family still held together and found its enjoyments in the home more often than outside it. Religion was still a reality and no mere matter of form or custom.

Food Prices in 1920

(Chatham Daily News)

Rising cost of living, is a common subject of conversation in many households. In this connection it might be interesting—and probably consoling—to recall prices of food which prevailed just after the last World War.

A subscriber has sent us some information regarding the pricies of a few commodities in 1920. Here they are: Sugar, 26 cents a pound; butter, 65 cents a pound; cheese, 40 cents a pound; milk, 16 cents a quart; eggs, 60 cents a dozen; bacon, 56 cents per pound.

There is something to compare with the prices of foodstuffs today. Of course, it may be argued that there was plenty of produce to be had in 1920, even at the high prices but control of inflation in this war has certainly done a lot to prevent profiteering, and protect the interests of the ultimate consumer.

Widow Foils Piano Men

Piano men were foiled recently by an elderly widow in Glasgow, Scotland. When her son enlisted she could not keep up payments on the piano. A member of the firm called on her with removal men to take the instrument away. Down three flights of stairs they took it to an enclosed courtyard at the rear. Try as they might they could not get the piano out for a wall had been built after the "music box" was installed. Sweating and fuming, they carried the piano back to the widow's flat. At first she would not hear of its being reinstalled. 'You told me it was no longer my piano," she said. "I don't want it now." Finally she yielded and agreed to take it in. Three weeks later the piano firm received from her this note—"To storage of one piano, $8."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright 1943, Edgar A. Guest)

DOMESTIC SCENE

At evening when the meal is done,
And clear the board once more,
The men-folk gather every one
To talk their problems o'er.
Meanwhile the women, old and young,
Against the hostess' wishes—
And may their praises long be sung—
Go out and do the dishes!

When just a little lad was I,
Just as they do today,
When they had finished with the pie
The men-folk moved away,
And while they told brave tales anew
Of bears or flying fishes
The women-folk took time to do
The silver and the dishes.

In every home it stays the same,
In every land, I think,
The men-folk seek the hearth fire's flame
The women-folk the sink.
The men-folk sit about and smoke
And spend the time with fable,
And leave it to the women-folk
To clear the dining table.

But here's the dream of free men all,
The reason war is made;
That peace shall bless the dining hall,
And keep the table laid.
And when at last the war is won
And all its horror passes,
Then men will chat, with supper done,
While women shine the glasses.

Torpedo Misses Canadian Ship Bearing Troops

Toronto, May 28. (CP)—Lt.-Col. I. M. R. Sinclair, D.S.O., M.C., V.D., officer commanding the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders of the Canadian Army, said today that the vessel which brought the Hamilton Highland unit home from Jamaica was attacked by a submarine which fired a torpedo.

Col. Sinclair was quoted by the Toronto Star as saying:

"I didn't tell the men then—and most of them don't known yet—but we were attacked by a submarine which fired a torpedo.

"We were around 300 miles west of Jamaica and it was very dark. Suddenly some other officers and myself saw a torpedo coming in our direction, but it missed us by a mile . . . maybe not a mile, but 50 yards anyway.

"Only a few officers on the ship knew we had been attacked. The entire convoy followed a zig-zag course out from Jamaica. Some officers saw the torpedo coming and ordered the boat to take a particularly big swing to avoid being hit. No alarm was sounded because there was nothing to be gained, only make the men nervous. I'd say the submarine was a good distance off when it let the torpedo go".

The Dissolution of the Comintern

II

New York, May 28—As we have seen, the evolution of the Comintern dates from the coming to power of Stalin, when it became solely an instrument to avert successful war against Russia.

Stalin's theory was that capitalist-imperialist countries in combination would attack Russia.

He believed that Munich was confirmation of this. Immediately the pacifist activities of the Comintern began in all countries. It was Stalin's greatest concern then to split the "capitalist alliance," even by signing a "pact of friendship" with Hitler. In this case Stalin behaved as any shrewd Nationalist leader would behave, but not as the leader of the Comintern could be expected to behave. The various Communist parties in backing this move revealed themselves as exclusively concerned with the welfare of the Soviet Union, even at the sacrifice of every revolutionary principle of their own countries.

But history did not develop either according to the pattern of Trotsky or Stalin. It burst all preconceived theories.

Suspected "Phony War."

During the first eight months of the war Stalin suspected a "phony war." The Russians had the same concept as Hitler: that, with the collapse of France, Britain would make a deal with Germany. So, during this period, United States Communists were attempting to keep this country disarmed and out of the war.

Hess flew to the British Isles with the object of winning British collaboration for war against Russia. The speculation of Stalin, as well as of Hitler, was that Britain would act in the interests of the "ruling class," and not according to larger national interests. Both were wrong.

But, by this, the concept of the Comintern was also proved wrong. For the Comintern had accepted this split between "Liberals" and "Tories" and had tried to exploit it. But the common British national interests prevailed.

Misestimating Britain, no less than Stalin misestimated her, and too late to change his plans, Hitler attacked Russia and a "Tory" Prime Minister immediately accepted an alliance with Russia.

History will prove that this was the doom of Hitler. But it was also the doom of the Comintern.

For, with the attack on Russia, nothing happened as the Comintern had planned. The strongest Communist Party in Europe has been the German. But German workers did not arise to protect the Soviet Union, nor did they desert in masses on the Russian front.

In China, which has the strongest Communist Party of any country, the Communists fought Japan, but so did Chiang Kai-Shek. In fact the history of this war has demonstrated that the defense of the Soviet Union does not depend upon Communist parties in other countries, but upon the arrangements that the Soviet Union is able to make with other Governments.

Nationalist or Class War.

At the beginning of his war, Stalin had the choice of waging a Nationalist war or a class war. In no appeal to the Russian people has Stalin ever denied the non-capitalist structure of the country. But he has stressed the national interests of the Russian people against a foreign invader. He found in a showdown that Mother Russia was a better slogan than Father Marx.

Well, why then did he not dissolve the Comintern at the beginning of his war?

No doubt he waited to see whether the German proletariat would not rise and make a revolution.

Also, he remained suspicious of the Western countries. Would they really fight or would they hope that Germany and Russia should exhaust each other, and then come in, either as sole victors, or even make a deal with nazism purged of Hitler? The Comintern was doomed, in my belief, on the day that United States troops landed in force in North Africa, and Churchill and Roosevelt announced "unconditional surrender." It was no longer wise for Stalin to ride two horses at the same time.

Stalin Wants Hands Free

Furthemore, Stalin has national war aims for the Soviet Union. He wants his hands free, in the future. It makes, for instance, a difference, whether he looks at Germany with the eyes of the Soviet Union, as a great power, or views it through the eyes of the Comintern. For the interests of the German revolution and of the Soviet power are not necessarily identical.

Stalin, in contrast to Trotsky at Brest-Litovsk, is not going to relinquish any Russian national interests for the sake of the brotherhood of workers all over the world. In fact, any one who suggests it is a fifth columnist and gets shot.

Therefore it is logical that Stalin should dissolve the Comintern. The last value that it has for the Soviet Union was its nuisance value to the world abroad. Probably, he has kept something he had no more use for, to sell it as part of a deal. This explains the timing—right now — when there may be a meeting with President Roosevelt, when Italy may be getting out of the war, and when Stalin may even wish to win from the Vatican a concordat.

People who doubt his sincerity simply do not see the picture in the frame of history. Nothing he has ever done was more sincere.

FAMOUS QUOTATION

"There, but for the grace of God, goes——."

Can you fill in the blank in this famous quotation?

The fact is the authorship of the saying is unknown and the right name to be substituted for the blank is a subject of controversy.

It is generally attributed to John Bradford (1510-1555), English religious martyr.

There is a tradition that on one occasion when Bradford saw a condemned criminal passing by on his way from prison to the gallows, he observed:

"There, but for the grace of God, goes John Bradford."

Soon after the accession of Queen Mary, Bradford was arrested on a charge of sedition, imprisoned, tried in a court presided over by Bishop Gardiner, condemned as a heretic and burned at the stake at Smithfield, July 1, 1555.

The quotation is credited to Bradford in Frederic W. Farrar's volume of sermons entitled "Eternal Hope," published in 1877, and the anecdote connected with it is told in a biographical preface in the second volume of the "Writings of John Bradford," published in 1853.

But in 1851, two years before the publication of the latter work, George Borrow published his "Lavengro," in which he wrote:

"It was old John Newton, I think, who, when he saw a man going to be hanged, said: 'There goes John Newton, but for the grace of God.'"

John Newton (1725-1807) was a sailor, midshipman, slave-trader and tide-surveyor before he turned divine and was ordained a clergyman in the Church of England at 39.

Probably as the result of an error the same sentiment has been attributed also to Richard Baxter (1615-91, John Bunyan (1628-88), and John Wesley (1703-91), all of whom lived much later than John Bradford.

Baxter, Newton, Bunyan and Wesley were all pious and zealous men, and it may very well be that the famous quotation and anecdote became associated with their names through their reference to it.

Giraud Takes Action to Eliminate Personalities at Time of de Gaulle Visit

By EDWARD KENNEDY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Algiers, May 27—(AP)—Pictures and insignia of both Gen. Charles De Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud were removed from public places today in preparation for French North Africa's welcome to the Fighting French leader.

A few remaining reminders of Marshal Petain, Vichy Chief of State, also were pulled down or covered.

The move was undertaken by order of Gen. Giraud, civil and military commander-in-chief, in line with a policy eliminating personalties and stressing the union of all French.

"More than ever," said Gen. Giraud's order, "The French must have only one thought: the liberation of France, victory."

Insignia of all Frenchmen from now on will be the tri-color, without the cross of Lorraine or other markings imposed on it, Gen. Giraud decreed.

And the slogan of the French, members of his staff said, will not be "Vive Giraud" or "Vive De Gaulle," but "Vive La France."

3-DAY DEBATE ON WAR EXPECTED IN MID-JUNE

London, May 27 —(CP)— The House of Commons is expected to hold a three-day debate on progress of the war about mid-June. Prime Minister Churchill, it was said, is due to report on his Washington talks before then but members said today they expected much that occurred there must remain secret.

Says Mr. Gold Seal "I'm doing a real home-front morale Job"
THIS IS A CONGOLEUM GOLD SEAL RUG
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK

"Some people make guns, some make tanks," says Mr. Gold Seal, known far and wide as the emblem of Congoleum Rugs and Congoleum by-the-yard. "My job is to make floor coverings that will take hard traffic in stride and keep their good looks in spite of it; a sort of home-front morale job. And I'm putting everything I've got into it to make sure you get the extra value always built into Congoleum, value that means long wear and lasting beauty so urgently needed just now when floor covering replacements are so hard to obtain."

CONGOLEUM GOLD SEAL Rugs

HOW TO HELP MR. GOLD SEAL MAKE GOOD

You can get added wear out of your Congoleum floors with very little effort. Brush and mop them regularly and renew the brightness of their surface with an occasional waxing. Make sure too, that the floor underneath is smooth and free from crevices or knobs. If it's a rug, move it every few months to "spread" the traffic. Yes, a little care will pay big dividends.

WEDDINGS

ANDERSON—DeLONG

Bridge St. United Church was the scene of a quiet wedding recently solemnized by the Rev. Dr. J. Semple, when Mary Elizabeth, youngest daughter of the late Ernest DeLong and Mrs. Arnold Knight of Elmbrook, was united in marriage to Malcolm Leslie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Anderson, Demorestville. They were attended by Mr. Bert Green and Miss Beryl Mallory, of Belleville. The bride was prettily attired in a two-piece crepe suit with matching hat and accessories and carried a bouquet of forget-me-nots and white roses. The bridesmaid wore a becoming travel tweed suit with matching hat and she carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses. In the near future Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Belleville.

VAN SLYCK—HAGERMAN

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hagerman, Morven, Thursday afternoon, May 20, when their younger daughter, Lenna Gertrude, was united in marriage to Carlton Baltus elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Slyck, Morven, by the Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white triple sheer over satin with gold trimming and a corsage of Sweetheart roses and a gold chain of her grandmother's.

The bridesmaid, Miss Mona Hagerman, sister of the bride, wore pink sheer. The best man was Cpl. Wilfred Van Slyck, of Ottawa, brother of the groom.

The ceremony took place under an arch of pink and white streamers with bronze fernery of flowers as a background.

Luncheon was served to the immediate families. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Harry Atkinson and responded to by the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a ship clock, to the bridesmaid a string of pearls and to the best man a belt set.

For travelling the bride wore an egg shell blue crepe dress with navy coat and hat. The bride and groom motored to Oshawa, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls.

Prior to the wedding, Mrs. William Close was hostess at a variety shower for the bride-elect, when she was the recipient of lovely and useful gifts. She was also presented with an end table by her pupils of the Violet School. Mr. and Mrs. Van Slyck will reside at Morven.

EVANS—ROSE

Picton — The home of Miss Florence Welsh, Prospect Ave., aunt of the bride, was the scene of an interesting wedding when Victoria Christina, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Rose, and the late H. N. Rose, Cherry Valley, was married to LAC. Harry Evans, R.A.F., Picton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Evans, Hartshill, Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire, England. Rev. J. Cantrell, of Milford, officiated. The ceremony took place beneath an archway decorated with pink and white streamers, with a background of white flowers and vases of tulips on either side. White wedding bells and sweet peas also decorated the room.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Nixon Welsh, the bride wore a gown of white sheer with white accessories and carried carnations, lilies-of-the-valley and maidenhair fern.

The attendants were Mrs. Jean Rose, of Trenton, sister-in-law of the bride, and Miss Annie Benn, of New York. Both carried white snapdragons, forget-me-nots, pansies and fern. Mrs. Rose wore a poudre blue ensemble with white accessories, while Miss Benn chose a rose ensemble with white accessories.

The bride's brother, Mr. Wallace Rose, was groomsman. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Arthur Hamblin.

A buffet lunch was served, the bride's table being centred with the wedding cake, sweet peas, pink and white candles and pink streamers. Miss F. Welsh and Mrs. A. Hamblin were assisted by Mrs. G. Welsh and Miss Mary Welsh. Rev. J. Cantrell proposed the toasts.

For travelling to Toronto and points west, the bride donned a poudre blue dress with blue coat and matching accessories. On their return they will reside at Cherry Valley.

Mr. W. Harrison, Belleville, Miss Annie Benn and Mrs. Post, of New York were out-of-town guests.

Understanding French Is Valuable in These Times

SPEAKING FRENCH IS ASSET

Paris streets are empty and lifeless now, the famous sidewalk cafes, pictured above once so crowded and merry are closed up and vacant. But France will live again and once more travellers will visit that beautiful country. Even you might have the opportunity so learn to speak French now!

It is important that you know French for it is one of the two universal languages, the other being English, and especially now it is convenient to understand it.

If you're doing any canteen work in Canada or helping to entertain servicemen you're bound to run into one of our French-Canadians or even a Fighting Frenchman. Make them feel at home right away by being able to talk to them in their native tongue.

"I wish I could speak French!" How often we hear that desire expressed. Our 32-page booklet will teach you the fundamentals of the language. With this booklet you can become familiar with everyday French expressions.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "TEACH YOURSELF TO SPEAK FRENCH" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and name of booklet.

Former Empress and Son of Austria Appreciate Kindness of Canadians During 2 Years Residence in Que.

Empress Zita was the consort of the last ruler of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and her son, Prince Otto, is pretender to that Throne. When war came to Europe the family fled to Canada where they have lived in quiet seclusion for the last two and a half years. A Canadian Press staff writer has visited the House of Hapsburg in Quebec and learned of their lives there, the political implications of their presence and their hopes for restoration. In this first of three stories he tells of his visit.

By JACK BRAYLEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 28 — (CP) — This old walled and cobbled city is noted for its reserve and good manners and quite naturally nobody ever thinks to point a finger at the middle-aged lady, sorting through trinkets on a gift shop counter, and to exclaim "That's the former Empress of Austria."

Quebec minds its own business and most of those who knew that their historic city gave shelter to the Imperial House of Hapsburg more than two years ago have either forgotten the fact or have not been inquisitive about it.

Have Found Peace

Empress Zita and her family have in her own words "at last found peace, quiet and simplicity" in Quebec after a turbulent and tragic life. Her husband, the Emperor Charles, last reigning Sovereign of the Austro-Hungary Empire, succeeded his uncle, Franz-Joseph in 1916 at the height of the First Great War but was forced to flee in exile after the defeat of his country and her ally — Germany.

Charles died heartbroken at Funchal, Madeira, in 1922 and eight weeks later the 29-year-old Zita gave birth to her eighth child. She moved to Spain and later to Belgium where the family remained until the German invasion.

Live in Modest Villa

They took over the modest, wooden villa St. Joseph, formerly a nun retreat, set in its own grounds on the outskirts of the city. It is next to Spencerwood, spacious home of Quebec's Lieutenant-Governor, and is atop a high St. Lawrence bank which commands a sweeping view of that broad river.

A blond, liveried girl has the door open and gives you a big smile. You start to identify yourself but she breaks in with a nod and "Jah, Jah", for you have been expected. You enter a panelled hall and another servant, also speaking Austrian, takes your hat and coat, opens a library door and points to a chair.

A door at the other end of the room opens and a brisk white-haired lady with a smile, comes forward, offers her hand and identifies herself as Countess De Kessenbrok, Lady-in-Waiting to the Empress.

She chats on changing topics, from the family's health to the weather. The Empress withstood the severe winter and is in very good health, she says. She tells you no formalities are observed, there is no court and "we are just a simple family group here with a romantic background, perhaps, but right now with nothing very much to write about."

"The Emperor is Here"

Then she drops her voice and, seemingly greatly impressed with her news, tells you that you are especially fortunate because "the Emperor himself is here and will see you."

The "Emperor" of course is Prince Otto, eldest son of the late Emperor Charles and Pretender to the Throne.

You meet most of the family, which comprises, besides the Empress and Prince Otto, the Archdukes Robert, Felix, Carl, Ludwig and Rudolphe and the Archduchesses Adelaide, Charlotte and Elizabeth. All speak English and French, as well as their mother tongue, fluently.

They consider Villa St. Joseph home and those with activities elsewhere visit the Villa regularly. Prince Otto, with offices in New York and Washington, comes back every eight weeks and stays a week.

Expresses Thanks

"Canada and Canadians have been more than kind and considerate to us," said the Empress, coming in from the garden and shedding rough gloves. "I appreciate this opportunity of saying thanks to Canada for its peace and its shelter and also for its inspiration to my family as the ideal of democratic monarchy."

The Empress, studying Canadians on her rounds of shopping, thinks "they are so well-mannered and so polite." She has never enjoyed her life and her family more "than in Canada" and while she wants to return to Vienna immediately after the war she intends to make her home here for its duration and always return to Quebec for visits.

"Canadians are so honest, so frank and so understanding and their lives are good and full. I can readily understand why so many of my countrymen have migrated here and have learned to love Canada with a zealous patriotism."

Women's Responsibilities in Post-War World Discussed by Y.W. Guild

Under the able leadership of Mrs. A. D. Archibald the members of the Young Women's Guild held an animated discussion on "Women's Responsibilities in the Post War World," at the home of Mrs. J. A. Buchanan, Dufferin Avenue, on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Archibald first gave a resume of women's place in the past; Among the nomad tribes women played an equal part with men in the fight for existence, and when community life developed, men being the stronger, continued to fight and to hunt while the women did their full share in looking after the community. As civilization progressed they took their own place in weaving, spinning and sewing. With the growth of many religions, however, the idea became rife that women were an evil influence, and they were restricted to spheres where they were protected, and considered inferior.

Pioneer countries tended to remove the restrictions upon women because they were useful in pioneer life. They gained in prestige and influence. However, this stage passed with industrial development.

Through the use of adroit questioning the leader guided members through many channels of thought.

It was shown that women have some special spheres of interest. Since they approach things from a more personal point of view they can make more contribution to social and moral problems than to financial ones. It was also felt that there was a very definite place for women in planning for nutrition and health.

To the question concerning women's place in politics, it was the consensus of the members that nothing would be gained by having a women's party, but rather that women should co-operate and share in responsibility with men.

Since women have taken such an active part outside the home due to the war, the question was asked: "If many women prefer to go out to work after the war, will this weaken or strengthen the home?"

Under present conditions it was felt that this would definitely have a delliterious effect. However, it was pointed out that the establishment of nurseries, recreational centres, communal feeding centres and laundries would have a decided benefit upon the home and society. It would make it possible for men and women to work co-operatively. In this way neither would be subservient to the other, both could be wage earners if they so wished, contributing to their home not only money from their labors but also the enrichment in interests and varied experience.

To the question: "How can we make our contribution as women to post war reconstruction?" Three main suggestions were elicited:

(1) To be mentally alert and alive to problems that confront us.

(2) To help mould public opinion without prejudice.

(3) To be interested in civic affairs.

In summary, Mrs. Archibald stated that Mrs. Roosevelt has pointed out that the reason that women are not more prominent as preachers, legislators and government officials, is that they want the world as it is and are for the most part content, and she added, "What will happen when they really want something different, I hesitate to say because I have a firm belief in the ability and power of women to achieve what they want to achieve."

The worship service which was an exhortation to prayer based on the example set by Jesus, was led by Miss Hazel Thompson.

During the business meeting the nominating committee was appointed.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, May 28—(CP)—Wartime conservation hints for busy housewives:

STRETCHING WITH STUFFING—A bread stuffing not only adds flavour to many meat dishes, but it's also a great extender, says Laura Pepper of the Agriculture Department's Consumer Section. Even though chops are cut thinner than they were in pre-ration days, there's a way out of this difficulty.

Brown them on one side, turn and spread with a generous layer of stuffing; put them in a hot oven to finish cooking and to brown. Meat loaves go almost twice as far if stuffed. Here are three ways of doing it:

1. Arrange alternate layers of your favorite meat loaf mixture and a savoury bread stuffing in a greased loaf pan, beginning and ending with meat.

2. Roll out meat loaf mixture between two sheets of wax paper, spread with stuffing and roll up like a jelly-roll.

3. Line bottom and sides of a greased loaf pan with meat loaf mixture. Fill the centre with stuffing and cover with the rest of the meat mixture.

BENEFICIAL BREAKFASTS — Those persons who are too busy or rushed to take time for a proper breakfast are frowned upon by the nutrition experts, who point out that the energy peak that follows a good meal is an absolute necessity if workers are to get through their morning duties with maximum speed and efficiency and minimum effort.

STITCHING IN TIME — Remake centres are the answer to the oft-breathed lament, "If only I could sew." Proposals for such centres, as advanced by the Prices Board, include establishments of sewing classes in church basements or schools under the supervision of professional dressmakers or teachers of sewing. Lessons could be arranged in series, with sessions in the morning, afternoon and evening to suit the convenience of the individual.

A seven-week course gives the novice a good grounding, with special instruction in making the new garments from old. Material saved by the women participating in these classes makes it possible for the textile industry to devote more of its attention to the armed forces.

BOOTS, BOOTS — A Prices Board order ruling out full leather soles for shoe repairing for the duration of the war emphasizes the importance of caring for our shoe wardrobe. In their march across North Africa, the forces of the United Nations have worn out thousands of the sturdiest types of boots. The order is designed to maintain shoes for civilians and supply servicemen with the best possible footwear.

A VERY SHORT RUN

London, Ont., May 28 (CP)—The London fire department made its shortest run on record Tuesday night—a distance of 30 feet—to damp a blaze in a rubbish shed at the rear of the Iroquois Hotel, adjoining the fire station.

Lawn Bowling Club Holds Tea

The Belleville Ladies' Lawn Bowling Club staged its annual opening bridge and tea at the club house, Yeomans St., on Thursday afternoon, with a capacity crowd in attendance on the delightful occasion.

The rooms of the club house have been all newly decorated and it is interesting to note that the decorating is due to the ladies of the club who gave their fullest time, co-operation and efforts towards the beautifying of their club house.

Mrs. George Watkin, club president, assisted by Mrs. Charles Hyde, vice-president, very graciously received the guests, while Mrs. Clarence Clapp and Mrs. Mark Vanner were most charming hostesses.

The ladies who served refreshments are also commended for the capable manner in which they carried out their duties, namely, Miss Helen Sulman, Mrs. D. Row, Mrs. D. Storey, Mrs. L. Gerow, Mrs. A. Wonnacott, Mrs. E. Robson and Mrs. B. J. Black.

Mrs. Elgin Ford was treasurer for the function. Mrs. Ernest Vanner and Mrs. M. P. Duff presided at tea tables tastefully decorated with white lace tablecloths and pink tulips.

Twenty-four tables were in play for bridge, the winners being Mrs. Hey, Mrs. E. Sanderock, Mrs. Reg. Hinchey and Mrs. Shaw.

Grave Question of Loyalty Confronts Young Wife

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I work to maintain a home for my mother. She has no relatives or anyone with whom she could live. My husband is in the service, but his pay is not enough to support us.

My problem is, shall I go with him (his division is a long distance from home) or stay and maintain a home here, where my mother can be comfortable? I feel that he needs me, but if I went with him, I would have to place mother in a Home. This I hesitate doing, as she is aged and I'm afraid wouldn't get the proper attention. I want to do the right thing. Will you advise me, please?

Worried.

You have my sympathy in trying to decide this grave question. After you were to break up your home and join your husband, he might, in all likelihood, be sent overseas. On the other hand, there is the question of your mother's maintenance.

A young wife faced with a problem similar to yours wrote me that she had placed her mother in a home temporarily, while she paid a visit to her husband stationed at a distant post. She expected to resume housekeeping with her mother when she returned.

In any case, it would seem wise to take a war industry job.

The Same Old Story — They'd Like to Change Partners

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a married woman of 27 years. Have been married since I was 18 and have two children, who adore their daddy. However, I have known for a long time that I do not love my husband. I always thought it was enough to respect a man, when you married him, but now I've fallen in love so deeply that I'm terribly unhappy.

The man whom I love is also married and has two children. I'm not willing to break up anyone's home, especially where there are children. My husband knows I love someone else, but still wants me to stay with him as he loves me very much. I've tried so hard to forget the other man, even going away for six months. I've prayed to God to help me forget this man, because I know it's wrong.

My husband and I can't find happiness any more because he knows I love the other man. I don't want to take this man from his children, and I don't want to deprive my children of their daddy.

Shall I stay with my husband and make the best of it, or just go away and get a job and live by myself? I do so want to do the right thing.

D. L. H.

Looking around you, you must have noticed that not often do people find happiness in disrupting others' lives and homes. Things may appear to go swimmingly for a while, and I'll admit in cases where wealth and ambition are involved, people seem often to make the grade. But the possibility of continuing happiness snatched from the wreck of two homes is a doubtful proposition.

If you've failed in making a go of one marriage, you may find yourself in the same position again after the raptures of a new marriage have worn off. That which is described by the grim little word duty pays the best dividends in the long run.

Considering the children who will be made unhappy, the matter of alimony, and other difficulties arising from the divorce you are considering, the future does not look as roseate as it may seem to you. Why not try to find out what caused your marriage to go on the rocks and then try to get it off and make it go?

Correspondent Answers "Peter's Mother"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I couldn't resist the temptation to write, hoping my letter will be printed so that "Peter's Mother" will see it.

I have a five-months-old son, and my husband is in the army. We are fortunate because he is still in the country. I am unhappy without him, but there are millions of girls who every day wonder where their husbands are and whether they are safe. There are men who have never seen their babies and some who never will. This war-torn world is seeing more misery than we could imagine.

There are very few girls today who wouldn't give their right arms to be in the shoes of "Peter's Mother." She has everything they dream of after this world is at peace, if they are lucky enough to have their husbands come home at all.

So when she's feeling lonesome, I hope "Peter's mother" will look around and see what loneliness really is. If she wants something to do, try Red Cross work, and realize there is a war.

R. A.

"Peter's Mother" who wrote to this column some weeks ago, was a young wife, fond of athletics and the out-of-doors, who found housekeeping and baby-tending not only a trifle monotonous but the daily round left too much time on her hands.

Lack of Adequate Day Nurseries Keeping Many Women From War Jobs

Innumerable letters come to this column from women who want to know how they can best aid the war effort. In jobs in war industries, they mean. The best answer that can be given this general qusstion is to consult the nearest agency of Employment Service. It will advise them of ocal needs, and provide information on training opportunities.

It cannot, however, always solve the problem of what to do with the children for whom arrangements must be made if the mother is to be free to take a war factory job. That is the great deterrent to women's maximum help in the war effort—the question of what is to be done with children who are too young to be left alone or too old to be left to their own devices if they are to be protected from the delinquency which is giving so much concern these days.

England appears to have managed this problem of the best care for children of war workers. It may be because England has been longer in the war. While we've had plenty of conferences on the subject, appointed plenty of committees, and advanced many plans, we haven't gone very far toward making it possible for any large percentage of mothers to be released from home duties for industrial work.

It shouldn't have taken any longerer to solve this problem than to wrest with others as great or greater that were involved in swinging industry into all but war production. We've performed the herculean task of stepping up plane production to thousands a week, but we're still not far from where we started with regard to providing proper care for the children of absent war workers.

It may be that prejudice against releasing women from the home has impeded the efforts. As if it was just restless feet that leads women to seek employment outside of their households! Most often it is actual financial necessity which makes it necessary for a mother to go to work to make both ends meet in this day of rising costs.

Suppose the husband and father has been among the casualties; suppose he is one of those irresponsible husbands who just disappear in times like this. Suppose innumerable things, including the fact that allowances made to dependents of service men aren't large. There's the mother, left as a breadwinner with the terrific anxieties of leaving her children while going to work in a plant. Some have facilities to care for the children oof working mothers while others have set up systems of day foster care which seem to be working well.

Some cities have led the way in handling this problem.

Women, with small children of their own, who feel their place is at home, have been making their contribution to the war effort by caring for other women's children.

Tired Feeling With Inability to Sleep Often an Inherited Condition

There are some people who always feel tired, but even though they are tired most of the time, they may have trouble sleeping. They suffer from depression and do not succeed in their work. Fortunately, this is not a common condition.

Dr. Carroll W. Osgood of Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, has studied a number of persons who had these conditions, and he believes that they are suffering from an inherited condition of weakness, or constitutional asthenia. The patients have regular, recurrent attacks, during which they are utterly prostrated. They go to bed, close up the room, and darken the windows. These patients usually have these attacks following a period when they have overworked.

A study of these persons showed that they are self-centred. They are greatly concerned about various responsibilities. Their interests are few, and they do not assume any responsibility if they can avoid it. Other things such as headache and dizziness are common complaints. If these persons are carefully studied, it is found that they have never had a great deal of energy, and for this reason it is thought that their trouble is hereditary and not due to anything in their environment.

Of course, there are many other causes for tiredness, and when a person suffers from constitutional asthenia he should always be carefully examined to make sure that he does not have some disease which is responsible. After all, tiredness may be due to sickness, wrong diet or over-exercise, as well as to lack of sleep and disturbances of the glands of internal secretion, particularly such disturbances as lack of thyroid or lack of pituitary gland secretion.

Overeating as well as failure to eat enough of the right kinds of food may both be responsible for a feeling of tiredness at various times. However, this kind of tiredness differs from the more severe condition which is frequently present and which does not seem to be due to any discoverable cause.

If it is determined, after careful examination, that the asthenia is the severe hereditary type it is well for the person to stop trying to bring his physical condition up to the point where he can do as much as the average person does. Rather, he should adjust his work and other activities to the amount that his physical condition will permit.

Persons with constitutional asthenia evidently have an inherited lack of energy. The condition does not get worse but may become more noticeable as increased demands are put on these persons to do extra work.

FARM ACCOUNT BOOK

For several years modern farming has been too complicated a business to be carried out by simply making a few important notes and carrying the other details in the mind, so the Farm Account Book, which was designed by the Dominion Department of Agriculture to provide farmers with a simple set of forms for recording commercial transactions, has been found very useful. The book requires no special knowledge of accountancy. It is simple and efficient. The 1943 edition appears in revised form, and, while covering all farm operations as formerly, will be found helpful in preparing official statements which farmers have to make from time to time. The Farm Account Book may be obtained from the King's Printer, Ottawa, at the nominal price of 10 cents.

Coaxing Back a Good Figure

Susan Hayward has a lovely figure

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE IS a frenzy now for figure remodelling. Women with dumpling-like figures find that they can't get around to their various duties as briskly as they might travelling with extra weight is tough going.

Despite high spirits, the will to help win the war, there is a sense of lassitude because of those too ample measurements. So diet is restricted as it should be, and there is a 24-hour watch on the bathroom scales hoping for good reports. They come in time; always will if the intake of rich chow is cut down.

But what about the jaw sags? It is quite possible that the fat cells that have given firm contour to the southern section of the countenance may also be going into a decline, having nothing to live on. Well, heroic lady, we'll have to tell you what to do about that. There will be no rejoicing about a younger figure if the face looks older. Isn't it the truth?

Open your mouth wide. Place the palm of your hand beneath the chin. Push the hand up, resist with the jaw. Let fingers and thumb sweep up to the lip ends. Repeat 20 times. It's a good idea to anoint the hands with a heavy cream. Lift and lower the under jaw, with strong muscle pull, thrusting out the lower lip as the jaw goes upward.

Throw the head back. Pretend to be blowing a soap bubble, then pucker the lips and draw in the cheeks. This is an excellent exercise for strengthening and toning facial fibres and tissues.

Follow these exercises with a brisk tapping and slapping, forcing all the cream into the flesh that you can. While the cream remains on, skim an ice cube over your complexion. Dry gently, lave with an astringent. If no astringent is at hand, use witch hazel. Do this at night. In the morning use cold water and an astringent again.

Vacation Plans Demand Courteous Consideration of Servicemen First

Courtesy as well as patriotism decrees: Make way for Servicemen! They're important travelers. . .are you sure you are? Is the morale you think you must maintain or build up by weekend trips and faraway vacation trips more important than the quick and so-longed-for trip home that soldier or sailor is so eagerly making?

Be considerate, be decently fair and thoughtful when a traveling plan involving public conveyances pops into your head these days.

Weekends? A weekend at home is just what that soldier or sailor is trying to get! Weekend furloughs are tremendously important to him, for in order not to interfere with training during the week, military passes are most often issued for the three days at week-ends.

If you must travel, make every effort to schedule your plans to leave . . . and to return too. . . in the middle of the week when trains and buses are less congested. Civilians have been urged over and over again to do this, but still too many of them pay absolutely no attention to the plea. When a Servicemen is given a leave of more than a day or weekend, the military authorities try to schedule his leaving and returning to the middle of the week. . . and we should patriotically take a leaf from their book.

It's good judgment to leave long trips involving stops at several points for your post-war vacation plans, and to choose a nearby vacation spot. When you're reached it, stay put. No overnight trips unless really necessary, no "excursions" by train or bus. And no expansive invitations for guests to visit you "for the weekend." Also unless your vacation-dates are definitely scheduled for you, consider taking an "off-season" vacation.

Another travel luxury we can forego these days is using the dining-car when we are on the train for one meal. Railroads are having a mighty hard time supplying and staffing dining-cars for the traveling servicemen these days, and we can be good scouts by taking a box lunch with us.

Whenever travel decisions must be made, be forehanded about making them. Instead of waiting until the last minute, and then having to wait in line (possibly taking the place of a traveler more important than you), buy your ticket a round trip ticket, and any pullman accommodations, well in advance. If your plans change, keep your consideration-for-others working on all cylinders, and cancel your reservations immediately.

And travel light. . . .carry with you on the train the minimum of luggage, only one piece if possible. Trains are crowded, coach aisles must be kept clear, seats must be kept free, and luggage racks must accommodate wartime baggage. There is a shortage, very often a complete absence of Red Caps or porters in terminals. Take bulky baggage to the baggage room, check it, and the railroad will carry it to your destination free of charge up to 150 pounds an adult passenger. When the trip is to be a long one, send or take your luggage to the station and check it a day or two in advance of your departure.

Courtesy Tip

By exercising the body you can get rid of those unsightly bumps and bulges. By exercising kindness and consideration for other people you can get rid of those bumps and bulges that are unsightly and unpleasant in your manners make-up!

Family Heirloom Appropriate Engagement Ring For Fiancee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance is a private in the army and so has very little money to spend. He is anxious for me to have an engagement ring, but I have assured him over and over again that it is our engagement that counts and that he really shouldn't worry about my having a ring.

When he was young, his mother and father died, and he was brought up by his aunt and uncle who were wonderfully kind to him and to whom he is deeply devoted. Apparently, the last time he was at home, he talked over this problem of my engagement ring with his aunt and she offered to give him (to give me) a lovely old ring of hers, set with a diamond and a ruby. I would be so happy to have this ring, for a great many reasons. First, it would solve my fiance's problem; second, it would always mean his aunt's goodness and generosity as well as my fiance's love for her and her love for him (and my love for her too); and third, it is the kind of ring I would be delighted and proud to wear, with the added charm of the fact that rubies are my favorite stone.

But both mother an I are wondering if it would be proper for me to accept this ring.

ANNE

You have charmingly and wisely answered your own question in the list of reasons you have given in your question. When you accept this ring it will represent the love and devotion of all concerned.

Using Another's Name Inexcusable

The other day I gave the name of a friend of mine as reference to a real estate man from whom I was renting an apartment. This man has been a friend of mine for some time, and I was sure that he would be willing to have me use his name. But apparently I made a mistake, for now a mutual friend of his and mine told me that this man was very much disgruntled about my having given his name without asking for his permission or, as he said, for not even telling him I had done this. Did I do the wrong thing? Don't you think he's being unfriendly?

T. E.

Yes, I do think you did the wrong thing. It is courteous to ask a person's permission to use his name as reference, and your friend has the right to expect this courtesy and consideration from you. After having used his name you certainly should have told him. If I were you, I would talk it over with him, apologize for your discourteous omission.

And another thing we should remember about this reference-asking: after the reference has been given we should telephone or write our thanks for the courtesy.

Courtesy Tip

Girls before your Bill was a soldier you may have possessively draped yourself on his arm as you and he sallied along Main Street. But now with Bill's military bearing he'd prefer that you walk beside him under your own power. Remember anyway that he must keep his right arm free to salute.

VALUE FARM OUTPUT

The gross value of agricultural production in Canada in 1942 reached the highest point since 1919. Estimated at $2,078,954,000, the 1942 total is almost $650 million, or 45 per cent, above the 1941 estimate. An increase of more than $460 million in the value of field crops in 1942 was mainly responsible for the increase. Record yields of all grain crops, particularly in the Prairie Provinces, as well as moderate increases in prices, were responsible for the great expansion in the value of field crops. The gross value of production of all the other farm products, except fibre flax and clover and grass seed, showed substantial gains in 1942 as compared with 1941. These gains were especially marked in farm animals, milk production, and the value of poultry products.

Evening Elegance

Rosalind Russell posed for this pretty costume, the shell pink marquisette blouse worn with a long black crepe skirt with slight front fullness. The blouse has long tapered sleeves and a quaint ruffled yoke.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

A Tip From Men

Damon Runyon, who recently wrote a challenging column on "Cheating Wives" professes to be quite surprised at the irate "soprano chorus," which has come back at him with "What about cheating husbands?"

Mr. Runyon claims complete ignorance on that subject. He knows NOTHING about cheating husbands. He did not even know that husbands DO cheat, although he had occasionally heard "rumors" to that effect. Ladies are always making something out of nothing, it seems to him.

I ask you, girls, isn't it wonderful what a lot of things we are learning from the men, these days? We're learning how to wear uniforms and handle guns; how to command companies, run riveting machines, dig trenches and build airplanes. We're learning how to salute, signal, climb rigging and do handsprings. We're even learning a little jiu-jitsu.

The only thing that we haven't yet quite mastered is the mental attitude of the men toward one another; and until we acquire that, the men will always have an edge o nwomen. We shall always be handicapped. They will always hold the winning hand in the game.

Mr. Runyon is merely running true to form, when he disclaims all knowledge of any delinquencies in his own sex. How those men love one another! How perfectly they form a hollow square, like soldiers and fight back to back, against their common enemy! How they stand by each other and guard each other's secrets.

Did you ever try to get one man to tell you anything about another? Might as well try to get a secret out of the Sphinx! Might as well interview the lions in front of the New York Public Library. Or coax the Statue of Liberty to "sing."

The best man on earth will lie to the best woman on earth in order to protect the worst man on earth from her wrath. That's why a wife is always the last to learn anything about her husband's "way of life" or his little peccadilloes, unless she happens to have a loyal and sympathetic woman-friend.

Did you ever observe how tenderly a man will lead an inebriated brother home from the Club and deposit him on his doorstep? Did you ever notice how carefully and gently the conductor (male) will help a drunk off and on the bus? Or how patient a hard-boiled cab-driver can be with the intoxicated passenger who is trying to recall his house number? It's sex loyalty — that's what it is! Every man for the men!

But don't let it throw you, girls. We women are getting an insight into this clever masculine strategy, which has been our defeat, ever since the dawn of civilization. No longer is woman against woman. The day has passed when petty rivalries and envy made every woman every other woman's natural enemy. War has taught us to stand together and by each other; to pull together instead of pulling each other's hair.

The girl of today is a "Woman's Woman," who is as generous and loyal to her own sex as any man ever was to a recalcitrant brother; who will "cover up" for her sisters, root for them and defend them, right or wrong. There are still a few of the oldfashioned cat-women, but they are relics of the past. Women have taken a tip from the men.

Leaders of Both Major Loops In Furious Scramble for Top As Memorial Holiday Nears

Washington Senators Reach Top in American, While Cards Press in National

DODGERS IN JAM

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The major league pennant porridge is coming to a furious boil for the Memorial Day weekend with the heat turned up as high as it will go.

In the American League Washington Senators moved into first place last night to give the junior circuit its third pace-setter in five days and in the National League St. Louis Cardinals moved within a game and a half of Brooklyn Dodgers, who were trounced for the second straight time at Pittsburgh and were so incensed they almost started a riot.

The Pirates won 9-5 on the margin of four runs in the eighth inning and in the midst of their rally umpire George Barr called a balk on hot-headed Johnny Allen.

The Dodger pitcher charged into the umpire and precipitated a melee which resulted in four Brooklyn players — Allen, Fred Fitzsimmons, Rube Melton and Les Webber—all being banished from the field.

However, this tumult, occurring in the presence of 14,724 fans at a night game in Forbes Field, hardly was the most important development of a busy day in the big show even though it was the noisiest.

The program started with a morning game at Boston where the last place Red Sox unceremoniously ambushed Cleveland Indians, who had ousted New York Yankees from the American League lead on Sunday. Tex Hughson pitched five-hit ball to shut out the Tribe 2-0.

Canadian Hurler Wins

In the afternoon the Red Sox repeated the trick, winning 4-3 as Oscar Judd outpitched Jim Bagby.

Then last night Washington Senators whipped St. Louis Browns 4-2 in their second straight floodlight fracas. This lifted the Senators into first place and dropped the Browns into the cellar.

Lefty Hal Newhouser held the Yankees to four hits in an afternoon game, fanned 14, most strikeouts this season and four short of the major league record, and led Detroit Tigers to 3-2 victory that placed them in a tie with New York for third place. Rudy York homered with two on for Detroit and Joe Gordon hit a round-tripper with one aboard for New York's runs.

Then, in another night game, Philadelphia Athletics beat Chicago White Sox 7-5 and the result was to bunch five American League clubs within two games of the top. With doubleheaders coming up both Sunday and Monday and the leaders matched against each other, the scramble is likely to become even more confusing.

The National League race also tightened up as the Cardinals nosed out Boston Braves 3-2 with Lefty Howard Pollet pitching five-hit ball. This brought the Redbirds within easy striking distance of the Dodgers, with whom they open a series Monday.

Cincinnati Reds punctured Philadelphia Phillies' balloon with a second straight shutout 7-0 on four-hit hurling by Elmer Riddle and advanced within a game and a half of fourth place.

New York's Giants also trimmed Chicago Cubs again 3-2 as Lou Novikoff failed to hit for the second day in succession.

ATTENTION PUT ON AUCTION BLOCK

By SID FEDER

New York, May 28—(AP)—They're putting Attention on the block at Belmont Park today, and if all you hear is true everybody will be in on the bidding.

Attention is the tall bay galloper who beat Whirlaway twice and who is no worse than a photo finish with shutout for the title of Equipoise's best son. He has won $115,125 in his racing career. The result is the bidding price is expected to run up to $30,000 or $40,000.

At that, it wouldn't be such a bad buy, despite the fact trainer Maxie Hirsch had had trouble with the five-year old Oat-Burner's legs in the last four years.

Attention is eligible for the $30,000 suburban at Belmont Monday and the $50,000 Massachusetts handicap at Suffolk later. If he should get hot for either of these, the new owner will get his money back right then. And after he retires Attention will be worth his weight in gold for stud purposes.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Castilloux Wins Bout

Ottawa—(CP)—LAC. Dave Castilloux, Canadian lightweight boxing champion, won in five rounds from Cpl. Joe Brown of the Army before a crowd of 2,000 here Thursday night. The semi-final lasted less than two minutes when Bob Fulton, R.C.A.F., disposed of Bill Cox, of the Army Public Relations Office with a couple of hard punches.

Spiked by Clubmate

Pittsburgh—(AP)—Spiked by a clubmate during batting practice at Forbes Field, Paul Waner, veteran outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, had to be carried off the field for medical attention. He sustained a cut two inches long.

Army Team Too Good

Valleyfield, Que. — (CP) — The Canadian Army team was far too good for the Canadiens in a Quebec senior lacrosse league tilt here, winning by the one-sided score of 24-7. It was the opening game of the season and Maj.-Gen. E. J. Renaud, O.C., M.D., No. 4, faced off the ball to start the match.

Played for Balmy Beach

Dashwood, Ont.—(CP)—Charles (Church) Brown, who played for Balmy Beach, Toronto, when the Paddlers captured the Grey Cup for Dominion football honors, died at his parents' home after an illness of three weeks. Brown, who was 35 years of age, also starred at baseball.

Woman Given Licence

Toronto—(CP)—Judy Johnson, of Washington and New York Thursday became the first woman trainer granted a licence in eastern Canada when directors of the Independent Canadian Racing Association approved her application to train horses of T. T. Mott of Maryland. Miss Johnson wanted to obtain a licence to ride in steeplechase races but the I.C.R.A. adopted a similar attitude to the New York Jockey Club in refusing her the permission. She has ridden in steeplechases at Pimlico track in Maryland, where she obtained a licence to ride.

Hurls Two-Hitter

Toronto—(CP) — Led by Buck Laviolette's brilliant two-hit pitching, R.C.A.F. headquarters slapped a surprise 2-0 defeat on the previously unbeaten Morse Jewellers last night in a West Toronto Senior Baseball League contest.

Laviolette was in complete command of the situation throughout, allowing no walks and whiffing four to score his first win of the season.

Report Given Meeting

Toronto—(CP)—During the past year the Sports Service League spent $23,698.77 on sports equipment for men in uniform, it was revealed last night at the annual meeting.

Army, Air Force and Navy camps were liberally supplied by the S.S.L., the report said. Not only camps in Ontario, but units stationed in Quebec had been supplied with sports equipment as well as an R.C.A.F. squadron overseas.

Many Suggestions Offered

Philadelphia — (AP) — When President William D. Cox, of the Philadelphia Nationals asked the fans for suggestions, he literally started something — all sorts and conditions of recommendations started to float in. One patron wanted a special box under the seat in which to put his shoes; another asked for a special hecklers' section to greet the Brooklyn Dodgers while somebody wanted pretty blondes to peddle the soft drinks and hot dogs. A nursery for babies under the grandstand was also suggested.

Will Try His Hand

Miami, Fla.—(AP) — The Ecuadorean tennis star, Francisco Segura, has decided not to rush home after the closing of the University of Miami because he wants to try his hand in the seven major court tourneys in the U.S. this summer. He was given fourth ranking among the players by the U.S.L.T.A. last winter.

Reported a Casualty

Ottawa—(CP)—Another member of the Ottawa Rough Riders football team, Carl B. Norton, has been reported a casualty overseas, his parents having been advised that he is missing. Norton, 25, is a Flt.-Sgt. in the R.C.A.F. and is the former snapback of the Ottawa grid squad.

Once Trained for Czar

Detroit—(AP)—Last of a noted turf family, J. O. Keene, owner of Keeneland Farms in Kentucky, died suddenly from a heart attack at the Detroit Fair Grounds in his 78th year. He was reputed to have won and lost several fortunes. He once trained horses for the Czar of Russia.

TROPICAL REFRIGERATION

Port of Spain, Trinidad — (CP)—The Low Temperature Research Station is investigating storage and transport problems of perishable products of the West Indies. Field experiments are also to be extended to all vegetable and food crops.

LESLIE LENNOX TO HEAD MAJOR BOWLING LEAGUE

Members Get Together to Review Year and Lay Plans for Another

PRIZES AWARDED

Culminating a successful season "toppling the maples" at the Recreation alleys, the Major "A" bowling league held their annual election of officers and get-together at the alley rooms last night when Les Lennox was the unanimous choice of the league to the position of president for the season of 1943-1944. The conventional prizes were [illegible] and team championship recognized.

[illegible] President Walter Jackson reviewed the league's activities for the past year and congratulated the individual cup winners and league champion Belleville Golf quintette.

The election of officers of the Recreaton Alley Major "A" league resulted as follows—

Hon. President—Walter Jackson.
President—Les Lennox.
Vice President—Reg Arnott.
Secretary—Art Cruji.
Treasurer—Wm. Dennis.

Prizes were awarded to the league champion Belleville Golf with J. E. Legault captain, second honors went to the C. N. R. with Reg Arnott as Captain, third to the Reliance A. C. with E. Brooks as captain, while captain Art Whalen of the Belleville Sargent accepted the fourth place honors.

League Scoring Records

Prizes were also distributed for individual scoring records, which were as follows:-

High average—J. Legault 228
second—E. Barlow 226
High 3-string—A. R. Holway 869
second—R. Lennox 859
High single—Art Whalen 382
second—E. Brooks 334

C. N. R. Wins Playoffs

Prizes were also awarded for scores in the league play-offs, won by the C. N. R. team. To Captain Reg Arnott of the C. N. R. went the league cup, while J. Legault of the Belleville Golf took second honors Consolation prizes were given to Sergt. Norm Samain of the I. T. S. and Bob Miles of the Dennis Grocery team.

Tributes Paid

R. Lennox moved a vote of thanks to the retiring executive while Ted Hughes seconded the motion, that was unanimous. Again President Walter Jackson thanked the teams for their co-operation and personally extended to Leo "Stub" Barrett, manager of the Recreation Alleys, the sincere appreciation of the league in general for his assistance in the promotion of bowling throughout the season. Following the meeting the Major "A" bowlers were the guests of the Recreation Alleys for a period of friendly games. The league voted to open activities in September next season and close at an earlier date in the spring of 1944.

Toronto, May 28. (CP)—A star athlete can be a headache to the military. Take the case of Dick Fowler, Toronto-born baseball pitcher who hit the major leagues last season with Philadelphia Athletics. Fowler joined the army, was stationed at Brantford, Ont. There was a mighty scramble for his services by some of the Ontario Inter-County baseball league teams—notably Galt and Kitchener. The scramble was a factor in Kitchener's withdrawal from the league. Finally, to avoid further altercation, the military transferred Fowler to Toronto. He will be on the mound for Toronto army district depot invaders when the Congress-Services Senior League opens here tomorrow. . . .Phil Marchildon, another former Philadelphia pitcher who was ranked seventh most valuable player in the American League last season, has been variously reported posted with the R.C.A.F. from Victoria to Clinton, Ont. The reports have set the baseball boys buzzing like bees. To set their minds at rest, Marchildon is stationed at Trenton, Ont., and pitching for Trenton Air Force.

No Dough:

Capt. W. J. Bagnell secretary-treasurer of the Calgary Army Hockey Club, says the club hopes to have Doug Bentley join Brother Max Bentley in the army at Calgary this summer. The two Chicago Black Hawks scoring stars would make any club an Allan Cup threat. Bagnell referred to reports Max Bentley had received $1,000 to join the army at Calgary and vigorously denied them. He said the Calgary Club had a $450 deficit at the end of last season and the $500 received from the C.A.H.A. for five play-off games saved the club from bankruptcy. Bagnell said the Calgary Army team has been broken up with most of its players posted elsewhere. Coach Tommy Anderson, former Brooklyn Americans star, is taking an officer's course at Gordon Head, B.C.

Incidentally:

Vancouver representatives of various sports each took a day during the Fourth Victory Loan campaign and the sportsmen sold a total of nearly $450,000 in bonds. . .Best baseball in several years is in prospect in Saint John, N.B., with at least three teams . . . .The Saskatoon Tennis Club is not operating this year because almost all its young members are in the services and many of the older players have retired. . .Three members of the Winnipeg R.C.A.F. hockey team which lost to Victoria Army in the western final now are posted to No. 2 I.T.S. at Regina—Pill Juzda, Andy Branigan and Sammy Lavitt.

RED WINGS CLIMB AT EXPENSE OF TORONTO LEAFS

Men of Grimes Drop Third Straight and the Field Closes Up

CHIEFS NOW THIRD

By The Associated Press

Thomas Delacruz, the veteran Cuban curver, is doing almost a single-handed job of keeping Syracuse Chiefs in the International League's first division.

The Chiefs have won just a dozen games so far. And six of them are credited to Delacruz, who has lost two starts. He pitched Syracuse into second place last night with a 2-1, seven-hit victory over Newark Bears. The Chiefs vaulted up from fourth place while the Bears dropped back to that spot, behind the idle Montreal Royals.

The order of the second division remained unchanged although the last-place Rochester Red Wings conquered the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-3, for Toronto's third straight defeat, and the seventh-place Jersey City Giants handed Baltimore Orioles a 6-3 pasting. The Montreal-Buffalo game was postponed.

Steady flinging by veteran Blix Donnelly, plus some smart base running enabled Rochester to check the league leaders for the second straight night. Donnelly gave only seven hits but was yanked for Sakas in the ninth after Jimmy Gruzdis had connected for a pinch double to send a run home.

Although Bill Voiselle yielded only three hits in 7 1-3 innings, it took two more pitchers and a four-run outburst in the ninth to give Jersey City the edge over Baltimore. The Orioles got all their runs in the last two frames, tying the score in the eighth just before the Little Giants started shelling Lefty Swift, who took over after Steve Gromek had been removed for a pinch hitter.

Johnny Allen Has "Run In" With the Umpire

Pittsburgh, May 28—(AP)—Johnny Allen, hurler for "dem bums," didn't think it was a balk but he probably wishes he hadn't insisted upon the point.

The Brooklyn firebrand brought 14,724 fans up out of their seats last night when he made an eighth inning rush on umpire George Barr. The brawl that followed resulted in the banishment not only of Allen but also of his teammates, Freddy Fitzsimmons, Rube Melton, and Lester Webber. Today Allen likely can ponder the fate of Phil Cavarretta of the Cubs who was suspending five days and fined $100 merely for pushing umpire Lou Jorda at Boston Sunday.

It all started after the lowly Pirates overcame a four-run lead and then, in a big eighth inning, were plunging onward to victory.

The score was tied with two on when Melton was pulled out and Allen sent in. Then there was an error and before Johnny knew what was happening three runs has crossed the plate and Geary was sitting on third.

The melee lasted 10 minutes although Barr and Allen tussled only a few seconds. Brooklyn players seized Allen and Manager Leo Durocher helped shoo him, expostulating, off the field. Other Dodgers staged a demonstration between first and second bases and after a (verbal) skirmish with the officials, the other three Brooklynites were sent to the showers.

Yesterday's Stars

Stan Spence, Senators — Hit double and three singles to lead offensive against Browns.

Bobby Estalella and Irvin Hall, Athletics—Former hit three run homer and latter singled with bases loaded in victory over White Sox.

Huck Geary, Pirates—Drove in three runs with two hits to help beat Dodgers.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Shrieks and yells of the most appalling type were issuing from the cottage, and quite a crowd had collected. Presently clothed in full majesty and dignity of the law, a policeman came striding on to the scene.

Policeman (gruffly)—Now, then what is all this about?

Small Boy (speaking)—Please, sir, that's only my brother. He's crying because Mother's eyesight ain't very good and she's deaf, too.

A ghastly series of shrieks interrupted the explanation.

Policeman (wiping away a furtive tear)—he must be a very feeling little fellow.

Small Boy—Yes, sir, he is. You see, Mother's mending his trousers, and he's got them on.

Ballets, bullets!

The other day when the Pittsburgh Pirates were playing the Dodgers at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, Manager Franke Frisch of the Smokey City nine decided to give his ancient muscles some exercise. So he planted himself at third base for the final stages of the infield drill. Jake Flowers batted a sizzler at him, and the Flash missed it with great neatness and dispatch. Again Flowers drilled one down and again Frisch completely missed coming up with the ball. Once more the same thing happened.

This was more than one leather-lunged Dodger fan could stand. "Hey, Frisch," he bellowed. "Give yourself up. Baseball hasn't slipped that much."

Maybe baseball hasn't slipped that much, but overage destroyers like the Flash are free from draft worries, anyway.

That brings to mind the conversation between Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds, and Bill Cox, president of the Phils. The jocular Giles gibed at Cox: "From the way your team is going, something will have to be done about breaking up the Phils."

'Uncle Sam will do that," answered Cox, sadly. "The entire infield is in 1-A."

Where do we stand?

The idea of baseball schools for 'teen-aged lads first started in Kingston early this spring, has caught on like wild fire until today Oshawa, Bowmanville and Peterboro all have baseball flourishing with abundance in the minor groups. Actually in Oshawa a juvenile baseball loop, including one team from Bowmanville is in the making following a successful baseball school. It looks as though the baseball-minded men in Kingston, Oshawa and Peterboro have seen the advantage of such a project and are building for the post war period when undoubtedly the Central Ontario Baseball League will again flourish with players now being developed in these schools.

But what of Belleville?

Are we to revert to the village class and perhaps be satisfied playing in loops along with Foxboro or Shannonville? (Ed's. note:—"No reflection is meant here, as both Shannonville and Foxboro carried on baseball long after it had died in this city.")

There is Yet Time.

It's not too late to get into the baseball swim and prepare for the post war period when the diamond game is bound to revive in the same manner it did in 1919.

There are more 'teen-aged lads anxious to play baseball in Belleville today than has been the good fortune of this city in many years. These youngsters are serious and will co-operate so surely there are sufficient business men in this city to act as advisors and do the administration work towards the assurance of paraphernalia to commence a baseball school.

Recently B. A. Fanning, who sponsored intermediate ball here for years, approached this department, stating he was in possession of some bats and other playing equipment which he would gladly donate to such a cause. In years past such men as Art Young, Bert Boyce, Lorne MacDougall, Clarence Clapp, Jack McIntosh, Jack McVeigh and a host of others helped the game. Today they could materially assist in the promotion of a baseball school in Belleville to insure the future of the game and to develop players so Belleville will be in a position to enter the baseball picture after the war when conditions will undoubtedly see the revival of a loop similar in structure to the C.O.B.L.

Procrastination is the thief of time — so, how's about it?

DID YOU KNOW—

Catching Sid Luckman, quarterback of the Chicago Bears, in an off-gridiron moment, one learns: The Bears have 360 plays and the quarterback must know the duties of each of the 11 men on every play. . .George Halas, boss of the Bears, forbids social contact of quarterbacks and other players off the field. . .The Bears never check a signal—at least they haven't in the past four years. . . Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 69

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Though your suit is what you promise, you can always find some gent who will be a doubting Thomas, giving you an argument. And you always find some quince whom your proofs will not convince.

Be sure you are sure about your biddable suits. If you are not sure, your bridge life will be fraught with fracases. Because bridge tables are cluttered with muddled mugwumps who use phony suits.

A suit is biddable if it is better than average; four cards with two faces; or five cards with on face; or any six cards. Examples are Q J 3 2; J 5 4 3 2; 7 6 5 4 3 2.

That tells you the basic values needed in biddable suits. These are the minimum values. But they are adequate. They must not be weaker. But they need not be stronger.

However, experts do not all agree on such a basis. In fact, all experts do not agree with each other. And in at least one case, an expert does not agree with himself from one year to another.

Consequently, you will meet players who use weaker values as a basis for biddable suits. They will try to talk you out of what you now know. So, be sure you are sure.

First, you must not bid anything unless you have enough tricks for a bid of some kind. Next, if you have enough tricks for a bid, follow the order of T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

A takeout means a bid in your biddable suit. If you have no suit that is biddable, you must have no takeout. If you takeout when you have no biddable suit, you are lying to your partner.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠K 8 4
♥K 8 6 5
♦A 9 3 2
♣9 4

You have enough tricks for a bid. You have no suit that is biddable. So, you have no takeout. If you bid at all, it will be an assist or no-trump.

When partners are guessing, results are distressing. With accurate bidding, both prosper. No kidding.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Idaho"

Roy Rogers' earliest ambition was an unorthodox one—that is, for a lad who was destined to rule the cinematic ranges as "King of Cowboys". The Republic singing cowboy, who is currently starred in "Idaho", now showing at the Capitol Theatre, wanted to be a dentist!

But, developing an outstanding knack for wheedling plaintive cowboy ditties out of his old guitar, he decided to become an entertainer instead.

His career suffered a momentary set-back when he took his guitar to the city only to learn that the sidewalks of New York were knee deep in cowboy crooners. But he wisely decided then and there to build himself up the hard way, that is, by gaining experience on small radio stations. He joined up with the "Sons of the Pioneers", appeared with them in a few motion picture shorts, and soon was awarded his Republic contract, through which he has reached the top of the western field.

"Wings For The Eagle"

"Wings For the Eagle", which Warner Bros. released locally at the Capitol Theatre yesterday, is a film that does a splendid job of blending individual drama with the one grim story that hovers over all personal conflict—the world struggle to smash the Axis. But this film tells its story not through the men and women who turn out our planes. Their story is packed with all the action, drama and excitement that one would find on the actual fighting front; the constant fight against time is never out of their minds.

Lovely Ann Sheridan and debonair Dennis Morgan have the leading roles with Jack Carson and George Tobias in the supporting cast.

A Popeye cartoon and the serial "Secret Code" complete a grand show for all to see.

AT THE BELLE

"Meanest Man in the World"

Jack Benny, Priscilla Lane and "Rochester" are holding forth at the Belle Theatre tonight in the 20th Century-Fox comedy, "The Meanest Man in the World". Benny is at his best which makes for plenty of laughs.

Lloyd Nolan "Manila Calling"

Carole Landis has her most exciting role in the 20th Century-Fox action thriller "Manila Calling" the added feature attraction in which she is co-starred with Lloyd Nolan. Donald Duck in "Galloping Jalopy" and a new Community sing film complete the program.

"They Got Me Covered"

The inside story of Axis espionage in this country, and a newspaperman's frantic attempts to get that story, comprise the gay basis of Samuel Goldwyn's new Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour comedy with thrills vehicle "They Got Me Covered" coming to the Belle Theatre this week-end.

Said to be the funniest thrill-comedy of the season, the picture has most of its hair-raising action take place in Washington, with Hope in the role of a zany newspaper correspondent and Miss Lamour as his fiance and the manager of a news syndicate office there.

Hope, out of a job but not out of optimism, learns that for five thousand dollars he can buy a complete story of the Axis spy-system in the United States. He induces Miss Lamour to pay over the syndicate's money, but before he can get hold of the story itself the Axis agents interfere and kidnap everyone concerned, including Hope himself.

The correspondent's efforts to extricate his friends, get the story and pick up his job and his romance where he left off, all combine to furnish plenty of excitement for picture-goers as the high-speed plot unfolds.

Otto Preminger, Edward Cianelli, Marion Martin, Lenore Aubert, Donald Meek and Philip Ann have the chief supporting roles as members of the Axis spy group in the RKO Radio picture. Davis Butler directed.

The Belle news of the world. A Walt Disney color fun cartoon "Education for Death" and a new Edition of the March of Time "Men of the Fleet" complete the program. On Saturday matinee Chapter No. 5 of "The Valley of Missing Men" will be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sherlock Holmes in Washington"

Hollywood has taken up where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has left off and in "Sherlock Holmes in Washington," latest Universal detective thriller co-starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, the famous Baker Street sleuth pays a visit to the United States.

In all his fictional adventures, Sherlock Holmes never worked on a case in the United States, although Conan Doyle himself visited this country.

In the new picture now at the McCarthy Theatre, Holmes is sent to Washington to solve the case of a set of stolen documents which fall into the hands of fifth columnists.

Besides Rathbone and Bruce, others in the picture are Marjorie Lord, John Archer, Don Terry, Geoge Zucco, Henry Daniell and Edmund MacDonald. The picture was directed by Roy William Neill.

2nd. new hit is "The Redhead From Manhattan" with Lupe Velez.

CANADA AGAINST JAPAN AS WELL AS GERMANY

Col. Ralston Assures House in Making Statement on War

JUST ONE WAR

(By C. R. BLACKBURN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 26. (CP)—Canada stands against Japan "as she does against Germany", Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons yesterday, "and anything she can do to help defeat Japan she will do".

He made this declaration after Howard Green (Prog. Con. Vancouver South) claimed that there had never been a Canadian statement on this subject although Canada was the first country to declare war against Japan.

Mr. Green said there were two wars and not one and that there should be a statement as to whether "the government intends to continue fighting a defensive war on the Pacific or whether it does not". He said there had been a "straight-forward" statement from Britain on this point.

"The government regards this war as just one war and not two wars", Col. Ralston replied. "Our policy with respect to Japan is that whatever we can do within our power to help defeat Japan we shall do, just as we intend to do in regard to Germany.

"I cannot make any more definite statement than that for reasons which I think my honorable friend will understand. . .

"Canada stands in this war against Japan just as she does against Germany and anything within her power that she can do to help defeat Japan she will do.

"That is exactly the same statement my honorable friend says was made by Britain. The government has fully in mind the fact that Japan is our enemy just as much as Germany".

The discussion came late last evening during the debate in committee of the whole, now nearly two weeks old, on the army's share of $1,764,000,000 of the $3,890,000,000 war appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Bill to Amend Code

Tightened prosions governing betting on horse races and other similar events are provided in the annual bill to amend the Criminal Code, introduced in the House earlier by Justice Minister St. Laurent. The bill was given first reading.

It provides that it will be sufficient to obtain a conviction on charges of maintaining betting premises if it can be proved that the premises have been used or are "intended or likely" to be used for that purpose.

Heretofore the code required proof that such premises were opened for, or used for such purposes.

Another amendment covers advertising likely to assist bookmaking or betting on races or other similar events. It now is provided that a conviction may be obtained if the advertisement is proved "likely" to assist in such gambling where at present under the code it is necessary to prove that such advertising is "intended" for such purposes.

The bill is not intended to interfere with newspaper sports pages or with any legitimate business, said a government spokesman last night.

The spokesman said if there was any doubt about the effect of the bill on newspapers in general, some saving clause might be added.

Great Range of Subjects

Discussion in the War Appropriation resolution debate ranged over a great range of subjects, bringing frequent appeals to Chairman Bradette to keep members to the subject and protests from Col. Ralston that members were talking about things over which he had no jurisdiction.

There was another long discussion of the Dieppe raid with Dr. H. A. Bruce (Prog. Con. Toronto Parkdale) defending his claim of last Tuesday that this was a "tragic failure."

Last night Dr. Bruce stated bluntly that he was chraging the alleged failure to Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, the Canadian officer who directed the raid, and not to the high command as Col. Ralston inferred on Tuesday.

He said also that Col. Ralston's comments on the Dieppe affair were "extravagant" and an attempt to make it appear that a failure was a "victory."

Col. Ralston said he was not going over the whole matter again more than to repeat that he had never claimed that Dieppe was a complete success but that it was a valuable exploit and far from a tragic failure.

Pouliot Renews Attack

He declared again that Gen. Roberts' appointment six months after Dieppe to command all reinforcements in England was not a demotion and had nothing to do with his conduct at Dieppe.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (Prog. Con. York-Sunbury) declared that notwithstanding anything the Minister might say he was convinced that Gen. Roberts' appointment was "a demotion upstairs."

J. P. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) renewed his attack upon the Defence Department, reciting a long list of headquarters officers who were receiving promotions, declaring some of them should be overseas and some superannuated.

Col. Ralston rebuked him and said that while "no one says it is lovely down at headquarters," the constant effort was to attain and maintain efficiency in an organization that had "increased by about 100 times" in three years.

All those serving at headquarters were doing a job and were doing what they were ordered to do, many of them desiring to be overseas, he said.

He suggested that Mr. Pouliot was arguing that there should be no uniformed soldiers except those shouldering guns and engaging in the actual fighting.

Should Obtain Gag

There were numerous recitals by members of individual cases in which they argued some person or persons were ill-treated or overlooked, arguments about pay and allowance, and about policy.

The long discussion finally provoked Dr. J. K. Blair (Lib. Wellington North) to suggest that the House should obtain a "gag" and to warn members that throughout the country there was being created a hatred for some "Frenchmen" and some members from Toronto.

Dr. Blair, who has been in the House since 1930 and almost every year finds occasion to appeal to members to get down to business, entered the debate briefly yesterday.

He spoke after George Fulford (Lib. Leeds) had administered a verbal spanking to Mr. Pouliot, who has kept up a fairly constant and bitter criticism of Col. Ralston and defence headquarters officers.

Fulford Protests

Mr. Fulford had protested that Mr. Pouliot was monopolizing the time of the House to the point where members were "becoming exasperated," and that if all members took as much time the House would have to sit 24 hours a day 365 days a year.

Dr. Blair said Mr. Fulford had said what was in his own mind and that he probably would have used "rasher" and "more unparliamentary terms."

He said it was wrong that the minister, heading an important department, should have to sit in the House "listening to continual attacks" and suggested Col. Ralston be allowed to absent himself at such periods.

"If we want to retard our war effort then the way for us to do it, in a sly, deceptive way, is to keep the minister sitting in his seat and not allow him to attend to his duties," said Dr. Blair.

Should Purchase "Mouth Gag"

"I do not know how to prevent it but I do know that if this House could purchase a mouth gag or a few things like that it would be worthwhile . .

"And all this trouble is not coming from Quebec although the biggest part of it is. Toronto spoke up to me just a moment ago," he said, turning to an interrupter in the Conservative ranks.

"I wish you would talk to some of your friends from Toronto and get them to keep quiet. They are what I would call a nuisance.

"This House is not the first court of the land. The first court is back in the country and back in the country there is being created a spirit of bitter hatred for some Frenchmen and for some men from Toronto too, because they are holding up the business of the House."

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister gladdis was mad when she came over with Harvey to play bridge with pop and ma, saying to ma, Do you see this hat I'm wearing, well I cant wear it?

Why what do you mean, it's the most becoming hat you've had on your head for months and I would of said so if you hadn't spoken first, ma said, and Gladdis said, Of course, that's what makes the pill so hard to swallow. Sandra Gear saw one of Madame Kelly's girls working on this hat for me, and by some hooker crook she managed to find a model exactly like it, and low and behold she appeared at the bridge club flaunting it on her red head two days before my hat was delivered. I wore it over here in the dark just to show you, but naturally I cant appear on the street with it, she said.

Well naturally, ma said. I never heard of such blazing effrontery. I think in your place I'd of been tempted to slap her face, she said, and Harvey said to pop, Isn't it awful? I know just how she feels. Just about a month ago I bought myself a snazzy lightwait felt with a turndown brim, and I'd hardly stepped outside the shop when at least 15 men passed me with precisely the same hat. And what could I do? Nothing, he said.

Very funny, pardon me for not laughing, Gladdis said, and pop said, I had a worse experience than that. Not long ago I broke down and treated myself to a 2 dollar yellow silk tie, and I wore it to the office in the morning and the first thing that met my eyes was the office boy wearing the same identical tie with the same horseshoe design. I admit his tie was red and probably made of cotten but who was to know that? I felt like tearing my tie off my neck and stamping on it, and then tearing that boy off his neck and stamping on him. The whole office force leered at me the entire day, pop said.

Such humor, hee hee excuse my mirth, ma said.

The result being bridge.

CHAPTER [illegible]

"People in the town didn't understand you."

"Because as a single man I wouldn't allow myself to be put on a leash? It's surprising at what lengths some girls will go to make a conquest. A few of them wanted to make a conquest of me and parade me around as though I were a prize bull. Nothing is quite so wonderful to a woman as a man with a reputation for being a woman hater. I don't hate women. I'm particularly fond of them, but I still hold to the masculine prerogative of doing my own picking. I picked you a long time ago. I've been waiting for you to grow up."

She looked down at the newspaper on the table and fingered the edges. "Why does growing up mean suffering and making mistakes? Why must it be that way? When I look at Allison, my little sister, I dread her growing up. And she wants to grow up badly. When I'm home she's always putting on my high heels. Is that why the faces of old people are sad, not because of their years, but because of the things the years have done to them? It makes you afraid of living when you want terribly to live. I'm sorry. I'm being very dull."

"You're being very honest and I love you for it. You didn't ask me to share this with you. I asked for it. I'm with you and not with one of several girls I know here who would try to make me laugh—because I want to be with you. You will laugh again, Temple. You're not a person to laugh often but when you do . . I've heard your laughter.. It's soft, rich laughter. And you will chatter again as all women chatter. And you will be exquisitely happy again. No one human relationship is going to knock you out for good. It does to few people and they are undeveloped personalities usually, if that's any comfort to you."

"Thank you. But it isn't comfort I want."

"What do you want?"

Freedom, she thought. I want my freedom. Don't you want your freedom, Jud?

She said, "I'd like my dinner, please."

He laughed again. "Fine. But it seems they have left us strictly alone. I'd better go out and see Gus about it."

He rose and left her, moving with his quick sureness. Her eyes followed him. She saw him speaking to Gus, a large man with a florid, pock-marked face. She looked down at the newspaper again, looking at it absently and without concentration.

As she read, "The bodies of Lieut. Carter Jennings of Tula, Okla. and Private Judson Amory, of Boston, Mass., who crashed near Miami yesterday were recovered and brought to Morrison Field today. Their nearest of kin . . An investigation is pending . ." The radio blared forth the news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Temple tried to rise, but the earth seemed to be shaking. She tried to read those black words on white paper again. She tried to hear what was being shouted over the radio, but the earth had perished. Suddenly all the lights were going out.

When Temple regained consciousness, she was lying on two chairs and was looking at Harry and at the rough, kind face of the bartender. The newspaper was still on the table. The words were still there.

Gus said, "You're okay, kid. We will give them Japs hell."

But Harry was looking at her searchingly. "Temple, is that why."

She shook her head and the tears rolled down her face.

"No . . the paper.. Jud is dead. He's dead. It's Jud."

For an instant he looked at her as though he did not believe she knew what she was saying. Then taking the paper he glanced quickly at several articles. He looked at her again.

"Judson Amory," he said.

Temple shook her head. "No," she said. "My husband."

When she said that she was able to walk, Harry led her out to the car and they rode a little way into the country.

"I can't take you back to your room," he said. "I wish I could take you to your mother."

Temple had cried until she could cry no more. Later she wondered what people on the street thought of her. But people on the street, people everywhere that day, were thinking only of Pearl Harbor.

She was thinking of Jud.

Harry asked, "What do you want me to do, Temple?"

Straight and still and white she sat beside him.

"I don't know. Wait. I want you to call Mrs. Santos and ask her how it happened." She gave him Mrs. Santos' full name and address. "They wouldn't notify me. They would notify his mother."

"Shall I call his mother and explain the circumstances?"

His mother? "She wouldn't remember me. She probably wouldn't believe it."

"You're his wife?"

"Yes, I'll have to go to Boston. Oh, I can't. I can't. But I must. I am as much his wife as if I'd lived with him ten years and had children. And yet it was only for three days."

The blurred scenes moved so quickly that later she could scarcely remember them.

In the apartment of Harry's friends she sat and heard him call Boston. Because Jud's mother had remarried and Temple did not know her new name Harry talked to several people in Boston before some one also named Amory supplied the necessary information which led to Jud's mother. Then he talked to someone about the accident while for Temple the earth was shaking again.

Then he turned to her and said, "You can't go to Boston, Temple. It's being done in Florida. His mother has gone. There isn't time for you to go."

It was hours later before she realized why they had not brought him back to Boston. Hours later when Harry had left her at the boarding house because all men in the service had been called to their posts. Abby was with her. The radios in the house were screaming. Pearl Harbor! Pearl Harbor!

Abby was talking about the Philippines. The Philippines had been attacked, too, and Miles was in the Philippines. Abby held Temple's hand and said kind, soothing things. She gave her water to drink and stayed with her through the night.

Harry came to her room in the morning after Abby had gone. He looked tired.

"I talked to Mrs. Santos' daughter in Florida last night, Temple. She's coming to Washington in a few days. She knows all about it and she wants to see you."

He lighted a cigarette and walked to the window. "I wonder if you'll forgive me for being as stupid as I have been. I thought you were unhappy over your first little love affair which you would get over as quickly as one gets over a cold. That's why I've been both harsh and flippant with you. But it wasn't a little love affair. It was a marriage. However brief, it was a marriage. It was a marriage that was making you unhappy. But I came to ask you what you are going to do and what I can do to help you."

"You're leaving Washington?" Once more her heart stirred in pain.

"Not immediately. But you are, aren't you?"

"I haven't thought of it. I can't think ahead."

"You can't sit in this room looking at four walls, thinking about it day after day. You hate your job. There will be new jobs opening up. Why don't you go home for a while?"

"I can't go anywhere until I see Thalia Santos. We're going to be in the war, aren't we?"

He nodded.

Temple said, "There's nothing you can do for me, Harry."

He lifted his voice. "But are you going to sit here until that girl comes? Just sit here, thinking about it?"

"Yes, I am. I want to think about it. I want to think about it from the beginning to the end. I loved him. I never understood him exactly. I never knew why he said some of the things he said and why, with everything he had, he had such a sick view on life and people. Some of it I did understand, but not all of it. I've been thinking of it all night and I can't decide whether he was bored with life or whether life was bored with him. Maybe life was bored with him because nothing was ever good enough for him." She looked up quickly. "This doesn't make sense to you. I wasn't really talking to you."

"It doesn't have to make sense to me now, Temple."

"Did Mrs. Benson give you permission to come to my room?"

"Of course. Your friend Abby explained to her and the others because she wanted them to keep their radios toned down. Or maybe my uniform softened her heart. On the street today it seems that every other man is in uniform."

"Peace to war in a moment and life to death in a moment. Abby's fiance is in the Philippines. I did not realize until after you left why they did not take Jud home to Boston. The plane caught fire. Isn't that right? I'm glad they did not take him home. He didn't have a real home there. He had one in Florida and he was happy there. I went down to see him in October. Or did I tell you that yesterday?"

"No. You told me very little yesterday about your marriage."

"I thought I told you everything."

"You were thinking everything."

"If I had not been half unconscious I wouldn't have told you that I was married. I broke my word. I promised him I wouldn't tell anyone about it until after the war."

He smiled. "You are going up to Boston under your own steam. You probably wouldn't have made it, but you were going to try. Well, I have got to be off. I'll keep in touch with you and see you in a few days."

"You've been very good to me."

At the door he looked back and smiled again. "I'm going to send a doctor up to see you this afternoon to give you something to make you sleep. Of all the things I wanted to be to you the least of them was paternal. I'll see you, Temple."

For the next few days it was as it had been when she had first come to Washington, staying indoors and hearing its working people come and go. They were kind young people. They brought her flowers and fruit and candy, remaining only long enough to tell her they were sorry and was there anything they could do for her. They tried not to speak of the war, but she knew all about it from the small radio in her room.

The Philippines had been attacked and Miles was one of the men under Douglas MacArthur.

Temple went on thinking of Jud.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

Drew Critical Of Appointment

Toronto, May 28—(CP)—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative Leader, commenting last night on the appointment of former Provincial Premier Gordon Conant as master-in-chambers at Osgoode Hall, said the appointment was a "shameless deal between Mr. Nixon (Liberal Premier Harry Nixon) and Mr. Conant."

Attorney-General Eric Cross of Ontario Thursday announced Mr. Conant's appointment. Mr. Conant will take office June 1 at a salary of $7,000 yearly.

"Nobody in this province will be misled for a moment by the suggestion that Mr. Conant's qualifications or lack of qualifications had anything to do with the appointment," Col. Drew, opposition leader in the legislature, said in a statement.

Eleven Months On Theft Charges Given Accused

"The theft of bicycles in Belleville is becoming all too frequent and a general nuisance to owners and police authorities alike", commented Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson after Roy W. Hart of Peterborough, had pleaded guilty to a charge of the theft of a bicycle when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court here today. Hart was sentenced to serve two months in the Ontario Reformatory and this term is to run consecutive with a nine months term imposed by His Worship on Hart yesterday after he had been convicted on a theft charge. The two sentences combined mean Hart will serve eleven months determinate in the reformatory.

Deputy Chief Arthur Harman told the court today Hart had stolen a parked bicycle from near the C.P.R. station last Monday evening and rode it to Havelock, where he was arrested on the theft count by O.P.P. The bicycle, which belonged to Jack Hill of this city, was recovered.

In County Court yesterday Hart pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing $188.00 from Vernon Eggleton of Stirling on Christmas Day last. Restitution was not available in this case.

Children Offered Free Ride At Sims Shows

A free ride for two pounds of fat or grease is the inducement held out to the children of the city on Saturday by the Sims Shows now located in this city under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club. Mr. Fred Sims, the owner of the Shows has made this concession in order to assist the war effort for fat and greases are urgently needed. There are some excellent rides with the shows and there is fun and enjoyment for all.

Although the weather has somewhat restricted the efforts of the Shows to entertain, there is still tonight and Saturday to enjoy the many features. The percentage received from the Shows will be used by the Kiwanis Club for their general welfare account and there is a considerable amount of work to be done in this regard. Mr. Sims, who has played Belleville for many years has been a consistent donor to the war effort and his latest offer of a free ride to any child bringing two pounds of fat is just another gesture on his part.

POLICE COURT

Pte. Stanley Valleau of the Algonquin Regt., Toronto, was sentenced to serve 12 days in jail after being convicted of the theft of a motor rug before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court today. The motor rug stolen by Valleau was the property of Lee Grills, Trenton, and stolen out of his motor car here last week. It was returned to the owner.

Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson informed the court that Valleau was at present 16 days absent without leave from his unit. Captain K. R. Holmes, adjutant of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) acted as observing officer while P.C. Wright testified as to apprehending Valleau and subsequently recovering the rug.

Sentenced to Seven Days

William Morris, 77 Pinnacle St., was sentenced to serve seven days after being convicted of drunk driving. Costs amounting to $15.50 were also imposed. On a second count of failing to procure a driver's licence Morris was assessed $10 and costs or in default of payment an additionel ten days to run consecutive with the drunk driving term.

Violations of city by-laws saw two citizens convicted of failing to obtain their 1943 dog tag licence, while three motorists fattened the city's coffers upon being convicted of violations of the traffic regulations. Chief Probert announced that motorists found speeding, failing to stop at designated Stop streets and other city traffic regulations would be severely dealt with in the future.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Volume was higher this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Penny issues were active. All groups, excepting base metals, were down slightly.

Some fairly wide changes appeared in industrials. Western Canada Flour Pfd, Winnipeg Electric Pfd, Bell Telephone, Page-Hersey, National Steel Car and United Corporation B posted gains of a point or more. Brazilian weakened 1-4 and senior oils were up narrowly.

McIntyre, Wright-Hargreaves, Teck Hughes, Pickle Crow and Hollinger displayed weakness and in base metals prices were down for Smelters and Steep Rock. Falconbridge gained 15 cents.

WALL STREET

New York, May 28 (AP)—Profit taking on the three-session advance to average peaks since early 1940, in preparation for the Monday holiday, put brakes on today's stock market.

Scattered favorites, mainly in the blue chip division, managed to edge into new high ground for the year or longer, but slipping tendencies were displayed by the general run of leaders. Dealings were slow from the start, except for two 20,000-share blocks of Commonwealth and Southern, unchanged at one. Irregularly lower prices ruled near the fourth hour.

The war news, mild investment demand and a little more tax optimism still were props for bullish forces.

Bonds were narrow and commodities a shade in arrears.

HOGS

Toronto, May 28 — (CP) — Prices were unchanged at baconhog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $12.

Dressedweight: Brantford $16.25 plus transportation, Hull and Peterboro $16.10 plus transportation, London and Stratford $16.50 delivered.

Army Adopting 'Pulhems' System To Determine Fit Men for Service

Ottawa, May 28 — (CP) — Army sources said today that adoption of the "Pulhems" system of determining eligibility for military service might permit some formerly just below the required medical category to get into the army and would probably be useful in obtaining better allocation of men already in the service.

The system, announced by defence headquarters yesterday, judges men by seven human factors. The word "Pulhems" is coined from the initials of the factors. They are: "physique," "upper body and upper limbs," "locomotion" or lower limbs, "hearing," "eyesight," "mentality" and emotional "stability."

Previously men were rated in alphabetical medical categories. Under the call-up men in categories "A" and "B" have been taken. Some volunteers in category "C" have been accepted. Category "D" has been reserved for men already enlisted who are temporarily unfit for duty but likely to be restored to service, and category "E" has been for rejects.

One high medical officer said the new system of medical boarding would probably open the way for some borderline cases to get into the army but that the opening probably would be narrow. But definite information will not be available until the system has been in use for some time.

The new plan already is in effect overseas and soon will be adopted in Canada.

In each of the seven "pulhems" divisions there are gradings numbered one to five. A man must receive a grading of at least one, two or three in each of the divisions to be accepted.

An A1 man, for instance, would get this rating: P1; U1; L1; H1; E1; M1; S1. A man with flat feet, but otherwise completely fit, might be rated: P1; U1; L3; H1; E1; M1; S1. Similarly a man whose only defect was poor eyesight might be rated: P1; U1; L1; H1; E3; M1; S1.

Referring to the new system, in the House of Commons yesterday, Defence Minister Ralston said it would have the effect of utilizing more border-line cases. The system provides that categorization will depend upon the effect which a physical defect like loss of fingers or bad eyesight might have upon a man's performance of certain military functions.

Defence Headquarters said in announcing the plan "a glance at it (a man's pulhem's profile') will give a complete picture of a man's physical fitness and tell what his individual equipment and deficiencies are."

Benefit Concert Sunday Evening

With Flight Lieut. "Buff" Estes directing the arrangements, the Trenton R.C.A.F. band, by the kind permission of Group Captain R. E. McBurney, officer commanding the Trenton station, will stage another of their popular Sunday evening band concerts in Belleville this weekend at the Capitol Theatre.

The concert is being sponsored by the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. with proceeds of a silver collection to go for extras and comforts of personnel of the H.M.C.S. "Dunnvegan" the Royal Canadian Navy ship "adopted" by the Belleville Chapter.

Augmenting the usual fine performance of the Trenton R.C.A.F. band Sunday evening will be assisting vocal and instrumental artists. Owing to the limited seating capacity of the theatre small children will not be admitted.

Tag Day Saturday For Air Cadets

An opportunity for Belleville and district residents to assist in the training of Canada's future airmen will be afforded on Saturday when a tag day will be sponsored for the support of the 133rd (Belleville) Squadron Air Cadets in Canada.

Sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club and supported entirely through the club's support and by contributions from citizens, air cadets have a syllabus of training which is of inestimable value to boys who later enlist in the air force. Among the subjects taught cadets are aircraft, recognition, navigation signals, theory of flight with drill and discipline and administration.

Placing emphasis on the tag day and giving contributing citizens an idea of what their money will be used for the air cadets will stage a parade on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 while two flights of airmen from No. 5 Initial training school will also be in attendance.

Quints Observe Ninth Birthday

Callander, Ont., May 28. (CP)—Holy communion celebrated by Rev. H. LaFrance, of Corbeil, Ont., inaugurated birthday celebrations today for the Dionne Quintuplets, Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie. It was a day of happy celebration although the children were disappointed to learn that their new home was not yet ready for occupation.

It was the happiest birthday experienced by the youngsters for it was the first year their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, and their seven brothers and sisters were living under the same roof. In former years, the Quints had to be content with a visit by their family to their nursery home.

CANADA'S WAR LEADERS BACK FROM WASHINGTON

Back from momentous conferences in Washington where Allied strategists mapped the next drive against the Axis, Canada's defence minister and the chiefs of the three armed forces are shown as they arrived at Rockcliffe airport, Ottawa, in an R.C.A.F. aircraft Saturday. From left to right, they are Lieut.-General Kenneth Stuart, D.S.O., M.C., Chief of the Army General Staff; Defence Minister J. L. Ralston; Vice-Admiral P. P. W. Nelles, C.B., Chief of the Naval Staff, and Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, C.B., D.S.C., Chief of the Air Staff. The four were summoned to Washington last week to assist at the conferences between Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister King and other Allied leaders.

Picton and District

St. Thomas Chapt. IODE "Adopts" Corvette

Picton, May 28—At the suggestion of Naval Department Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I. O. D. E. has "adopted" the corvette H. M. C. S. 'Fennell'. At its meeting yesterday, the Chapter decided to send a quantity of books, writing supplies, playing cards and razor blades as gifts for members of the crew.

Several shipments of clothing were reported 67 items being for Russian relief, 97 for British relief, 24 for Polish relief and 239 knitted comforts for Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment overseas. In addition, 98 knitted garments were sent to I. O. D. E. headquarters at Hamilton. The Regiment, Mrs. W. G. Grothier, presided.

The Chapter continues to operate its Hospitality House and the recreational and social facilities are taken advantage of by large numbers of airmen and soldiers.

$25 For B. W. V. Fund

The Evening Telegram's British War Victims Fund will benefit to the extent of $25 as a result of the presentation of the play 'Deacon Dubbs', by members of the Dixon Community Club of Milford United Church. This play realized a total of $212 and various patriotic organizations benefitted. Capacity crowds greeted the play wherever shown and though all members of the cast were amateurs they gave finished performances. The Club has given previous donations to the War Victims Fund.

Taking an active part in presenting the play were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Welbanks and in appreciation of their services the club presented them with an electric lamp.

Commends Nursing Division

Picton Nursing Division of St. John Ambulance Brigade was highly commended on their work following the annual inspection by Dr. Bell who was accompanied by Brig. Gen. W. B. Anderson. Members were urged to gain perfection through practice. Mrs. Bruce McDonald is the Lady Divisional Superintendent.

Major and Mrs. Colin Hepburn, Kingston, were guests this week of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. M. Currie.

Capt. Harold Ruttan, who went overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment as part of First Contingent, has been posted to the R. C. O. C. and will command the 7th L. A. D.

Capt. T. C. Holmes, district cadet officer for M. D. 3, inspected Picton Collegiate Cadets here today. The corps presented smart appearance on parade down town when the salute was take in front of the armouries. Drill followed on the school campus.

W. H. Nettleton and C. G. Rutter have been named additional members of the local ration board of which Mayor N. McKibbon is chairman.

Final Loan Figures

Final figures for the Victory Loan show Prince Edward County to have subscribed $1,211,200 or $111,200 more than its objective.

ADRIFT 132 DAYS

After his ship was torpedoed in the Atlantic, Chinese seaman Poon Lim, 22, spent a record 132 days on a raft, before his rescue by a fishing boat off the Brazilian coast. Fish and rain water kept him alive. He described the long ordeal on his arrival in Miami.

Greek Submarine Sinks Two German Ships Off Crete

London, May 28—(CP)—A Greek submarine has sunk two small German ships off Crete, in the Mediterranean, a Greek government in London communique said today.

The submarine Papanicolis was operating with the Royal Navy when it intercepted a small supply ship flying the German flag, the bulletin said. It sank the ship with gunfire. There it met and sank the second ship, the communique declared, and rescued a number of survivors from both vessels.

Japanese Sub Soon Destroyed After Being Seen

(By EUGENE BURNS)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

A Rat Island Base, May 13. (Delayed.) (AP)—A United States Navy Catalina patrol boat crew spotted a Japanese torpedo Wake off Attu, the second day of the assault landing; located the torpedo's origin and marked it with smoke flares, called destroyers which drew oil with depth charges, and at midnight as the damaged sub surfaced, the destroyer blasted it to bits.

The plane commander, Lieut. Jess B. Jolly, and his co-pilot Lieut. John I. Murphy, told the story today less than 12 hours after it happened.

"We were a half mile due west of the battleship which was standing off Attu", said Murphy when Jolly saw the torpedo Wake headed for the battleship.

The plane dropped smoke flares along the course and at the point of the torpedo's origin which was clearly visible because of an oil slick.

Jolly added:

"A destroyer steamed out full tilt.

"After taking soundings it dropped six depth charges after which large oil slicks appeared".

"Then another destroyer came along", said Murhy, "and he dropped four more depth charges.

"A lot of fish floated up, white-bellies up and about three feet long", said Murphy.

Next morning the Admiral sent Jolly and Murphy this message.

"The submarine you contacted was found and destroyed. congratulations".

SEAMAN STILL SINGLE

Hutchinson, Kas., May 28 (AP)—Seaman Ed Holmes learned his fiancee, Ensign Verna Anderson of the Waves would come through Hutchinson, but wouldn't have time to stop. Holmes decided to be married on the train figuring the distance between Hutchinson and her home town of Newton would provide time. So he boarded the Santa Fe with flowers and candy for the bride. The bride came through on the Rock Island, which doesn't touch at Newton. Ed's still single.

FREIGHT HITS SHANTY

New York, May 28 — (AP) — A freight car rounding a siding here jumped the tracks, banged into two other box cars which smashed into a watchman's shanty. From the battered shanty came indistinct voices. A wrecking crew was summoned and extricated two men. Said one of the men to the other: "Well, that's that. Spilled a quart of beer."

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 28 (CP)—Sol Bloom is a New York Congressman, Chairman of the House of Representatives Committee on Foreign Affairs and the sort of man who thinks of everything, even cigars.

After Prime Minister Churchill addressed a joint session of Congress the other day he was the guest of Bloom and Senator Tom Connally, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and their full committees.

The little New Yorker was a sort of glorified master of ceremonies and this is what he did:

He caught a slip in Churchill's speech, the omission of Speaker Sam Rayburn in one of those oratorial roundups starting "Mr. President, Mr. Speaker" etc. He soon fixed that for the record.

He took his own thermos and had it sterilized. The same with a tumbler from his own home. They were at Mr. Churchill's right hand when he rose to speak, plus some water.

When the Prime Minister sat down to luncheon, he found one of his own cigars. That was more of Bloom's work, dating back to July, 1942, when the New Yorker was presented with two stogies by the Prime Minister, then on a visit to Washington.

Solves Hotel Problem

Word has come back from Algiers that a favorite trick of the Germans in the last hours of the Tunisian campaign was to promote themselves to higher rank.

They knew that under the rules of war, prisoners are paid by their captors according to rank and they were anxious to cash in for as much as possible.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King really knows how to visit wartime Washington. Instead of taking his chances in hotels and restaurants, he brings his own railroad car with him, parks it on a sidetrack in the station and proceeds to eat, sleep and work at his own discretion. The only surprising thing about it is that he seems to be able to sleep with trains shunting all around him and amid the myriad noises of a crowded railroad station.

Two-Term Limit

Senator Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina plans to submit to Congress a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment limiting all future presidential incumbents to two terms or eight years. It specifies that it shall not apply to President Roosevelt but its effect on a four-term campaign—providing it passes the Senate and House which is considered likely in time—is difficult to gauge at this time.

It may not be introduced for some time, not until Senator Bailey is sure that it carries the endorsement of two-thirds of the Senate and House, the required margin to submit a constitutional amendment to the people.

Although a Democrat, Bailey was one of the bitterest opponents President Roosevelt had for a third term, not because he favored Wendell Willkie but because he opposed the very idea of a third term.

The application of John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers, for readmission to American Federation of Labor, has all Washington talking. The betting is that Lewis, born to dominate, either will be running the A.F.L. in six months or be out of it again, this time for good. The odds favor him running it.

LEADERS WILL SOON MEET

London, May 28 (CP)—Informed quarters said today that Gen. Charles De Gaulle was expected to meet Gen. Henri Giraud tonight in Algiers to initiate talks which may bring about a union of French elements now fighting the Axis.

This was the first indication that Gen. De Gaulle has left London for North Africa, although dispatches from Algiers yesterday intimated that a meeting between the two French leaders would take place soon.

VICTORY GARDEN PAYS OFF

Duanesburg, N. Y., May 28—(AP)—Floyd Chamberlain's victory garden paid off before he put his seeds in the ground. Spading the plot, he began turning up a crop of silver coins, the oldest dated 1838. His harvest thus far is $67.

Briefs From Around the World

London—(CP Cable)—Award of the Victoria Cross to Wing Cmdr. Guyp. Gibson for leading the dam-breaking raid on Germany May 16 was officially announced last night along with decorations to 33 other fliers who took part in the attack, including six Canadians.

R.A.F. PILES UP HEAVY TONNAGE IN WEEK'S SMASH ITALIAN NAVAL BASE AT LEGHORN BOMBED

Nearly 5,000 Tons Of Block-Busters Loosed in Week

Up With The Sun Allied Planes Stream Across Channel To Continue Attacks

NEW TECHNIQUE USED

London, May 29 — (CP) — Up with the sun, Allied planes streamed across the English Channel in strong formations towards northern France today in a continuation of the air assault in which the R.A.F. has set new records within the past week.

A bright sun beat upon Dover Strait but a haze restricted visibility and it was impossible to determine the type of the planes.

Considerable aerial traffic back and forth over the Channel was heard during the night.

The Air Ministry news service said that six bomb-carrying Albacores of the Royal Navy Fleet Air Arm surprised a fleet of 12 German motor gunboats off Cherbourg Peninsula during the night and sank six and damaged three.

With tonight still to go, the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. already have run up the highest total of bombs dumped on Europe in any week of the war.

In three raids on a city-by-city demolition program in Germany's industrial Ruhr Valley a record of nearly 5,000 tons of block-busters and other heavy bombs were loosed by the British and Canadian heavy bombers.

Heaviest Raid Ever Made.

The week began last Sunday night with the 2,000-ton bombing assault of Dortmund, described as the heaviest raid ever made on one city.

Duesseldorf was smashed with almost equal strength on Tuesday and the big bombers roared out again Thursday night to drop some 1,000 tons on Essen, site of the oft-bombed Krupp munitions works.

Twice during the week—yesterday and last Sunday—R.A.F. bombers attacked the coke ovens at Zeebrugge, Belgium, by daylight, and Thursday evening the speedy new plywood Mosquito Bombers darted 500 miles into Germany to blast the Carl Zeiss and other important plants at Jena. Abbeville targets were hit on Tuesday.

The Air Ministry disclosed yesterday that a newly-devised wave-bombing pattern of attack was used for the first time on the Essen foray, with the four-engined giants roaring over their targets in 10 separate sweeps in a period of 50 minutes. Bomb loads varied so that each would cause the greatest devastation at successive stages.

Briefs Are Presented To W.L.B. Inquiry

Ottawa, May 29 — (CP) — The National War Labor Board's inquiry into labor relations in Canada stood adjourned today until June 1 after four successive days of hearings in which briefs were presented from various labor and business organizations.

The Board yesterday received a brief from the International Nickel Co. which contained a proposal for the establishment of a labor court to enforce a code of "fair standard of conduct" in labor relations. The proposed code would ban any union which receives financial support from a company from participation as a bargaining agency.

The Sudbury (Ont.) local of the International Mine, Mill and Smelters Workers (C.I.O.) claimed in its submission that its organization efforts had been opposed by International Nickel and that the company had supported company unions.

The aircraft lodges of the International Association of Machinists proposed revision of the wage control policy removing restrictions on wages up to 50 cents an hour or $25 a week. It urged immediate increases in sub-standard wages in Quebec.

Its brief and the brief of the Montreal lodge of the same union both supported compulsory collective bargaining and enactment of new labor legislation on a national scale, outlawing company unions.

Japs Not Starving On Attu Island Says Army Officer

By EUGENE BURNS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Massacre Bay, Attu, May 18—(Delayed) — (AP) — Suitable clothing, plenty of food, lots of ammunition and extremely good camouflage — that's the story about the Japanese Lt. Col. James Fish, III, of Camel, Calif., brought back 24 hours after our troops moved into Holtz Bay.

He said the Japanese were past masters of camouflage, even to their trenches, which were three deep and miles long at Moltz.

They have a knack for taking advantage of terrain and natural backgrounds, such as ravines and rock outcroppings. Such rock outcroppings, for example, would be extended to hide a machine-gun emplacement with tundra-covered snipers' outposts guarding these.

Big buildings, 40 and 50 feet long, were dug into the ground, covered with material and then tundra.

Col. Fish said exposure casualties among the United States troops would have been less had "our troops been clothed as well as the Japs". The Japanese had heavy sweater wool underwear, fur-lined gloves, shoes, coats and caps.

The story about the Japanese being starved to death at Attu is rot. "They could live the rest of their natural lives there and still have enough to eat," he said. 'And as for clothing, they had enough to export some."

74 Million Bus. Wheat Used As Feed on Farms

Ottawa, May 29 — (CP) — Heavy use of wheat as feed on farms is apparent in Canada with the likelihood 74,000,000 bushels will be used for this purpose in the crop year ending July 31, plus 11,000,000 bushels of Western wheat to be fed to livestock and poultry in the Eastern provinces and British Columbia, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in a review of the wheat situation.

The increased use of wheat as feed raised Canada's estimated domestic requirements for the crop to 162,000,000 bushels, a record for the Dominion. A year ago, the domestic disappearance was estimated at 140,000,000 bushels.

6 GERMAN MOTOR GUNBOATS SUNK BY NAVY AIR AIM

Pilots Make Attack At Wave - Top Height And Only Three Of The Boats Get Away

CAUGHT OFF CHERBOURG

London, May 29 — (CP) — Six German motor gunboats were sunk and three damaged by bomb-carrying Albacores of the Royal Navy Fleet Air Arm off Cherbourg Peninsula during the night, the air ministry news service announced today.

Only three out of a fleet of 12 German craft — known as R-boats —got away undamaged, the announcement said. The pilots who made the attack at virtually wave-top height said they jumped the enemy boats traveling in a single line.

Each of the attacking Albacores was credited with at least one hit.

Earlier, the German radio broadcast a dispatch of the International Information Bureau declaring that one British motor torpedo boat was sunk and another set afire off Dunkirk in a clash of light naval forces in the early morning hours.

One German craft was reported damaged.

The International Information Bureau is a German propaganda agency whose reports are carried by DNB, the German news and propaganda agency, does not wish to be quoted. The broadcast was recorded by The Associated Press.

12,000 Crewmen Take Part In Three Air Raids

Dumfries, Scotland, May 29—(CP)—A total of 12,000 R.A.F. crewmen took part in the super raids this week on Dortmund, Duesseldorf and Essen, Lord Sherwood, Under-Secretary for Air disclosed in a speech today.

"Our efforts will be doubled and even trebled," he added.

Warning Italy to be prepared for greater air attacks, he said:

"She is starting to feel a little of our air power, but she will receive much more both in Sicily and Sardinia and on the mainland, despite the wails of the Rome radio."

Speculation on Invasion Dominates Front Pages of London Newspapers

By EDWARD D. BALL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 29 — (AP) — Invasion talk dominated headlines today in most of London's newspapers which featured front-page stories speculating that an Allied blow is imminent.

Military writers had little concrete evidence, but some were spurred by the conclusion of the Churchill-Roosevelt talks in Washington.

Axis reports suggesting that major action was a matter of days were carried prominently. One of these reports that landing craft were concentrated in Tunisian, Algerian and Moroccan ports was a favored topic. The Rome radio repeated the story of the landing craft today.

Under the heading "Navy is ready for biggest job," the navy correspondent of the News Chronicle said:

"The greatest naval operation in history is imminent. It will be a landing of an Allied army on the continent of Europe. The navy is ready.

"Boat builders all over the country have for many months been constructing a great number of invasion barges. America already has built many thousands of similar craft. The construction of millions more tons of small naval craft is under way."

The correspondent added that the merchant ship situation evidently is satisfactory. He said that the index of Allied needs for the original North African landings were 2,000,000 tons and that 11,000,000 tons of shipping had been needed since.

Next Move?

The Daily Express played up the combined Allied aerial assault on Germany and Italy and front-paged a headline saying: "Next move? We may take Pantelleria".

Prominence was given by afternoon newspapers to the American attack yesterday on Leghorn. The raid was called "the first blow of the Allied campaign to bomb Italy herself still more heavily".

With the "European Fortress" of Hitler's boast facing invasion from many directions, The Daily Mail said:

"Hitler's hesitation in launching his expected offensive against the Russian front indicates something of his present dilemma".

A series of Nazi executions was reported in the restless Balkans—one potential route of Allied invasion.

The German radio broadcast a D.N.B. German News Agency, report from Sofia saying a bomb had been found in the home of a man named Yanikeff, chief radio technician of the Bulgarian Air Force. He was a target of four wild revolver shots May 10.

Another D.N.B. dispatch from Sofia said a military tribunal at Pleven had imposed the death sentence on seven persons rounded up in an "anti-communist drive".

Allied Drive Against Berlin May Follow One of Ten Roads

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 29 — (AP) — The Allied march to Berlin may follow one or more of 10 roads, none of them easy.

Some of the enormous difficulties to be expected were outlined today by Col. Conrad H. Lanza, retired army officer and one of the most noted military students in the United States, in an article for the authoritative Field Artillery Journal.

The routes he discusses are these: (1) Norway, (2) Denmark and North Germany, (3) Northern Germany and the Dutch coast east of Texel, (4) The Low Countries South of Texel, (5) North France and Britanny, (6) West France south of the Loire, (7) South France, (8) West side of Italy with Sicily, Sardinia and Corsica, (9) The Adriatic and South Italy, and (10) The Aegean Sea area.

His estimate of the force needed varied from a comparatively limited number for the seizure of Southern Norway to "millions of men" for a campaign through northern and central France. And an invasion of the continent will be really effective, he suggests, only as the result of landing in great force at several points.

"It seems clear," Lanza writes, "that in view of the enemy's strength, an invasion involving but a few divisions is not promising.

A Great and Difficult Task.

"Best chance of success appears to be in employing very large forces, at as many different areas as possible, and as nearly simultaneously as practicable. It will be a great and difficult task."

In the cautious fashion of military men, whose plans must envision every risk, Lanza bases his estimates apparently on the assumption of all possible advantage to the enemy, all possible disadvantage to the Allies.

Two matters which are subjects of wide discussion by observers here he does not mention, perhaps because both are imponderables—the cumulative effect of aerial bombardment on Axis production and transport; and the suggestion, made in several informed but perhaps wishfully-thinking quarters recently, that Axis resistance may collapse—not soon—but suddenly.

Lanza estimates that 220 Axis divisions, about 150 of them German, are engaged on the Russian front. In Western Europe and in reserve are about 100 German divisions, he says, and the Axis satellites have about 100 more divisions in various European areas.

To accomplish one of the major objectives of an invasion—making it impossible for Germany to replace troops exhausted in Russia—Lanza figures the invading forces must engage at least 100 divisions in battle, commenting that "the magnitude of the invasion task is apparent."

FINAL SPLITTING UP OF JAPS ON ATTU UNDERWAY

Small Groups of Men Fight Battles With Desperation in Mountain Tops

19TH DAY OF BATTLE

Washington, May 29 (AP).—The final splitting up of Japanese forces on Attu Island into little groups who fight with the desperation of doomed men was underway today with some of the battling high in the mountains above the clouds.

United States Navy Department reports on the progress of the campaign, now in its 19th day, indicated that the most intense attacks were in an area between Lake Cories on the south and Lake Canirca on the north.

Army troops were reported in a navy communique late yesterday to have advanced along a ridge commanding the area between the two lakes and other units assaulted a second ridge running at right angles to the Cories-Canirca line. This later ridge extends east of Fishhook Ridge and as a result of the advance a Japanese strong point on Fishhook was, in the navy's words, neutralized.

Meanwhile patrol units felt out Japanese strength on still a third ridge extending eastward from the floor of Chichagof Valley.

Move to Link World Farmers

Hot Springs, Va., May 29 (AP)—A move to link the farmers of the world by means of an international organization of producer marketing co-operatives was advanced today by delegates of more than 30 countries attending the United Nations Flood Conference.

Advocates of the co-operative movement—a system of business enterprises owned and operated by the people they serve—agreed at a special meeting to ask the parley to formally recommend, in its final resolutions, that an international agency be set up to help farmers organize.

Such an agency would be connected with the international agricultural authority which has been proposed at the conference as the mechanism for increasing world production, distribution and consumption of agricultural products.

CLOSES UP SHOP

Nesterville, Ont., May 29 (CP)—Thomas McGrath, only butcher in this community, 35 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has made his last trip through this district, before closing up shop under Prices Board restrictions.

197 NAZI PLANES DOWNED IN THREE DAYS BY RUSSIANS

Aerial Fencing Continues With Increasing Intensity Near Novorossisk

GROUND FIGHTING

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, May 29 (AP). — Large forces of Russian and German planes are continuing their aerial fencing with an increasing intensity northeast of Novorossisk and tank-led infantry forces have clashed in sharp fighting, Russian dispatches said today, but they still did not mention the "Red army offensive" which Berlin has been reporting for the last two days.

The correspondent of Red Star, Red Army organ, said it was the Germans who were attacking in local battles from the German's Kuban river bridgehead in the Caucasus. Red Star said 197 German planes had been shot down in three days in the heavy air battles there.

(The Saturday German communique as broadcast by Berlin and recorded by The Associated Press, reported strong new attacks by the Russians in the sector of the Kuban bridgehead. The attack failed and the Russians suffered heavy losses, it claimed.)

Russian dispatches said that the Germans had suffered considerable losses and that booty and prisoners had been taken.

Justice Plaxton Dismisses Action

Toronto, May 29 (CP)—Mr. Justice Plaxton yesterday handed down a judgment dismissing with costs an action taken by Josephine Deckert against the Prudential Insurance Company of America for payment of $500 on one policy and $3,000 on another taken out by her brother, Gordon Ross Matthew.

Matthew was convicted of drowning his wife, Mary E. Matthew, beneficiary of the policy, and was executed at Brampton, Ont., Jan. 23, 1941. While in jail he made a will leaving his estate and insurance policies to hs sister and named her as his sole executrix.

Mr. Justice Plaxton in his judgment said there was no precedent case in Canadian law but the claim was dismissed on two grounds: That payment would be contrary to "public policy," and that under the Insurance Act and Canadian practice, the plaintiff had no right of action.

DISSOLUTION OF COMINTERN PUTS END TO LIE—STALIN

Moscow Does Not Allegedly Intend to Intervene in Lives of Other Nations

ANSWERS LETTER

By HAROLD KING

Moscow, May 29 — (CP Reuters) —Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia in a letter to me said yesterday that the winding-up of the Communist International "puts an end to the lie" that "Moscow allegedly intends to intervene in the life of other nations and 'Bolshevize' them".

The letter was in reply to a series of questions that I had submitted to Mr. Stalin.

It was addressed to "Harold King, Reuters Chief Correspondent in the U.S.S.R." and began: "Dear Mr. King."

After quoting the request addressed to him for a Soviet view of the winding up of the Comintern and of its bearing on future international relations, the letter said:—

"Dissolution of the Communist International is proper and timely because it facilitates organization of the common onslaught of all freedom-loving nations against the common enemy — Hitlerism.

Gives Reasons.

"Dissolution of the Communist International is proper because:

"(a) It exposes the lie of the Hitlerites to the effect that 'Moscow' allegedly intends to intervene in the life of other nations and to 'Bolshevize' them. An end is now being put to this lie.

"(b) It exposes the calumny of adversaries of Communism within the labor movement to the effect that the Communist parties in various countries are allegedly acting not in the interest of their people, but on orders from outside. An end is now being put to this calumny too.

"(c) It facilitates the work of patriots in freedom-loving countries for uniting progressive forces of their respective countries, regardless of party or religious faith, into a single camp of national liberation — for the unfolding struggle against Fascism.

"(D) It facilitates the work of patriots of all countries for the uniting of all freedom-loving peoples into a single international camp for the fight against the menace of world domination by Hitlerism, thus clearing the way to future organization of the companionship of nations based upon their equality.

Further Strengthen Effort.

"I think that all these circumstances taken together will result in a further strengthening of the united front of the Allies and other United Nations in their fight for victory over Hitlerite tyranny. I feel that dissolution of the Communist International is perfectly timely because it is exactly now, when the Fascist beast is exerting its last strength, that it is necessary to organize the common onslaught of freedom-loving countries to finish off this beast and to deliver the peoples from Fascist oppression.

"With respect.

"(Signed) J. Stalin, May 28, 1943."

American Bombers Smash Refineries And Shipyards

80 Tons of Bombs Also Dropped on Foggia Air Base East of Naples

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 29 — (AP) — Almost 100 United States heavy bombers, striking the most distant objective yet assigned in the attack on Italy from North Africa, bombed Leghorn yesterday and left a smoky trail of devastation in the oil refineries, docks and shipyards of that large port, 160 miles north of Rome.

At the same time, Cairo dispatches said, some two score bombers smashed at Foggia and dropped 80 tons of bombs on that air base 80 miles east of Naples.

The R.A.F. sent its Wellington bombers to Sardinia and Sicily Thursday night, Cairo announced, attacking airfields on Sardinia and scoring hits in railway areas and near oil installations.

(Dispatches from London said large units of Italy's fleet, which has seldom ventured to sea since the start of the war, may have been at Leghorn—known as Ilvorno to the Italians—when the Flying Fortresses visited the harbor.

(This was the first time that Leghorn had been bombed.)

Two waves of planes attacked Foggia, near the Adriatic side of the Italian peninsula, and a United States communique from Cairo said direct hits were made on several hangars, numerous fires started, and at least 13 enemy bombers were destroyed or damaged.

Leghorn is the seat of the great Ansaldo Shipbuilding Yard. Many of Italy's submarines were built there and it is an important submarine base.

The Allied communique said the shipyard was plastered with bombs and "great damage" done. Two large explosions were seen in the refinery area, and they were followed by fires which sent up such thick clouds of smoke that further observation proved impossible.

Three supply ships received hits, however, and other large fires were started in the railroad yards and oil storage tanks.

Every bomber got home from the attack, meeting only light fighter opposition and shooting down one of the few planes attacked attacking the closely packed formations. The bombers made the raid without fighter escort.

In the operations the Allies lost but two planes.

British Sub Presumed Lost

London, May 29 (CP)—The 1,475 ton submarine Regent is overdue and presumed lost, the Admiralty announced today. The Regent was commissioned in 1930 and was armed with a four-inch gun and eight 21-inch torpedo tubes. She normally carried 50 men. Her skipper, Lieut. W. N. R. Knox, won the Distinguished Service Cross.

U.S. Invasion of Attu Described by War Correspondent Who Had Ringside Seat

(Eugene Burns, Associated Press war correspondent who witnessed the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, had an aerial ringside seat for the American invasion on Japanese held Attu Island in the Aleutians May 11. Burns kept a detailed diary of his nearly 12 hours in the air on the flight to Attu and the aerial patrol above the island—which one officer described as "the first report of an invasion from the air." The delayed diary 550 was released today.)

Aboard a Catalina Patrol Boat off Attu, May 11 (Delayed) (AP) —This is my notebook for the first day's operation of Japanese extermination on North American soil. It is an historical day. But yet, being at the show was something like getting a seat at a Joe Louis boxing match and finding that most of the action is over before you are aware of what is happening.

3.40—I get out of a double eiderdown sleeping bag. Put on red flannel underwear over light cotton, three pair of wool socks, trousers, wool shirt and over that leather fleeced-lined flying suit.

3.50—Closh through foot-deep mud to breakfast.

4.45—Climb ladder into PBY (Catalina Patrol Bomber) with typewriter, and bombardier case in which I carry notes, paper and artillery binoculars.

4.49—"WEH" (Patrol plane Commander Lieut. Wilbur L. Wehmeyer, '29) climbs into blister with brief case. He commands our three-plane section which will have the submarine patrol off northeast Attu where the principal landings are to be made."

5.05—Taxi over steel runway which one week ago was a swampy bog.

3 Jap Airdromes In Wewak Sector Heavily Pounded

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 29 — (CP) — Nineteen tons of bombs, a considerable weight for the Southwest Pacific where the targets involved are much smaller than those being mass-raided in Europe, cascaded down upon three Japanese airdromes in the Wewak, New Guinea, sector yesterday.

Defying bad weather, formations of heavy bombers swept 325 miles up the New Guinea north coast beyond Lae, where 28 tons were dropped Thursday, to lash at the airfields of Boram, Dagua and Wewak. Many of the fires started appeared to be burning planes, today's communique reported.

Fighting their way through heavy storms, the bombers opened the attack before dawn. This thrust was followed by another fight. Despite the intensity of the antiaircraft fire, not a single Allied raider was lost.

The Japanese chose Millingimbi, Allied air base on Australia's north coast 300 miles east of Darwin, for the targets of eight bombers, escorted by six Zeros, but the communique said the 50 bombs dropped caused only slight damage and no casualties. Spitfires engaged the raiders at 15,000 feet, shot down three bombers for certain and damaged others at a cost of two defending fighters.

CHUNGKING UNDER ALARM

Chungking, May 29 (AP) — Chungking was under a two-hour air raid alarm this morning when 36 Japanese planes flew over the border into Szechwan Province to attack Liangshan, 105 miles northeast of this provincial capital.

Apparently no planes appeared over the capital itself.

FIFTY AIRMEN INSPECT PLANT

Fifty airmen from No. 6 Repair Depot, Trenton Air Station and Mountain View Bombing School, all of whom have been attending the winter sessions of the War Emergency Classes at the Belleville Collegiate, were conducted on a tour of inspection of the Canada Cement Company plant at Point Anne yesterday. Of special interest was the welding department at the Cement Company plant. The tour was arranged by Harold Howard, supervisor of the War Emergency classes while Thos. Bowler escorted the men through the plant. Expressions of appreciation on behalf of the airmen were extended by P/O Ploppot.

53RD CLASS OF AIR GUNNERS GRADUATE

The 53rd class of air gunners to graduate from the Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School will receive their coveted "wing" at the wings ceremony to be held on Monday according to official word from the station. Group Captain R. C. Ripley, officer commanding, will pin the wings on the successful graduates who will be promoted to the rank of temporary sergeant. No Belleville or district boys are in the class, although American, English and Canadian men are included.

WALKS INTO SIDE OF MOVING CAR

When he walked directly into the side of a moving motor car on Front St. early Friday evening, William Millan, of Ivanhoe, was knocked to the pavement. Neil Harris, 71 East Moira Street, was the driver of the motor vehicle and immediately stopped to render what assistance possible. Mr. Harris drove the pedestrian to nearby Dr. G. H. Stobie's surgery where medical examination revealed no serious injuries had resulted. Mr. Harris then reported the incident to police stating that Mr. Millan had walked from behind a parked car directly into the right fender of his motor car before being knocked down.

EIGHT GALLONS ICE CREAM STOLEN

The ice cream hunger of some local must surely be appeased today. That is if they consumed the eight gallons of ice cream stolen from the rear of the Empire Groceteria Friday.

Frank Domenico, proprietor of the groceteria, purchased three 8-gallon containers of ice cream. At the rear of his premises, he left them in a cool position until needed for sale. Some time later, however, one of the 8-gallon cans filled with ice cream was stolen. Police were notified, but in all probability by now the frozen cream has long since found its way into some youthful "tummies."

Army and Navy Veterans Send Smokes to 61 Boys

The hearts of 61 boys from the Belleville district serving overseas will be gladdened in the near future through the efforts of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Unit 201, "Fag Fund." The reason being that Secretary James Lazenby this week sent individual packages of 30 Canadian "smokes" to these 61 men serving their country. This shipment brings the total number of cigarettes sent overseas by the "Vets" up to 415,500.

The list of men sent cigarettes through the efforts of the Army and Navy Veterans unit here included:

Run Over by Train, Section Foreman Loses Both Legs

Charles Meens, 51, Bleecker Avenue, Knocked Down by Engine and Caboose

PURELY ACCIDENTAL

Charles Meens, 51-year-old C.N.R. yard section foreman at Belleville, residing at 438 Bleecker Ave., suffered the loss of both legs when a C.N.R. engine and caboose ran over him in the Belleville yards late Friday afternoon.

Mr. Meens, who is in charge of the section operations in the Belleville C.N.R. yards, was working on what is termed the north lead when a yard engine, driven by Engineer Joseph Hart of this city, was spotting a caboose along the middle lead. Yard Foreman Harold Clarke saw Mr. Meens standing with his back to the switching engine and suddenly step across the tracks directly in front of the oncoming yard engine. No warning could be given and Mr. Meens was struck by the engine drawbar, knocked between the rails where both the engine and caboose passed over him.

Employees Assist Injured Man

Railway employees rushed to assistance as soon as Mr. Clarke sounded the alarm and tourniquets were placed around both legs and the injured man rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. G. S. Cronk attended. It was discovered at the hospital that Mr. Meens' left leg had been severed just below the knee while the train had run over his right leg at the ankle flattening it out to such a degree that it was necessary to amputate right limb just below the knee also. Mr. Meens suffered severe head lacerations as the result of being knocked down, but remained conscious and directed operations at the scene of the accident.

First Aid Helpful

"There is no doubt but the successful application of tourniquets by C.N.R. employees at the scene of the accident saved Mr. Meens' life as the flow of blood was practically nil when the injured man arrived at the hospital," stated Dr. Cronk in paying tribute to the first aid operations of the railway employees. Later two blood transfusions were given the injured man as fellow-employees hastened to his aid at the hospital.

Repairing Tracks at Time

Mr. Meens was engaged repairing the tracks along the north lead with his back to the switching engine. Apparently the injured man did not hear the approach of the engine and caboose and stepped directly across the main lead rail into the path of the engine before any warning could be given to the crew. Yard Foreman Clarke was the only eyewitness and even when he saw Meens make his move it was too late to shout warnings and the engineer was unable to see Mr. Meens' actions. At first it was thought Mr. Meens might have stumbled, but this theory was later discounted as officials stated the injured man said he did not hear the approach of the engine switching the freight caboose.

Provincial Constables R. O'Brien and Harry Caldwell investigated the accident, which occurred about 5.40 p.m. Friday afternoon. Today C.N.R. officials here stated that although no official investigation had been started as yet, the matter seemed to be of a purely accidental nature.

INFANT SEMPLE

(Brighton)

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Semple, Bay Shore, Brighton, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Saturday morning, May 29th.

LATE MISS EMMA VANDER VOORT

The funeral of Miss Emma Vander Voort, a former resident of Belleville, who died in Toronto on May 26th., took place from the Canadian National Railways Station here shortly after noon on Friday, May 28th., to the Belleville Cemetery where interment took place.

The service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

DAVID SUTHERLAND (Formerly of Ameliasburg)

David Sutherland, formerly of the 1st. Concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County, died at his home in Vancouver, B.C., on Monday, May 24th., after a brief illness.

The late Mr. Sutherland, who was in his 70th. year, was born near Renfrew, Ontario, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Sutherland. When a young man he lived in Carlow Township, North Hastings. Later he went to Western Canada and settled at Camrose, Alberta, where he engaged successfully in the lumber and builders' supply business, being Vice-President of the Manning-Sutherland Lumber Company, Ltd. with retail yards located at numerous places in Alberta. In Camrose he was prominent in business and fraternal affairs, being Mayor of the town for a time, and president of the Board of Trade. Fraternally he was a Past Master in the Masonic Order. In the lumber industry throughout the Province of Alberta and Saskatchewan he was widely known and held the position of a director of the Lumbermen's Association.

Four and a half years ago Mr. Sutherland retired from active business and came east to live. He settled along the shore of the Bay of Quinte in the 1st. Concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County, where he established a fine home and farm. Late last fall his house was destroyed by fire and shortly afterwards he left to reside in Vancouver. In religion Mr. Sutherland was a member of Bethel Hall, Belleville, and was highly esteemed. Friends here and at his former home in Camrose will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Mabel Hannah; one brother, Mr. George Sutherland, 3rd. Concession of Sidney Township, and one sister, Mrs. Amos Wannamaker, near Coe Hill.

Resting at the Pinkston Funeral Home, 268 Church Street, Belleville. The funeral announcement is made on page two in this issue.

LATE MRS. THOMAS SAVAGE

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Savage, late residence, 32 Burton Street, took place from the Pinkston Funeral Home, 268 Church Street, on Friday afternoon, May 28th. The service in the chapel and at Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. G. G .Wright, Rector of Christ Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Glencoe Thompson, Peter Staring, Fred Wiggins, Sandy Lummiss, Harry Baker and William Waldorf.

Potatoes Scarce With Prices High

With potatoes for table use an almost unknown quantity on the Belleville market, vendors of certified seed varieties Saturday expressed a thought that in some cases purchasers were buying these for table use despite the extra price.

"I won't sell my seed potatoes to customers unless they first assure me they are for seed," stated one vendor on Saturday's market. "I am quite certain, however, that the potatoes in some cases are intended for table use. Still I have no control over the matter once the potatoes leave my hands."

Only one vendor offered potatoes for table use at 55c the peck while the certified seed variety sold at a new high of $4.50 the 75-pound bag.

Egg prices were steady and sold at 38c per dozen for first and 35c for mediums. Broilers sold up to 45c the pound and mature fowl from 38 to 40c. One or two vendors offered butter at 40c.

Raspberry bushes sold at $1 per bunch of 25 canes, while strawberry plants brought 50c the hundred. Tomato and cabbage plants were up to $1 the flat and onions up to $1.50 the flat. Tulips sold at 50c the bouquet.

Asparagus was offered in quantity at prices ranging from 20 to 30 cents the pound bunch according to grade. Rhubarb dropped to 5c the bunch as buyers showed little interest owing to sugar scarcity.

Mudcats sold at the usual 25c the pound and whitefish at 35c.

Young pigs were slightly easier in price as quantities over last week's record were offered for sale. Prices ranged from $6.50 to $8 each. One load of dry softwood blocks was offered at $18.

Group Capt. McBurney Inspects H. S. Cadets

Trenton, (Special) — Group Capt. R. E. McBurney, officer commanding Trenton Air Station, was the inspecting officer for Trenton High School cadet inspection on Wednesday afternoon and also took the salute. The girls were inspected by FO. Wright of the Women's Division.

The flight pennant for the girls was won by No. 1 flight in charge of Ft. Lt. Mary Margaret Maunder, Best cadet was Gerald Faul of No. 1 Flight.

Invited to Visit Air Station

On Friday both boys and girls were invited by Group Captain McBurney to visit the R.C.A.F. Station. Following the ceremonial they were inspected by Wing Commander Cairns, after which all were allowed to visit the hangars.

Present at the inspection were members of the School of Administration which at the present time is made up entirely of senior officers.

Through the kindness of Group Capt. McBurney, trucks and busses transported the girls and boys from the school to the air station and return.

Wm. Chambers Pres. Lions

At the regular meeting of the Lions Club on Thursday evening the annual election of officers took place.

The following officers elected will be installed into office at the first meeting in July: President, Bill Chambers; 1st Vice-Pres., Fred Juby; 2nd Vice-Pres., Gordon Flynn; 3rd Vice-Pres., Carman Scott; Sec., Thorne Spear; Treas., J. H. Matson; Lion Tamer, V. P. Carswell; Tail Twister, Jack Hewitt. Directors for two years, Vic Ryan and Ralph Weaver.

Plans were made for a ladies' night to be held on June 24th, also further plans for the jamboree which is to take place on June 30, July 1st and 2nd.

U.S. INVASION

5.57—We're circling over Constantine Harbor. The dock lights are a blurry drizzle.

6.26—We're carrying two heavy and two medium sized depth charges on our wings.

7.24—Semichis directly ahead and we see the waves beating against low cliffs through broken clouds. Only 25 miles from the grandstand seat. If it's clear here, it ought to be good at Attu. We all look pleased.

7:43 our gunners test fire their machine-guns.

8:00 we're circling north of Holtz Bay and Chicagof Harbors, about two miles off shore.

We sneak into a hole in the clouds, descend to water. That fog is thick, mister, and dangerous too.

9:03 report. Holtz Bay is bombed. Fog is 1,000 feet over target. The army bombers announced: "Hit all targets selected east and west army Holtz Bay".

9:52 a barge is sighted at Massacre Bay. We are landing troops, apparently.

10.31 we go for Holtz Bay where Japs are supposed to be strongest.

10:49 off Attu.

Three float planes (Kingfishers) from surface ships are zooming. There are open patches in the water about a half mile off.

10:54 the air is full of planes. The action must be on.

11.39 we sight many ships.

Fragmentary radio bits indicate that a landing has been made at North Attu.

2:05 the men who have landed must hear the roar of our motors. There's a 300 foot layer of fog between us and the water.

The reason why we can't get in to bombard with planes and to shell with surface craft tells the story eloquently why the Japs are still on Kiskia and digging in. Think of the tremendous force concentrated here, helpless because of this fog.

2:10 were some of those airplanes carrying supplies to the men who may have effected a landing? This weather is good for landing operations. The infantry can prove itself. It's the men who carry the gun and the bayonet on the end who count on this front.

2:12 we're thrumming back and forth before Chicagof and Holtz.

2:18 I'm chilled. Nothing is made to hold out freezing weather for 12 hours.

2:17 we look into Holtz Bay for the first time through wispy threads of fog. Sure enough there are Japanese landing barges and buildings on shore. At least 25 of them. No ack-ack.

2:25 our temperature is 38 Fahrenheit, wind north with five knot velocity.

2:30 get word that troops are ashore and have received supplies.

2:50 a P.B.Y. out of nowhere zooms up. It's our relief. We are heading for the barn.

CANADIANS LAY MINES

London, May 29 —(CP Cable)— R.C.A.F. planes of the Bomber Command laid mines in enemy waters last night, headquarters announced today. No planes are missing.

LADY SARAH CHURCHILL WED

Lieutenant Edwin F. Russell, U.S.N.R., and Mrs. Russell, leave fashionable St. Margaret's in Westminster, London, England, after their marriage. The bride is the former Lady Sarah Spencer-Churchill, 22-year-old daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and close kinswoman of Prime Minister Winston Churchill. The bridegroom, who was in on the African invasion, was formerly associate publisher of the Newark, N.J., Star-Ledger. After a ten-day honeymoon he will return to the wars, and she to her technician's bench in an arms factory.

Protection For Birds' Nests

IS THERE NOTHING WE CAN DO?

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

Having been "laid up for repairs" for some weeks, I have watched with keen interest the return of our song birds and their premediated choice of a building site.

With diligent haste the nests were completed, the eggs laid and nearly hatched.

On Sunday I watched a teen-aged boy make the rounds of every nest, excepting English Sparrows and Starlings, collecting all the eggs from each.

A rope, several times around his body, insured his safety as he climbed the high trees.

The neighbor lad who followed him took no part in robbing the nests, but stood at the foot of the tree from which the other lad had stolen the Catbird's eggs and watched him as he took each egg from his pocket and ground the young birds with his heel.

After returning from a drive through the caterpillar devastated area around the North Bay district where I had seen fuzzy caterpillars dangling on their webs from limbs which they had stripped of every leaf, I watched the Catbird (which builds in our tree every year, and delights us with the rich notes of his early morning song) hunting out the cocoons of the tree caterpillar, from under the eaves of the buildings, open the cocoon and carry off the contents.

Remembering the nude trees of the north and how few of our birds tackle the fuzzy caterpillar, I mentally encouraged him—"Go to it, Old Fellow, in your trim, dark-gray suit, feed 'em plenty. Every birdling in your nest is worth hundreds of dollars to Ontario."

We have just celebrated "Youth Week" with varied speeches, contests and programs. Do you wonder that I have to keep assuring myself that God does love—God is interested in that youth whom I have seen, yearly, steal the eggs of "God's little poultry" as the Indian Chief called our song birds."

Scientific statements have been issued repeatedly assuring us that "if we take care of the birds, the birds will take care of us," for man could never cope with the hordes of destructive insects which threaten us with starvation without the help of the birds.

We have laws on our statute books protecting them, of which this boy who yearly robs birds' nests, is doubtless aware.

Through the columns of your paper may I ask the fair-minded citizens of Belleville

Is there nothing we can do?

A Temporary "Shut-In."

Picton Cadet Corps Gives Fine Display At Annual Inspection

Picton, May 29.—The cadet corps of Picton Collegiate Institute received high praise from Capt. T. C. Holmes, District Cadet Officer, following inspection here yesterday. The corps was smaller than usual due to the fact that quite a number had left school to work on farms, others have enlisted for active service and some are members of the Reserve here.

However the Corps presented an unusually smart appearance and their drill was carried out in faultless fashion. For the first time the inspection was held on Main street instead of on the school campus. The physical drill was carried out on the armouries lawn. A large crowd witnessed the inspection and accorded hearty applause.

The corps was in command of Capt. Ted Rutter with Keith Simmons as lieutenant, Harry Bowers as sergeant, J. Hepburn, K. Rankin and W. Bains, corporals.

Capt. Holmes commended the corps on its showing and spoke of the value of cadet training. He gave details of the district cadet camp to be held this summer at Wellington. He presented the medal for the best cadet to Lorne Vance.

With Capt. Holmes at the saluting base were Col. L. C. Carr, R.C.A.M.P., Mayor W. G. Grothier, Capt. W. C. Hicks, Mayor N. McKibbon, J. deC. Hepburn, M.L.A.

IN MEMORIAM

MURRAY — In loving memory of our dear mother, Nellie Murray who passed away eight years ago today, May 29, 1935.

What would we give her hand to clasp,
Her patient face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in days that used to be.
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp her hand once more,
In Heaven, that happy life.

—Sadly missed by Sons and Daughters.

Never Anticipate Work of Police

The duties of a police officer are varied and just what they may be called upon to perform next can never be anticipated.

Take for instance this morning at the city police station where everything was peaceful and serene.

Suddenly a small boy strolled into the police station clutching a bright red apple: "Will you peel my apple for me", the little fellow enquired of Acting Sergeant Doug Ellis as he held the fruit forward.

"Why sonny, can't you eat it with the peeling on?" replied the officer.

"Yes, I can but my little baby sister outside in the carriage can't." was the unexpected reply. Without further comment the sergeant complied with the request and later the little lad clutched the peeled apple and thanking the officer seemed quite happy about the whole affair. Of course so was baby sister when she bit into the lucious fruit later, but it's safe betting big brother still had his share of the apple.

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

Another Belleville boy, Jack F. D. Bell, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, 60 Burton Street, had Royal Canadian Air Force wings pinned on the left side of his tunic on Friday. Jack graduated as a pilot from No. 8 Service Flying Training School at Moncton, N.B., at graduation ceremonies held Friday afternoon.

Born in Belleville 26 years ago, Sergeant Pilot Bell attended Queen Victoria School and Belleville Collegiate and took a great interest in sports, being a lover of baseball and skating. After school days he entered the employ of the Belleville Telephone Company and for a number of years worked as a lineman from the Belleville maintenance office. At the time of his enlistment in the R.C.A.F. he was stationed at Trenton in the telephone installation department.

Enlisting in April, 1942, he trained at Manning Pool, Toronto, at Elementary Flying Training School at Victoriaville, Quebec, and took his service training at the Moncton school from which he graduated.

The only member of his family in the services, Sgt. Pilot Bell has a brother, "Mac", in the Belleville Air Cadet Corps.

The congregation and officials of Christ Church will play hosts to the station personnel of No. 5 Initial Training School at Belleville on Sunday, when approximately 500 of the boys in training and their officers will attend the morning service, arriving at the church following a church parade from their station. The church parade will mark no special occasion, it being one of the infrequent mass visits of station personnel to a local church. Rev. G. G. Wright, Rector of Christ Church, will have charge of the service.

NURSES GOOD WALKERS

London (CP) — Sir Geoffrey Shakespeare told this story of a nursing sister when a bill giving a definite status to qualified assistant nurses was read a third time in the Commons. Using a pedometer, she found that on an average she walked never less than nine and sometimes as much as 13 miles each day in the same corridor.

BOMBED BOY REBUILT

London (CP) — Three year old Terry Stone, a London child, is today a picture of health, eagerness and joy, after staging what is said officially to have been the bravest struggle against heavy odds. Two years ago during the blitz he was removed to hospital with third degree burns; he was beyond recognition. Since then he has made his way back to life, learning all over again to eat, walk and see.

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE

Second Compulsory Employment Transfer Order

Notice to Certain Employers and Employees

Notice is hereby given that men employed in certain specified lines of civilian employment, who are in age and marital classes already designated under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, must report for interview not later than June 15th, 1943, to an Employment and Selective Service Office.

A. Objective:

This Second Order makes available for essential employments the services of men in age and marital classes designated as callable for Military Training under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, who are presently employed in the non-essential employments now specified.

B. EMPLOYMENTS COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

Men, of the specified categories, are covered if now employed in any of the following:

(1) Any occupation in or associated with retail stores; (2) any occupation in or associated with the manufacturing of feathers, plumes and artificial flowers; chewing gum; wire; lace goods; greeting cards; jewelry; (3) any occupation in or associated with distilling alcohol for beverage; (4) any occupation in or associated with the factory production of statuary and art goods; (5) any occupation in the operation of ice cream parlours and soda fountains; (6) any of the following occupations: bus boys; charmen and cleaners; custom furriers; dancing teachers; dish washers; doormen and starters; greens keepers; grounds keepers; porters (other than in railway train service); private chauffeurs.

C. AGE AND MARITAL CLASSES OF MEN COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

(a) Every man born in any year from 1917 to 1924 (inclusive) who has reached age 19.

(b) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, at July 15th, 1940, was: (i) unmarried; or (ii) divorced or judicially separated; or (iii) a widower without child or children.

(c) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who has, since July 15, 1940, become a widower without child or children now living.

(d) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, since July 15, 1940, has been divorced or judicially separated.

D. Procedure to be Followed:

All men as defined above must report to an Employment and Selective Service Office not later than June 15th, 1943. Men resident outside a city or town having an Employment and Selective Service Office, who are too far removed to call personally, may write to the nearest office in the first instance, and await further directions.

E. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEES:

When directed to accept employment, subsequent to the interview referred to, men described in Paragraphs B and C above are required by the Regulations to follow the direction given.

F. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYERS:

It will be illegal for an employer to retain in his employ after June 15th, 1943, any men referred to in Paragraph C above, at any of the employments set forth in Paragraph B above, unless a special permit has been obtained from a National Selective Service Officer, permitting such action.

G. Transportation:

Special provisions will be made for the transportation of men moved to work at a new place of residence.

H. Appeals:

If directed to transfer to employment subsequent to interview, a man may, if he objects, enter appeal with a Court of Referees, within 7 days of receiving such direction.

I. Penalties in Case of Employers:

Penalties are provided for any employer who retains in, or takes into, his employ after June 15th, 1943, any man covered by the Order, except under special permit.

J. Penalties in Case of Employees:

Penalties are provided for failure on the part of any employed man affected, to register under this Order, or to follow a subsequent direction to employment, and in addition to other penalties, refusal to comply renders a man liable to compulsory labour service in an Alternative Service Work Camp.

K. Special Request to Employers:

Each employer with three or more men covered by this Order in his employ is requested to co-operate by getting in touch with the Employment and Selective Service Office, to arrange a time for the interviews of his employees.

L. Authority:

This Order is issued under authority conferred on the Minister of Labour by National Selective Service Civilian Regulations (P.C. 246 of January 19th, 1943, and amending Orders in Council).

M. This Second Order is Additional to First Order:

Employments listed in Paragraph B above, declared non-essential in this Second Order, are additional to the non-essential employments contained in the First Order. The First Order, issued May 4th, 1943, required compliance by May 19th on the part of employees designated under Mobilization Regulations, and also of their employers, in the following lines of work:—

(1) taverns or liquor, wine and beer stores; (2) retail sale of candy, confectionery, tobacco, books, stationery, news; (3) barber shops and beauty parlours; (4) retail and wholesale florists; (5) service stations (gasoline-filling stations); (6) retail sale of motor vehicles or accessories; (7) retail sale of sporting goods or musical instruments; (8) waiter, taxi driver, elevator operator, hotel bell boy, domestic servant; (9) any occupation in or directly associated with entertainment including but not restricted to theatres, film agencies, motion picture companies, clubs, bowling alleys, pool rooms; (10) any occupation in or directly associated with dyeing, cleaning, and pressing (not including laundry work); baths; guide service; shoe shining.

Lettuce Is "Out" For Airmen Diet In Newfoundland

(By GLADYS LENNON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An R.C.A.F. Base in Newfoundland, May 29 (CP) — Supplying balanced meals has its problems at a large Air Force base surrounded by miles of bush through which no roads run.

Wrestling with these problems as messing officer of the station is a member of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division), Assistant Section Officer Wilma Gear of Grand Valley, Ont. Since her arrival here three months ago, she said, she had had "not much trouble" with supplies.

"Of course, there was the time that all the vegetable arrived frozen and we couldn't use them," she amended. "But we were fortunate in having dehydrated vegetables on hand. Then for a time we had no eggs and had to substitute beans for breakfast. But the men seemed to like the change.

"I had to stop trying to have lettuce, though. It was never fit to use when it got here and was awfully expensive."

'Tis Heavy Work

Flt. Sgt. William Morby of Regina, who has been cooking for the Air Force since 1939 and for this station for the past 13 months, said that not so long ago the situation had been "tough"; supplies did not arrive, or arrived spoiled, and the men had to be fed "just anyhow."

"But things seem to be going along all right now," he added. "In fact, we're better off than some stations in Canada. We're lucky to have extra messing and we get lots of fruit juices from the United States." (Cost of extra messing is paid out of canteen profits.)

"Flight," a veteran of the Imperial Army of 1914-18, said the Women's Division cooks and messwomen were "doing all right. They are some of the finest girls yiu could find anywhere. "But mind you," he continued, "I still maintain the work in a mess is too heavy for women."

But the girls did not agree. AW1 Amy Barter of the Gaspe Coast, whose sister Anne also works in the mess, said, "I just love it, and I love this station. I don't want to go back to Canada." It was the same stock back in the butcher shop where cook Cpl. Lottie Hewitt of Rollingdam, N.B., was preparing turkeys for the Sunday dinner.

It is almost a 24-hour job getting everybody fed at an operational station such as this. The big rush, of course, comes at the regular meal hours when hungry airmen line up in hundreds around the walls of the mess awaiting their turn at the serving tables.

Between times there are meals for certain groups whose hours are staggered. And from about 10.30 in the evening, when night shift workers begin coming in, until 1.00 a.m., the mess again hums with activity. At any hour air crews returning from operations may arrive looking for a hot meal—and get it. And they really do eat, those airmen.

Body is Found At Summer Camp

Gananoque, Ont., May 28 (CP)—The body of Samuel Dodson of New York City was found today at a summer camp near Half Moon Bay. He is believed to have been dead for some time. The body, clad in pyjamas, was found lying near a coal-oil heater.

It was found by Michael Brennan and Vincent Wiley after Wiley, a caretaker, became uneasy when he failed to hear from Dodson although Dodson had arranged to open the cottage May 6.

The deceased, who was about 80 years of age, has been coming here for many years.

Two persons died and 115 others at St. Andrews, in Fife, Scotland, became ill after eating sausages and sausage meat which contained arsenic. Authorities said arsenic could not have slipped in by accident.

Chinese Bombers Active at Ichang

Chungking, May 29 (AP)—Chinese bombers, escorted by fighters, bombed Ichang on Friday, Yangtse River port and base for the latest Japanese drive in Hupeh Province, the Chinese central news agency said.

The report said there was much damage to military installations and all the attacking planes returned safely.

A Chinese high command communique said the Chinese were battling two divisions of Japanese west of Ichang where on Tuesday and Wednesday 1,000 Japanese were reported killed. Large quantities of war supplies were reported seized.

The Chinese also were said to have recovered several points west of Lihsien, 75 miles southeast of Ichang.

Gen. Chen Cheng, vice-minister of war and one of China's most brilliant strategists, is commanding the forces opposing the Japanese offensive in Hupeh province, an official statement disclosed. Chinese authorities consider the offensive there the opening phase of the battle for Chungking.

Hurler Fined $200, Suspended For Thirty Days

New York, May 28. (AP)—Johnny Allen, veteran Brooklyn pitcher, was suspended for thirty days and fined $200 today by President Ford Frick of the National League for his part in the argument during the eighth inning of last night's game between the Dodgers and Pirates in Pittsburgh.

Frick also fined Pitchers Les Webber $75 and Rube Melton $50.

Allen was on the mound when Umpire George Barr called a balk on the hurler. The Brooklyn pitcher's temper flared and he made a rush for Barr. After a brief tussle other players finally separated Allen from Barr. But, meanwhile, another verbal skirmish broke out. As the result, Webber, Melton and Fred Fitzsimmons joined Allen in a trip to the showers.

Frick, however, took no action against Fitz, saying he was not seriously mixed up in the brawl.

Firer of Shots Named at Inquest

Sussex, N.B., May 27 (CP)—Nine witnesses remain to be heard in the inquest into the death of Pte. D. M. Bennett of McKellar, Ont., with the testimony scheduled to resume tonight for the third successive night.

Pte. Bennett died of gun-shot wounds two days after a riot at camp Sussex, May 6, and in the evidence given at last night's hearing two soldiers were identified for the first time as having fired shots during the disturbance that developed between members of the Voltigeurs De Quebec and the Dufferin and Haldimand Rifles.

Pte. F. Bergeton of the Voltigeurs testified that he had fired a bullet "into the air" from his hut to frighten "attackers" in the brawl and added that later Pte. J. P. Bidegare has used his rifle to do the same thing. He said that Pte. Bidegare was attacked by a number of men before he returned to the hut and fired the rifle.

ELECTROCUTED AS PIPE

Orillia, Ont., May 28 —(CP)—Hector Fournia of Orillia was killed today when a length of pipe he was carrying touched a high tension wire. Fournia, along with Alphonse Collins wag carrying a 27 foot length o pipe in the factory where they were employed.

When Collins saw his partner drop, he immediately released his end and escaped uninjured.

Improved Anti-Sub Methods

All signs indicate and explain the improvement which comes with the growing strength of the United Nations. There were handicaps early in the war which the Allies were forced to overcome. The United Nations were separated by the oceans and the seas, which made necessary the transportation of great armies and vast suantities of food and implements of war by ship. The enemy submarine was built for this and the former war with the purpose of preventing aid crossing the seas to Britain and the other Allies. These U-boats exacted toll in view of so much shipping, though many huge convoys passed through the seas unscathed.

But the enemy submarines which have been said to be a great problem, are being sunk and the loss of these wolves of the sea is said recently to have reached a record high while sinkings by enemy submarines have been considerably reduced.

While there is no definite official information, two London newspapers carried stories of diminishing Allied ship losses from U-boats. The reports told of May losses of enemy submarines as standing at an alltime high while the sinkings by the U-boats were at a record low in the same month according to the newspaper accounts. The view is that the U-boat menace is smashed.

Time gives the Allies the edge which is essential. It has made possible the development and use of new methods of chasing and sinking the enemy U-boats.

A statement was made on Friday by Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, chief of the United States Naval Air Operational Training Command, the first explanation of the U. S. navy's decision to supplement its carrier-based and flyinig boat program to include big, multi-engined bombers in answer to Axis subs operating off shore. In the words of Admiral Cook, "speed is essential in combatting the submarine. It's necessary to drop depth charges before the U-boat can crash-dive out of effective range, and the multi-engined bomber, with a speed of three hundred miles per hour is a most effective weapon. Flying boats have a very definite place in anti-sub warfare and must not be discounted."

Conservation

How saving British folk are is indicated by the report of the collection of salvage for the first 37 months of the war. To that would have to be added collections since that time to bring to the present the amount the British have saved.

Salvage of 3,467,665 tons was collected in 3 years. This means a stupendous total of seven hundred and ninety-three and a half shiploads of 5,000 tons each.

How effective this salvage has proven, no one can ever tell with anything like definiteness but it may be taken as certain that it has had immense value in Britain's war effort.

In many respects Britain has shown this spirit of conservation. As a result of the establishment of good relations in industry the loss of working time per man was at the rate of about one day in fifteen years during the first three years of this war. That record is something of which Britisih workers are justly proud. It is a patriotic record.

Dehydration of Fruit

A news story from Toronto tells that experts of the Ontario Research Foundation claim that research in the preservation of fruit with chemicals and in home dehydration apparatus may save hundreds of tons of Ontario fruit this year, though there is a shortage of preserving sugar. Miss E. Grant, chemist, states that certain fruits, particularly raspberries and pears, lend themselves especially well to preserving without sugar or preservatives, and that investigations show that canned fruit will keep without sugar provided care is taken in putting it down.

Most people remember dried apples which used to be much in favor as dessert and for making pies. Raspberries used to be sold in a dried condition. For use they had but to be put in water and stewed and with sugar they made excellent dessert.

This means dehydration. In Canada less work has been done on home dehydration than in the United States but it is likely a number of recently perfected dehydrators may be available for Canadian home canners.

As to chemical preservatives their use by commercial canners have been forbidden by law because most chemical preservatives unpleasantly affect some people. However some chemicals have been found which inhibit bacteria. Some preservatives have already been recommended by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. These require sugar before eating, this is to be taken from the regular ration of the consumer.

With the attention on canning and preserving, there is not the slightest doubt of intense interest in any method which will make it possible to preserve and put away perishable fruit of the winter season.

Those who remember the dried raspberries of years ago recall the relish with which these berries were eaten in the winter season.

A Real Problem

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

A St. Thomas young man who has been in almost constant service on one of Canada's corvettes for the last 18 months, was asked the other day if he enjoyed being home on leave and whether he would be glad when it was all over and he could return home to stay.

"I like coming home on leave, but I am restless after a day or two," he replied. "It's a hard life on a corvette, but I really enjoy getting back — and I don't think I could reconcile myself to returning and going back to my old job."

Multiply that case by hundreds or thousands and you have some idea of the problem of post-war rehabilitation of Canada's youthful fighting men.

"I have seen so much of the world at its most exciting period, that it is hard for me to settle down in one spot for very long," that lad from the corvette explained. "Why even when four or five of us are together in a strange port, we get restless and want to be on the go again after four or five days."

Poetic Justice

(Winnipeg Free Press)

Next to the story of the embarrassment the Dutch and Belgians have caused the Nazis by wholesale removal of tags from freight shipments, we think the best story to come out of Europe recently is the one concerning the salvage work on the sunken French fleet at Toulon,

The Nazis gave this chore to an Italian salvage firm with instructions to rush the salvaging of brass and nickel steel from the wrecks. The Italian divers went to work. Weeks passed and little or no precious war metal turned up. The Nazis became impatient and started to investigate.

They discovered that one of the divers, in cutting his way into a warship, had blundered into the pantry. There he discovered large stocks of canned foods. The interest of the divers in metal hit zero. They went after the canned goods with so much energy that large stocks were salvaged and shipped quietly to Italy. On the side, the divers bootlegged the stuff on the French black market.

Air Eighth Ocean

(Minneapolis Star Journal)

Even our most imaginative appraisals today of the future of aviation will have to be revised tomorrow.

Major de Seversky says we must think of the air as a new and concave sea, an eighth ocean. We are still scarcely into the Columbian era of exploration and conquest of that sea.

MEMORIAL DAY THOUGHT

We are the ones they had in mind
Who dared in freedom's cause to die,
The children following behind
For whom they held the flag on high,
We are the Age in which they thought
When freedom's battles first were fought.

Stand at their grassy mounds today
And think of them this glorious morn
Who bravely put their lives away
For generations then unborn.
This is their glory and their pride:
We were the unborn when they died.

For us whom they had never seen,
For us whom they would never see,
They gave up all that might have been
To keep us out of slavery.
Now all we are and all we know
Of freedom, unto them we owe.

For us they died! How make it plain
Beyond the power of words to say?
They did not give their lives in vain!
We too, serve freedom's cause today!
We fight that ages yet to be,
Shall know the joy of liberty.

FO. CHUCK McLEAN YEARNS TO BE BACK

Flier Recovering From Burns Tells of Keenness of "Buzz" Beurling for Action

Toronto, May 29 — (CP) — FO. Chuck McLean, former star lineman with Queen's University and Toronto Argonaut football teams, who has not yet recovered from burns suffered in an air crash over Malta, said last night he'd be back in action soon "to see the job thru to a finish."

McLean was PO. Buzz Beurling's Flight Commander at Malta and initiated the Verdun, Que., ace to action over the Mediterranean isle.

"I took Beurling up for his first flip and gave him his introduction to combat flying," McLean said. "He was so keen to get into action he got on our nerves.

"It was characteristic of 'greenies' to want to get into action at the earliest moment, but Beurling had 'em all beat in this respect. Every time it looked as if action were imminent, Beurling would come hopping around, yelling 'Oh boy! Another scramble! I hope I make this one!'"

McLean was injured last July when his plane was crashed by cannon fire from a German Messerschmitt and became a flaming death trap 23,000 feet above the Mediterranean. But McLean escaped although he spent almost a year in a hospital in England.

"The doctors say it'll be six or nine months before I can fly again, but I'm going to cut their time in half. I've got to get back with the lads," McLean said.

JAP TOEHOLD IN THE ALEUTIANS

Coroner's Jury Gives Verdict In Man's Death

Sussex, N.B., May 29 (CP)—After hearing a total of 34 witnesses, a coroner's jury inquiring into the death of Pte. D. M. Bennett of McKellar, Ont., Ottawa soldier fatally injured during a riot at Camp Sussex on May 6, early today brought in a verdict to the effect that Bennett came to his death from gas gangrene caused by a bullet fired from a rifle in the hands of an unidentified person.

A roder to the verdict, which was presented by the jury after one hour deliberation on the evidence submitted during the three nights of the inquiry, suggested further investigation by the Attorney General's Department.

Bennett died in hospital here two days after a brawl at the military camp between members of the Dufferin and Haldimand Rifles regiment of Ontario and the Voltigeurs De Quebec regiment.

During the inquest five soldiers testified that they had fired rifles durng the riot. They were Pte. J. P. Bidegare, Voltigeurs, Pte. P. Bergeton, Voltigeurs, Pte. W. W. Barkley, Dufferins, Pte. R. Boivin, Dufferins and Pte. Lutchl V. Calvarella, of the Dufferins.

Evidence given last night by 12 soldier witnesses described the throwing of stones, rifle shots, and men using fixed bayonets during the scrap.

Put Bayonet on Rifle

Pte. Bidegare on the witness stand said when Dufferin soldiers attempted to get into his building he put a bayonet in his rifle "to help my pals." He threatened one soldier with teh bayonet. A sergeant tried to take the rifle from him and men then knocked him to the ground and kicked him. He returned to the hut and saw Pte. K. Bergeton removing an empty cartridge from a rifle. "Give me the rifle and I'll fire it myself" said Bidegare.

"I loaded the gun again and I took position with left knee on the floor. I then fired the second time. Bergeton asekd me for his gun and I gave it to him" testified Bidegare.

Get Another Rifle

After getting another rifle, he went outside and found that the "Duffs" had gone to their own lines. I heard Volts yell 'come around this way. Some English are trying to get in' I went to help defend the hut. We then beat off the English and returned to the road."

With further reference to the shooting Bidegare said "I shot at a point where there had been some Duffs. When I fired I thought there was something there. I do not think I hit anyone as I did not hear of anyone being hurt."

The witness said as he took his position for the second shot, "I saw a Duff go by. The space was small and before I was ready the fellow had gone by. I shot in the direction of the Duff. As soon as I saw him go past the lighted part of the road I fired, but by the time I got the shot away he had passed by."

The War Today— Chinese Reds' Decision to Stand By Government Is Important Event

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

One of the best pieces of news to come out of China in a long time is the formal declaration by the Chinese Communists that they will stand by the government "until Japan and her Axis partners are defeated and construction of an independent, democratic China is completed."

This announcement is tantamount to a pledge that the Red Armies in the field — and there are several of them — will fight beside Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's forces to the end. It means on the face of it that settlement of the dangerous political fight between the Communists and the central government may be postponed until the conclusion of the war.

Importance to Allies

That's of the utmost importance not only to China but to the cause of the United Nations. Sooner or later there must be a show-down between the Reds and the central government to determine whether the Communist party shall be permitted to exist along with Gen. Chiang's Kuomintang (Nationalist) Party, which is the only one recognized officially.

Should this show-down come while the war is in progress it might easily produce a catastrophe. This quarrel is no academic conflict of words. There have been many clashes at arms between the Communist-led armies and the central government forces, notably in the summer of 1940 when bloody dissension invaded the Chinese ranks along the Sino-Jap battle-front.

China's Hour of Trial.

China's gravest hour of trial in her conflict with the Japanese lies immediately ahead. She is woefully weak from every point of view. About her only resources are manpower and unlimited courage and determination. Her task is to keep herself from being knocked out pending the time when the Allies can give her adequate aid.

The present Jap offensive along the Yangtse River towards Chungking may provide the crucial test. Should the Nipponese capture Chungking and overrun the surrounding territory it might to all intents end the Sino-Japanese war.

The minimum time that the Chinese will have to shift largely for themselves, except for increased help from the Allies in the way of air power, would seem to be some six months. The United Nations may undertake operations in the Southwestern Pacific which will act as a deterrent to the Japanese on the continent, but these operations can scarcely halt the Japanese efforts to complete their conquest of China while the Allies are engaged in defeating Hitler.

Thus the solidarity of the Communist and the General Government forces at this juncture may be the link with victory.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

We often hear a civilian refer to the President of the United States as "my commander-in-chief."

The fact is that the President is commander-in-chief only of the armed forces.

Section 2, Article II, of the Federal Constitution says in part:

"The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several states, when called into the actual Service of the United States."

Samuel Freeman Miller has been the only medical doctor to serve as a member of the U. S. Supreme Court. He was born in 1806 in the Kentucky bluegrass region and was of Pennsylvania German descent on his father's side. At the age of 30, without any previous formal education, he entered Transylvania University at Lexington, and in 1838 he was "examined and received" for the degree of M.D. For the next 12 years he practiced medicine in the mountain community around Barbourville. Becoming interested in politics and public affairs, he studied law "surreptitiously" and in 1847 was admitted to the bar of his home country. Originally a Whig, in 1850 he freed his slaves and removed to Keokuk, Iowa, where he became a prominent Republican leader. In 1862 President Lincoln appointed Miller an associate justice of the Supreme Court and he served as one of the most active and able members of that tribunal until his death in 1890. During the 28 years he served on the Supreme Court he took part in more than 5,000 decisions and was spokesman in more than 600.

Touches Question Of Coal Supply For Next Winter

Ottawa, May 28. (CP) — Mayor Fred Conboy of Toronto, said today he understood from officials that the Federal Government is willing to take responsibility for the supply of coal next winter.

He spoke briefly at the conference of the Canadian Federation of mayors and municipalities in asking Mayor David Elton of Lethbridge, Alta., if any assurance had been given to that effect by the Cabinet to the committee which interviewed ministers yesterday.

Mayor Elton said no assurance was given the committee by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Cabinet, although all representatives from the conference had been received with courtesy and consideration.

"My understanding of Mr. MacNamara's (Arthur MacNamara, National Selective Director) attitude", said Mayor Conboy, "was that in the matter of manpower and everything else they (the Dominion government) would accept responsibility for supply.

"They can not guarantee supply for there may be things beyond their control".

The municipalities would be asked to accept responsibility for coal distribution and to set up committees consisting of fuel dealers and others, Mayor Conboy said. They would also be asked to set aside bylaws restricting the use of soft coal and to give information to the public on the use of a proportion of soft coal, along with hard coal, where that was necessary.

Canada's Mobilization

Dr. F. Cyril James, principal of McGill University and chairman of Advisory Committee on Reconstruction was the main speaker at the morning session.

He said no country in the world with the exception of Great Britain had carried out mobilization for war more efficiently than Canada. Although more than 800,000 people in the armed services were producing nothing, Canada's production of goods and services had greatly increased.

This achievement was an indication that Canada could carry through post-war reconstruction with efficiency.

"The rate of industrialization in this country since the start of the war has been greater than anywhere else in the world, except in the United States during the Civil War", said Dr. James.

The conference approved a draft brief for presentation to the Reconstruction Committee of the House of Commons. It was prepared by George S. Mooney of Montreal, executive director of the Federation.

The convention of the Federation ended today after election of officers and Dr. James' speech.

Yesterday the conference had failed to reach a decision on the Mooney brief.

Capital Closeups

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 29 — (CP) — There has been no official comment on reports from London that the British government intends to create an Empire Merchant Air Service operating around the world between Empire bases, but the indication is that any such development would receive a favorable reception here.

Canada, said one authority, is in an ideal geographical position to take a prominent place in post-war commercial aviation. The Dominion lies on the shortest, "great circle" routes to Europe and Asia.

The major post-war traffic is likely to be in a north-and-south direction, this informant said, because of the proximity of the United States, with its great population. Any development which would increase the east-and-west flow would be of major import.

The London report, published in the Daily Mail, said all Commonwealth countries would share in development and administration of the service. Government-owned trans-Canada Air Lines already has been designated as the Dominion's entry in post-war international flying competition and presumably would give Canada a well-developed base if Empire service is started.

Meantime, it was understood, no official intimation has been received from Britain that any service like that suggested in the Daily Mail is in prospect for the near future. And pending such official word Ottawa is keeping its own counsel on the project.

Fixer-upper

After Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South) said he thought Miss Olive Waters, Defence Minister Ralston's secretary, the best "fixer-upper" in Ottawa and that she ought to get a medal, he went down to see her and get the secret of her success.

There she was behind her desk, dark-haired and smiling, listening intently to a member of parliament—when she could find time to listen between telephone calls, messages from the minister, and a lot of buzzer-pushing for messengers and what-not.

We decided probably Mr. Gillis was right. Certainly Miss Waters would do for the diplomatic corps. Everybody she saw went away smiling.

If she's a success, she said, the credit goes to "a message to Garcia". After she finished high school at Montreal, her home town, and two years of business training she applied for her first job. Her prospective employer asked if she'd read that story of a man who "delivered the goods".

She said she hadn't so he gave her a copy. She read it through and has been delivering ever since. Ten years ago she began work for Col. Ralston. His second question when he interviewed her was: "Have you read 'A Message to Garcia'?" That time she could answer yes.

"You know, it's easy to get along with the members," Miss Waters said. "I've only had two of them get harsh—and one of them was putting on a show for a constituent so it didn't worry me at all."

Taxless Stogies

Last year when Mayor Cornelius D. Scully of Pittsburgh came to the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities he did a bit of civic advertising by bringing along a huge box of honest-to-goodness Pittsburgh stogies. The customs was $40. He applied for a refund—and got it.

This year he came back, again with cigars. The duty was higher but he told the officer about 1942 and didn't have to pay.

"I think that shows a very fine discretion on the part of your customs," Mayor Scully said.

Me and Churchill . . .

J. P. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) said in the House May 6 that Prime Minister Churchill never mentioned Prime Minister Mackenzie King when he spoke from London. May 19 Mr. Churchill spoke in Washington, commenting that Mr. King was present for the address.

Mr. Pouliot couldn't let that chance go by. "It's quite certain," he told the Commons, "that Mr. Churchill never misses a speech by the member for Temiscouata in this House."

Gives Talks on Missions

At a W. M. S. meeting held recently in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The Rev. E. H. Johnston, a returned missionary from Manchuria, adressed the women present on "What the Missionary Work is and its Proper Support."

He said that missions are not a failure, but have succeeded far beyond expectations.

If people claim that money spent on mission work in the East is wasted, it is based on ignorance.

Mr. Johnston left Manchuria on furlough shortly before the outbreak of the present hostilities between Japan and U. S. A.

At present he is employed by the Presbyterian Church in Canada as Secretary of the Missionary Education Committee and as such visits congregations promoting a greater interest in the work of mission.

THE ENGINEERS FORD A RIVER!
ONE OF A SERIES OF ACTION PICTURES WITH CANADA'S MECHANIZED ARMY

"The manner in which Canadian troops throw themselves into the long arduous months of intensive training; the spirit which they display in combat is a mark for the rest of us to shoot at."

PRESIDENT

PAVING THE WAY for any offensive action, the Engineers are foremost in the field. While enemy planes strafe and dive bomb advanced positions, these skilful beavers in battle dress launch a floating bridge to carry the light advance forces and secure the bridge head. This is quickly followed up by a huskier bridge that will stand up under the rumble of heavy tanks, trucks, artillery tractors and other vehicles of war (see sketch above).

First in, last out in military operations, the Sappers hack roads through thick jungle, locate and dig up hidden mines, make unexploded bombs safe. They dismantle booby traps, erect suspension bridges and provide water supplies to all formations in the field. Most United Nations victories have been made possible because our Engineers have overcome all enemy obstacles—taking hours instead of days to peg out safety lanes through mine fields and make way for the attack.

With modern mobile equipment, the Engineers today take the "impossible" in their stride! When the history of this war is finally recorded, many of the highlights will be provided by the courage and achievements of our gallant Sappers.

On Thursday evening, May 27th, a number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. L. Masterson in honor of Mr. Nathan Luscombe, who is leaving to serve in the R.C.A.S.C. The guest of honor was presented with a money belt and a set of military brushes in a leather case. The evening was spent in playing euchre after which refreshments were served.

A very successful bridge and euchre party was held on Friday evening at King George School under the auspices of the Home and School Club, proceeds to help buy a public address system. For bridge the winning ladies were Mrs. Irene Heath and Mrs. A. Hitchon and the winning men, Mr. D. Storey and Mr. C. Heath. The ladies' euchre prizes were won by Mrs. F. Wood and Mrs. G. Bristol, while the men's prizes went to Mr. W. Rose and Mr. J. Thomson.

WEDDINGS

MASON—FORIN

A pretty military wedding was performed at Debert, N.S., on Monday, May 24th, when Isabel Forin, of Dalhousie, N.B., became the bride of Sgt. Laurence Mason, son of Mrs. Mason and the late George Mason, 3 Grove St., Belleville. The ceremony was performed by the Padre of the Algonquin Regt., of which Sgt. Mason is a member. The happy couple are spending a holiday with Sgt. Mason's mother and sister in this city.

SING—TRELEAVEN

Christ Church, Belleville, was the scene of a quiet wedding Tuesday, May 25th, at 7.30 when the Rev. C. P. Heaven united in marriage Irene May Treleaven, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Treleaven, of Portage La Prairie, Man., and LAC. Charles William Sing, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Sing, also of Portage La Prarie, Man. Beautiful baskets of pastel tulips and tall tapers formed an attractive setting for the occasion. The bride was lovely in an attractive suit of azure blue silk with matching hat and beige accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses and lily of the valley. Their attendants were LAC. and Mrs. Percy Smith, of Saskatoon, Sask. After a short honeymoon the happy couple will reside at Chatham, New Brunswick.

BAUMHOUR—HOUGHTON

A quiet wedding took place on Monday evening, May 17th, 1943, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Houghton, Mattawa, Ontario, when their second eldest daughter, Georgina Ardis was united in marriage to Cpl. Lloyd Charles Baumhour, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Baumhour, Madoc, Ont.

The bride was attired in a street length dress of Queen's blue with braid and sequin trimming and carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Miss Jane Houghton, of Ottawa, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Ambrose Houghton, of Sarnia, the bride's eldest brother, acted as best man.

The Rev. John Breckenridge, pastor of Callander United Church performed the marriage ceremony, after which a buffet supper was served to a few close friends.

After their honeymoon to various points in Ontario the bridal couple will reside in Ottawa where the groom is on the staff of the Rideau Military Hospital.

Celebrate Sixty Years Married

Cobourg—Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Curvin, well known Cobourg residents, celebrated their diamond wedding day on Sunday last at their home in Cobourg, residents of that town for the past twenty-five years. They formerly resided at Warkworth and out west.

Mr. Curvin is an ardent bowler and was honored with a life membership in Cobourg Lawn Bowling Club. They have five sons and four daughters: Mrs. R. Maxwell, of Pasadena, Calif.; Mrs. B. Wood, Belleville; Ann, of Toronto; Mrs. C. Braley, Cleveland, Ohio; Almer, of Peterboro; Ray, of Detroit; Frank, of Toronto, Carl, of Buffalo and William, of Hamilton. With the exception of Mrs. Maxwell, all were home to celebrate their parents' 60th wedding anniversary.

St. Michael's H. S. Students Give Fine Performance in 'H.M.S. Pinafore'

The comic operetta, "H. M. S. Pinafore," presented by St. Michael's High School at St. Michael's auditorium on Friday evening, showed marked ability performances on the part of the cast in the field of amateur stage acting.

Figurative laurel wreaths go to Sister Mary Lenore for her fine direction of the show; also to those responsible for the excellent casting and to each and everyone of the performers who cleverly enacted and portrayed the individual characters of the sparkling production and literally made them glow with life.

"H.M.S. Pinafore" has for the most part an operatic script, which, when interspersed with light comedy running through its various sequences, serves to furnish a delightful evening's entertainment.

Story of Operetta

The setting for the story is the deck of the H.M.S. Pinafore at anchor in the Bay of Portsmouth. A certain able seaman of that particular ship is in love with the lovely daughter of his captain and she with him. The captain, perfectly ignorant of the fact, makes it known that the First Lord of the Admiralty, a man of lofty birth, wishes to marry his daughter. On hearing of this, his daughter shamefully tells him of her love for the humble sailor, but because of her rank and position, she will scorn his love and not admit it. Accompanied by his sisters, his cousins and his aunts, the great lord comes to see her and proves himself a wise-cracking, egotistical, cynical and self-centred character of a man.

Seizing an opportunity, the young sailor confesses his love to the captain's daughter who rejects him because of their difference in rank. As a result, he plans to take his life and is just about to do it when she confesses her love for him. They plan to marry at once.

Now the captain tells a certain lady that he is in love with her but the difference in their rank prevents him from marrying her. She, therefore, seeks to prepare him for a change in his fortunes.

A talkative, superficial and broken-down old sailor tells his captain of the marriage planned between his daughter and the lowly sailor. The captain awaits his chance and arrests the attempted flight. The great lord, enraged at the news of his rival, orders him to a dungeon. But the old lady, who is in love with the captain, confesses that years ago she had been nurse to both the captain and to the sailor that his daughter loved, and that she had "mixed them up" in infancy. The captain was of lower birth and the sailor a "regular patrician." As a result the Lord of the Admiralty gives the captain's daughter to her beloved. The captain pledges his troth to the one he loves and the great lord marries his cousin. All ends in "joy and rapture."

Parts Handled Deftly

Robert Temple gave a splendid performance as the egotistical, cynical and wisecracking Sir Joseph Porter (First Lord of the Admiralty) and proved an outstanding character right through to the show's climax.

Fraser McAuley as Captain Corcoran, and Robert Flurey as Ralph Rackstraw the young sailor in love with the captain's daughter, very cleverly enacted their respective roles.

A sterling portrayal was displayed by John Doyle in the character of the talkative broken down old sailor, who proved to be the highlighting comedy character of the play.

Joan Fahey, as the captain's daughter Josephine; Inez Forster as the cousin of Sir Joseph Porter; and Joan Boyle, as Buttercup, who was in love with the captain, left nothing to be desired.

Edward Thomas, as the Boatswain's Mate, and Tom Mascaro as the Carpenter's Mate, carried their parts through to perfection and also injected a fine vein of comedy to the show.

In fact, each and everyone of the already mentioned cast, together with the able seamen and Sir Joseph's relatives, displayed marked musical ability.

On the whole, the pupils taking part in the production should be commended for "H.M.S. Pinafore" was very well directed, staged and presented.

Special mention should be made of Mrs. W. G. Grant who assisted at the piano during the entertainment.

11th Annual Convention of W. A. And L. A. Societies Held in City

The 11th annual convention of the Women's Associations and Ladies' Aid Societies was held in Holloway Street United Church on May 27th with an attendance of 300.

The convention opened with the president, Mrs. E. Ward of Picton, in the chair. Community singing led by Mrs. Walden, of Picton was followed by the Theme Song.

Members of the Rose Hall W.A. then took charge of the devotional period, with Mrs. Lane as leader.

Mrs. Lane addressed the convention, referring to the Victory Loan Campaign poster which read "What is Canada's Greatest Enemy?" Is it Hitler? Mussolini? Hirohito? No! It is inertia.

So in the church, is the greatest enemy desecration of the Sabbath Day and intemperance, lack of leaders in the church and shortage of ministers? Is it lack of funds to meet the ever growing need and opportunity of the church at home and abroad?

Are any or all of these the enemy of our church, or is it spiritual inertia?

Coming closer home what is the weakness in the Women's Association Societies? Lack of talent and worthwhile programs, lack of vision of the valuable work in the life of the community that might be done, lack of opportunities to work now that suppers, etc., are cancelled?

"Rather, is it not lack of co-operation with those who are leaders, or worse, non-constructive criticism", said Mrs. Lane. 'We need enthusiasm such as the commandos show in their salvage collections'."

"Surely if we, the women of Hastings and Prince Edward counties, compare the circumstances in which we find ourselves with those of women in other lands, especially the occupied countries, we must admit we have much for which to praise God. True, there are hearts that break, many who are anxious and depressed, over-burdened and over-worked and perhaps the copious rainfall is testing our faith, but we still have as our Czech friends say, a wonderful land of opportunity and freedom."

"Too many of us have inertia in regard to prayer, private prayer or worship in the home, prayer, the greatest weapon of all time.

Throughout history periods of calamity, sorrow or utter extremity have led invariably to a renewed interest in spiritual things. None of us desire war, but we neglect the things which prevent war. If we believe that the future of Canada depends on what the war does to this generation of youth, we will strive to eradicate inertia with consecration." The speaker concluded her address with the verse

Let us then
'Rise up Women of God
The Church for you doth wait,
Her sterngth unequal to her task
Rise up and make her great!'

Following Mrs. Lane's address Mrs. Arthur Wannamaker offered prayer. The devotional period ended with a solo by Mrs. McNeill.

The treasurer, Mrs. G. C. Shorey of Foxboro then presented the year's report.

At this time, Mrs. G. Dobbs, President of the Holloway Street W.A. welcomed the delegates. Mrs. Morris Stickle of Johnstown replied to the address of welcome.

Mrs. E. Ward then addressed the convention welcoming the members and thanking them for the honor of being elected president. Mrs. Ward continued: "The church has a new and very real challenge today when war threatens our homes and country, even our very civilization. Home life is the first casualty in any war and home life affects church life."

"What kind of church," asked the speaker, "will be waiting for our men when they come back from overseas? Will it be filled with worshippers and will there be an attitude of reverence and respect? Do we go to learn to know God better or just for prestige?

As homemakers of the church, the W.A. has a distinctive part to play in one of the greatest tasks ever faced in the history of our church.

I leave this as a challenge to you women of the associations to keep church attendance regularly before your members. Urge them to attend every Sunday and to use their influence on others. Our chief duty as a W.A. is to help our pastors. Let us start right here and do our best," she concluded.

The secretary, Mrs. Harry Murphy, then read the minutes of the 1942 convention.

The president then appointed the following business committee: Mrs. Walt of Consecon, Miss K. Currie of Stirling, and Mrs. Lane of Picton.

Reports were received from a number of societies. Mrs. L. W. Scott sang "The Stranger of Galilee."

Speaks on Temperance

Mrs. H. Cory of Trenton gave an address on "Temperance." People sometimes say "what has the intemperance of others to do with us," but we may well follow the example of Christ when he cleansed the temple of evil-doers. Mrs. Cory deplored the prevalence of intoxication among members of the armed forces or even wives of men overseas. She cited a case in Trenton where fire broke out in a home where an intoxicated mother had left her small children alone.

The speaker spoke then of the apalling spread of venereal diseases stating that the Dominion government has recently set aside $235,000 to cope with this evil.

"There is a serious need for means of guarding the chastity of Canadian girls," said the speaker. "We should be alive to the seriousness of conditions in our country and do our utmost to urge that measures be taken to improve these conditions."

Mrs. Fallis Gives Talk on Dominion Woman's Association Council

Mrs. A. M. Fallis, representing the Dominion Woman's Association Council, brought greetings and best wishes from the council.

The Dominion Woman's Association Council had its inception on November 19th, 1940 taking as its motto "The work of our hands establish Thou it." It aims at a four-fold development. 1. To administer and govern all matters of general policy for the advancement spiritually, educationally, socially and financially of the Woman's Associations. 2. To give information, prepare and forward literature. 3. To receive and prepare repots of W.A. work and material for the W.A. page in the United Church Observer. 4. To promote the organization of a W.A. in every congregation, a Presbytery W.A. in every Presbytery and a conference W.A. in ever conference of the United Church.

Of the thirteen organized Presbyteries, only four are affiliated with the D.W.A.C. The fee for Presbytery Associations is five dollars, for local associations five cents per capita.

Already the D.W.A.C. has done much work. They have joined with the Dominion Board in the first joint publication namely "The Woman Visitor From the Church." They have assisted Y.W.C.A.'s in Sunday School afternoon entertainment for the members of the armed forces. They co-operate with the committee on camp and war production.

Mrs. Fallis rates the president of a W.A. on the same level as an elder of the church. Meeting should be well planned. Have a motto and live up to it. Have business well presented and devotions well prepared. Do not have unfamiliar tunes. Have plenty of hymn books. Michael Angelo said that trifles make perfection and perfection is no trifle. Plato said 'You should learn to consume your own smoke with an extra draft of hard work so those about you may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaint.'

"We are often spoken of as church mothers", she said. "A mother's love shines not as a street light turned on now and then shining only in her home, but as a star constant, eternal, going out from the home and around the world in the lives of her children.

Stirling W.A. Takes Charge.

The Stirling W.A. took charge of the Quiet Half Hour. The hymn "More Love to Thee", was sung and Mrs. Hagerman read from the Book of John.

Mrs. Good spoke of the derivation of the word Christian, first used when the disciples were called Christians in Antioch.

According to St. Paul a Christian is "One who loves our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth."

"You and I may not agree about miracles", said Mrs. Good, "or some difficult sayings of St. Paul. but we can meet on this common ground of love to Jesus Christ".

After lunch, served by the ladies of Holloway St. Church, the afternoon session opened with community singing led by Mrs. Walden.

The Millford W.A. took charge of the devotional period, opening with the hymn "Breathe on me Breath of Life". In the absence of Mrs. Lehigh, called away by illness of her father, Mrs. Ward gave the Scripture reading.

Mrs. W. Brooks spoke on the visit of Christ to the home of Martha and Mary. Both Martha and Mary had rejoiced to sit at the Lord's feet and hear his word. Added to Martha's reverence for the Great Teacher was her sense of hospitality but she was cumbered with much serving—she probably undertook to set a more lavish table than usual.

How many times this happens when the minister goes to a home. Martha seems to have lost her temper and appealed to the Master "Lord, dost Thou not care that my sister did leave me to serve alone? Bid her therefore that she help me.'

Personal Complaints Discourteous

It is exceedingly discourteous to complain of another member of a family before a guest. How many Christian people are guilty of this. Parents often bring the faults of their children to attention of their pastor on his visits, with the children in the room. So we see Martha placed the emphasis on the wrong things.

"In our W.A. we must not overemphasize the financial and social aims and thereby neglect the spiritual duties of our society', concluded the speaker.

Reports were received from the remaining societies—fifty-four in all.

Following this Mrs. Marting sang a hymn of Consecration and the offering was received.

Round Table Conferance

In Mrs. Lehigh's absence, the round table conference was conducted by Mrs Fallis. Several points were brought out. Where there is a fee for membership, only paid-up members should have voting power. Consider executive meetings closed. When the group system is used it is advisable for group captains to discuss proposed activities with the executive.

A monthly meeting of the W.A. is best.

Some discussion arose as to the advisability of eliminating reports from societies. A suggestion was offered that they be sent in early and any useful items presented briefly to the convention.

The question of affiliating with the Dominion Council was put before the meeting and it was decided to have the executive settle the matter.

Rev. Fletcher Speaks on Juvenile Delinquency

The Rev. W. P. Fletcher of Marmora, delivered an inspirational address. He stated that he was not naturally pessimistic, but viewed with alarm the present juvenile delinquency and the depressing situation in church and religion.

There is usually a tendency among oldsters to think the new generation is going to the dogs and it is not our fault. Whose fault is it then? Young people are what the seniors have led them to be or else we have not used our divine right to keep them from going to the dogs. After all juvenile delinquency is but the result of senile delinquency. If boys go astray there is something wrong with father and mother.

Mr. Fletcher spoke of the deep Christian spirit shown in the Queen's recent speech, quoting several passage. It is very hard today to be a preacher because you know there are so many people dead against you. Now is the time for women to help, in this day when sin is almost popular.

Evils of Gambling

One of the evils of the day is gambling. Horse-race gambling and gambling dens are bad, but the police force do keep them in check. There is a more insidious form. Think of Bingo. It makes one's heart ache to see little girls going about selling tickets to raffle hot cross buns!

"We must not let down in our attitude towards imtemperance" said Mr. Fletcher. "Novel reading is a legitimate pleasure that stimulates one's imagination but how unpleasant to have a good story spoiled by having drinking intoxicating beverages treated as an incidental thing. Similarly the moving picture people of all classes drinking cocktails. We must not only stem the tide but dam it and turn it in another direction".

"There is nothing more damning to a soul than hate. Keep hate and prejudice out of your heart. Never forget that there are greathearted Christians among our enemies. Wives and sweethearts suffer there even as you have suffered. People in other lands have intense longing even as we have for the great new day. Keep love's flame blazing in your hearts for that great day. See that the little ones are fed".

"Be much interested in mission work. These things must go on. And remember that Christ still stands for that which is sweet and clean and pure and beautiful.

Years ago the rice-eating peoples suffered from the scourge of beri-beri. The trouble didn't lie in what was IN the rice—but what was MISSING from it. A needed vitamin resided in the shell of the rice—and it had been polished off.

Today, it is known that some health problems arise from the ABSENCE of vitamins in the food eaten. But we never SAW a vitamin.

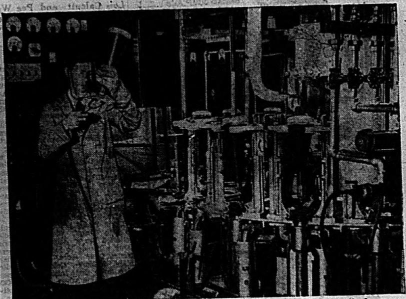
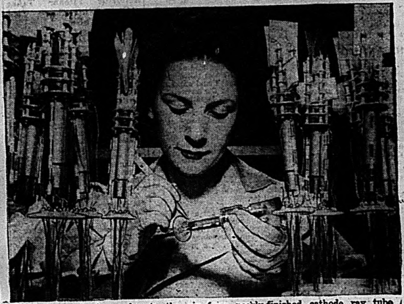
Wartime Scientific Progress in Canada Promises Peacetime Luxuries, New Jobs

Cleanliness and neatness predominate in Toronto's Research Enterprises, busy at work on a hundred new devices to aid war, make life happier after.



Trained technicians check the mount mechanisms of the delicate cathode ray tube, used in secret wartime radio devices. Plastics, synthetic rubber, high octane gas employ hundreds of Canada's chemists, will create many industries.



Intricate mechanism exhausts the air from nearly-finished cathode ray tube by electricity and liquid air. Much of scientific apparatus will be used in television and other important radio advances for civilian needs after war.

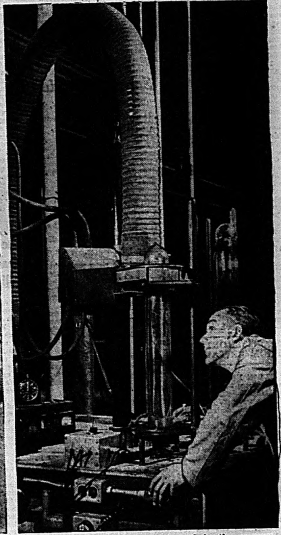
Newly-manufactured equipment is put through severe tests (top photo) to insure first class performance. In lower picture glass worker is sealing ray tube.

This item is one of many now being manufactured in Canada, which were imported before the war. Plants will remain to fill needs of country in peacetime.



Cathode ray tube parts are cleaned in the vacuum firing machine which drives all gases from metal. This equipment is vital to Canadian fighting men.

Braves and Phillies Drop Back in League Standings After Showing Way For Month

Both Teams Have Lost Punch at Bat and Hurlers Are Not Clicking

INDIANS MOVE UP

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sport Writer

It may be a little early to say the honeymoon is over for the bewildered Boston Braves and the high-flying Phillies, but of the developments of recent days there are indications the bride and groom are getting ready to start fighting over the biscuits, anyway.

When the Braves bowed to St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 in 10 innings yesterday, and the Phils blew a 5-run lead to hand Cincinnati Reds an 11-8 victory, it marked the 4th loss in the last five trips to the post for both Boston and Philadelphia.

The 11 runs the Reds chalked up in yesterday's game were four more than they'd scored in any previous game this season. And the Phils really had to go to work to lose the ball game. But they finally turned the trick when the Cincinnati outfit landed on Johnny Podgajny for three runs in the eighth.

The most remarkable thing about the Braves' loss to the Cards was that they even made Max Lanier look like a pitcher. He served up a five-hitter against Boston bats that appeared to have holes in them. The pay-off poke in this affair was Lou Klein's 10th-inning triple that sent the clincher home.

Indians In Tie For Lead.

Meantime, the Cleveland Indians climbed up to a first-place tie with Washington Senators in the American League by belting Boston's Red Sox 5-2 behind Jack Salveson's steady 10-hit hurling. The Senators and St. Louis Browns were idle.

New York Yankees broke their five-game winning streak with a 2-1 edge over the Tigers, but Hank Borowy's jinx over the Detroits had to be extra-hot to do it. The sophomore right hander, who downed Detroit four times in a row last year, tried his arm for the first time this season, and found it was still working as he tossed an eight-hitter. Russ Christopher went the whole way to give Philadelphia Athletics a 5-2 victory over Chicago White Sox.

Giants Now Sixth.

New York Giants moved up to sixth place in the National League by clouting the Cubs 3-1 behind Harry Feldman's tight elbowing. Sid Gordon knocked in two of the runs as the New Yorkers, winning their fifth straight over the clubs, introduced a resolution stating that they'd like to play the rest of the season in Chicago.

A wild pitch with the bases loaded and a homer by Dixie Walker produced four runs for Brooklyn in the first inning against Pittsburgh and it was no trick at all for the Dodgers to coast from there to a 6-2 victory over the Bucs.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

London, May 29—(CP) — While Henry Cotton watched, helpless in his sick bed, fire destroyed the Ashbridge Golf Club where the former British Open Champion is professional. It was the fifth fire in the village district within a week and police and Home Guard redoubled efforts to trace suspected arsonists.

Invalided recently from the Royal Air Force, Cotton lives in a house only 400 yards from the $54,000 clubhouse. He said the blaze started in the thatched roof and that the fire brigade ran short of water and were able to save only one wing. No one was injured.

Sam Dorman, Cotton's assistant who was a professional in Poland before the war, lost all his possessions. "He lost everything in Poland and now he has had the same bad luck again," Cotton said.

Several members lost clubs and balls and Cotton three sets of clubs, including ones with which he played important matches. "All the stock in the shop was burned," Cotton said. "How we are going to replace the stuff I don't know. The balls are the most difficult problem." (New golf balls are a rarity in Britain these days.)

George Henry Stratton, 79, who taught the King in the fine arts of horseback riding, died at Heatham, Norfolk. He was riding master to King George V and spent more than 50 years in the service of the Royal Family at Sandringham.

War damage from enemy action at Kennington Oval, home of the Surrey County Cricket Club, was estimated to be at least $45,000, exclusive of decorations and other repairs necessary to prepare the ground for the game. The disclosure came at the annual meeting when Capt. F. R. Brown, a Test cricketer now prisoner-of-war in Italy, was elected a member of the committee.

Rugby followers got a lift when it was announced that Lieut. Wilfred Wooller, Welsh rugby international missing 14 months following the fall of Java, is a prisoner-of-war in Japan.

Revelation came in a message broadcast by Wooller from Tokyo and picked up in New Zealand. It was relayed to his wife, Lady Gillian Wooller, daughter of the Earl of Plymouth, at St. Fagan's Castle, near Cardiff.

First "capped" when he was 17, Wooller played 18 times for Wales.

RALPH McCABE WINNING HURLER AGAINST ROYALS

Belleville Pitcher Takes Over With Score Tied and in Third

LEAFS ADD TO LEAD

By The Associated Press

There's an old hunting adage that a "miss is as good as a mile" when the quarry escapes and today Montreal, Newark and Jersey City will tell you that losing an International League game by a single run is just as definite as being beaten by a lopsided margin.

All the games played in the Shaughnessy circuit yesterday were decided by one run, with the deciding tallies in the Baltimore-Jersey City and Syracuse-Newark frays coming in the ninth frame. Toronto got its winning marker over Montreal in the lower half of the seventh.

The Rochester at Buffalo game was postponed, the fourth day of idleness for the Bisons in the last five days.

Toronto, still safely in the league lead, got back its winning ways by edging out the Montreal nine, 5-4, when Herb Crompton raced home from third on Alex Campanis' wild throw to the plate after fielding a tap to second base.

Maurice Van Robays, late of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was the hero of the contest by driving in three runs. He homered in the fourth with the bases empty and doubled with the sacks crowded in the fifth for two more.

Del Jones' fly brought Hal Sieling home with Baltimore's winning run in the last of the ninth for a 5-4 verdict over the Jersey City Giants. Rube Fischer, Jersey pitcher, tried to shame his mates at the plate by blasting a homer while a fellow Giant was perched on the bases but the Orioles wiped out this advantage with single runs in the seventh and eighth and won in the ninth.

Dutch Mele cornered most of the glory in Syracuse's 3-2 decision over Newark Bears in the hot race for second place. He drove in all the Chief's runs with a trio of singles and a double. His ninth inning one-baser came with two out and the score tied at two all. The hit brought Van Harrington home from second.

Harrington had gotten on base on one of the nine passes issued by Joe Page. Page, however, struck out 11 but yielded eight hits. He was opposed by Arnold Carter, who gave up only five blows but forced in a Bear run on a walk.

The Red Shadow Heading Toward Belleville Ring

Flashing across the wrestling horizon of this continent today is a new hooded grappler known as The Red Shadow. Who he is and where he came from seems to be just as big a mystery as his countenance, so Promoter Frank Tunney, of the Queensbury A.C. has chosen "Big Earl" McCready to try and expose this new mystery man's face to the wrestling public of Belleville at the Hume Arena next Wednesday night. Can McCready accomplish what others of his chosen field have failed to do — namely, unmask The Red Shadow?

The red masked rassler stands six feet three inches tall and weighs 235 pounds. McCready stands six foot two inches in height but tips the scales at 241 pounds, exactly 96 ounces heavier than the behooded gent. Their Belleville meeting marks the first time The Red Shadow and McCready have clashed in the squared circle and it promises to be interesting to say the least. Promoter Tunney is adding two high class preliminaries to this feature attraction.

This man at Bath, England, had the right idea even if it did backfire. He went to a neighbor's house one evening to save fuel and was fined the equivalent of $3.75 for leaving a light on in his own home.

Toronto, May 29 — (CP) — Somehow we just knew they shouldn't let women get mixed up in professional sport! Helen Nicol, star Edmonton pitcher who signed with the All-American professional girls softball league at Chicago this year, tells in a letter home what's going on in the big time. The girls, says Helen, are being given lectures on beauty treatments, make-up, how to walk properly etc. How awful! There's no mention of the correct words of apology when a player bumps the catcher while sliding home. We didn't expect the girls would be taught to chew tobacco (it would give the league a big-time baseball touch at that) but imagine being taught make-up and posture at training camp. Helen says the girls wear uniform skirts, blouses and socks with cleated shoes. There's no mention of caps. Presumably, with no cap to doff after a smart play is applauded, the girls will curtsy to the crowd. Yes, we certainly must see one of those games! Incidentally the rules, at least, are not unlike baseball. Teams have nine players and the pitcher's box is 40 feet from the plate instead of 35 as in the Canadian girls' game. Lead-offs are permitted to base-runners. Yes, it reads like baseball. But that make-up gag! Wow!

Another Break-through!

Women have stormed still another stronghold of male sport—10-pin bowling. A year ago a six-team mixed 10-pin league with a few women bowlers was formed in Winnipeg as an experiment. It was a smash hit. After the season ended, fifty women attended a re-organization meeting, decided to expand the league to 12 teams opening the next season Sept. 22, and added the proviso that if possible the league will be expanded to 16 teams.

BRISTOL GIRLS WIN EASILY FROM DEACONS

Lois Calcutt and Pee Wee Colden Had Too Much on Ball for Losers

ONE CIRCUIT BLOW

Chalking up their second win in as many starts, Bill Davis' Bristol Aircraft girls needed but the eight runs they scored in the fifth inning to beat the Deacon A.C. lassies 20 to 4 in a City League Softball League game played at the Armouries last evening.

Lois Calcutt started on the hilltop for the Bristol, but gave way to "Pee Wee" Colden in the fourth with the veteran mite doing a choice piece of relief hurling as her team-mates drove Pauline Schrieder from the Deacon mound in the fifth, with "Stewie" Stewart finishing the piece on the losers' mound. Miss Colden was in rare form and whiffed seven in three innings of hurling, striking out the side in the last frame.

Doris Waite hit for the circuit to help Bristol, while M. Elliott collected for a triple and Doris Benn a double to help the winners mount their score. On Monday night Tommy Colden's Alemite girls make their initial appearance of the season when the SWACO girls meet Dick Goodfellow's Optical lassies at the Armouries lawn.

The line-ups:

Bristol—Elliott, 1b.; Zebedee, 3b.; Benn, c.; Waite, s.s.; Allison, 2b.; Way, l.f.; Calcutt and Colden, p; Carter, c.f. and Brady, r.f.

Score by innings:

Foundries Down Army and Navy Kids In Exhibition Tilt

In an exhibition softball game played at the Collegiate campus Friday evening the Belleville Foundries downed the Army and Navy Vets Juniors 13 to 7. Extra base hits by the Orr brothers and J. Callaghan proved the undoing of Red Townsend's kids, with J. Orr hitting for the circuit in the eighth, while Jack Wardaugh delivered the only extra base hit for the kids, a home run in the ninth.

Manager Willing started Fred Waite on the mound for the "foundrymen" and later took over the pitching duties himself in the sixth. Skipper Townsend sent all of his aspiring kids into the line-up with Boyle starting on the hilltop and giving away to Young in the fifth. With lusty hitting dominating some exceptionally fine fielding was in evidence, taking into consideration it was the first game played by either squad. The line score:

Foundry 0 4 0 [illegible] 1 2 1 2 2—13 runs
Juniors 0 3 0 1 0 1 0 1 1— 7 runs

Umpire: Ross Clare.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Judge—Pat, did you steal farmer Brown's pig, and if so, what did you do with it?

Pat—Killed it an' ate it, your honor.

Judge—Pat, when you are brought face to face with this farmer and his pig on the judgment day, what will you say when he accuses you of this theft?

Pat—Did you say the pig would be there, your honor?

Judge—Yes.

Pat—Well, then, Oi'll say: "Mr. Brown, there's yer pig!"

(A knotty problem.)

When is a triple play not a triple play?

Here's what happened. The other day the Cincinnati Reds had two men on base with none out when the batter hit the ball. Before another pitch was delivered the side had been retired, but it was officially ruled a double play, although three outs were made. This is not quite as silly as it sounds, either.

In a Red-Pirate game earlier this season Gerald Walker was on first and Frank McCormick on second when Bert Haas slapped a grounder to Bob Elliott. The big blond quickly stepped on third base to force McCormick and whipped a throw over to Elbie Fletcher to nip Haas. Two out, of course.

Gee Walker, however, has that Babe Herman touch whenever he gets on the basepaths. While the double-play was being completed, Gee wandered off second and was caught in a run-up. That ended when Frank Gustine hit Walker in the back with a throw, the ball rolling past third. Gee rolled past third himself and headed for home only to be nailed at the plate.

Was it a triple? Ford Frick ruled that the flow of movement had been so interrupted by the pursuit of Walker that it could not fit properly into the sacred category of triple plays. So it is a double play on which three outs were made. That's one for the book, too.

(Some fine scores.)

When the Major "A" trundlers wound up their year's activities and elected officers the other night at the Recreation Alleys, Secretary Clarence Bryant announced the individual bowling champions of the year. For the year's high average it was a close race between Joe Legault and Evan Barlow, Joe having knocked the maples for a cool 228 of an average, while Evan was just two pins lower.

In the high three string it was nip and tuck with "Toots" Holway copping the honors with a hot 868, followed by Ray Lennox, who rolled an 860. The year's high single score was captured by Art Whalen, who posted a torrid 362 one cold winter's night, nearly fifty points better than E. Brooks' 334, that was good enough for a second place. Belleville Golf won the regular league schedule, while the O.N.R. captured the league play-off honors.

(Some familiar names.)

Operator No. 47 reports some findings at the Reliance softball practice recently. Here's what he says he saw—Johnny Bawden, Ding Luffman and Bill Anderson warming up their flinging arms in the bull pen with Clarence Tuttle handling the receiving end. At first base it was Gene LeBoune while around the keystone sack the veteran Teddy Henn worked with Cy Barriage at short, while Coach "Spike" Pryke looked on while Gerald Ethier guarded the hot corner. In the outfield it was Bill Whalen, crutches and all, Don Wilkins, Joe Kelleher, Speedy St. Louis and a couple of dark horses and if some of those names don't spell championship, Skipper Pryke is going to be most unhappy. It's quite a galaxy of mumblers Reliance has banded together, but down around Stephens-Adamson Al Hitchon, Dave Batchelor and Jim Hunter only seem to be concerned regarding when and where the softball league is going to open.

Bill Davis' Bristol Aircraft lassies took a strangle hold on the leadership of the Ladies' Softball League by chalking up their second win, in as many starts, beating Deacons 20 to 4 last night. The puzzle of the game was why Skipper Davis pulled Lois Calcutt in the fourth with her nine well in the lead. Sure enough Pauline Colden did a smart chore of relief hurling, but Mrs. Calcutt was never in difficulty.

At the Collegiate campus Harold Willing's Belleville Foundry nine, a new entry into the Men's City softball loop let it be known they are a contending team to be reckoned with as they beat Red Townsend's Army and Navy Vets kids 13 to 7 in an exhibition game.

President Harry Knott is calling the Men's Softball Executive together over the weekend following which the green light will be given the men's game next week.

AIRMAN KILLED

Richmond, Ont., May 29. (CP)— An airman believed to be from Uplands Service Flying Training School near Ottawa was killed yesterday when the Harvard plane he was piloting crashed in a field on the farm of Stewart Nixon.

Next of kin have been informed and the flier's name will be issued shortly.

R.C.A.F. officers from Ottawa made an investigation at the scene of the accident and guards were placed around the wreckage.

British miners who had worked for four years with courage and persistence were beginning to show signs of fatigue, Raymond Evershed, East Midlands Fuel Controller, said at Derby.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 78

The Kibitzer

Lookie, Cookie. There are billions of bridge hands. Horse Sense rules handle all of them. You have read a few of those rules. Try some of them on this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A Q 10 5
♥J 9 7 5 4
♦A J
♣K 4

NORTH
♠K 9 6 2
♥8 6
♦Q 8 5 2
♣A 6 2

South is dealer. He must either pass or bid. If he bids one in a suit, he admits having at least five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks, a biddable suit.

A suit is biddable if it has at least Q J 3 2, or J 5 4 3 2 or 7 6 5 4 3 2. South has two biddable suits. With different length suits, first bid the longer.

A sure trick is an ace or K Q. An A K combination is known as two sure tricks. A high card is an ace or a king or a queen. A suit trick is a high card or a short card. A no-trump trick is a high card.

South has two sure tricks. He has four high cards. With a short card in each minor and four high cards, he has six suit tricks. But only four no-trump tricks.

With at least what he needs, the opening bid by South is one heart. In answer to that, his partner in the north should pass if he has not more than two tricks.

With more than two tricks, including two high cards, partner should bid something. Bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

North has four suit tricks; three high cards and a short card in hearts. He has only three no-trump tricks. But he has enough tricks for a bid of some kind.

North has no biddable suit for a takeout. Nor has he enough hearts to support his partner's suit for an assist. Therefore, his first response is one no-trump.

We will learn more about such things. If you have followed me this far, you can feel proud of yourself. And the other way around.

AT THE BELLE

"They Got Me Covered"

Bringing the top favorites, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, together for the sixth time on the screen, "They Got Me Covered" is a sparkling romantic farce of a foreign correspondent's troubles with a band of enemy agents and is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

In this Samuel Goldwyn production Bob Hope plays the role of Bob Kittredge, Moscow correspondent of the Amalgamated News Agency, who muffs the German invasion of Russia and is called home in disgrace and violently discharged. Going to Washington to visit his girl friend, Christine Hill (Dorothy Lamour), Kittredge gets a tip on a sensational story and hastily goes after it.

Directed by David Butler, who also handled the two stars' last two hits, "Road to Morocco" and "Caught in the Draft", the new offering is said to be the funniest of all the Hope-Lamour vehicles, as well as the most timely. It also introduces to picture-goers Goldwyn's newest find, gray-eyed Lenore Aubert, who plays the part of a fascinating spy in the thrill-laden film as her first American portrayal.

Otto Preminger heads the supporting cast as the leader of the spy ring, with Edward Ciannelli, Donald Meek and Philip Ahn as his aids and Marion Martin as a glamorous blonde to whom Bob Hope is married by the Nazi agents, as part of the discrediting process. Donald MacBride as Hope's explosive boss, Phyllis Ruth as the stenographer, Florence Bates, Walter Catlett, John Abbott and Frank Sully have other important roles.

Designed for laughing purposes only "They Got Me Covered" strikes a highly modern note with its presentation of pre-Pearl Harbor espionage activities in this country.

The Belle News of the World, a Walt Disney color cartoon, "Education For Death" and a new edition of "The March of Time", "Men of the Fleet" will aso be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Man With Two Lives"
(First Belleville Showing)

An interesting and highly dramatic story is told in "Man With Two Lives," the Monogram filmplay which comes to the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight with Edward Norris in the starring role.

The plot deals with the strange dual personality of Norris, who is apparently killed in an automobile accident on the night of his engagement party. His fiancee enlists the aid of a scientist who has previously restored life to animals, and this doctor undertakes to perform a similar operation on the dead man. His experiment reaches its crucial point just as Panino, a vicious criminal, is electrocuted, and the soul of the gangster passes into the body of Norris, who returns to life.

Assuming the characteristics of the criminal, Norris takes over the leadership of his gang and embarks on a career of crime, culminating in a series of brutal murders. A succession of exciting events leads to a startling climax.

"The Doctor Takes a Wife"

"The Doctor Takes a Wife," new Columbia comedy co-starring Loretta Young and Ray Milland, opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre as the added hit. Hailed as a hectic, hilarious story of a young medico who hates career women and a young author who writes books in praise of spinsterhood, "The Doctor Takes a Wife" includes in its cast such other well-known players as Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick and Edmund Gwenn.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop came home early today on account of Saturday, and he was thinking to himself in his private chair and he leened his head back saying, Oh, take it away.

What, pop? I said, and he said, I was merely referring to life in general. It seems stale, flat and unprofitable just at the moment, he said.

Well why, pop, have you got a headake? I said, and he said, No, I'm just bored. I suppose that's one feeling that never overwhelms you at your age, he said.

Sure it does, pop said, but I always know just what to do about it, and it always works, and pop said, Well, that sounds like a trick worth knowing, what the dooce do you do?

I just call up one of the fellows on the telephone, I said, and pop said, Suppose you have nothing to say to him?

That dont matter, something comes to you and the first thing you know you're having a interesting conversation, I said. Why dont you try it, pop? Why dont you call up Mr. Lewis, for instance, and start to talk to him? I said, and pop said, I'm afraid I'm not gifted that way. I'd probably just hem and haw and Mr. Lewis would think I was coocoo.

Then I tell you, pop, supopse I call up Puds Simkins and let you talk to him, you dont care what he thinks of you, do you? I said, and pop said, I think I'd rather listen while you talk to him. It may give me an idea of the proper tecknique for some future time, he said.

The result being I called up Puds and we started to talk in general about how we felt and what we were doing and different things, and after about 10 minutes I looked at pop and here he was asleep in his chair with a happy expression proving at least he wasn't bored in his sleep, and I said goodbye to Puds and snuck out of the room on my tip toes feeling like a great doctor or somebody.

Hollywood and HERE

By HYE BOSSIN

Canadian-born Mary Pickford became America's Sweetheart in the early days of the motion picture and still retains that affectionate distinction. And she hasn't forgotten Canada.

A Toronto businessmen's organization proposed to sell shares in a new $15,000 home known as the Mary Pickford Honeymoon Bungalow, the receipts going to worthy causes. The Lion's Club joined the scheme. Mary donated a piece of property in Toronto, which was sold for $5,000, and got things going. The East York Council contributed the land. The house was built and is awaiting the lucky winner.

Miss Pickford came to Canada for a personal appearance tour of Ontario and Quebec in order to stimulate the sale of shares. These will be sold right across Canada.

Who'll get the money? The Lion's British Child War Victims Fund, connected with the Waifs and Strays Home, London, will get 50 per cent; 40 per cent will go to the Toronto Telegram's War Victims Fund, and 10 per cent to Maltese Relief.

Is it any wonder that Canada's Mary is still America's Sweetheart?

The king of the horse opera, as Westerns are known to the trade, is no wild-ridin' rootin' shootin' galoot but a pleasant, white-haired old fellow named Harry Sherman. He's the boss of the village called Shermanville, located in the heart of Hollywood, and the bad hombres and good stop their rampaging at the snap of his fingers.

Sherman has been making Westerns for 25 years. He started in 1918 with the first Zane Grey story to reach the screen, "The Light of Western Stars," in which Dustin Farnum starred. He's had his ups and down. Nine years ago he was broke and Paramount staked him with enough to make the first Hopalong Cassidy film. He hired William Boyd, who was also on hard times.

Last week the 50th Hopalong Cassidy was ready for release. Sherman and Boyd each has more money than either can use. The average Cassidy feature costs under $100,000, a modest sum according to movie standards. They make six a year, each taking two weeks, and for this 12-week job Boyd collects $200,000. Not bad, not bad at all.

For his biggest film to date he won't use any of his own money. It's "Buffalo Bill," which Fox will make in Technicolor at a cost of $2,000,000.

The Small-Mouthed Black Bass

It is said of Bass, that he is the only one of our fishes that make love in his mating season. Certainly there are times when the observer will notice the rather tender touches, but there are times too, when he is just as mean a "critter" as anyone could meet. We mention these Bass traits because they have a big bearing on the Bass existence, they are just a part of what seems to make the Bass so different from other fish species.

In all of his habits the Bass is distinctly a temperature fish; he does not go by the calendar. So we find that when the water temperature reached about 50 deg. F. the Male Bass comes in to look for a nest. He knows what he wants. No violent wave action, but still with a good water circulation and a coarse gravelly bottom covered by feet in diameter to be protected from two to four feet of water. He likes his cleared area of about two from two sides, the better for him to guard it. When the water temperature has reached 60 deg. F., he goes out to get his mate. This temperature could easily vary from year to year in the same area as much as two weeks in its arrival.

Very tenderely he guides her to the nest, where spawning occurs. A female of two pounds should spawn about 5000 eggs. The spawning and fertilizing take place at intervals. After each time the male examines the vent of the female. Until she has completed her part he urges her in her efforts, and when he is finally satisfied that she has done her complete share, he kicks her out, just the same as any other enemy. For the time of from two to five days it takes the little one-tenth to one-twelfth inch diameter eggs to hatch, the male poises above the nest, ever fanning with his fins to keep it clean of silt.

Hatched out, the tiny fish, weighted down by the yolk sac, drop into the rock crevices, where they stay and live on the sac for from ten to twelve days. Relieved of this weight the little fish rise to congregate for a few days about the nest, finally to spread out along the shallow shore waters. Their diet now is of water fleas and other plancton. The male Bass continues to guard the brood for some 28 days after they have left the nest, and often must patrol as much as one hundred yards along the shoreline. It is quite easy at this time to see the young bass of from one quarter to one third of an inch long. They look very black against any kind of light colored bottom.

Growth of Bass

We quote here some figures of ages of Bass, with their corresponding lengths in inches and weights. These figures are for Lake Nipissing, and taken from the report of Professor W. J. K. Harkness, to whom we are indebted for some of the other observations in this Bass story. Lake Nipissing Bass may be said to grow slightly larger than the average, due to good temperature and water depth conditions.

Years Old	Length Inches	Weight
3	8.1	6 oz.
4	9.4	8 oz.
5	10.9	13 oz.
6	11.7	1 lb. 1 oz.
7	13.4	1 lb. 9 oz.
8	14.0	1 lb. 12 oz.
9	14.8	2 lb. 2 oz.
10	15.5	2 lb. 8 oz.
11	16.2	2 lb. 11 oz.
12	16.3	3 lb. 8 oz.

Having noted that a two-year-old female should spawn about 5000 eggs, we should be able to get out pencil and paper to show that our Bass population, less those taken by angling, should increase at the rate of 2500 to one each year. Wonderful thought, but it does not work out that way. Let us jot down some of the population reducing factors.

1. Too much prominence cannot be given to the removal of the guarding male. Bass as a rule start to spawn in their sixth year. For the first year the male cannot be regarded as a good nest guarder. He frightens too easily and too often will leave the nest to look out for itself. However, in the second year of guarding, he is nothing short of ferocious in his determination to protect his care. We have seen a Bass we thought should weight about four pounds, kill a carp that would be around the twenty-five pound mark. When he is guarding his nest or later, his young, the guarding male will attack anything that comes his way, even to a bare hook. At this latter stage it is possible that 2,000 young Bass have lived to make up the brood, and if this is true, everyone of these would become prey to predaceous fish, animals or birds.

This is why we advance plans, so that anglers will not fish for or take guarding Bass. In many cases all that is needed by way of education is to point out to the angler that he is destroying his own prospects of future good Bass fishing by taking out the protector. Certainly such practice is not in the code of a sportsman. It makes us think of taking a mother away from her infant baby on a cannibal island. So just because the law reads that open season for Bass commences July 1st., that is no excuse for taking guarding males.

2. The Game and Fisheries laws state the legal length for taking Bass to be ten inches. Look over the age, length and weight table of Lake Nipissing fish. This is true—any animal must reproduce at least once, if his stock is to continue. Theoretically in Lake Nipissing if every fish would be caught when it has reached this length limit, none would be left to reproduce. And since males of seven years old have just become good nest guarders, the angler could deplete this 11.7 inch class as well. We know of Bass areas where a six year old Bass is still not quite the ten inches, but we do recommend here that the length limit would serve better for conservation if raised to twelve inches.

3. Every year is not a good Bass hatching year. A. L. Tester, reporting on the Goose Island area in Lake Nipissing, says that on June 17th., 1930, which was a very hot still day, the temperature rose suddenly to 74 deg. F. The result was the death of all Bass hatches in that area. A sudden fall in temperature, according to some observers has even surer killing capacity. 1928 was known to be an exceedingly good year for Bass hatching, 1934 was fair, as was also 1936. So the calculator must base his Bass increase as not so much in each year, but so much in probably six or seven years.

Estimating Good Hatching Years

This brings up a rather interesting Bass question. How can one determine when we have a good Bass year. Well, says that in 1940 the preponderance of Bass in catches would measure approximately 10 inches, we would date this back five years in the case of Lake Nipissing. In 1941, this preponderance would continue, but the fish then would be one year older, and in size to correspond. Of course the accurate way to tell Bass ages is not by length or weight, but by scale reading. This is how this scale reading works. It is not hard to do, by means of a good magnifying class. When the scale first appears it is a fairly round, clear plaque. As each lunar month comes along a thin ring of growth is added. The increase in scale covering for a larger fish is not accomplished by added scales, but by scale growth. In the summer time of abundant feed, this scale growth is rapid in common with the fish growth. The spaces between each ring edge are comparatively far apart. But in winter when food and growth conditions are reversed the lunar month rings are very close together. Under the glass, the winter rings appear almost as one darker ring, while the summer ones are more lightly colored. So if you discover Bass scales with nine winter rings, he is by July 1st. of this year, nine years old.

Propagation Difficulties

Another important way in which Bass differ from other important fishes is in the inability to spawn them artificially, or even to hatch the eggs in incubation. As a result there is no easy way to reproduce Bass in very large quantities for re-stocking purposes. Some Bass propagation is practised by means of specially prepared Bass ponds, in which the Bass are allowed to spawn, hatch out the young, after which the little fish are collected for further rearing.

The food of a Bass is progressive according to its development. A tiny yellow born Bass has for his diet the tiny water plancton. On reaching two inches in length he eats about equal amounts of insect larvae and small fish, mostly small perch minnows. Five inch Bass pass up most of their insect diet for about an even split between small fish and crayfish. Larger Bass eat about 70 per cent of crayfish and 30 per cent of small fish.

The Bass Future

Now what does the future hold for the Bass? Perhaps in Ontario the Bass areas are much more limited than would appear to the casual observer. In the first place the Bass is a shallow water fish; rarely does he ever go into more than 20 feet of water depth. Also he may be described as a stony bottom fish. These are the areas of greatest feed for the Bass, and limit our total of Bass locations considerably. As well we have many inland areas where, because of too warm water and congested Bass populations, the fish become infected with flukes (parasites) that for most people remove the Bass for table use. These parasites, by the way, are not injurious to humans. We think too that the Bass is not much on migration from base his Bas sincrease as not so stocking may not be expected to any appreciabel extent.

We think of a former favourite area, Thomas Bay on the Southern side of the Manitoulin Island. We ran into the "thumb" for shelter in a cruise some twenty years ago. Going over the shallows we saw very many big Bass, so we stayed to fish, and really got fine catches. Coming home we called at Tobermory for ice, and perhaps foolishly told of where we got our fine Bass. Later, Tobermory was to become a tourist centre, and the business of taking tourists on gasoline boats to get Bass was very prominent among the tourist attractions. For some years "the guides made a 'bee-line' for 'Thomas' Bay, that is till it was no longer worth going to for Bass. It is now some years since this area was apparently fished out and left alone, but it has not come back as a good Bass ground. We know of another area not fifty miles away that has not yet been discovered, where Bass could migrate from it. This was their custom. Bass are certainly the most desired fish of all in the American tourist mind and there are many Bass advocates in Ontario as well. It does appear now that our Bass will systematically be depleted unless plans will be adopted whereby the natural propagation can go on in necessary amount.

The plans as advocated at the annual meeting of the Federation seemed to be the best that could be advanced for Bass Conservation. We will welcome, however, any other good ideas on this very important subject. Won't you sit down and write to the secretary stating your observations and suggestions.

NG DREAM

T GORMAN NICKLS

HAPTER 37

She went on thinking of Jud as letters came from home, one postmarked before Pearl Harbor that was normal and newsy and one postmarked after Pearl Harbor that was full of the war and Grandmother Hallette's faith in God and Allison's terror lest a bomb fall upon her. And her mother had said that war does not touch girls.

When Temple felt stronger, she walked to the dresser drawer, unlocked it and slipped her wedding ring on her finger. She had been as much Jud's wife as though she had been married to him for ten years and had had children. But somehow the wedding ring had little significance now. It was as hollow as she. She left untouched the linens which had been for a bright future that had existed only in her mind. Her mother could use them or perhaps she would give them to Abby. Uncertainly—impermanence.

The one-way street had reached a dead end. Nor could she turn around and go over it the right way. The street wasn't there anymore.

She tried to tell herself that she would return to the office and continue to live as she had lived since she came to Washington. But it was no use. Washington was too full of memories of a dream that had passed and she had never really liked her work.

When she dressed and went out for a walk she realized how weak she was and how the illness of her heart and spirit had made her, at least for the present, unfit to work. She saw, too, that Washington was a city geared for war. Perhaps more than any other city it was feared for war. It infused you with a spirit to get out and do something for the fight. It made her little job more meaningless than ever.

She was waiting for Thalia Santos.

One day Temple braced herself to write to Jud's mother at the address Harry had given her after his telephone call to Boston. She wrote sincerely and honestly, trying to explain their secret marriage. She was neither sentimental nor sorrowful and in the letter included no touching anecdotes of Jud that would cause his mother further grief. Nor did she ask for anything that had been his. She wanted nothing. She had had all of Jud that had been good.

She never heard from Jud's mother. The letter that came in a few days was from her husband. It was a remote though not completely unsympathetic letter telling her that Jud's mother was too ill to write, that as far as he had been able to ascertain Jud had had no money in the bank and no belongings other than his clothes and that his insurance had been left to his mother. Temple had a feeling that Mrs. Amory's second husband would be very glad indeed when the dramatics were over and he could get back to his bridge game.

* *

Paula came to her room one evening.

She said, "Hello, dear." She flung a magnificent mink coat carelessly on the floor, flinging a second later, a small mink hat upon the coat. "I only just heard, Temple. I just got back and Abby had phoned my secretary. She is a dear. I've been in New York for weeks. You should have called me and I'd have come immediately. There was nothing important in New York."

"There was nothing you could do, Paula."

"I could have taken you away from this little room." Paula sat opposite Temple, lighted a cigarette and dropped the match on the floor. In a calmer voice she said, "Very well, baby, we won't talk about it. I'll talk about myself, as usual." She inhaled deeply and shook her red head slowly. "This war, Temple, means something different to each and every one of us. The ultimate victory means the same to all of us, of course. But do you know what this war means to me? It means a job, something on which I can use my hands. I am so utterly weary of the things I've been doing. So it takes a war to give a woman like me something to do. It should give all women like me something to do."

"I'm giving up my rooms at the hotel, giving up the inane parties, giving up boredom. No one believed me when I came back and said I was going to work. But I am. A job without pay, of course, in a Red Cross office, and I'm more excited about it than anything I have done in years. The shame of it is that it takes a war to stimulate me and make me active and useful."

Temple nodded. "Do you hear the radio down the hall? That's Abby's radio. To her the war means that Miles is in it in the Philippines.

Paula shook her head again. "They have only a fighting chance down there. That's what the war means to Abby. To another girl it means war at sea. To another it means that an industry which closed its doors on her in peace time will open them gladly to her now. She knows engineering or chemistry or she's strong enough to run a machine. To some it means the inconvenience of blackouts. It touches all of us in different ways. It touches me. I didn't think anything could touch me again. I didn't think anything could bother you if you had enough money to live as you pleased. How did I get that way? How did I get that way?"

Sh settled back in the chair.

"Maybe I'll tell you, Temple. Yes, I will tell you. I wish it were more dramatic, but there is nothing dramatic about having been born in near-poverty. Real poverty is dramatic, but near-poverty is just dull. You never read about those people because nothing ever happens to them except birth and marriage and death. Their stomachs are filled sufficiently so that the pinch of hunger doesn't make them strike out for something higher or dangerous or challenging. They write no books, make no music, paint no pictures.

"My father was a house painter, my mother had had a fair education in a rural school and we lived in a small city house as narrow as this room. We were never hungry, but the food was never really good and we had much of the same food. We were never really cold in winter but we were not exactly comfortable either. Our clothes were adequate, just adequate. Our neighbors were the same as we.

"I was a sort of mongrel. I had red hair and a temper and a terrible restlessness that made me want to look into the back yards of other people. But they accounted for me. They shook their heads and said that I 'got it' from my grandfather, my father's father who had had an itching heel that had taken him all over the world on merchant ships. I never knew the old boy because he died when I was 4, but I was always hearing about him. He had broken the pattern and was not held in high esteem. He was the scapegoat of the family. All my lacks and faults were blamed on him.

"So I grew up in that narrow house in the city block, hating it with my soul. But, as we all did, I stopped school when I was 16 and went to work. That was the pattern, too. When you were 16, you had had enough learning for a girl and it was high time you brought in a pay envelope and looked about for a husband.

"But I fell in love with my boss. Isn't that familiar? My boss was young and gay and charming and rich. The grass in his yard was very green indeed. I won't go into any of the romantic details. But it was romantic. I married him and he took me home to his family. The grass was very green there, but they wouldn't allow me to walk on it. There were 'No Trespassing' signs all over it and all over their frozen faces. They won, of course. In the end they won. I didn't have a chance. They paid me enough so that I could go abroad and learn what was deficient in my education and forget, they thought, the only boy I ever loved.

"The grass was green in Paris, too. It was brilliantly green. So was I. But I loved it. Paris is my spiritual home. I loved it and I lived there for several years. I learned to look at things the way they should be looked at—pictures and nature. Men were my teachers, good men and bad men, but always interesting men. I was learning why I had had to leave that city block and why my former husband's family had thought me such a poor thing as a wife. I learned about clothes and food. I learned that having red hair can be a major asset to a woman. To my husband's family it had been a calamity. It had been bad enough for him to marry his stenographer, but when they discovered she had red hair, that was too much.

"When I had learned a lot and there didn't seem anything else for me to learn, I asked myself if I was happy because I was still young enough to believe that happiness can be or could be a permanent state. But I wasn't happy. I was scared. I was so afraid that sometimes the house in the city block back home looked rather appealing because it was safe. But I knew if I went back I was sunk and I'd never get away again. I also knew that my money couldn't hold out indefinitely and that my hair and face would become too familiar.

"So I married an old man. The first time I had married a boy I loved; the second time I married an old man who loved me. What a vast difference between the taking and the giving. The taking is such a poor substitute for the giving. But he was very rich. We commuted between Paris and New York with the same casualness with which you take a bus to go downtown.

"My pictures were in the papers a lot those days because my husband, who had come up from nothing, liked publicity almost as much as he loved me. But I earned the money he left me when he died in 1929 after a heart attack following the crash. I earned every cent of it.

PROUD FATHER OF SON

Corporal H. Grimley proudly presents R.C.A.F. wings to his son LAC. (now pilot officer) K. R. Grimley on his graduation from Dauphin, Man. school. The young airman, born in England, attended schools at Mozart, Sask. and Regina before enlisting in the air force. His father saw service in the last war and was a prisoner of the Germans for some months. He enlisted in this war as a butcher and a cook for the air force. Group Capt. A. H. Wilson is on the right.

Oakland, Calif. — (CP) — Damage of $450,000 was caused when fire in the Oakland warehouse district swept over a square city block yesterday.

* * *

London — (CP) — Premier Stalin, in a letter to Harold King, Reuters' Moscow correspondent, said today the dissolution of the Comintern was "proper and timely because it facilitates organization of the common onslaught of all freedom-loving nations against the common enemy—Hitlerism."

* * *

London — (CP Cable) — Vernon Brown, London Chronicle naval correspondent, said today the Royal Navy is ready for "the greatest naval operation in history...the landing and maintaining of an Allied Army on the continent."

* * *

London — (CP Cable) — The Economist, praising the Canadian war aid, estimated today the Dominion will this year contribute to other members of the United Nations "goods to the value of more than one-fifth of her national income."

* * *

New York (CP).—The New York Times says that Admiral William H. Standley, dissatisfied with conditions surrounding his position, has informed President Roosevelt of his desire to resign at once as Ambassador to Moscow.

* * *

New York (CP).—The C.I.O. National Maritime Union, in a prepared statement signed by President Joseph Curran and all its top officials, said yesterday "it is our feeling that strikes such as are taking place in the coal industry under the leadership of John L. Lewis are inspired from Berlin and Tokyo."

* * *

Buffalo (CP). — Vaughn Deleath, 42, singer and composer sometimes known as "the first lady of radio", died last night after a long illness.

* * *

Chicago (CP).—Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem.-Mont.) said last night Russia "has yet to show a clear-cut determination she is on our side in the Pacific war" or to "renounce her imperialistic designs after the war."

* * *

PREMIER NIXON DENIES 'DEAL'

Replies to Criticism Made by Col. George Drew on Appointment

Toronto, May 29. (CP)—Premier Harry Nixon said Friday there had been "no deal" with former Premier Gordon D. Conant in connection with Mr. Conant's appointment as Master of the Supreme Court. Mr. Nixon issued a statement in reply to Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, who said Thursday the appointment was a "shameless deal between Mr. Nixon and Mr. Conant".

The statement said:

"Colonel Drew's criticism is quite gratuitous. There was no deal, no bargain, between Mr. Conant and me in connection with this appointment. No one can question his qualifications for the position, which are infinitely better than those enjoyed by Colonel Drew when he accepted the position some years ago.

"If a professional man is going to be discriminated against because he gives up his legal practice and accepts the responsibility of public office, then it will be difficult indeed to get good men of this character to contest constituencies. If all my appointments to the public service are as well qualified as this, I will certainly be able to take great credit for my administration.

"I have been accused before of making deals in connection with the convention and in connection with Mr. Hepburn and with the Federal Government, and say emphatically that I made deals with nobody and there was no necessity to even consider such strategy.

"I received unanimous election as leader of the Party. The convention went on record as expressing "the unanimous desire that the necessary arrangements be made forthwith to permit the Honourable Harry Nixon to assume the high office of Premier of Ontario". The entire Cabinet participated in this resolution and was unanimously behind me. With such a background, no fair-minded citizen will think for a moment that there is any justification for such charges".

Eighty thousand families in Birmingham, England, are sharing houses and the overcrowding has been blamed in some parts as one of the main causes for an increase in tuberculosis.

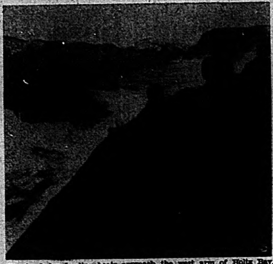
FIRST PICTURE OF SUCCESSFUL AMERICAN LANDING ON THE ISLAND OF ATTU IN THE ALEUTIANS



Heavily laden landing boats approach the west arm of Holtz Bay, during American landing operations of May 11th, 1943, on Attu, westernmost of the Aleutian Islands. In this photograph the men are shown crouching down below the gunwales of the barges so as to be out of the line of fire of snipers ashore.

From an advanced command post on rugged Attu Island a detail of soldiers carries back a wounded comrade—injured in the fight with the Japs. This photograph reveals the rough terrain in which fighting for Attu took place. Note the fog-shrouded peaks in background.

When men of the American landing forces came ashore at Holtz Bay on Attu Island, they found that the air force had been there before them. This Jap float-type Zero plane was shot down into the water off shore during one of the air force raids on the fog-shrouded island.

[illegible] for Free Leave Transportation on All Railroads

RALSTON ANSWERS

By C. E. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 29 — (CP) — Appeals in the House of Commons yesterday for free leave transportation and service personnel travel accommodation equal to that given civilians brought from Defence Minister Ralston the statement that he did not believe travel difficulties could be overcome without rationing.

He agreed that it would be desirable to grant leave transportation and to give service personnel as good accommodations as those to civilians but said he could give no assurance on either point.

The free travel discussion, an annual fixture since the war started, was opened by Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South), who also protested that air force personnel was better treated in regard to travelling than navy or army men.

Numerous members representing all parties joined in the appeal for free transportation for those on annual or embarkation leave, but the minister said he could only promise to give their representations consideration.

Solid Week in Committee

The discussion came as the House was ending a solid week in committee on the Defence Department's $1,794,000,000 share in the $3,890,000,000 war appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative Leader, made the appeal for better treatment of service personnel in the way of berths and meals on the trains.

Other members made appeals for special leave allowances in the case of those who have to travel extra long distances.

Mrs. Cora Casselman (Lib. Edmonton East) suggested that if free transportation could not be provided for leaves, a ticket price ceiling be fixed beyond which a soldier would not have to pay when travelling home on furlough or embarkation leave.

Civilian Travel Not Reduced.

In the course of this discussion Col. Ralston said he believes the armed services had "done pretty well" in the way of curtailing travel but that the civilians "have not done any more than their fair share" in this respect.

Railways had cut out week-end excursions but that did not seem to have greatly reduced civilians travel.

"I do not believe we shall ever come to a proper situation . . . until we have passenger travel rationed and until, almost, a man has to show a certificate of necessity before he buys a railway ticket."

He said efforts had been made, and he believed successfully, to iron out all differences in the treatment of personnel of the three services when travelling so that there would be no discrimination.

Non-commissioned ranks below sergeant did not receive sleeping accommodation if their journey involved only one night on the train, and that had always been the practice, said Col. Ralston.

This prompted the protest from Mr. Graydon. "Surely we should not ask these men to travel even for one night without such accommodation," he said. "I do not want to put this in any cheap way but I do feel that our armed forces are entitled to everything a civilian would get in ordinary travel.

"As civilians what are we actually contributing as compared to these men? I think if there is any question of differentiation it should be in favor of the soldier."

Always Been Practice.

Col. Ralston said the reason for the differentiation was "very trite", merely that it had always been the practice that an overnight trip did not call for provision of sleeping accommodation.

"I thoroughly agree with everything my honorable friend said . . . I know it is not any cheap appeal. I believe he feels very genuinely about it and so do I.

"I quite agree that if the rolling stock is available it would be better to have berths provided but I do not think you will get the rolling stock at the present time."

Earlier in the day there was a renewal of the criticism which J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) has directed at the defence minister all week, and which brought him several verbal spankings from members, including members of his own party.

Col. Ralston, who once asked Mr. Pouliot if he wanted to be "the bad boy of the party", took him to task yesterday for slighting remarks he had made about the military medical services and read sketches of a long list of senior medical officers to support his claim that they were representative of the best of their profession in Canada.

Mr. Pouliot read from a long list of cases in which he claimed men had been taken into the services with obvious disabilities, only to be discharged later.

Mr. Gillis suggested that if the House was to be further occupied with the debate between the minister and Mr. Pouliot, other members might as well go to their rooms and do some work.

Mr. Pouliot said he knew that the criticism directed against him Thursday and yesterday had been "organized" but it would not prevent his speaking for "the underdog" and he was sure his campaign would bring about better administration in the defence department.

CANNIFTON RED CROSS

Records of the sewing and knitting conveners showed a total of 85 articles sent in during the first four house coat, 1 woman's skirt, 4 girls' months of the present year.

The list included 7 quilts, 1 man's skirts, 14 pairs girls' bloomers, 15 pairs boys' underpants, 2 girls' coats, 9 boys' shirts, 12 dunnage bags, 12 girls' blouses, 3 turtle neck sweaters, 3 children's sweaters, 2 pairs seamen's socks.

Donations of money for the same period included $50 for the purchase of blankets, and a further donation of $32.

1944 Production Plan Will Need Readjustments

(By J. F. SANDERSON)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 29. (CP)—The 1944 production program of the three major supply countries of the United Nations, Canada, Britain and the United States, will mean some readjustments in Canada but no let down in total effort, C. D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions and Supply, said here.

Here to attend a meeting of the combined production and resources board, the agency responsible for co-ordinating production among the three nations, Mr. Howe said the 1944 program now is being examined in detail.

As far as Canada is concerned, it will mean a shift in emphasis in war supplies and perhaps a relaxation of some of the controls on civilian goods.

The Minister said that certain plants making shells and other war supplies will be retooled for other lines but he did not anticipate widespread unemployment.

"The men will be switched to other jobs. Manpower is getting tight and we will have work for everyone", he said.

The capital requirements of the Canadian army have been met and now the job is to produce replacements and new weapons, particularly more powerful weapons.

"Any spare capacity we have will be offered to our Allies", the minister said, referring to Canada's new lend-lease system which he called an excellent balance wheel.

There have been "substantial requests", for lend-lease assistance, he said. He gave, as an example, an order for 145 locomotives for India, now being filled in Montreal and Kingston, Ont. When India made the request for locomotives, the combined production and resources board surveyed the locomotives industries of all available countries and decided that Canadian facilities could be utilized to the best advantage.

In the reshuffling of Canada's industry, the minister said "there will be some left over for civilian need". Some restrictions will be eased slightly, particularly with respect to farm implements, railroad equipment and certain repair part. An effort is being made to divide the textile industry between the army and civilian economy and a survey of these facilities is being made now in the light of army requirements.

Americans Attack Third Jap Position On Attu Island

Washington, May 29 — (AP)— United States troops have attacked the third main position which the Japanese had held on Attu Island south of Lake Cories, the Navy Department said Friday and indications were that the entire enemy force on the island was being rapidly broken up into very small points of resistance.

The Navy listed no reports on Attu fighting later than Wednesday. A spokesman said, however, that "every bit of information we have indicates it is continuing."

The fight might be won before the weekend, authorities said, or it might take two or three days longer to clear up the final pockets of enemy resistance.

Hand-to-Hand

There were some indications in today's war bulletin that Japanese opposition had, in fact, already been broken down into a number of small groups of men and had pretty well lost its character of organized fighting.

This is a kind of situation in which the Japanese soldier fights most stubbornly, however, and the job of American troops became increasingly one of hand-to-hand combat with bayonet and grenade.

New York, May 28—(AP)—Japanese propagandists, working against the nearing deadline of final defeat on Attu Island, broadened today their claims of destruction and damage inflicted on United States vessels in the battle and declared that night attacks ashore "resulted in strategical gains."

A Tokyo dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press said Japanese submarines and planes had sunk a battleship, two cruisers, a destroyer and an unidentified warship and seriously damaged two other naval vessels since Sunday. These claims were without confirmation.

Suggests Campaign Is German Inspired

London, May 29 (CP). — The Daily Chronicle's Diplomatic Correspondent suggested that the Anti-Bombing Campaign being waged by the controlled Spanish press not only is German inspired but resembles 1918 propaganda which, it said, enabled the Germans "to evade the worst consequences of their defeat."

"In all sorts of ways German" propaganda is already busy trying to create a 'Poor, Dear Germany' frame of mind," The correspondent said. "Germany is already beginning the task of winning the peace as a preliminary to preparing for world war 111."

Asthma

He went to a certain dry climate, found himself free of asthmatic attacks, sent word for the family to come and almost with their arrival the asthmatic attacks returned. He left the family at this place and moved on to another district with a dry climate, found himself free of attacks, sent for the family, and with their coming the asthmatic attacks returned. The same thing occurred twice more before he suspected that there was something about his household and its belongings that brought on the attacks. Investigation proved that the beloved family cat which accompanied the family on all its journeyings was the cause of the asthma; the patient was allergic or sensitive to cat's fur.

The above story came to me recently as I heard of another case where it was believed the attacks were due to chronic irritation of the sinuses of the nose together with distension or enlargement of the tiny air bags or sacs at innermost parts of the lung tissue where exchange of impure blood is made for pure blood. As the dry climate helps practically all cases of this type of asthma, this patient had gone to a city in Colorado and obtained considerable relief. Thinking a change of scene would be more interesting he went to a ranch in Arizona away from all city dust and dirt and immediately the asthmatic attacks returned. It was found that in addition to sinus disturbance, he was sensitive or allergic to horse dander which, of course, was abundant at the ranch.

The thought then is that before seeking a dry climate and a dry climate is helpful in many cases of asthma and hay fever, the individual should be tested to see if allergy is a factor in causing the attacks.

Among the various substances causing asthmatic attacks are house dust, street dust, furs, feathers, pollen and some of our most nourishing foods such as milk, eggs, and cereals.

Until the cause is found, the injection of 10 to 15 drops of adrenalin (epinephrine) usually gives relief.

HOUSE DISCUSSES TRANSPORTATION FOR SERVICEMEN

Members Asked for Free Leave Transportation on All Railroads

There were some indications in today's war bulletin that Japanese opposition had, in fact, already been broken down into a number of small groups of men and had pretty well lost its character of organized fighting.

This is a kind of situation in which the Japanese soldier fights most stubbornly, however, and the job of American troops became increasingly one of hand-to-hand combat with bayonet and grenade.

New York, May 28—(AP)—Japanese propagandists, working against the nearing deadline of final defeat on Attu Island, broadened today their claims of destruction and damage inflicted on United States vessels in the battle and declared that night attacks ashore "resulted in strategical gains."

A Tokyo dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press said Japanese submarines and planes had sunk a battleship, two cruisers, a destroyer and an unidentified warship and seriously damaged two other naval vessels since Sunday. These claims were without confirmation.

Suggests Campaign Is German Inspired

London, May 29 (CP). — The Daily Chronicle's Diplomatic Correspondent suggested that the Anti-Bombing Campaign being waged by the controlled Spanish press not only is German inspired but resembles 1918 propaganda which, it said, enabled the Germans "to evade the worst consequences of their defeat."

"In all sorts of ways German" propaganda is already busy trying to create a 'Poor, Dear Germany' frame of mind," The correspondent said. "Germany is already beginning the task of winning the peace as a preliminary to preparing for world war 111."

Asthma

He went to a certain dry climate, found himself free of asthmatic attacks, sent word for the family to come and almost with their arrival the asthmatic attacks returned. He left the family at this place and moved on to another district with a dry climate, found himself free of attacks, sent for the family, and with their coming the asthmatic attacks returned. The same thing occurred twice more before he suspected that there was something about his household and its belongings that brought on the attacks. Investigation proved that the beloved family cat which accompanied the family on all its journeyings was the cause of the asthma; the patient was allergic or sensitive to cat's fur.

The above story came to me recently as I heard of another case where it was believed the attacks were due to chronic irritation of the sinuses of the nose together with distension or enlargement of the tiny air bags or sacs at innermost parts of the lung tissue where exchange of impure blood is made for pure blood. As the dry climate helps practically all cases of this type of asthma, this patient had gone to a city in Colorado and obtained considerable relief. Thinking a change of scene would be more interesting he went to a ranch in Arizona away from all city dust and dirt and immediately the asthmatic attacks returned. It was found that in addition to sinus disturbance, he was sensitive or allergic to horse dander which, of course, was abundant at the ranch.

The thought then is that before seeking a dry climate and a dry climate is helpful in many cases of asthma and hay fever, the individual should be tested to see if allergy is a factor in causing the attacks.

Among the various substances causing asthmatic attacks are house dust, street dust, furs, feathers, pollen and some of our most nourishing foods such as milk, eggs, and cereals.

Until the cause is found, the injection of 10 to 15 drops of adrenalin (epinephrine) usually gives relief.

DO YOU DARE LOOK YOUR HOUSE IN THE EYE?

Are you protecting your investment? A small repair now may prevent a big breakdown later! So now is the time to do something about those loose boards, peeling paint, worn roof, or sagging screens. And while you're at it, how about adding those shelves you need in the cellar, and building the tool shed you want? Plan now to make your home more "livable." You can afford to keep your home in good condition; you can't afford not to!

NAPLES AND FOGGIA BLASTED BY U.S. PLANES

MOTHER, 3 CHILDREN DROWN NEAR FRANKFORD

Smoke-Shrouded Ruins Left in Wake Of Heavy Bombers

Attacks Renewed On Sardinia and Pantelleria, Stepping Stones of Invasion

MANY FIRES STARTED

(By DANIEL DE LUCE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 31 (AP) — More than 150 United States four-engined bombers, co-operating in twin attacks against Axis bases in Southern Italy, blasted Naples and Foggia by daylight Sunday and left smoke-shrouded ruins in their wake it was announced today.

Explosions and fires raged at Naples, hit by a force of more than 100 planes of the North African Command. More than 50 bombers struck from Middle East bases at the airdrome of Foggia, 80 miles northeast of Naples.

These were the major forays of the day which included renewed attacks upon Sardinia, potential stepping stone of invasion, and Pantelleria, the battered invasion bastion in the Sicilian Straits.

Communiques told the story of the powerful American thrusts in an air offensive maintained for more than a fortnight against Mussolini's homeland and island outposts. It was the second raid on Foggia in three days and, by Italian broadcast accounts, the 70th against Naples, which was said to have suffered casualties and "great damage."

Aircraft Factory Hit

"A large force of B-17 Flying Fortresses yesterday attacked Naples," said the war bulletin issued at Allied North African headquarters. "Bombs were dropped on an aircraft factory and a neighboring air field. Large explosions were caused in an oil storage depot and many fires were reported."

A Cairo communique said Liberators thoroughly covered the Foggia airdrome and scored direct hits on hangars and barracks.

"Numerous aircraft in the dispersal areas were destroyed, including some six-engined craft," it said. "Black smoke was observed rising from oil fires and buildings were left burning throughout the target area."

For all operations of the day authorities announced that 14 enemy planes were destroyed in combat and one plane from the North African air force failed to return.

Shatter Important Targets

The heavy bombers shattered important war targets and destroyed 10 enemy fighters in the bristling raid on Naples, from which every bomber returned safely. The Americans made a four-fanged attack on southern Italy's biggest defence centre.

In Naples harbor a 320-foot merchant vessel was sunk. A 150-foot tanker was set a fire and another ship, 185 feet long, was damaged. The roundhouse and locomotive repair ship were hit and two oil storage tanks were exploded.

The aircraft also dumped explosives on an assembly plant, machine shops and hangars of the airplane factory in suburban Pompigliano and struck at the big Naples airdrome of Capodichino, where from 30 ot 50 planes, mostly German, attempted to beat off the raiders.

In a 20-minute fight, they failed to break through the defensive machine-gun fire. The bombing runs were not broken.

Eight fires blazed in the field area and the headquarters building and other sectors were damaged by hits, it was announced.

Aerial photographs show many grounded aircraft were damaged by the blanket bombing at Capodichino, but officials released no figures on the total.

The gaunt skeletons of several wrecked six-engined Meseburg-323 transports littered the Pomigliano landing ground as departing crews photographed the scene over the target. Eight enemy interceptors attacked and one was shot down.

Covered With Bombs

At Chilivania, U railroad junction, freight yards were covered with bomb bursts and hits damaged a transformer station, a train and several buildings. The raiders went on to shoot up the railway station.

5 Axis Subs At Least Sunk In Weird Battles

London, May 31 (AP)—At least five Axis submarines have been blasted to the Atlantic Ocean's depths by R.A.F. planes in weird air-sea battles and more of the U-boat pack may have been added to the toll in a 10-day period, the Air Ministry has announced.

Planes of the coastal command fought Hitler's sea wolves with depth bombs and withstood lively gunfire from the submarines' artillery to sink the U-boats, one west of Iceland, one south of Iceland, and three near the Bay of Biscay, it was announced yesterday.

"Several other attacks were made by the coastal command aircraft during the same 10-day period," the bulletin said. "The destruction of submarines in these further operations is not confirmed but on several occasions spreading patches of oil and wreckage on the surface indicated that the U-boat had been damaged."

The Admiralty also announced that four German trawlers and two motor gunboats were set ablaze in a 45-minute clash with light Royal Navy forces off Dunkirk Saturday morning, with the loss of one boat.

At last account, the German boats were wildly firing at one another in the melee, the Admiralty said.

Two Lone Survivors Tell of Sinking By Torpedo of Canadian Vessel

Moncton, N. B., May 31—(CP)—Their eight fellow crew-members—among them their Nova Scotia skipper—dead from exposure and exhaustion and now in seamen's graves, two lone survivors for a 10-man crew told here yesterday of eight perilous days in an open lifeboat and of the submarine sinking of the Canadian Barquentine Angelus.

Intercepted on her way north with a cargo of molasses from the West Indies, the Angelus was shelled to the bottom of the Atlantic after her small crew was ordered by the U-boat commander to abandon her.

The two survivors, mate Arthur Holmans, a Newfoundlander, whose son, Alexander (Sandy) 20, died in his arms, and Walter Boudreau, Moncton, related how a heavy gale struck their small open craft four nights later, turned it over on four occasions, and how the other crew members in her died one by one. The Captain, Edward Jenson, Lunenburg, N. S., was lost in the second capsizing.

When dawn brought the abating of the storm, the dead were buried at sea.

Those who were lost included three Newfoundlanders, the rest were from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Sighted by Patrol Plane

The two survivors were first sited by a United States patrol plane on the eighth day and picked up by a U. S. warship and landed at an Atlantic port.

Mate Holmans said the Angelus first sited the enemy undersea craft as dawn was breaking on the 21st day of the Barquentine's voyage.

"The Captain gave the order to lower the lifeboat," said Holmans. "Meanwhile the submarine came alongside and the German skipper ordered all hands to get into the lifeboat and come alongside the U-boat."

"Our skipper went aboard her while the crew of the submarine kept machine guns trained on the lifeboat.

"They questioned Capt. Jenson regarding cargo and destination. Then the German commander told him he and the Barquentine's crew would be given 25 minutes to return to our vessel for provisions and navigation equipment, after which the ship would be sunk by shell-fire."

Holmans said it took about 20 rounds of fire before the Angelus rolled over and sank.

Report of Death Of President Lin Not Confirmed

New York, May 31 — (AP)—The United States Office of War Information reported today that the Melbourne radio had quoted a Chinese communique as announcing the death at Chungking of Lin Sen, 81-year-old President of China.

The report was not immediately confirmed, however, by advices direct from Chungking.

An Associated Press dispatch filed at 3:50 p. m. Chungking time (1:50 a. m. Eastern Raylight Time) and received in New York at 6:28 a. m. Easter Daylight Time today, said that doctors reported Lin was continuing to maintain the improvement which had been noted in his condition yesterday.

He was stricken ill May 12, when he suffered a stroke, and had been in a coma since Saturday. Physicians had given him only a "so-so" chance to recover, but special medicines flown to Chungking by Fred G. Reed of Pittsburgh, attached to the Red Cross in the provisional Chinese capital, were said to have resulted in an improvement.

Jeep Leaves Road, Staff Sgt. Killed

Brockville, Ont., May 31—(CP)—Staff Sergeant Raymond F. Lake, 43, of Kingston, was killed and two other men were injured, one seriously, when a jeep left the highway two miles east of here and crashed into a tree on Saturday.

Staff Sergeant George W. Bright, 47, of Brockville, formerly of Cleveland, O., who is said to have been driving the jeep, had both legs broken. He is believed to have suffered internal injuries also. Sgt. S. Jarvis of Toronto suffered a fractured rib and back injuries.

French Naval Squadron At Alexandria, Egypt, Joins Allied Cause

London, May 31 — (CP) — The French naval squadron at Alexandria came over to the Allies voluntarily following negotiations with Gen. Henri Giraud, authoritative London sources said today.

These sources said the Vichy charge that the squadron had been starved into submission was "quite untrue." The report of the fleet joining the Allies was first broadcast yesterday by the Berlin radio.

The squadron has been tied up at the Egyptian naval base since the fall of France in June, 1940, under an agreement between Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham and Vice-Admiral Rene Emil Godfroy.

It consists of the 20,000-ton battleship Lorraine, the heavy cruisers Duquesne, Tourville and Souffren, the light cruiser Duguay-Trouin, three destroyers and a submarine.

Several months are expected to elapse before the French ships go into action, because after three years of idleness and partial dismantlement they must be cleaned, repaired and refitted and the crews restored to full strength and efficiency. The repairs might be done at Alexandria, in Great Britain or the United States, but trained officers and men are scarce, it was pointed out.

The battleship Lorraine, built in 1913, is older than any similar unit now at sea with the Royal Navy and has been little improved in the light of naval developments of three years of war.

All four cruisers are between 16 and 20 years old and three are of the 10,000-ton class no longer being built by Great Britain, which favors smaller cruisers of a faster, more manoeuverable type.

JOINT PRESIDENCY FORMED TO RULE LIBERATED FRANCE

Giraud and De Gaulle Will Rule Jointly With Committee of Seven

MEET IN ALGIERS

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, May 31—(AP)—A seven-man executive committee was set up today under the joint presidency of Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud to govern liberated Frenchmen and French territory and to direct the French war effort until their homeland is freed.

The members, in addition to Gen. deGaulle and Gen. Giraud, are Rene Massigli and Andre Philipe, who were designated by Gen. deGaulle; Gen. Alphonse Georges and Jean Monnet who were named by Gen. Giraud; and Gen. Georges Catroux, who was accepted by both. Two places were left vacant.

Those on the committee assembled in a secret place in Algiers. In effect the committee created itself, and, while the meeting started only as a session of a group of men, it ended as the assembly of France's new governing body.

Served as Liaison Officer

Gen. Catroux, High Commissioner for Syria, served as Liaison Officer between Gen. deGaulle and Gen. Giraud in preliminary negotiations for unity.

Gen. Georges, the western front commander of French armies before the fall of France, arrived in Algiers recently from France.

Massigli was Fighting French foreign commissioner.

Philipe was Fighting French commissioner for interior and labor.

Monnet is a French financial expert.

Algiers became in effect the provisional capital of France.

Will Head Ministries

While organized only as a committee and not recognized by the United States and Britain as the government of France, the members will head ministries similar to those of a government. Formation of the government itself will come, according to announced plan, after an Allied victory frees all the French empire and the French people are free to choose their leaders.

Gen. De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, arrived in Algeria yesterday by plane to a thunderous ovation from the public to begin the unity conference with Gen. Giraud, North African military and civil commander.

"The means of achieving unity," Gen. De Gaulle told newsmen, "is the immediate establishment of a general French power here to decide all things in the conduct of the war in all parts of the French empire freed from the enemy yoke."

He outlined the characteristics of this desired power as follows:

"First, it must be capable materially and morally of directing the efforts of the French in the war . . .

"Second, it must be based on real French sovereignty . . .

"Third, it is indispensable that it be in harmony with the masses of the French people. We should not create something here in Algeria which is different from what the French people want."

He added that he believed Gen. Giraud was in full accord.

JAPANESE THROWN BACK WITH LOSSES SOUTH OF ICHANG

Chinese Recapture Yuyankwan and on Offensive in Other Sectors

SEVERE FIGHTING

Chungking, May 31—(AP)—Chinese troops, supported by the United States planes which heavily damaged Japanese installations near Ichang and at Yochow, occupied a number of points in the Hupeh-Hunan border region in an "all front" counter-offensive in Central China and cut enemy communications at many points east of Lake Tungting, a Chinese communique said today.

Yesterday the Chinese announced the recapture of Yuyangkwan, 35 miles south of Ichang where 2,000 Japanese casualties were inflicted in the greatest Chinese success since the invaders started thrusting along the Yangtse Valley toward Chungking.

A communique from U.S. headquarters said fighters and bombers "operating in collaboration with Chinese air and ground forces" had attacked the two important supply and troop concentration points in the last three days.

Yochow on the Yangtse was dive-bombed in two attacks Friday and again on Sunday. Warehouses, railyards, rolling stock, dock and shipping facilities were hit.

"Preliminary reports indicate extensive damage" to Yochow objectives, the U.S. communique said. Aircraft "heavily bombed island artillery and supply concentrations off Ichang in the Yangtse," on Saturday. No American planes were lost.

The Chinese bulletin said Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's troops broke into the east gate of Sinyang, a Japanese base in South Honan Province, Friday night and inflicted serious damage.

The Chinese declared the Japanese were being pursued toward Niehchcho after being ousted from Yuyangkwan. The capture of Changyang, 12 miles below Ichang was declared imminent.

Fighting of increasing severity continued on the bank of the Yangtse opposite Ichang, several Mtre towns were recaptured northeast of Ichang, and Yusi in that sector now is surrounded by the advancing Chinese, the war bulletin said.

Another Japanese retreat west of Sinan was forced by the triumphant Chinese Friday night, Chinese headquarters said, while heavy losses were inflicted on the Japanese in at least three other sectors of which the Tungting Lake Valley is a centre.

Bases Pounded

The Japanese bases were pounded by American planes. Yochow, a station on the Hankow-Canton railway, located on the northeast corner of Tungting Lake where its waters feed into the Yangtse Valley, and Linsiang, northeast of Yochow, were smashed by an aerial attack prior to the Chinese attack.

Japanese troops were unloading from a train in Yochow station Friday when the Americans dropped their bombs, and on their way back the fliers noted Yochow mantled in smoke.

RUHR VALLEY CITY OF WUPPERTAL HEAVILY BOMBED

1,500 Tons of Bombs Unloaded, Smoke Of Fires Billows Three Miles High

WEEK'S RAIDS HEAVY

London, May 31 (AP)—Allied fighters swarmed across the English Channel this morning to resume their assault on European targets after a night of comparative inactivity in the air war.

The first formations were seen heading in the direction of Boulogne and Cap Gris Nez, then turned northward toward Calais and Dunkirk.

Statisticians figure that the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. had dumped more than 7,000 tons of bombs on Germany during the past week in the most furious aerial offensive in history.

The precedent-smashing total of high explosives was concentrated on five German industrial centres — Dortmund, Duesseldorf, Jena, Essen and Wuppertal, all of which are engaged in the production of materials vital to Hitler's war machine.

Wuppertal, a Ruhr Valley city of 411,000 situated between Essen and Duesseldorf, was the latest to feel the might of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. which unloaded 1,500 tons of bombs on this target Saturday night in one of the heaviest raids on record.

Returning pilots reported they left fires from which columns of smoke billowed up nearly three miles into the sky..

The brunt of the German attacks was born by a town on the south-west coast, identified by the Berlin radio as the resort centre of Torquay, which was bombed by 15 Focke-Wulf fighter-bombers. This raid caused a considerable number of fatalities, including 21 children whose bodies later were dug from the ruins of a church.

Fifteen other children and three Sunday School teachers were reported missing last night. Additional casualties resulted when a hotel was hit and when the streets were machine-gunned by the raiders.

A dozen Nazi fighter-bombers also swept in over the east Anglian Coast at dusk, dropping bombs which caused some damage and casualties.

R. A. F. bombers were active over the continent yesterday, attacking a steelworks at Mondeville, near Caen in northern France. In supporting sweeps British fighters were reported to have shot down four enemy planes. One R. A. F. fighter failed to return.

An enemy coastal vessel was shot up and set afire by British bombers earlier yesterday off the Netherlands coast.

The Saturday night assault on Wuppertal cost the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. 33 planes, an Air Ministry communique said. It was the first attack of the war on the city, which is the site of the great I. G. Farbenindustrie chemical works and the C. J. Jaeger Ball and roller bearing factories.

The raid followed close on the heels of simultaneous daylight attacks on Rennes, St. Nazaire and La Pallice in France by the greatest force of American medium and heavy ever sent out from bases in Britain.

Hamilton-Knit Turtle-Neck Sweater To Protect Churchill From Chill Winds

Hamilton, Ont., May 31 — (CP)— Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, on the first cold day next fall, may be seen wearing a turtle-neck sweater. In any case, he has one now. Here's how he acquired it:

The Hamilton Volunteer Naval Aid Corps, of which Mrs. Elizabeth Hesp is Commodore, recently received a letter from a stoker at an East Coast port expressing thanks for a heavy turtle neck sweater which he had received. In doing so he mentioned that his group had been inspected by Winston Churchill. During the inspection a chill wind was blowing and as the Prime Minister passed by the stoker he picked up the sweater and tossed it around his shoulders, "I would like to own one of these," he remarked.

When this letter was received Mrs. Hesp turned the job of knitting a size 42 turtle-neck sweater over to Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor. When it was finished the garment was sent to Washington to Mr. Churchill.

Through John W. Russell of the British Embassy, the Prime Minister has acknowledged the gift as follows:—

"The Prime Minister has asked me to write in acknowledgment of your letter of May 17 to thank you very much indeed for the turtle neck sweater which you were good enough to send to him. He is much looking forward to wearing it when the weather gets cold and has asked me to say that he now has a good personal idea of how grateful to you must feel the seamen to whom you send these sweaters.

"Mr. Churchill would also like to say a word of personal thanks for himself to Mrs. Taylor, Hamilton, who he understands, knitted this particular example."

Mrs. M. Mitchell 2 Daughters, Son Swept Over Dam

Inboard Motorboat Engine Stalls Just Above No. 4 Dam In Trent River

HUSBAND RESCUED

Trenton, May 31—(Special)—Four people were drowned at noon Sunday and one narrowly escaped, when the inboard motor boat in which they were pleasure riding was carried through the spillway and over two dams No. 4 and No. 3 of the Trent River between Batawa and Glen Miller. The dead are Mrs. Morton Mitchell, age 29, formerly Emily Gretta Davis, her daughter June Marie, age 11, son Gerald Morton, age 10 and 15 months old Darla Gretta. The husband was assisted by Sheldon Smith, Lockmaster at dam No. 4 and others, who were fishing along the river bank. He had managed to reach shore on the East side of the river just before being carried over Glen Miller dam.

Works in Machine Shop

Mitchell, who is a war worker set-up man in a machine shop at the Bata Shoe Co. only purchased the boat yesterday and was taking his family for their first ride, when the motor stopped. He tried in vain to start it again but the boat only drifted nearer and nearer the dam. Realizing that he was getting close to it he caught hold of the only paddle in the boat and started frantically to paddle for shore, but the weight of the boat and the strong current was too much for him and he was fighting a losing battle. As the boat drifted closer to the dam, Mr. Sheldon Smith, the Lockmaster and his wife ran towards them across the dam. Mitchell tried to throw the anchor to Mrs. Smith as the boat neared the dam but luckily for her it miss for if she had caught hold the current would undoubtedly have dragged her in too.

Upset in Spillway

As the boat went through the spillway it upset and all were thrown into the swirling water. Mitchell and his wife managed to get hold of the upturned boat and held on for about a quarter of a mile, while the water was carrying them quickly towards the second dam. Mrs. Mitchell disappeared. Her husband, at this stage, started to swim for the East shore, where he was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who had hurried along the bank in their car, Corporal George Day of the R. C. A. F. and Flt. Sgt. Arthur Smith, who were passing along the highway on a motorcycle. The quickly cut a neighbour's clothes line and raced for the second dam but were unable to reach Mrs. Mitchell. Corporal Day then sent the alarm in to Police at Trenton and in a matter of minutes the highway was lined with people anxious and willing to lend a hand in the search for the bodies. The water was so swift that dragging operations were practically useless.

Battle of Attu Won in 20 Days By Americans

By HAMILTON W. FARON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 31—(AP)—The battle of Attu is over, and the stars and stripes once again fly over the barren but strategically important little island at the western end of the Aleutians.

Scattered snipers and possibly a few isolated machine-gun nests are all that remain to oppose the United States troops.

The loss of Attu, which has been conceded by the Japanese, leaves the enemy garrison on Kiska virtually cut off.

A battle in which American troops struck with guns, bayonets, rifle-butts, fists, and knives marked the end of the 20-day campaign.

"The Attu battle is won," declared Col. R. Ernest Dupuy, Chief of the United States war department's news division. He gave no details in his weekly broadcast review of war news.

Japan Agrees

Japan appeared to agree, for the enemy broadcast a communique telling of a "final blow against the enemy main force." In that battle, the enemy broadcast asserted "it is thought that the entire number of our force has completely perished."

A subsequent Tokyo broadcast, seeking to idealize the defeat, asserted that "Japanese troops launched the final attack on Attu after shouting 'Banzar' for the emperor and making bows toward the imperial palace in Tokyo." The broadcast told of gaps developing in Japanese ranks until "only a few more than 100 men remained and they sent a message to Tokyo 'remembering the honor of Japanese soldiers, we are going into the fight and only death can take our weapons out of our hands'."

Enemy Force Annihilated

They presumably went into the battle in the Chicagof Valley in an attempt to cut around the right flank of American forces at dawn Saturday. "Except for snipers," the United States navy's communique said, "this enemy force was annihilated."

Soldiers unable because of illness or wounds to take part in the final offensive killed themselves, the enemy radio said, adding that every man who could fight died willingly rather than "bring disgrace to his name."

Two offensive courses now appear open to the Americans in the north Pacific—to recapture Kiska where the enemy established his largest Aleutian base, or to drive toward the west and the Japanese homeland.

If the move should be toward Japan military observers here say that the Japanese airfield on Attu could be enlarged to accommodate big American bombers. Also it was pointed out that as a weather observation and reconnaissance post, Attu will be invaluable.

FEWER U.S. TOURISTS

Toronto, May 31 (CP) — The ban on pleasure driving in the Eastern United States reduced tourist travel to Canada during the Memorial Day weekend, it was learned today. The number of automobiles crossing at the Niagara frontier and the Peace Bridge was very little above that of normal day-to-day traffic.

Coming Events

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

BAG OF POTATOES REPORTED STOLEN

With a reported scarcity of potatoes in the district some unknown person will at least have plenty of "spuds" to eat for the next few weeks at least.

On Saturday John Vasil, proprietor of the Snack Bar cafe on Front Street placed a bag of potatoes in a hallway adjacent to his restaurant kitchen at the rear of the premises. Later the bag of "spuds" was missing.

"It's no easy matter to procure potatoes these days", commented Mr. Vasil as he reported the theft to city police.

DOG DESTROYED AFTER BITING YOUTH

Attacked by a dog on Front St. Saturday, William Whittaker, 32 Harriett St., suffered severe lacerations necessitating medical attention. The lad was hauling a child's wagon, filled with market produce, past the Belvedere Hotel, when a wire-haired Terrier dog suddenly attacked him inflicting the arm wound. The boy was attended by Dr. J. R. Scott.

Later Thos. Thorne, Humane Society Inspector, investigated and today it was reported the dog would be destroyed. The dog in question had previously attacked innocent passersby.

TAG DAY FOR AIR CADETS NETS OVER $600 FOR THE CORPS

Although final figures had not yet been tabulated this morning, total donations received during Saturday's tag day sponsored by the Belleville Air Cadet squadron will be more than $600 it was announced today by Mr. Lloyd Hicks, president of the Rotary Club, under which auspices the appeal was made.

Focusing attention upon the tag day and contributing in no small way to its splendid success was the smart parade during the afternoon of the full personnel of the Belleville Air Cadet squadron headed by two flights of airmen from No. 5 I.T.S. and the R.C.A.F. band. Parading the full length of Front Street, the display put on by Canada's budding airmen gave evidence of the splendid training received by boys in the air cadet squadron.

Appreciation to the many women and girls who so generously gave of their time and efforts to help make the tag day a success was expressed by Rotary officials, while a special thanks was tendered to the citizens of Belleville and district for their very generous contributions.

HAMILTON LAD HELD ON THEFT CHARGE

Apprehended in Point Anne driving his father's motor car without permission, 18-year-old Burton Howard of Hamilton, was taken into custody over the weekend by Provincial Police. Complaints from his father in Hamilton led to the lad's apprehension and the placing of the motor car in safe custody.

Young Howard was lodged in the city police station here during which time city police questioned the lad with the result investigations looking into the theft of a suit of clothes in Belleville resulted in a charge being preferred. Today Howard was lodged in the county jail on a charge of stealing a suit of clothes, the property of Elmer Dafoe, Coleman St. Police revealed today that Howard revealed to them he had sold the suit to a local secondhand dealer some weeks ago.

DIST. PARATROOPERS ON SIX-DAY LEAVE

Granted six days leave from their Camp Shilo training base, district members of Canada's Paratroop unit visited their homes, in the Belleville area over the weekend. At least four members of the unit were seen on Belleville streets Saturday evening wearing the distinguished paratroop insignia on the left side of their tunics.

Sergeant Jim Shepherd of Belleville and Paratroopers Hancock, Woodbeck and Shynzyshyn of the immediate Belleville district made the trip from the training base, it was revealed. They will leave again today. The above four paratroopers trained at the Fort Benning parachute training base during the winter months.

HOPE TO COMPLETE QUOTA FLANNELETTE BANDAGES TONIGHT

With one-half the quota of flannelette bandages asked for by headquarters now completed by the Belleville branch of the Red Cross Emergency Corps, efforts will be made to complete the remainder of the quota this evening, according to officials. All interested women are asked to make an effort to attend the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic building this evening to complete the original assignment of bandages and to assist in making up an additional 600 cotton bandages which have been asked for as soon as possible. Work will start at eight o'clock.

DECREASE IN PEA CROP REPORTS PETERBORO'

According to a survey taken in the Peterborough district, there will be a 40 per cent. decrease in the green pea yield this season. Continued rains had halted early seeding in that area while farmers on the higher elevation of land report slow progress of growth.

YOUNG LADS OPEN SWIMMING SEASON

Encouraged by the advent of a bright sunny afternoon, one of the very few experienced thus far this season, many teen aged lads in the Bay of Quinte district officially opened the swimming season Sunday. Despite the high water which would naturally indicate temperatures might be a trifle too chilly for the season's first dip, lads were seen disporting themselves at Trenton and also in the Rossmore quarry pond.

143 CIVILIANS ATTEND BLOOD CLINIC, SUNDAY

Two silver buttons signifying recipients have now given six donations of blood at the Belleville Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic were given out on Sunday at one of the largest civilian clinics in recent weeks, according to clinic officials. 143 attended.

Those receiving the silver buttons were H. Mowatt of Thurlow township and F. Foster of Tweed. In addition to the two silver buttons 20 bronze buttons for 3rd donations were given out.

Donors attending yesterday's clinic were from Picton, Wellington, Deloro, Marmora, Brighton, Batawa, Northport and Tweed. Quite a number of donors from Belleville also attended, it was stated.

15-Year-Old Boy Rescues Girl From Drowning

The presence of mind of a lone fisherman on the bay bridge and the quick acting of 15-year-old Bruce Wood, son of Mrs. R. D. Black, Howard Street, averted what might have been a tragic drowning accident in the Bay of Quinte Sunday afternoon.

Swimming from the bay bridge, Barbara Palmer, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Palmer, Ridley Avenue, was carried away by the strong current racing underneath the bridge and nearly exhausted was pulled into a canoe by the Wood youth as she was going down. The young girl still feels the effects of her experience today and is confined to her bed unable to go to work.

The Palmer girl with her chum, Inez Lundberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lundberg, Dunbar Street, had taken advantage of the bright afternoon to go swimming off the bay bridge and had not realized the strength of the current at that particular point, according to Mrs. Palmer today. The current caught the girl and quickly swept her out of reach of the bridge. She called for help and was heard by the unidentified fisherman who directed the Wood youth to the rescue.

"Barbara certainly owes Bruce Wood and also the man at the bridge a debt of gratitude today," stated Mrs. Palmer. "Undoubtedly their quick action was responsible for saving her life."

Many Fine Solo Numbers Feature Band Concert

Demonstrating again that the Trenton R.C.A.F. band is one of the most outstanding military organizations of its kind in the Dominion of Canada, the popular Trenton band Sunday evening enthralled an almost capacity crowd at the Capitol Theatre when its members staged another of their popular band concerts in aid of local charity funds.

Held under the auspices of the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. the evening's entertainment was comprised of varied band numbers ranging from popular military marches to the more classical overtures and other selections by popular authors. Solo parts in several of the numbers were taken by Corporal W. Hume on the French horn, a trumpet solo by LAC. Earl Gaetz and a euphonium solo by LAC. Anderson.

Guest vocal soloist for the evening was Sergeant "Bud" Saunders of the Trenton Air Station, who, with his fine baritone voice, brought fine applause from an appreciative audience as he sang several popular numbers. Sergeant Saunders sang "Sylvia," and "On the Road to Mandalay," while in his second appearance he sang "For You Alone," and "Old Man River." Miss Ola Kenny very capably accompanied the guest soloist on the piano.

Band Leader Warrant Officer E. Hancock acted as master of ceremonies for the evening, introducing the various numbers. Following the band concert the ladies of the St. Julien Chapter served refreshments to the members of the band and other artists at the Oddfellows' Hall.

Following a short illness Dr. John R. Simmons of Elmira, Ontario, and formerly of Frankford, died in St. Mary's Hospital, Kitchener, on Saturday, May 29th., in his 50th year.

The late Dr. Simmons was a son of the late Dr. John U. Simmons of Frankford and his wife, Laura Arnott. It is some years since Dr. John R. Simmons left Frankford. During his residence there he was well known throughout the district and was highly esteemed. To many old friends the announcement of his death will bring sincere regret.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Constance Davis, Reg. N., and one daughter, Marie, at home.

The funeral took place at Elmira this Monday afternoon and interment took place in Elmira Cemetery.

MRS. NICHOLAS R. HARTT (Wooler)

Wooler, May 31.—Residents of Murray Township were shocked to learn of the sudden death of Bertha Elizabeth Hill, beloved wife of Nicholas R. Hartt, which occurred at Kingston General Hospital on Tuesday, May 25, 1943. Mrs. Hartt was in her usual health and on Saturday last week was shopping at Trenton. She was taken very ill at her home on Sunday and rushed to the hospital where she succumbed.

Mrs. Hartt, who was in her 69th year, was born in Murray Township daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hill and had resided in Murray all her life. She was a faithful and active member of St. George's Anglican Church.

Surviving are her husband; one son, James Hartt, Murray township; one daughter, Mrs. Arthur McConnell, Brighton; one sister, Mrs. George Brumell, Manville, Alberta, and several grandchildren.

The late Mrs. Hartt rested at her residence and on Thursday afternoon the funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. L. Hutchinson, Trenton. Interment was made in St. George's Cemetery.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Albert Farrar, Kenneth Crews, John Alyea, Gordon Flynn, Ernest Ireland and Norris Roberts.

MRS. SARAH BELL (Sidney Township)

Mrs. Sarah Bell, widow of Lewis Bell, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hilton Shorey, 4th concession of Sidney Township, early this Monday morning. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Bell, who was in her 82nd year, was born in Storrington Township, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Shannon. At one time she lived in Thurlow Township and for the past thirty-two years she resided in Sidney Township. In religion she was a member of the United Church at Wallbridge, and when age and health permitted she took an active part in church work, being a member of the Women's Aid.

The funeral announcement is made on page two in this issue.

MRS. JOSEPH SHAW (Eldorado)

Madoc, May 31 (Special) — Mrs. Joseph Shaw, died at her home at Eldorado on Friday, May 28th. She was in failing health for some years, but death came suddenly.

The late Mrs. Shaw was born seventy years ago in Marmora Township and prior to her marriage she was Miss Isobel Maud Broadworth, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Broadworth. Her mother's maiden name was Isobel Ann Richardson. For the past forty-nine years she lived at Eldorado and was well esteemed in the community. In religion she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Joseph Shaw; one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Shaw (Laura), Durban, Manitoba; two sons, Finley Shaw, Eldorado, and Hedley Shaw, Eldorado; six grandchildren and one great grandchild; four brothers, John Broadworth, Saskatoon, Sask.; Isaac Broadworth, Madoc; Joseph Broadworth, Stirling, and Frederick Broadworth, Ivanhoe; one sister, Mrs. George Bassett (Beatrice), Madoc.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon and service was conducted in Fox's Church by the Rev. A. Poulter of Madoc United Church. Interment took place in Fox's cemetery.

The funeral was largely attended.

GEORGE HAMILTON (Holloway)

George Hamilton, residence, Holloway, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday morning, May 31st. He was in failing health for several years.

Born in Sidney Township, the deceased was in his 83rd year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton. Practically all his life was passed at Holloway and he was engaged in farming. In religion he was a member of the Baptist Church and was well esteemed in the district. He never married.

Surviving him are one brother, Thomas Hamilton, Foxboro; five sisters, Mrs. Robert Lake, Mrs. Roy Walbourne, Mrs. Nelson Stapley, all of Stirling; Mrs. Jack Wilson, Belleville and Mrs. Herbert Smith, New Toronto.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

Recover Bodies Of Mother, Son From Crowe River

Marmora, May 31 (Special)—The bodies of Mrs. Charles Dunlay and her 17-year-old son Wilfred, were recovered from the waters of the Crowe River here over the weekend. The pair were swept to their death on May 20th when the boat from which they were fishing went over a dam. The body of Mrs. Dunlay was recovered Sunday afternoon, while Game Warden J. A. Shannon discovered the boy's body a few yards below the dam and near where the capsized boat was first seen early Monday. It was later announced today, that no inquest would be necessary in the drownings, revealed Coroner Dr. S. R. Beatty.

Caught in Willows

The body of Mrs. Dunlay was discovered caught in some overhanging willows about a quarter of a mile below the Marmora bridge. Discovery was made by Constable W. D. Lavender and Wallace Lawrence and Arthur Campion, who were in the boat with him, continuing the search commenced nine days previous. The body was conveyed to F. N. Marett and Company's Undertaking Parlors. Search was continued for the body of the deceased woman's son and when abandoned at 5.30 p.m. no vestige had been found. Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson was notified and Dr. S. R. Beatty, of Madoc, who was summoned as coroner, decided an inquest was unnecessary.

Guard Rail Placed

It had been thought that the bodies would be found above the bridge and so a week ago guard rail wire was suspended the full width of the river to halt the floating of the bodies.

Nazi Naval Captain Admits Success Of Allies vs. U-Boats

Stockholm, May 31 (AP) — A German naval writer indirectly conceded today that the Allied defence against U-boats is reducing the sinking of merchant ships and is even easing Nazi pressure on the ocean sea lanes.

Capt. Rudolf Krohne, commander of a corvette, emphasizing how difficult U-boat warfare has become, wrote in the Voelkischer Beobachter," Nazi party organ:

"The tenacious exertions of the British and Americans to protect their convoys sufficiently with constantly new defensive weapons and with naval and air-forces and to discover the U-boats in time to force them off and destroy them, may indeed reduce sinkings for some time and achieve a certain easing in the battle of the Atlantic.

Krohne said the Nazis are convinced that war against a sea power such as Britain naturally "must be a sea war and can only be decided on the sea."

Bob Semple, Picton, One of Corvette Crew, Assists in Saving Vessel

(By SCOTT YOUNG)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

At a Northern Ireland Port, May 31 (CP) — The Royal Canadian Navy might have one less corvette today if it hadn't been for a 63-year-old navy man now based at Prince Rupert, B.C.

Any questions regarding how a 63-year-old could join the navy in the first place are answered vaguely by the people who know Chief Engine Room Artificer John Griffiths, but there is nothing vague about their accounts of the time H.M.C.S. Brandon started shipping water through a jammed sea-cock in an easterly gale and then found her pumps wouldn't work.

There had been some waste left in the bilge when the corvette was commissioned and when pumping operations began this waste jammed in the intakes. The lives of more than 60 men were at stake in that contest between corvette and storm, and the storm might have won if the corvette hadn't had this tiny C.E.R.A., John Griffiths.

"Somehow, this fellow kept one pump working all the time, enough to keep even with the water coming in," Lt.-Cmdr. John Littler, the Brandon's skipper said. "He and his men had to work in water 12 hours to do it, with seas so high water was pouring in through the ventilators and the doors, but he brought us through."

While the corvette's officers, including Lieut. Tiny Herman, Ottawa Rough Riders football star, and men struggled to hold the nose of the corvette into the battering seas, Griffiths and his engine-room crew worked calmly with the pumps.

Stoker Petty Officer Bob Semple of Picton, Ont., a leading stoker then, told how he and six other stokers, three engine room artificers, three Stoker Petty Officers and three Leading Stokers battled with the water as it rose steadily to the main bearings.

"We stopped it there," he said. "We worked on shifts, because it was hard and tiring and we couldn't stand it long at a time. What we had to do — and C.E.R.A. Griffiths was the main push in this. We had to get underwater and try to free the suction lines from the waste in the bilge, and we had to keep one pump going all the time while any spare men worked on the others.

"Another stoker, Lionel Tranter of Southampton, Ont., and I worked all the time. In addition to the water we were shipping, the main sea-cock was stuck open and there were four seamen manning a hand-pump to try to counteract that. Sometimes the water would go down a little, when we'd get more than one pump going, and sometimes it would rise a little. We were working all by feel, because we naturally couldn't see what we were doing. But we made it."

Semple, who is 25 and served nine years at sea before he joined the navy in 1940, agreed with his officers that Griffiths had been mainly responsible for saving the ship.

"It was a matter of coolness and experience with him," he said. "Where others of us would have been tempted to try equally to get all three pumps working at once, Griffiths figured it out that we could keep pace with the water by concentrating on one pump at a time, using only spares on the others, and that's what we did. And that's what kept the ship afloat until we got rid of all the waste, got all three pumps working, and beat the storm."

Nazi Radio Suggests June 22nd Date Of Allied Invasion

(By JOHN COLBURN)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, May 31 (AP)—The German radio today suggested "Der Tag" for Allied invasion of the continent was June 22, attributing its information to "confidential and well-informed quarters in London."

As invasion jitters intensified in Germany, Nazi officialdom renewed its efforts to split Russia, Britain and the United States, Berlin dispatches to Swedish newspapers indicated.

The propaganda line in the Reich capital was this: That Roosevelt ordered Stalin to dissolve the Communist International and that Roosevelt now holds three trump cards in dealing with the Russians. The Germans described these as follows: (1) the North African victory of the Anglo-American forces enables the two countries to throw their own ground forces against Europe; (2) Russia must depend on Britain and the United States for food and material; and (3) Russia is having difficulties with war industries and other bad conditions exist on the Soviet home front.

The German radio spoke increasingly of June 22 as the day when the Allies would hurl their full offensive power against the "European fortress." They said this was the date of the German-French armistice of 1940.

"The majority of London newspapers present the air raids on Germany, Italy and France as an artillery barrage immediately preceding the attack by infantry," the Berlin radio claimed.

90% of Deficit Of United Church Underwritten

Toronto, May 31—(AP) — More than 90 per cent. of the $1,700,000 deficit of the United Church of Canada has been underwritten, Rev. Denzil G. Ridout, director of the United Church deficit committee announced today. A sum of $134,053 remains to be underwritten.

Mr. Ridout said many congregations were holding special canvasses to attempt to liquidate the deficit by June 30. Gifts to help the movement have been received from United Church members in Central Africa, West China, Labrador, Newfoundland, Trinidad and other parts of the world.

Toronto — (CP) — A conference of C.I.O. unions declared in a resolution here Sunday the industrial front in Ontario is in a state of "extreme crisis" and that labor unrest, unless remedied, "will undermine the whole war effort." Delegates attended from Galt, Hamilton, Kitchener, and other Ontario centres.

London, Ont. — (CP) — Premier Nixon said in an interview Saturday that consideration of the crisis facing farmers as a result of the manpower situation and the late spring was being "actively undertaken by himself and his cabinet. He did not go into details.

London, Ont. — (CP) — Premier Nixon said in an interview Saturday the recently-passed collective bargaining is already in effect but more or less dormant until the judicature act becomes law on June 17.

London, May 31 — (CP Cable) —Reports that picked German SS. troops (Elite Guards) have been rushed into the Rhineland and Ruhr industrial areas to quell hunger riots were published yesterday in a Sunday Express dispatch from its Stockholm correspondent, Edmond Demaitre.

Ottawa, May 31 — (CP) — About 300 civilians in Canada will receive honors from the King in the birthday honors list June2. Previously it had been reported in official circles that awards for civilians were not expected.

With the 400-odd awards for Canadian service personnel, Canada's quota of honors in the list will be about 700.

SMOKE-SHROUDED

three trains, the water tower and a factory at Alghero. The one Allied plane lost during the day went down in this operation, but the pilot is known to be safe.

Six ships were damaged in a raid on Aranci, northeast Sardinia. Hits also were observed on the mole, shore buildings and the railroad yard.

Pantelleria, which like Sardinia has been bombed on an average of two out of three days since mid-May, again suggered heavily.

Two raids were made by R. A. F. Wellingtons on the fortified island during the night. The first formation attacked town buildings and docks; the second, moving in shortly before dawn, gave the town another going over.

After daybreak fighters swiftly ravaged some military targets. They were followed by medium bombers. Still another formation of fighters made the last raid of the day.

By a conservative estimate, combined Allied aerial operations in the Mediterranean theatre yesterday probably employed more than 300 planes.

Air Force sources said either of two factors might explain the Axis failure to put up a more effective defence:

(1) The Axis is short of fighter aircraft, or (2) German and Italian fighter reserves are being husbanded for future operations.

14 Enemy Planes Downed

Allied air supremacy clearly has been shown on this invasion front, but the Axis made a brief show of strength to oppose the Allied Africa-based air fleet yesterday and 14 enemy planes were shot down, the communique said.

In raids on Sardinia and Pantelleria Saturday absolutely no enemy aerial opposition was encountered.

(The Italian communique broadcast by the Rome radio said the raid on Naples was the 70th. on that important west coast Italian port and acknowledged considerable damage had been caused there.

(The Italians said Bari and Potenza also had been raided, in addition to Foggia and Sardinian targets.)"

("There was great damage to public and private buildings in Naples, where six four-engined planes were shot down, three by our fighters, one by German fighters and two by anti-aircraft defences," the Italian broadcast claimed. It was recorded by The Associated Press. It also asserted nine planes were shot down over Pantelleria and another was shot down by fighter planes.

(In a supplement to the communique the Rome radio claimed 58 were killed and 351 injured in the Naples raid and five were killed and ten injured in various localities in Sardinia.

(The communique asserted casualties in the Allied raid on May 15 on Civitavecchia, a ferry port 40 miles northeast of Rome, now totalled 295.)

The Allied communique said that in all of Sunday's operations the Northwest African Air Force lost one plane and that its pilot was known to be safe.

Lash at Objectives

Medium and fighter bombers swarmed in over Pantelleria in another assault yesterday, covering their targets with bombs and starting fires, Allied headquarters said.

Fighter planes lashed at the Sardinian objectives.

"Bombs were seen to burst in railway yards and stations, dock installations and a transformer station," the war bulletin said. It did not specify the localities bombed.

Day after day since the middle of May, grounded Italian and German aircraft on those two island approaches to Europe, on Sicily and at the lower end of the Italian peninsula have been destroyed by Allied raiders, with Malta-based planes and others from the Middle East air command adding to the punishment.

In addition, bombers and fighter planes alike have shot numerous enemy fighters out of the sky, destroying the planes, shattering the ranks of experienced Axis pilots and shaking the morale of their mates.

The dock area on Pantelleria was the principal target in Saturday's raids by waves of medium and marauder bombers and bomb-carrying fighters, which afterward ripped up abandoned airfields.

Buildings, docks and supply dumps at Porto Ponte Di Romano, in southwest Sardinia, were set on fire in the aerial assault schedule.

Not a single Allied plane was lost.

Peterboro Youth Back In Jail on Theft Charge After Week's Freedom

Bancroft, May 31 (Special)—Released from the Don jail, Toronto, only one week ago where he served a term for minor thefts, William F. Nicholson, 19, Rockcroft, Peterboro county, is back in jail again awaiting trial for a like misdemeanour.

Saturday afternoon, Mr. George Parks, service station proprietor, 12 miles south of this village, reported his premises had been broken into in his absence with $10 in cash and a quantity of cigarettes and tobacco stolen. Constable Stanley Palmateer investigated and apprehending Nicholson at the William Parks store at Ormsby, a search of his person recovered the missing money and cigarettes.

Nicholson readily admitted breaking and entering the Parks service station and told police he had been released from the Don jail one week ago. He is now in Belleville jail awaiting trial on the breaking and entering and theft charge.

Lt.-Gen. Stilwell Now in London For Conference

London, May 31 (CP)—Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, United States Command General in China, India and Burma, has arrived in London and "discussed integration of military plans in the global war" with Lt.-Gen. Jacob L. Devers, U.S. Commander in the European theatre.

An announcement today from headquarters described Gen. Stilwell's visit as a stop-over on a trip to the Orient.

Accompanying him were Maj.-Gen. R. D. Olds, Chief-of-Staff of the 10th Air Force and Col. Frank Merrill, Gen. Stilwell's assistant Chief-of-staff in charge of operations. They were met by representatives of the British army and the R.A.F.

Gen. Stilwell said his trip to Britain in a transport plane was "fine and uneventful."

He said his trip to China, where he is Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's Chief-of-Staff as well, would be via various theatres of operations so he would be able to co-ordinate his plans with those of other commanders.

His presence in Washington, along with other Allied leaders from the Far East, had served to focus attention sharply on that war theatre and led to general speculation that new, intensified blows were being planned against the Japanese.

Others who sat in on the conference attended by Stilwell in the U.S. capital included Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Commander-in-Chief in India; Admiral Sir James Somerville, Commander-in-Chief of the Eastern Fleet based

Tank Valuable In Exploiting Enemy Weakness

(A New York Herald Tribune Editorial)

In the mopping up in North Africa the Allied armored columns played almost as prominent a part as did the German tank and dive-bomber teams in all the earlier campaigns of the war. This may seem to dispute a good deal of recent talk about the decline of the tank; but, in fact, it probably only tends to support it.

North African correspondents have been stressing the dwindling value of the tank in face of the enhanced power and mobility of the artillery; some have even compared the process to that whereby the introduction of gunpowder finished the heavily armored cavalry of the medieval knights.

But perhaps a more accurate comparison would be with the change which later overtook the heavy cavalry of Napoleonic times. Napoleon could still use his heavy dragoons as shock troops, as he did when he launched them against the British squares at Waterloo. But the improvement of small arms was soon to put that sort of thing out of the question, and by the time of the American Civil War cavalry was a weapon only of reconnaissance, of "opportunity" and of pursuit.

• •

Apparently it is something of this kind which is now happening to the tank. The weapon originally developed by the British in the last war as a means of smashing thru' the centres of enemy strength is now finding its deadliest use as a weapon for exploiting his weakness. In a recent book on the Libyan campaigns Mr. Alan Moorehead describes the Battle of Gazala as a repetition on a larger scale of Waterloo. The British divisions, established in detaches "boxes," resembled Wellington's squares, while Rommel's armor raged around them like Napoleon's cavalry.

But it failed to accomplish much, and this tended to bear out the experience that tanks, when properly opposed by artillery or heavier tanks, were of limited value. From El Alamein onward the tanks ceased to act as the spearheads of the assault but were of terrible effect in developing the initial gains of the infantry.

This seems to have been their role in the final stages of Tunisia. They took no great part in the breakthrough, but were of devastating effect once they got loose behind the enemy's lines. The tank, though it remains of great importance, is ceasing to be a major weapon of shock tactics. War, in other words, is repeating its familiar changes, and the price of victory is still the imaginative alertness which can analyze these changes as they appear, seize on new methods which give promise, combine them with the old, develop them while they work and discard them when they cease to be of value.

Frantic Efforts Made to Recover Children's Bodies

London, May 31 —(CP)— Rescue squads and frantic parents continued today to search wreckage of a church in a southwestern English coastal district for the bodies of 15 missing children and three Sunday School teachers believed trapped when German planes bombed the area Sunday. The bodies of 21 children had been recovered last night.

The raiders, a force of 15 Focke-Wulf planes, streaked in to attack the city, wrecking the church, a hotel and other buildings with bombs and machine-gun fire. A number of casualties were reported in the hotel as well as in the streets, machine-gunned by the low-flying German planes.

The child victims were between the ages of nine and 15. They were early arrivals for Sunday School classes. Residents said that if the bomb which struck the church had been 10 minutes later, many more children would have been assembled, with casualties much higher.

Four of the 15 raiders were brought down by the defences, one crashing into a street, causing damage.

In another hit-and-run, low level raid, 12 Nazi craft hit two east Anglian coast towns at dusk, killing at leave five persons. A Roman catholic church received a direct hit but the congregation had just left it. At least one raider was destroyed.

Expert Replans Grounds

It was learned last week that a landscaping expert has made new plans for the school grounds. It is expected that work on this new project will begin next fall.

Tentative arrangements include a hedge around the campus, so that it will no longer look like "a vacant lot in front of the school"; bushes planted to soften the lines of the school; extension of shrubs along the walks, etc.

Mr. Turner said that he would welcome any of our suggestions on this work. Students are expected to co-operate in this plan by staying off the terrace, etc. The finished project will greatly improve the appearance of our school.

The annual inspection of the Cadettes drew a great deal of praise from the many observers. Inspecting Officer Captain Holmes said: "I want to congratulate you on the excellence of your marching and drill." Said Major Sisler: "I knew you could do it."

Marching in splendid fashion under their competent leader, Lieut.-Col. Phyllis Clapp, the girls were inspected by Captain Holmes, due to the illness of Col. Bonnan. The B Company, under Captain Evelyn Allison, kept the cup for a second year. (Congratulations Evelyn). Highlights of the program were the precision drill, ably led by Vera Flindall, and the gymnastic drill (the first of its kind in the annals of Cadet Inspection) led by Margaret Taylor. Observers were impressed by the easy grace of the girls.

A route march finished off the day, in which the student members of the Air Cadets and Sea Cadets took part, and attracted much favourable comment.

Last Issue

This edition of the Collegiate News brings to a close another year of student journalism. I want to thank the following:—

The teachers and staff, for their help and consideration; without their co-operation we could never have been able to get this column out regularly.

The many class reporters, and our contributors, for their nuggets of information and specialized contributions;

The departmental editors: Evelyn Allison, Girls' Sports; Gerald Hyde, Boys' Sports; Don "Beaver" Beavis, Cuff Noteditor; Wilma Judge, Red Cross News.

Miss Priest, for her appreciated assistance as Advisory Editor; you little know what tact and diplomacy such a position requires;

Our readers, for their criticism and suggestions, which have helped to improve the column.

The Editor.

Girl Guides, Brownies Attend Bridge St. Church For Annual Service

Smartly dressed in their blue and brown uniforms, over one hundred Guides and Brownies, filled the centre of Bridge Street United Church Sunday morning in their annual service of divine worship. The Brownies of Company 3, Brownies and Guards from the Salvation Army, and Guide Companies 2, 3, and 7 of Belleville lined up on the Collegiate campus and under the command of Captain Joyce Watson paraded to the church.

The color party composed of Audrey Stewart, Lillian Jeffs, Barbara Bews, Eileen Cameron and Mary Lyall stood at the front of the church during the opening of the service, and then the standards were placed at the front by the minister Dr. Semple to remain there during the service.

Mrs. Leo Riggs, Deputy District Commissioner, and Mrs. Mac Haig, Captain, also attended.

Dr. Semple took as text for his sermon "The Marks of a Good Guide," the verse "For I Bear in My Body the Marks of the Lord Jesus." He spoke of the days of Christ and Paul when everything was branded with the stamp of Caesar the Emperor, and said that a brand implies three things, ownership, advertisement, and genuineness. He said "Guides are known by their uniform, but are known by other things also. A guide's duty to God is to do her best. A Guide's duty to the king is to do her best Dr. Semple continued by telling how these ideals are achieved. "A guide must keep her own heart open to God to be ruled by his peace. Before there is going to be any peace in the world, there must be peace in all our hearts . . .

"A guide must look for beauty everywhere, and try to make life beautiful. We may have all these lovely things and not be very lovely ourselves."

"A good guide is never daunted by difficulties. We shall have many difficulties to overcome in building the new world, and we shall do it by building bridges, not by building walls . . .

"A good guide is dominated always by the motive of service. The service club idea is abroad in the world. Luke in speaking of Jesus said, "Who went about doing good. That's the service the world needs. We are only remembered by what we have done—the thing the world is waiting for is the man who is of service to a needy generation . . .

"The world looks to your organization to make it a better place to live in."

The music for the service was provided by the choir, and a solo was sung by Miss Margaret Semple. The flowers on the communion table were placed there in loving memory of the late John Houston by his family.

Yugoslavians Ready

One of the most cheering pieces of news of many is the word of the Yugoslav leader, General Draga Mihailovitch. He has told Allied military leaders that his forces are prepared for the decisive hour, the Yugoslav government has announced.

The story of Yugoslavia is one that is written already in heroic letters and it will unfold more and more as the time approaches for the smashing of Germany.

Yugoslavia took the way of honor and glory and did a great deed for the United Nations world when she defied Hitlerism in early 1941. What she and Greece did at that time was a powerful factor in the campaign for they delayed the march of the Hun who was moving eastward. They also delayed the German attack on Russia.

Since those memorable days the Yugoslavians have carried on a steady resistance against the Germans and Italians. Yugoslavia chose a path of honor, her soul lives and her people have upheld the glory of the national prestige and spirit.

When the Hun stands surrounded in his last battle the Yugoslavs will have a place in smashing the Germans and Italians. This heroic land which served so well the cause of liberty in the 1st Great War and has suffered from the Hun now in two wars will play a great role in the liberation of Yugoslav soil from the Axis.

The Tables Turned

Italy has long been under the shadow and blows of war. Bomb raids have made life uneasy for the Fascists as Allied power has struck at their bases of supply and their routes.

Malta, which heroically withstood the rage of German and Italian attacks, sees the tables turned and may now be on the verge of witnessing Italy feel the real blow of war. For the first time the Allied raids have spread to Leghorn.

London papers on Saturday referred to the possibility of invasion by the Allies of the Continent and pointed to the strength of shipping of the United Nations.

A few days ago Mr. Churchill gave Italy warning or advice to get out of the war and to overthrow the men who are responsible for her being in the war. All signs indicate that Italy will soon have to decide. She knows much about Allied air power and if she is going to take good advice it appears she will have to make up her mind quickly. One enemy report says that Mussolini and his fascist friend mapped plans to defend Sicily and Sardinia "to the end."

British Railways

British railway workers have a war record of which they may be justly proud; 95,000 are in the armed forces, and 90,000 have enrolled in the Home Guard, that fine force so praised recently by the British Prime Minister.

Railwaymen of Britain and railwaywomen have to the number of 200 received awards for gallantry. Over three hundred men have been killed and two thousand injured by enemy action while on duty in Great Britain. More than 50,000 women have been taken into railway service to help replace men who have joined the forces.

Railway workshops in Britain have converted six miles of passenger vehicles into ambulance and casualty evacuation hospitals, constructed in consultation with medical authorities in order to provide best methods of moving injured.

When the war began railwaymen of the United Kingdom evacuated 1,300,000 children, mothers, blind people, cripples and hospital patients from large centres to the country. 1,500 trains were run from London for this purpose.

This is part of the story of the British railways in the war. It is a story that tells by suggestion how the spirit of courage and faith has held up. It indicates by suggestion what other factors in the national life too have done for freedom.

Houses in Britain

Britain was building new homes at a fast rate when the war began, namely one million houses in three years. In the twenty years from 1919 to 1939, when Hitler forced war upon Europe, one third of the 48,000,000 people in the British Isles had been re-housed.

These facts show how Britain was facing a problem of modernization from the time of the close of the First World War to the opening of the Second World War.

The present war story in relation to houses shows that air raids over Britain damaged one house in five or a total of 2,750,000. But here again British enterprise has been active for 2,500,000 of these have already been repaired.

100,000 Tons of Bombs

(Ottawa Journal)

Speaking of the possibility of bombings bringing the collapse of Germany, Mr. Churchill said "at least, the thing is worth trying."

No one will say, after that 2,000-ton bombing of Dortmund, that the thing isn't being tried thoroughly. In the biggest German raid on London the total of bombs dropped was 500 tons. If we assume, as we have a right to, that bombs falling on a German city do as much damage as bombs falling on a British city, then Dortmund must be a shambles. The 500-ton bombing of London left all the area around St. Paul's a sea of ruins.

And Dortmund is only one city in the devastation calendar. The raid on Berlin in March, when 900 tons of bombs were dropped in 30 minutes, was the 59th raid on the German capital. Essen, which received 1,000 tons of bombs on March 13, had been blasted more than 50 times. Cologne has had 115 raids, Bremen 105, Hamburg 95, Hamm 86, Emden 84, Kiel 75, and Duisburg 56. In fact, more than 200 German cities and towns have felt the wrath of the R.A.F.

And the end isn't yet. Air Marshal Harris' promise is that the raids will become bigger, and oftener — and more accurate.

Speech-Making

(Brantford Erpositor)

At a meeting in Brantford a noted speaker was billed. The chairman had observed that the guest was limited as to time, because he had a train to catch. Then the inevitable introducer was ralled upon. He began by lauding the visitor at some length. He proceeded to recount his claims to fame at still greater length. Then, warming up to the task, he brought in some enlightening thoughts of his own.

At long last the introducer dried up. The audience stirred to a semblance of wakefulness. The great man rose. But unlike that of the preceding orator, his speech was brief and to the point. He thanked the introducer for his lavish comments, he thanked the audience, but, he explained, the hour approached when he must catch his train, so his prepared address would have to wait. Then he left.

Andorra's 300 Are Happy

Happy are the 300 new inhabitants of Andorra, smallest independent state in Europe, who used to live in France. They believe they are safe from an invasion by Hitler. Andorra City had 700 inhabitants before the war. Now it has 1,000. The 300 are refugees, mostly rich, for only rich persons managed to get away from Unoccupied France when Hitler marched in last fall. If Andorra had been on the French instead of the Spanish slopes of the Pyrenees the exiles might not have been so lucky, but Hitler is anxious not to offend Franco, and has not invaded Andorra.

Life is the soul's nursery—its training place for the destinies of eternity.

WITH HIM AWAY

These were the days we used to go
To certain spots we'd come to know
And fish for perch or pike or bass
And let a day serenely pass.
But now at home alone I stay.
The fun is gone with him away.

These were the days we dreamed about
When winter wouldn't let us out,
The days, all fathers understand,
Beside a blazing log fire planned.
A fishing trip? Ah, not today!
The fun is gone with him away.

These were the days we rowed the boat
In bays where water lilies float
And cast where bass might lurk about
And straightened many a backlash out.
Now I've no heart for stream or bay.
The fun is gone with him away.

When victory comes and all are free
Companions of their boys to be;
When sons and fathers once again
May share each other's pleasures, then,
Some day like this, away we'll slip
Together on a fishing trip.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 31, 1923

Mr. J. J. B. Flint was given a hearty welcome when he arrived home yesterday after an absence of three years in California. At the C.P.R. station when the train arrived shortly after noon there were many citizens assembled to greet him. Among those present were Mayor Bennett and members of the city council, members of the Hastings Bar Association; Mr. J. O. Herity, manager of the Chamber of Commerce; Mr. T. Blackburn, president of the Horticultural Society, and Chief of Police Kidd. Mr. Flint was taken by motor car to the Chamber of Commerce where a public reception was given him. Short speeches were made by Mayor Bennett, Col. Ponton, Police Magistrate S. Masson, Mr. P. E. O'Flynn, Mr. W. C. Hikel, K.C., and Mr. T. Blackburn. The latter presented Mr. Flint with a beautiful bouquet of roses. Mr. Flint feelingly expressed his appreciation of the hearty welcome given him.

An Evening Off

(From the London Express"

Young fighter pilots of the R.A.F. enjoying an evening off from "Ops", at a village hotel "somewhere in Dorset", scribbled their names on the distempered walls of the crowded bar as boys carve their names on trees or rocks.

A wing commander watched the scribbling with disapproval, but Mrs. "Ted" Harvey, the landlord, had also noticed.

He, said, quietly: "In years to come I shall be proud to show visitors these autographs of 'the few.'

"So let them put their names on my walls."

The wing commander strolled across the room and there were shouts of "Good old Wingco . . . cracking good show, sir," as he added his name, putting in brackets after it his nickname, "Tin Legs."

That nickname will puzzle future tourists, and Mr. Harvey will recall that the wing commander got it because after he lost his legs in a sky battle he kept flying with artificial limbs; as Bader did.

After the Battle of Britain other airmen came to this station—Americans, French, Belgians; Poles, Czechs and Dutch.

All have their names on the walls of this hotel.

It will seem strange to tourists in years to come when they hear Mr. Harvey say as he said to me:

"I always know when one of the lads has been killed. His comrades always throw a party.

"The name of the man is never mentioned again. It is their unwritten law."

The Dissolution of the Comintern

III

New York, May 31.—In the preceding two columns I have attempted to trace the history of the Comintern and show that Stalin's action is the logical culmination of an evolving policy and of the historical events.

The Comintern had ceased to be a useful instrument for Russian power, and therefore was dissolved.

But the consequences may be quite other than a snap judgment would lead one to think.

The trend to social revolution, or evolution, existed before the Soviet Union was founded; in fact the Soviet Union was only a consequence of this tendency. And in the quarter century which has passed since the founding of the Soviet Union, nothing has occurred to abate the drive in all countries to fundamental social changes.

The entire generation has been marked by two colossal wars, and a period between them notable for its social and economic instability, features of which have been destruction of currencies, and with their destruction drastic shifts in classes, and especially a reduction of the buffer class between upper and nether levels—the middle class.

World Wide Depression.

Where this middle class has not suffered from drastic inflations, it has been reduced by drastic taxation, by the growth of monopolies or cartels, reducing the influence and power of smaller independent business; and by an almost continual crisis in agriculture in all countries.

The generation has seen a worldwide depression of the most dolorous proportions, marked by unemployment on an unprecedented scale and of unprecedented duration.

The generation has also seen a breakdown of traditional intellectual and spiritual values and stands. Both the intellectual and moral integration of Western civilization has undergone a remarkable atomization.

And the most obvious reaction to all this has been the growth of the idea of socialism in every country, in one form or another, or to one degree or another.

In all movements involving masses of people, the tendency is along the line of least resistance. Curiously enough, socialism is the line of least resistance, in a world dominated by monopolies and cartels, some of which have reached the size and scope of vast international empires. It seems easier to take them over than to break them up, and thus we see everywhere a trend toward State ownership or State control of them. The slogan of socialization is more easily comprehensible to masses than the vision of how to create a free society.

For a Free Society

I, for my part, am for a free society, and my teachers are Jefferson, Veblen, Henry George and Thoreau, rather than Marx and Engels; but this personal opinion does not prejudice observation of the situation in the world.

In any case the social problem, particularly the problems of maintained employment, security against exceptional hazards and old age together with the problem of the prevention of war, engage a generation which has suffered unprecedented collapses, and is swiftly losing every framework of reference.

Such a social, intellectual and moral condition is revolutionary. The demand for "solutions" presses against every dam.

Now, if this is true, it is childish to think that the dissolution of the Comintern, or any other organization, will halt the flow of revolutionary streams. And it is childish to believe that the ukase of a single man, named Stalin, will call off the latent or open rebellions that brew in many quarters, everywhere.

Even if old Marx were still alive and should burn his own books and enter a monastery, he could not undo the mental developments of three generations.

aganstf fffivefredW .. n

What the dissolution of the Commintern actually does is to remove the leadership from a worldwide organization, and, at the same time, to remove a certain curb upon it. It isolates Russia from the Communists and returns them to their own countries.

Trends of Internationalism.

Inasmuch as the International Communist Party has been, since Stalin, wholly concerned with the protection of the Soviet Union, it has not been exploiting every revolutionary possibility in each country. It has given up opposition to Governments or to prevailing economic systems, whenever the Soviet Union demanded it—and the Soviet Union has often demanded it. It told the French Communist Party to be good boys after the signing of the French-Russia treaty of alliance, and let them loase again against the French Government after the alliance was broken at Munich.

Also, the Comintern, for 25 years, has kept the Socialist and Labor movements split. In Germany, the Communist Party in the later years of the Weimar Republic, and the Hitler movement staring them in the face, continued to brand the moderate Socialisst as "Enemy Number One." The dissolution of the Commintern, in the long run, may result in a coalition of Socialist forces.

Also, the leadership of the Comintern, far removed in Moscow, and with strictly dictatorial powers, often acted clumsily and foolishly, and the party constantly lost its superior leaders. Cut loose, and free, new and more competent leaders may arise.

The dissolution of the Comintern shakes up and temporarily disorients radical movements in all countries. But at the same time it removes the strongest obstacles to a new start on the part of these radical movements. It is therefore much too early to predict an age of social peace—to be handed us by the good will of Stalin.

JEEPERS CREEPERS

At last the cat seems to be out of the bag as to who originated the jeep.

The Federal Trade Commission says the jeep was conceived and developed by the American Bantam Car Company, of Butler, Pennsylvania, "in collaboration with certain officers of the United States army."

This government agency, in a formal complaint, denies the claim of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc. that it, in co-operation and collaboration with the Quartermaster Corps of the United States army, created and perfected the jeep.

The jeep is now undoubtedly the most famous motor vehicle in the world.

Officially the jeep is termed "the ½ ton, 4 x 4 command-reconnaissance car."

Now it is used in the army for nearly every conceivable purpose for which a light motor vehicle can be employed and is famous for its general utility value.

It has been called appropriately the mechanical mule of the army.

The jeep costs about $900, is driven by four-cylinder motors, has a four-wheel drive and can go up to a mile a minute.

Soldiers say the jeep can do anything but swim or climb a greased pole.

How the term "jeep" originated is still the subject of controversy.

The generally accepted theory is that "jeep" was suggested by the letters "G.P.," the abbreviation of "General Purpose," which occurred on the orders for these miniature wonder cars.

Another theory is that "jeep" as a slang name for the vehicle was suggested by a remark made by an army officer, who, after taking a ride in one of the first cars of this type, exclaimed: "Jeepers creepers! That's a real car."

It is very difficult to trace the origin of slang terms and we may never know for sure how "jeep" originated.

Some soldiers call a rooky a jeep and, the barracks where new recruits are quartered "jeep town." Jeep hats, jeep coats and jeep uniforms are ill-fitting clothing issued to inductees without reference to their actual size requirements. In this sense the term smacks of comic strip origin.

WEDDINGS

TERRILL—ROMA

Wooler—A very pretty spring wedding was solemnized on Monday, May 10, in St. John's, Newfoundland, when Helen Winifred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Roma of Dartmouth N.S., became the bride of Pilot Officer James Clarke Terrill, R.C.A.F., elder son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Terrill, Wooler. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Blount, assisted by Rev. MacIver, R.C.A.F., chaplain.

The bride was attractive in her beige ensemble with brown accessories and corsage of pink roses. Miss Kathleen Agombar, of Owen Sound, Ont., who is attached to the R.C.A.F., attended as bridesmaid and Pilot Officer James Copeland, of Sarnia, R.C.A.F., acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Newfoundland Hotel. After a short honeymoon they will reside in St. John's.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Emotionally Unbalanced Men Should Not Be Allowed in Military Services.

The commonest ailment in the last war was what was called shell shock. "Between April 1917 and December 1919, there were 110,000 mental cases in the United States army. Out of 90 veterans' hospitals at present, 27 handle mental cases at an average cost of $36,000 per patient to the tax payer".

During the last war, when a shell-shocked soldier was sent back from the front for hospital care, he was often treated for months and then sent back home for further hospital treatment. In this yar, he is given immediate treatment by his own medical officer or nearest field hospital, the cause of his symptoms clearly explained to him, and the great majority of cases return to the front in a matter of days or weeks.

The idea behind the treatment now is that these patients, as intelligent and brave as their comrades, nevertheless are of the emotional type and under strain of circumstances in civilian life might readily become neurotic or shell shocked with chronic tiredness, rapid heart or disordered heart beat, sleeplessness, irritability and lack of concentration.

Dr. Francis J. Braceland, Chicago, Dean, Loyola University School of Medicine, before the International Postgraduate Medical Assembly stated that Air Raids among civilian population may cause:

1.—Acute panic (only in predisposed persons and not common) which panic may be delayed.

2.—Immobility (paralyzed with fright).

3.—Physical symptoms of fear which he cannot control by his will power (trembling, sweating, etc.)

"There is truly no such thing as a "war neurosis". The dangers and circumstances of war upset only those who were not emotionally balanced before the war".

As these patients are usually of average or above average intelligence, it is a great mistake to accept them for military service. They are not only lost to useful occupations in civil life, but are a great liability ($36,000) per year to the country.

Dr. Braceland states that being emotionally sound is not a matter of intelligence nor of physical development. Family doctors could prevent the admission of "predisposed" men into the army. A history of an individual is more enlightening than a single intelligence test.

"An individual who cannot keep out of trouble in civil life is sure to make trouble in the armed services".

DIDN'T BELIEVE ADVICE

Milwaukee, May 31 (AP) — Two year old Bobby Sodemann and his mother were out walking when she noticed Bobby playing with a piece of paper. "Throw it away," she commanded, "mustn't pick things off the street." Bobby did. It was a $10 bill and someone else coming along behind who didn't believe in such advice picked it up.

Dancing Aids Gracefulness

Rita Hayworth, dancing star, recommends it for gracefulness.

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Dance, little lady, dance! You will stay young and graceful. It will help you to find release from thoughts of war that are depleting and depressing.

The reason why dancing is one of the best of exercises is because it is rhythmic, helps one to cultivate ease of motion. Rhythm is a natural law. The world responds to it—the tides, the orbits of the planets, even the flowers that dance in the wind.

Organs Stimulated

The swaying of the body from side to side stimulates the functions of the inner organs, aids digestion, strengthens the muscles of the torso. Every woman who has taken on weight because of physical inactivity must realize that she is slowing up.

The desire to move briskly has departed. That means that fat cells will have right of way, will go on multiplying. They will form a solid padding that will be difficult to break down. The time to fight adipose tissue is when it is in the early stages of development.

If the thought of calisthenics sets your teeth on edge, if you find them tedious, turn your mind to dancing. Turn on the radio, get on your toes, swing your arms in the air, whirl and sway. Keep the head balanced, chest high, backbone extended.

Effect of Tap Dancing

Tap dancing is one way of shuffling off cushions from hips, thighs and calves. Just the ticket for the woman who has remained normal above the waist line, but has taken on tonnage below it. Surprising how many plumpies have lined up at tap dancing classes. They thought they'd look and feel silly until they found that many of their classmates were heavyweight too, there for the same purpose.

Boys and girls of 12, or 13, entering the so-called awkward age, are benefited by dancing lessons. They learn social graces, move with ease and distinction.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It's Just One Mother's Day That's Past; There's Another One Every Day

Mother's Day has come and gone, and whether you wore a carnation, sent Black Market nylon stockings, or a box of her favorite candy, please don't think that relieves you of obligations to your mother until Mother's Day comes around again.

Some years ago, I got a letter from a correspondent in the west —the wild and wooley west as it used to be known. He hadn't been to see his mother for many years, nor written her very often during that time, and when word was sent to him by a neighbor that she was dead and buried he was overwhelmed with grief.

He wrote: "I always felt she would be there as dependable as the sun. She'd been that way to me, and now I can't make her realize how I felt about her." He concluded his letter with: "A man ain't got so many mothers that he can afford to take his for granted, and treat her any whicher way, and put off writing to her, for the tomorrow that never comes."

This old rancher's grief was absolutely genuine, but there was nothing to be done about it except to hope other mothers' children wouldn't put off writing for the tomorrow which never come!

I was struck by the cynical comments of a certain woman columnist who began her remarks on Mother's Day by saying: "I've never had a son, though I have a daughter in the C.W.A.C., and continued that all this talk about the anguish of mothers who have sons fighting overseas, struck her as maudlin sentimentality.

The boys, this lady went on to say, suffered more than their mothers who waited to hear the result of the long-delayed account of battles, with their lists of killed and wounded, or the brief account from the Government department stating that such a soldier has been reported "missing in action."

If this woman had ever had a son I believe she'd feel differently about the raw agony of mothers trying to carry on while the desperate uncertainty of what had happened to their beloved boys prods them every waking hour.

I meant to write about candy, gloves, bottles of perfume, and other knicknacks when I started out, but two or three letters in the morning's mail from women who have lost their boys and still carry on with Spartan courage, has turned my thoughts into other channels.

Please let me conclude with a little homily to the effect that though Mother's Day has come and gone, don't think you've done your duty by mother for the entire year. A man hasn't got so many mothers, as the old rancher reminded us, and an occasional letter or even a picture postal card to the one you happen to have, will do miracles toward keeping her happy.

My Prayer for You

I pray for your safe keeping
With every hour that chimes,
Through all the pain and peril
And terror of the times
My thoughts are ever with you
Although we are far apart.
In daytime and in darkness
You are always in my heart.
We cannot be together
These troubled days to share,
But may you be protected,
This is my constant prayer:
That you may me delivered
Through all the strife and strain;
God have you in His keeping
Until we meet again.

(Sent to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gow, of Plainfield, Ontario, by her son in England, Edmund Eugene Gow, Canadian Army Medical Corps.)

Contact Lenses, Fitting the Eyeball, Advised Only for Certain Occupations.

Just a few years ago, doctors announced the practical use of lenses which are fitted on the eyeball, thus making spectacles unnecessary. These contact glasses have proved very practical for persons in certain occupations. These glasses are made of thin shells of glass or some unbreakable plastic material. Their chief advantage is that they are invisible and are placed under the eyelids in contact with the eyeballs. The part which is over the front of the eyeball, known as the cornea, actually isn't in touch with the eye. The space between the contact lens and the cornea is filled with a solution which is much like the watery solution in the eye.

It is a difficult matter to fit contact glasses. The eye must be anesthetized and a lens which is thought to be about right is put beneath the lids. After this is done the lens is removed and the eye examined to see exactly how much correction of vision is necessary. Then a lens, made to correct the eyesight, is prepared.

The chief use of contact lenses seems to be in the case of persons who have keratoconus. This is a condition in which there is a little bulging of the front part of the eyeball. It is not possible with ordinary eye glasses to get satisfactory vision, but with the contact lens the vision is corrected, and, in addition, the lens protects the cornea.

A second use of the contact lens is for the person who is nearsighted. Not only does this keep the patient from having to wear thick glasses but it is usually possible to obtain better vision. In the vision disturbance known as astigmatism, which has been brought on by injury to the eye or infections of the cornea, the contact lens also is useful.

Still another use is for ships' officers, since ordinary glasses soon become covered with spray and obstruct the vision. Then, too, swimmers, hunters, baseball and basketball players and those engaged in other athletics may find the contact lens practical. Actors and actresses have found them satisfactory.

To wear contact lenses merely for cosmetic reasons would hardly appear feasible because they are not as convenient and comfortable as are ordinary glasses. It is necessary for the person to become used to them, which may take some period of time, and in some cases the patient may become so erritable that he cannot use the contact lens under any condition.

It would appear that as improvement in the various solutions used under the lens are made and the methods of fitting them are improved more and more people can wear contact lenses and they can be prescribed with greater frequency for those who have the average trouble with their eyesight.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

How to Deal With the "Terror" of Forgetting Names of Friends.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a most embarrassing handicap . . . that of not being able to remember names at just the moment I am about to introduce some one . . . and I am terrified that this failing of mine is going to wreck my poise at my wedding reception. My fiance is from a city quite far away from here, and very few of my friends know him. We are to have a simple home wedding, and I feel fairly sure that I can manage everything correctly and smoothly, but I am dreadfully afraid that the smoothness I am so anxious to keep at this important occasion will be entirely lost when I have to introduce my fiance to so many guests. Can you, will you, please give me some so-needed advice?

— A.L.

You've taken the first important step toward Victory over your handicap, because you are honest and forthright with yourself about your "failing", and you've taken the second very important step in your willingness to ask for help. They are basic and excellent ingredients for success! Also you have a bright goal to achieve—to make this most important day in your life "shining bright", with no name-fumbling cloud on it.

How to do it? "Home-work." Print (or type) the name of every guest on a separate card. This is your card-index for remembering. And your ideal is to be: having the grace and carm to remember also that a person's name is to that person the "sweetest and most important sound in the language."

Now have a dress rehearsal with yourself. Stand before your mirsor, look at each card, visualize the person whose name is there, then turn the card down, and make the introduction, aloud. After this do your rehearsing in odd minutes —as you're sewing, riding on a bus, anywhere, any possible time.

Also, if I sense your difficulty correctly, concentrate your memory on a guest's last name, for very often your kind of difficulty comes from remembering only first names, when last names are the important feature of an introduction. Good luck to you!

Two Attendants Approved

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance has been planning to have two attendants at our wedding. If, as is quite possible, one of his attendants should be called into the service before our wedding would it be proper for me to have two attendants as I had planned, a matron of honor and a maid of honor? If so, how would you arrange the recessional?

Yes, even if your bridegroom is to have only a best man and no ushers to take part in the processional and recessional, you may have two attendants. In this case, I suggest you have your two attendants, since they are both "honor" attendants, dressed alike and walk together—in both the procession and recessional. The best man need not take part in the recessional (he usually doesn't, in the perfectly-planned wedding); first, come you and your bridegroom and then, as in the procession, your matron of honor and maid of honor walk together. If there are to be ushers, they walk together, two by two, the first ones in the procession, and the last in the recessional.

Cheaper to Get U. S. Passport

Ottawa, May 31—(CP)-Many Canadians wishing to visit the United States are finding it is cheaper to get a passport for $3 than it is to get a border crossing identification card for nothing and accordingly the demand for passport is again up to 1,100 a week, a passport official said Sunday.

When Canadians were informed by Washington, late in February, they would be able to cross the border on these identification cards the applications for passports dropped to around 200 a week. However, to get an identification card the applicant has to present himself or herself personally to a United States consular office and there are only 19 in Canada.

For example there is none between Ottawa and Toronto and it is cheaper for a person wishing to cross the border from any of the towns in between to mail in an application for a passport with $3 than it is to travel to Toronto or Ottawa to see a U. S. consul.

WEEKLY WARTIME NUTRITION HINTS

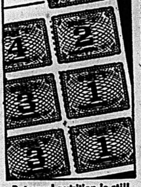
by Martha Logan

So Meat is Rationed!



But good nutrition is still our greatest challenge.

Good nutrition for our families is still the greatest challenge to every homemaker. Shortages, rationing and other food problems complicate, but must not cloud, the basic fact that good food on our table means better health for the home front.

Woman's greatest war work is to see to it that in spite of mounting difficulties, the health of her family will be strengthened by a wise and better use of the foods available, and by following as closely as possible the rules established by Canada's Nutrition Program.

To make the supply of food available for civilians during wartime go farther, follow these guides: Plan meals before buying; buy whatever foods are available in your market; take good care of all food purchased.

Let's take a look at the eight important food groups and see how we can make the most of each food.

MEAT, POULTRY, EGGS AND FISH: All grades of meat have high food value. Cook meat slowly to prevent shrinkage. Broil or roast tender cuts, braise less tender cuts to make them tender and delicious. Keep all fresh and cooked meats in a cold place—fish and poultry, too. Try to use liver, kidney or heart, at least once a week. Keep eggs cool. Use eggs cooked in any way and count these on the weekly quota of at least 3 or 4. Cook eggs slowly, as fast cooking toughens the whites.

MILK AND MILK PRODUCTS: Whole milk, skim, evaporated or buttermilk may be used. Count the milk used to make soups, puddings, breads, gravies as part of the milk you need daily. Use cheese in cooking, serve it on the table. One ounce of cheese may be eaten in place of one glass of milk. Keep milk cool, clean, and covered. Keep cheese closely wrapped in a cool, dry place.

ORANGES, GRAPEFRUIT, TOMATOES: Use citrus fruit, tomatoes or raw cabbage every day. Keep all fruits in a cool clean place. Wash just before using. Do not squeeze fruit juices long before serving.

LEAFY, GREEN OR YELLOW VEGETABLES: Green outer leaves contain more vitamins than inner bleached leaves. Keep vegetables covered in a cool place. Cook vegetables quickly in a small amount of water in a covered container. Do not overcook vegetables. Store cooked vegetables in a covered dish. Use as soon as possible—in a mixed salad, perhaps.

OTHER VEGETABLES, FRUITS: Eat two or more fruits and vegetables each day; use fresh, stewed, baked, canned, serving with cereals, in salads or puddings, and other desserts.

CEREALS AND BREAD: Use Canada Approved bread or whole-grain bread, use whole-grain cereals. Keep in closed containers. Use up dry bread in puddings or stuffings, or as bread crumbs.

BUTTER, AND OTHER FATS: Use butter as a table spread. Use strained, light drippings for cooking fat. Peanut butter, lard, shortening, salad oil, and cream all furnish concentrated energy.

Softball Twin Bills Scheduled In City Loop to Open Thursday

Eight Teams to Face Barriers in What Should be a Splendid Season

ARRANGE PLAYOFFS

Doubleheaders will be featured in the regular schedule of the Belleville and District Softball League when it was learned over the weekend that eight teams had been accepted into the fold. Under President Knott the league executive met and decided to operate the league in two sections, "A" and "B" with all eight clubs being included in the league's first round play-offs. The teams placed in group "A" include Reliance A.C., No. 5 Initial Training School, Stephens-Adamson and the Alemite A.C., the latter being a new club entered in 1943. In group "B" Bristol Aircraft, Army and Navy "Juniors," Belleville Garrison and Belleville Foundries will compete, the latter two clubs being newcomers to local softball wars this year.

The league will commence operations at the Exhibition Park diamond with a twin bill on Thursday evening and continue Friday night with a second doubleheader that will see all eight clubs in competition this week. The opening game schedules are as follows:

Group "B"—Thursday, 6.30 p.m.—Bristol vs. Army and Navy Jrs.

Group "A"—Thursday, 7.30 p.m.—No. 5 I.T.S. vs. Stephens—Adamson.

Group "A"—Friday—Alemite vs. Reliance.

Group "B"—Friday—Garrison vs. Foundries.

Must Commence on Time

The first games in all doubleheaders must commence at 6.30 p.m. precisely and in the event teams are not prepared to play such games will be defaulted. Only an eight-minute lapse between the first and second games will be permitted by league regulations.

The executive was forced to adopt four playing nights in each week, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. In the event games scheduled on Monday or Tuesday are postponed on account of rain, etc., such games will be played on the Wednesday evening of that week, while games postponed on Thursday or Friday must be completed Saturday night of the same week.

During the regular league schedule when doubleheaders are to be featured, the games will be of the seven-inning duration only. Harold Bawden was again named umpire-in-chief while all games will be officiated by Mr. Bawden, Eddie Schrieder, Chuck Barnett and Cy Young. The umpires' fee will be $2 for a twin bill with the umpires alternating. The usual opening game ceremonies will be held on Thursday evening, when the league opens with its first twin bill.

Playoffs Arranged

Following a home-and-home schedule in groups "A" and "B," the final standing of the respective clubs in each group will then meet the same positioned club in the other group in a best-in-three series to be known as series "C," which will leave four clubs to enter series "D" in a subsequent best-in-three rounds. The final series between the surviving two clubs will be the best-in-five for the league championship.

Present at the executive meeting were President Knott, J. E. Samain, Vice-President, Harry Rollins, Treasurer and H. Bawden and K. J. Colling, executive members.

"WRESTLING'S MYSTERY MAN"

Patrons of the modern art of muscle-bending have been hearing much about a new wrestling threat, who calls himself The Red Shadow, and who dresses in flaming red tights and a fiery mask over his face. Now this unknown grappler has got into the hair of most promoters until today the cry is "beat the Red Shadow, and get rid of him", even if he is a box office attraction. To beat this six foot three inch giant Promoter Tunney signed Earl McCready, who stands as tall as the masked one and outweighs him by several pounds. If any man is qualified to complete the unmasking it's the powerful McCready. To add to the show's prowess two guaranteed preliminaries are to be featured at the Hume Arena, Wednesday night. Seats are going fast at Cook's Cigar Store. Phone 74 for reservations.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

OVERCOME EARLY LEAD

Ingersoll, — (CP) — In senior inter-county baseball here Saturday, Gault Terriers overcame an early lead by running up eight counters in the fifth inning against pitcher Lampman to win out by the score of 11-6. First-baseman Hammond and shortstop Shrum of the visitors each secured three hits.

AFFILIATE WITH WESTERN GROUP

Guelph — (CP) — The Guelph Maple Leaf Athletic Association has decided to affiliate its soccer group with the Western Football Association but most of the contests for three teams will be localized. One of the teams represents the Netherlands Army units here.

CLUTCH SINGLE WINS

London, Ont., May 31 — (CP) — "Chuck" Hiles' eighth inning clutch single with coach Dun Galbraith on the paths gave London Army a 3-2 victory over Galt Terriers in the opening game of their senior inter-county baseball league season here Saturday night.

OUTFIELDER RECLASSIFIED

Detroit, May 31 — (AP) — Dick Wakefield, rookie outfielder purchased by Detroit Tigers of the University of Michigan campus for a bonus reported at $52,000, has been re-classified by his Chicago draft board into 1-1. the Detroit Free Press said today in a story date-lined from Chicago.

REPLACES SCHMELING AS CHAMP.

Yankees Untangle American League Traffic Over Weekend By Taking Over Leadership

Defeat Cleveland Twice While Senators Lose Twice to Chicago

A'S NOW THIRD

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York Yankees have straightened out the dispute over leadership of the American League and Brooklyn Dodgers will have a chance today to do the same in the American League.

The Dodgers open a four-game series at St. Louis and all they have to do to keep the Redbirds on their roost in second place is get a split.

Yesterday, before the largest crowd of the season, 50,671 paid, the Yankees swept a doubleheader from Cleveland 4-3 and 3-2 to regain the lead as Washington lost twice to Chicago White Sox 5-2 and 5-1.

Spud Chandler scored his fifth victory in the opener at Yankee Stadium, making three hits besides pitching tight ball. Roy Weatherly hit a ninth-inning homer to decide the second game. The double defeat dropped Cleveland to fourth place.

Thurman Tucker led Chicago's attack in both games at Washington. Lefty Lee went the route and scattered six hits in the nightcap. It was the first complete game the sore-armed star had pitched this year.

172,984 Look On

The turnover at the top of the American League was only one of many interesting items as the major leagues put on the first half of their double-barrelled Memorial Day celebration before a total paid attendance of 172,984. All clubs will play double-headers again today.

Philadelphia Athletics swept two games from St. Louis Browns 3-0 and 4-1 and moved into third place in the junior circuit. Don Black, a rookie, just missed a no-hitter in blanking the Browns in the first game. The only blow was a fourth-inning single.

Boston Red Sox downed Detroit twice 3-0 and 5-1 with Dick Newsome pitching the shutout on six hits and Lou Lucier being almost equally effective in the nightcap on seven safeties.

Dodgers Win Two

In the National League Brooklyn battered Cincinnati Reds twice 6-0 and 10-6. Whit Wyatt's soft stuff baffled the Reds in the first game and they made only three hits. They were outslugged in the second game. The Reds used eight pitchers in the two games.

Pittsburgh rocketed from seventh to fourth in the standings by pummeling the Phillies twice 4-3 and 2-1. The latter game went 10 innings and extended Philadelphia's losing streak to six.

The only doubleheader that was divided was at St. Louis, where New York Giants won the first game 7-6 and then lost the second 3-2 as Murry Dickson and George Munger combined in a five-hit pitching show. George Sanders, who hit a two run ninth inning homer in the first game, won the second for the Cards with a two-run double in the eighth.

Hit Two Homers

Bill Nicholson hit two home runs, each with a man on base, to help Paul Derringer and Chicago Cubs beat Boston Braves 5-1. They were the first homers of the season for Chicago. The second game was postponed because of weather after being halted in the third inning.

In the National League Saturday Chicago took the measure of Boston 4-3 by batting home two runs in the 10th and Pittsburgh trimmed the daylights out of Philadelphia 12-4. St. Louis eked out a 5-4 win over New York while Cincinnati won over Brooklyn by the same count.

In the American League that day Detroit took Boston 6-4 and New York stopped Cleveland 9-5. Washington came out on the long end of 7-4 count over Chicago while St. Louis had no difficulty in pinning a 10-2 beating on Philadelphia.

Lachine Scores Win Over St. Regis

Montreal, May 31—(CP)—Lachine scored its second straight win of the Young Quebec Senior Lacrosse Association season last night when they trounced St. Regis Indians 20-8.

Eddie Green and Tommy Angle paced the winners with six goals apiece.

Lachine jumped into an early lead and left little doubt of the outcome after scoring four times in the first 2 1-2 minutes. They were leading 5-1 at the end of the first period and boosted their lead to 12-3 at the half-way mark.

St. Regis made their best bid in the third when they broke even on the six goals scored.

PAY FOR SHACKLING

London (CP) — A resolution proposing that every British or Allied prisoners of war shackled by the Germans should be paid £1,000 ($4,500) compensation by the German government after the war will be moved at a forthcoming conference of the British Legion. It stands in the name of Ilford branch, which urges that provision for the payment should be made in peace terms.

HULL VOLANTS, CANADIENS WIN

Hull, Que., May 31—(CP)—Hull Volants downed Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps 4-2 in the opener of an Interprovincial Baseball League doubleheader here yesterday while Royal Canadiens headed Rockcliffe Air Force 3-2 in the afterpiece.

Wally Driscoll's four-hit pitching enabled Bob Guertin's Volants to take their game and young Armand Charlebois limited Johnny Lalonde's fliers to six well-scattered hits. Driscoll stole the major honors by striking out 16 batters in the first game.

Two celebrated hurlers went down to defeat. Eddie Bush, pitching his first game in Hull was once with Baltimore of the International League and Utica of the Canadian American circuit.

Jack Bennett, Air Force pitcher, was with Cornwall last season and is the son of a one-time bat boy of the New York Yankees.

Salesman (to buyer who had written his name with many flourishes)—You have a fine signature, Mr. So-and-so.

Buyer (proudly) — Yes, I should have. One of my forefathers signed the Declaration of Independence.

Salesman—So? Vell, you ain't got noddings on me. One of my forefathers signed the Ten Commandments.

(Softballers ready to go.)

Confronted with eight teams in their midst, the executive of the Belleville Men's Softball loop convened over the weekend and after careful perusal divided the clubs into two separate groups. As pointed out by President Harry Knott it was practically an impossibility to have all eight clubs in one league and complete a schedule, which would mean 56 games in the event of home and home matches. However, as it is now with four teams in each group, a double schedule will be played at the termination of which all eight teams will be included in a league play-off. The system is quite simple and assures every team of plenty of softball until the middle of July at least. The play-off system brings together clubs in each group in their respective positions versus the same clubs in the other group, i.e., No. 1 team in "A" group plays No. 1 team in "B" and so on down the line. Then ultimate winners play eliminations later.

(How they line-up.)

In group "A" three of last year's teams, Reliance, No. 5 ITS, Stephens-Adamson and a new entry, the Alemite, play, while in group "B" it's Bristol and the Army and Navy Juniors from last year, with the Belleville Foundries and Garrison the newcomers. If all series go the limit the teams will have to play a total of 47 games before Aug. 10th.

In order that as many games as possible can be played doubleheaders will be played each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights, while later on in the play-offs nine inning single games will be played. Twin bill games will be seven innings and the first game must commence at 6.30 p.m. The penalty for tardiness or inability to field a team at the specified time means the offending club will default that game. The league opens with a bargain twin bill Thursday night when Bristol Aircraft meet the Army and Navy Juniors in the curtain-raiser, while No. 5 ITS and Stephens-Adamson clash in the nightcap.

(High-pockets blows hot.)

Big Ralph McCabe blew hot for the Toronto Maple Leafs last Friday when he was credited with a win over the Rochester Red Wings. McCabe went to the mound in the third as a relief pitcher and promptly walked the first batter to fill the bases. Then he blew hot to strike out the next two and make a third pop. He worked six full innings, gave up but three hits, one of the scratchy nature, struck out six and walked only three. For a lad who was purchased by the Leafs for $475. last fall, McCabe looked like a million against the Red Wings. Yesterday at Buffalo he was again called upon after Luke Hamlin had been given a mawling by the Bisons, but the issue was a lost one before McCabe was later taken out for a pinch hitter. Noted for his wildness McCabe settled away against the Red Wings and gave a fine display of relief hurling. It is expected he will go even better if and when the weather warms up.

(Remember when—)

Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles negro boxer, became a three-timer in world championship records when he defeated Barney Ross, welterweight, in New York five years ago tonight. Armstrong was featherweight champion in 1937 and took the lightweight honors in 1938. He retired in 1940 but right now is staging a sensational comeback as a lightweight.

(Who is he?)

What puzzles wrestling fans up and down the countryside is not who The Red Shadow actually is, but just how long he is going to be permitted to intimidate promoters. He shows no respect for opponents, officials or promoters and uses them all the same—namely brutal. However, it is seldom Earl McCready is seriously pushed around and Mister Hood had better be on his good behaviour at the Hume Arena when he meets "Big Earl" here Wednesday night.

(Geography lesson)

During the fighting in North Africa, American troops were warned to be on guard for Nazi parachutists, relates Leo Fischer of the Chicago Herald-American. Eventually, two men were spotted and although they wore the uniform of the U.S. Army, their English wasn't too good.

"What part of the States you fellas from?" asked one Yank.

One said New York, the other Wisconsin.

"What's your favorite sport?"

Both replied "Baseball."

Then the Yank asked, "Did ja hear Connie Mack pitched a shutout against Brooklyn and Tommy Harmon got two homers for the Bums?"

"Yeah," was a nervous reply, "we heard that on the shortwave broadcast."

Result: Two defunct Nazis parachutists.

Kingston Boladromes Wins Eastern Title

Kingston, Ont., May 31—(CP)—Kingston Boladromes, defending champions, defeated Ottawa Capitals by 369 pins here Saturday night in the final meet of the Eastern Ontario Five-Pin Bowling playoffs. Capitals held a lead of 64 pins from a meet in Ottawa May 22, but the gain was wiped out in the first game of the return match Saturday night.

Capitals won the Ottawa City playdowns and Kingston entered the finals by defeating Smith Falls and Brockville in the St. Lawrence District playdowns.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 71

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An abused brainchild of bridge is the shaded suit. The way some players treat that offspring of the genus bridgicus! It is a shame for the neighbors.

A shaded suit means a suit that is not truly biddable. It lacks at least a card or a face of being biddable by correct rule. Such a suit is a fugitive from the the mind of some expert.

A few years back, the trend started toward the bidding of suits that were weak. Too weak. Many players not only adopted the rule. Some wore it to a frazzle.

You do not have to be a sleuth to discover why so many players went for the bidding of weak suits. It gave them excuses for bidding more times than their hands would otherwise warrant.

They are unable to prove what is a biddable suit. They are not sure when a suit is shaded. They bid it only because they like it or because some expert advised it.

How strong must be a suit that you bid? How weak may it be? How does one prove it is biddable or not? A few simple facts will tell you in a way that leaves no doubt.

The first time you bid a new suit, you say it is better than average in your hand. So, a suit that is biddable must contain qualities and quantities that are better than average.

In each suit there are 13 cards, including four faces. Each of the four players is entitled to one-fourth of that. Which are three cards, including one face, in each suit.

An additional card in that suit would make it better than average in length. An additional face in that suit would make it better than average in strength.

Thus, the proof of a biddable suit is right there. It must contain at least four cards with two faces. Examples are Q J 3 2, K J 3 2, K Q 3 2, A J 3 2, A Q 3 2, A K 3 2.

For the biddability of a suit, two smaller cards may take the place of any face. Thus, any suit with only one face must contain at least five cards. Examples are J 5 4 3 2, or better.

You have this hand:

♠K J 8 4
♥8
♦A K Q
♣J 9 8 4 2

Your club suit is biddable Your spade suit is biddable. Your diamond suit lacks one card of being biddable. It is kiddable.

LESSON NO 72

You look like an intelligent person. Else you would not be reading this column. But suppose you were only half as bright as you are. Horse Sense could still teach you bridge quickly.

Let's suppose you are my partner in a bridge game. You are just learning. You would like to have me start you off right with a few snappy tips. Here is what I would tell you.

Pass when you have nothing new to tell me. Tell me how many tricks you hold. Bid the suit you like as trumps. Bid no-trump when you like no suit as trump.

When you bid a suit, count one trick for each ace, each king, each queen, each short card. When you bid no-trump, leave out the short cards. Count only aces, kings, queens.

When I start with an opening bid of one, I tell you my hand holds, among other things, five tricks. I expect to find two tricks in your hand. With not more than two tricks, pass.

With more than two tricks inclusive of two high cards (aces, kings, queens), you should bid something. Then and thereafter, stick to the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Right there is where you might think your worries should begin. You might say to yourself: "Gosh. There are billions of different hands. How could I ever learn what to do with all of them?"

Well, unlax, partner. True, you may have any one of a myriad of hands. But there are only these three kinds of bids you can make: Your suit, my suit, or no suit (no-trump). That's all.

Suppose I start with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠A Q J 6
♥A 9 6 4
♦8 4 3
♣J 2

You have tricks enough for a responding bid. So you bid something. What kind of a bid? Just follow the order in which I have named them. That will tell you.

Some players can do better with judgment? Don't give me that malarky.

Hollywood and HERE

By HYE BOSSIN

So you want to write for the screen?

Don't—until you understand the difficulties involved. There isn't anywhere to learn screen technique but a studio. If you apply for a job in person they'll tell you to go home and get a reputation. Hollywood story departments scan almost all printed matter for possible screen material.

If you mail your story in it will be returned unopened. Studios tremble in fear of lawsuits for stealing stories. How do they buy stories or hire writers? Through agents.

If an agent considers your talents worthy of his representation, he'll try to sell your story. If he sells your story he'll try to get you on for a trial. If he's successful his reward is ten per cent of everything you earn.

Hollywood needs writers now. But you'll have to prove yourself to an agent first—or get stuff into print.

Cinema City sight: Arthur Murray and Groucho Marx skating along with red lights on the heels of their skates. . . . Hollywood super-markets have their advertising written cleverly by authors who sign them like magazine articles. . . . I remember once going to the opening of a market in Hollywood. Searchlights poking about the sky, orchestras and personal appearances of stars opened it. Another such show was put on for a dog cafe, where you had your pooch fed. But the war has wiped out all that nonsense. . . . Lionel Barrymore, who just passed his 65th birthday, was a pal of the most famed heavyweight boxing champion of all time, the late John L. In "Stage Door Canteen" a new star shines above the dozens in the picture, which was made to help canteens in the USA and Canada. She's 22-year-old Cheryl Walker, who has been in films for five years, though her face has never been shown.

Her legs acted for those of Paulette Goddard in the log-rolling scene in "Forest Rangers." When Dorothy Lamour walked barefoot through the jungle in a recent picture, the feet were Cheryl's. Everything about her but her face has helped some star look better. And she has a lovely face, adorned with blue eyes and red hair.

When she got her chance she was earning $25 per week working as an extra in a Preston Sturges production.

"Gone With the Wind," which was first shown four years ago, is back on Broadway and lining them up. . . . There have been so many theatre burglaries of late that managers don't sleep well any more. . . . Though many stars are gone for the duration, it will be quite a while before you miss them on the screen. Hollywood has been working overtime to build up a stock of new features and they will be rationed out carefully in the future. . . . Men and women in the armed services now see the newest films as soon as released. Until now the films were of the same vintage as the ones shown at neighborhood theatres. . . . Proof of the hunger of the public for motion picture entertainment are the requests of several towns that theatres be established in them. It isn't easy. Ottawa ruled that no more theatres can be erected. However, several new theatres have sprung up along the Alaska Road.

Lawn Bowling Banterings

By CLIFF ARGUE

Well, here we are blossoming out again just like this spring flowers, although a little late.

I am not going to comment on the weather, but that has been our pet hate for keeping us off the greens. Ask Charlie Sulman and his afternoon friendly rivals if you want corroboration on that.

It has now been arranged, however, providing that we do not get any more rain on our greens before then, that we will have our official opening Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 p.m.

Our competent Games Chairman, Elgin Ford, and his equally efficient committee have arranged for a mixed trebles tournament to open the season.

It is requested that members of the ladies club kindly get in touch with their games chairman, Mrs. Scott, and make known their entry early so that draw can be made by games committee in advance.

Members of the men's club are requested to notify Elgin Ford of their willingness to take part in the opening game. It is expected that he will hear from every member.

Thursday and Friday evening will be given up to initiation into the game of new and prospective members of both branches of the club. A general invitation is extended to all in the city and vicinity to come up those evenings, when bowls and all assistance and instruction will be willingly extended by our ladies and men members. Just come up and try it, at least once, without any obligation.

The greens are in the best condition they have been in for years, thanks to most able Greens Chairman Ernie Vanner, and our efficient Greens Keeper Dick Leitch.

It must be pointed out, however that, owing to the very considerable rains they have been subjected to, they are somewhat on the soft side. As a result it must be impressed on all that the greatest of care must be exercised in proper delivery of bowls, as carelessness in this respect will nullify the results obtained in diligent early care given the greens. A few dropped, or improperly delivered bowls, can cause such damage to the tender early greens as to make repair or restoration impossible throughout the season.

All members should by now have received a circular issued jointly on behalf of the greens chairman and games chairman.

To Mrs. A. Watkin, president of the ladies' club, and her most capable executive and members at large we, members of the men's club, extend our congratulations and appreciation for the work they have accomplished in reconditioning our club rooms. They just tore everything inside apart, even stripped the wallpaper off the walls, but lo, the next day all was found to be newly papered and painted throughout. They actually did the painting themselves, and papered the sidewalls, and while the plutocrat of decorators, Ernie Vanner, and his assistant, the effervescent Scottie Grant, did the work on ceilings results prove that the women were not outclassed. Is Mrs. Wonnacott listening in?

Regular Monday night mixed jitneys will start on 7th June.

Watch for a startling announcement in the near future.

I understand that no punches will be pulled in afternoon games between Charlie Sulman and Charlie Iley.

456 Nazi Planes Downed in Week Of Bitter Battles

Moscow, May 31. (AP) — Fierce aerial battles continued to predominate in fighting in the Kuban sector of the Russian front today following a week of bitter struggles in which 456 German planes were downed at a loss of 118 to the Russians, front-line dispatches said.

Last week's bag was reported to have brought to 2,069 the total of German planes lost during the month as airmen of both sides struck deep into opposition territory, destroying supplies and communications.

Premier Stalin was reported to be sending some of the most famous air heroes of the Soviet Union into the area northeast of Novorossisk, where the Germans are clinging stubbornly to their last Caucasus bridgehead.

Air battles also have been stepped up over Leningrad on the northern front, but they are of less intensity than those over the Kuban.

(The German communique broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by The Associated Press said that the Russian attacks against the Axis bridgehead in the Kuban had ceased and that there was only minor activity elsewhere along the Russian land front.)

TORONTO SPLITS DOUBLEHEADER DURING WEEKEND

Win and Lose With Royals Saturday and Perform Same Stunt Sunday

STILL ON TOP

(By The Associated Press)

Toronto's playing three consecutive days of doubleheaders twice within a week has shown its effects on the pitching staff of the International League's leaders.

Luke Hamlin, known as the hot potato of the National League during his big time career, now has lost three straight games after setting the Shaughnessy circuit afire at the start with five consecutive victories.

In fact, things got so bad yesterday that Manager Burleigh Grimes sent the venerable Red Kress to the mound. Kress, a major league infielder for many year, recently has been a manager in the American Association and the hair which brought him his nickname long has been absent.

Buffalo Bisons clubbed Kress for six hits in 2 1-3 innings as they trounced the Leafs, 14-6, in the opener. The Leafs however, took the nightcap, 9-3.

In other games yesterday, Baltimore divided with Syracuse, Newark Bears ended a three-game losing streak by taking two from Jersey City and the hapless Rochester Red Wings bowed twice to Montreal Royals.

Split on Saturday

On Saturday the Leafs split a twin bill with Montreal and they are carded for another bargain affair with Rochester today. The Club also broke even in three sets of twin bills on May 2, 23 and 24.

Rochester all but had the decision in the first game stowed away when Rookie pitcher Fred Schmidt lost control of the situation. Leading by a 7-4 score and with two out in the ninth, Schmidt walked George Washburn to start a parade that ended in an 8-7 defeat. Jack Graham's second homer of the game, this one with the bases loaded, was the big blow. Royals also won the second, 5-4.

Tom Delacruz pitched Syracuse Chiefs to a split with the Orioles, taking the nightcap 4-0 while allowing the losers four hits. The Baltimore nine, however, smashed the offerings of four chief hurlers for a 9-8 decision in the opener.

A three-run rally in the eighth gave a Newark a 7-6 decision in the first of the two games with Jersey City and Steve Roser bested Rookie Bob Wells of the Little Giants in the 3-2 aftermath.

Saturday was comparatively quiet in the International League, with Montreal and Toronto splitting a double-header. Montreal took the early game 4-2 but dropped the night fixture 3-2 to the league leaders.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, May 31. — (AP)— If you've been wondering what about the United States football season next fall, what do you suppose the colleges have been doing? . . .. Fordham already has had two games cancelled; at least two others are doubtful and Jack Coffey does not know what to answer when scheduled rivals ask him what to expect of the Rams because the army is just moving in. . . .Bruce Gehrke reports there were several days this spring when he not only took part in Columbia's spring practice but he was it. Top turnout for any one days was six or seven. . . Cornell's Carn Snavely expects to get as much out of navy trainees as he did out of civilian players because Athletics are a definite part of the navy program while the students usually had to sandwich drills in between late classes and dinner-hour jobs.

When Mike Conner, southeastern conference commissioner, asked for reports on how many 17-year-olds would be available next fall, Wilbur Hutsell of Auburn replied: "Mr. Commissioner, we have taken stock of our 17 year olds in the football squad and he says that he would like very much to play football next season".

Monday Matinee

Lew Hanbury, Al Weill's new featherweight who reminds Al of Lou Ambers in his early days, works as a navy machinist in Baltimore until 4.30 every afternoon, then puts in some time at the gym and does his road work at night. . . . Paul Kiester, the New York Post sports editor, is slowly recovering from a recent operation.

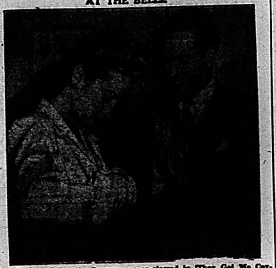
PORT RECOVERY

London (CP)—A new naval section, known as "Port Recovery Parties," has come into being as result of the North African campaign. A recovery party, in which divers were included, quickly cleared Tripoli harbor of wrecks and obstructions, thus facilitating Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's rapid advance.

EXTRA PEP FOR GUNNERS

London (CP)—Anti-aircraft gunners on Britain's coastal front line where "fringe target" attacks may occur any time have to be more than just normally fit. Ordinary Physical Training isn't good enough, so they have a 10-minute pep P.T. designed to quicken the brain and make it work fast.

AT THE BELLE



Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour are co-starred in "They Got Me Covered," featuring beautiful Lenore Aubert, a new Hollywood personality who should have quite a career on the screen. Goldwyn's new comedy-with-thrills is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Man With Two Lives"
(First Belleville Showing)

A strange story of dual existence forms the basis of "Man With Two Lives," the Monogram drama which opened an engagement at the Capitol theatre Sunday midnight.

Edward Norris is starred in the picture, and gives a convincing performance of the man whose personality is suddenly transformed into a new and entirely different one. Norris heads a cast which is especially well chosen, and their performances add greatly to the effectiveness of the picture. Especially good work is done by Addison Richards, Frederick Burton, Mario Dwyer, Edward Keane, Eleanor Lawson and Hugh Sothern.

Altogether, "Man With Two Lives," qualifies as a complete success in the field of pseudo-scientific drama, and is a picture which is at times absorbingly interesting. A part of the credit for this happy result must go to Phil Rosen, whose direction brings out all the drama of the story's situations.

"Doctor Takes a Wife"

What's the doctor . . . man or spouse? She says she didn't even know they were engaged! He says he didn't even know he was lovesick! But when "The Doctor Takes a Wife," watch out for fun-packed fireworks!

It's the tastiest tonic of contagious laughs a doctor ever ordered, this new Columbia comedy starring Loretta Young and Ray Milland at the Capitol theatre as the added hit. He's a heart expert trying to cure himself! She's the man-hating author of books which praise spinsterhood! And "The Doctor Takes a Wife" is a gay, giddy merry-go-round of hectic hilarity!

Others in the laugh-creating cast are Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick, Edmund Gwenn and Georges Metaxa. Alexander Hall directed from a screenplay by George Seaton and Ken Englund.

The Universal News completes the program.

AT THE BELLE

"They Got Me Covered"

Stamping itself right from the side-splitting opening sequence as the funniest thrill-comedy of the year, Samuel Goldwyn's production of "They Got Me Covered" evoked constant roars of laughter Saturday from the audience at the Belle where the Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour vehicle began it's local showings.

The story thread follows the hectic doings of an erratic foreign correspondent who has been discharged for having muffed the story of the German invasion of Russia. Going to Washington to see his girl, he gets a tip on a sensational inside story regarding the underground activities of Axis agents and thinking this will redeem him and get his job back, he goes after it in a big way.

His efforts quickly result in himself, his girl, his informant and his friends all becoming involved in a hilarious complication of troubles with the enemy spies, complications which are funny despite the fact that the danger is real. The ingenious scheme to discredit the young reporter gives rise to much of the film's hilarity, and the surprise moments and the comedy situations chase the danger spots thick and fast throughout the action.

The plot is a natural for the two stars who here turn loose some of their funniest antics to date. They get brilliant assistance from a quintette of players, new-comer Lenore Aubert, Otto Preminger, Edward Ciannelli, Donald Meek, and Philip Ahn, who portray a group of Nazi spies, while Marion Martin plays the part of a show girl who helps in the discrediting process, and Phyllis Ruth, Walter Catlett, John Abott, and Florence Bates stand out in the supporting cast.

David Butler's direction of the RKO Radio release is admirable and gets the most out of the Harry Kurnitz screenplay. As a sure cure for the blues, "They Got Me Covered" is just what the doctor prescribes.

The Belle News of the World, a Walt Disney colour cartoon "Education for Death", and a new edition of "The March of Time"—Men of the Fleet—will also be exhibited.

Series of Quakes Shakes Germany

London, May 31 (CP)—Many homes were destroyed by fire from upset stoves and factories were damaged by falling smokestacks in Southwestern Germany in a series of earthquakes that shook the area on May 28, DNB German news and propaganda agency said in a Berlin broadcast today.

The German broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press, said that in some areas of the Swabian Alps the earthquake was worse than the one which caused widespread damage in 1911.

Violent Deaths Over Weekend Number Sixteen

(By The Canadian Press)

Topped by a railway collision and a drowning tragedy each of which took four lives, Eastern Canada's list of violent deaths during the weekend stood at 16 today. Two men also drowned in separate fatalities, two children suffered fatal burns, a soldier was killed in a highway accident, a woman was asphyxiated, a man died from effects of an electric current and another man apparently shot himself.

Nine of the deaths were in Ontario, four in New Brunswick, two in Prince Edward Island and one in Quebec.

Four Canadian National Railways employees were killed and nine other persons, five of them passengers, were injured Saturday when two C.N.R. trains collided on the main line between Campbellton, N.B. and Upsalquitch, N.B. The dead were members of the crews of a freight train running light from Campbellton to St. Leonard, and a mixed train going in the opposite direction.

Cause Not Known

A railway statement did not make the cause of the accident known but said an investigation was proceeding. The five passengers suffered only light injuries, the statement said. Killed in the wreck were: R. W. Adams, driver, Campbellton; G. Dobson, fireman, Campbellton; Felix Smith, brakeman, Mont Joli, Que., all of the freight extra and J. Fitzgerald, Campbellton, the fireman on the mixed train.

The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Trainor, St. Teresa, P.E.I., suffered fatal burns when fire destroyed their home Sunday while their parents were at church. Both children, Gladys 15, and a five-months-old baby, died in hospital. Two other youngsters escaped.

Found Dead in Garage

Two men drowned in separate accidents near Ottawa. Marcel Levesque, 18, of Hull, Que., died in the Ottawa River Sunday when a canoe upset and Eldon Lahaise, 14, of City View, an Ottawa suburb, lost his life in the Rideau River while bathing.

At Toronto, Miss W. Stalker, Toronto, was found dead in her garage, a victim of carbon monoxide poisoning. A Kitchener man, William Ollette, 48, died in hospital Sunday from burns suffered Saturday when he came in contact with an electric line carrying 2,300 volts. At Hamilton, Ont., Bruce Carr, 60, was found shot to death on the grounds of the Steel Company of Canada plant, a shotgun beside him. Fellow guards said he had been despondent since the death of his wife in a highway accident.

22 1-2 Pound Yellow Pike

Fort Erie, Ont., May 29. (AP)—A 22 1-2-pound yellow pike, believed to be the largest ever caught in this part of the Niagara River, was hooked Tuesday by Pat Noon. Largest yellow pike previously taken from the Niagara here this season was a 4 1-2 pounder caught by Albert Naylor, Victoria Day.

PASSING DREAM

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 28

"But that isn't the end of the story, Temple, because having money isn't the end to anything except perhaps personal wants and needs. You see, I wanted one thing I had never had. Here in Washington I'm a fad. I am amusing, they tell me, and I throw good parties. All of us like to go to parties; so it hasn't been difficult to have some rather important people come to mine. But the thing I always wanted I never had, never achieved perhaps is truer. I wanted the respectability, the certainty, of the kind of life my first husband's family had had and still have. I wanted to have a family and to be a part of family life. I wanted to be normal and respected and well-to-do. I never made the grade, darling.

"The kind of man I wanted never wanted to marry me and the kind I didn't want always wanted to marry me. I've often blamed my hair. That's ridiculous, isn't it? But there's something about a red-headed woman that makes men want to whistle. So I've looked into a great many back yards during all these years and a great many doors have been opened to me and most of the 'No Trespassing' signs have been removed. But not one door, not one sign and the forbidden grass is still the greenest. I don't mean my first husband. I mean the life that went with him, the life I caught a little glimpse of once and never forgot."

"He came to one of my parties here a few years ago. People who have been mad about each other in their twenties should never meet twenty years later. It was sad. He married again, of course and had children. I wanted children, too. He plays around a good bit, but always within the law. But he always goes back to the door that was closed on me."

"I got away from the city block. I saw the world and had two husbands and was left a fortune. But I was a mongrel. Poor Grandpappy—blame it on him that there is something common about me.

"This has the sound of a confession rather than a life, Temple. It isn't. It's a life with a confession in it. I've left a lot of it out that, as the years have passed, has become unimportant to me — places and people, some lovely places and some important people and a few men I thought I was in love with. But of all the lovely places I remember one and an incident that went with it.

"I'll never forget the first day I saw the Bay of Naples and walked beside it, thinking how wonderful it would be to be terribly in love with someone in Italy in the spring. When I turned around, I saw my husband coming towards me. He was old and crippled with arthritis. He had to use a cane and his hands were so crippled he dropped things. I earned everything he left me. That's why I have a reputation for being stingy. I earned it."

Paula reached for her cigarettes again and lighted one after Temple had silently refused one.

"What happened to my family?" Paula asked. "You being you would wonder about them. Well, my mother died when I was in Paris. My father wrote me. He did not say of what she had died. I understood. I understood because one who has lived her kind of life does not necessarily contract a disease and die of it. One goes to bed one night and doesn't get up again. It is as though the body says 'I'm tired of it all and I don't want to get up any more. I want to rest. So I quit.'

"I loved her, but not as you love your mother, Temple. You love a person with whom you have shared things. My mother had to share herself with six children and do all the work. One wants sweet memories of one's mother. But all I can remember of mine is her shouting at me 'Paula, go wash your face. Paula, set the table. Paula help Joey put on his clothes and help him with his lessons. Paula, go to the store and hurry.' Do this and do that. It was always bedlam.

"And my father. He thought more about the weather than about anything else. In the winter it was too cold for house painting and in the summer it was too hot. And it always rained at the wrong time. I was able to grant his life's ambition: to go into a home for the aged where never again would he hear babies crying in the night or worry about the weather again, come what may.

"And the rest of them? The same plain food and adequate clothes and narrow, airless little houses and children growing up on the streets. The only time I ever hear from them is when they need money. Having a rich sister, you see, they are not as careful as their neighbours about saving for the rainy day.

"Listen, baby, no one person is the whole of your life. He is only a part. Just as a child is only a part of a woman's life. She lives a third of her life without a child, a third with it and the last third without it.

"You wanted to finish college, didn't you, Temple? Well, you may. I'll see you through."

Temple moved against the pillows.

"Do you think I can be a school girl again?" She shook her head. "You're wonderful to offer it to me, but I can't go back to school now. I don't want to go back to any of the old things. I want to be in on the new things. I'm a girl. I can't enlist and they won't draft me. But I'm young and strong and there must be something I can do."

Paula looked at her with bright eyes for a few moments before she spoke again. "Of course there is, dear. There's a place for everybody. Women can be darned nuisances, you know, in places where they don't belong. Some of the women I know, for instance, who lie awake at night desgining uniforms that will be becoming to their faces and figures. No wonder the men laugh at us. The silly women busybodies who go around saluting each other! The women rushing madly about crying about doing 'their bit' while they neglect their husbands and children and home. They should be home. There are enough women like you and me. I am glad to hear you speak of the things to be done rather than the things that have been done to you."

"Sometimes I still can't believe it."

"I know."

"It seems such a waste."

"It is."

"You don't know what to say to me about Jud, do you?"

"Lost for words? Even I? Yes, you're right, darling. That great perhaps of silence leaves even me speechless. It's so—so final. You can't argue about it. Hereafter a boy who has lived and walked with you and loved you will exist only in your mind and in the minds of the few people who will remember him. He didn't live in vain, Temple. There are few of us who don't leave a good mark somewhere, a mark that isn't erased.

"Are people giving you advice? How we love to give advice! Now here I go. . . Why don't you go home for a few weeks? Then come back. I want you to come back. I think I'll be able to find something for you, something new and interesting."

Temple said, "I can't go until Thalia Santos comes. She is the daughter of the woman with whom I stayed when I was in Florida. She knows what happened to Jud, how it happened—everything."

"How feminine you are, darling. You must know the gruesome details. All women are like that. They have to know how and why." Leaning forward, she patted Temple's hand affectionately. "All right. But you will go home after you've seen her, won't you? And you'll come back?"

Temple nodded. It was strange that her future had to be decided in Washington after all.

She said, "I'll come back, Paula, the things I wanted two years ago I don't want now. You've offered them to me and I don't want them. Did I thank you?"

Paula smiled. "I think you did—after a fashion. And the first time in my life I ever offered to give away my money, it was turned down. I can't even give the darned stuff to you! Well, goodbye baby, and keep in touch with me."

Later Abby came in. She stood in the doorway and rested her head against the door.

"I saw Mrs. Wayne leave."

"Yes. How is it? Your radio is on."

"It's bad. The Japs are like locusts. They seem to come out of the ground. You drive them from one place and they spring up at another. One day a great swarm of them will come over like the locusts and pick everything clean and level it to the ground. Are you feeling better, Temple?"

Little Benny's Note Book

We went for a Sunday ride in the car yesterday on account of pop having enough gas saved up, Puds Simkins going too on account of being around when we started, and we were riding along and ma was admiring the trees and flowers out loud and me and Puds argued about which one would get promoted the highest and quickest if we were both fighting in the war and ma made us stop on account of claiming there was enough real war talk without making any up, and all of a sudden ma said, Oh William here's Bideawee Cemetery, it's said to be one of the oldest and most beautiful in the country, let's stop and walk through the grounds.

What's the hurry? pop said. I'd rather wait a while and let some deserving undertaker turn an honest penny by driving me through, he said, and ma said, Such a sentiment for land sakes.

And we all got out and started to walk through the cemetery, ma reading what it said on some of the gravestones, saying, Look at this one, William, it's so old you can hardly make it out, isn't this quaint. Here lies Amanda Fife, Known to all as a loving wife.

I know what I'm going to have on my toomstone, Puds said. I'm going to have, Here lies General Simkins, Eskwire, He was right in the way when the foe said Fire, and I said, Then you can have yours right next store to mine, because mine's going to say, Here lies Admiral Benny Potts, Who stopped one too many of the enemy's shots.

Oh my goodness now that will do, ma said, and pop said, I warned you, my dear, I told you there's a time and a place for everything, and this may be the place but I still insist it's not the time. Let's go, he said.

Which we did.

Voting-by-Proxy Forms Not Yet In Great Britain

London, May 31 — (CP) — Proxy forms through which Ontario Service Men Overseas may designate representatives to vote for them in the prospective provincial election have not yet arrived in London, G. H. Ward, who is acting as election agent here, said today.

The task of distributing the forms will begin immediately on their arrival—expected this week, Mr. Ward said—but until they reach here the method of placing them in the hands of Ontario voters in the services, and collecting them thereafter, will not be decided on.

The voting-by-proxy provision for Ontario service-men outside the province was enacted by the legislature in 1942. Under it any member of the services, whether or not he is 21 years old, may have a vote cast for him, provided he had lived in Canada three months and in Ontario 30 days at the time of enlistments.

In Ontario Camps

Service personnel in camp in Ontario will vote directly in polling booths set up in the camps under special returning officers.

Premier Nixon, who succeeded to government leadership early this month, last week expressed dissatisfaction that proxies had not been sent overseas earlier.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative Party Leader, has criticized the scheme. Last Thursday, speaking to a constituency meeting, he called for a special session of the legislature to repeal the act, which he said "gives no opportunity to the man and woman in uniform to control their vote." He favored substitution of a method that would give service personnel the right to vote directly, in a ballot-box, as was done in the 1940 federal election.

Two Trainees Killed in Crash North of Trenton

Two students from the R.C.A.F. Station at Trenton, were killed, when their Harvard training plane crashed, fifteen miles north of the Trenton Station on Friday afternoon. The next of kin have been notified but the names of the fliers have been withheld by the authorities at Trenton.

This afternoon the funeral with full military honors was held, the body of one of the victims being sent to his home, while the other was buried in the R.C.A.F. Cemetery near the Air Station. The authorities refused to give any details of the crash or the names of the fliers involved.

BOMBS START NUMEROUS FIRES

13 Tons Dropped on Jap Dromes in Wewak, New Guinea, Area

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 31 —(CP)— Thirteen tons of bombs dropped on Japanese airdromes in the Wewak, New Guinea, region Sunday, set off explosions that continued for 10 minutes and started numerous fires in fuel dumps and airplane dispersal areas.

The raid, against the Boram and Wewak airdromes, was made by heavy bombers just before dawn.

It was the second heavy attack in that area in three days. Last Friday 19 tons of explosives were loosed on these same airdromes and on nearby Dagua.

White-Collar Man Explains

(By Edmund J. Keifer, in the Buffalo Courier-Express)

"What is a white-collar man, daddy?" asked little Euthanasia, for no reason at all, of her father, a white collar man who had seen better laundered days.

"A white-collar man," answered her father, weighing his words carefully on a wobbly scale of mental deduction, "is—well, a man who now wears only colored collars because he cannot afford a fresh white one daily.

"You probably will want to enlarge on that," said little Euthanasia. "After all, it isn't logical to define a thing in its own terms."

"Okay, Euthie," responded her father, not to be outsmarted by a $350 dependent. "A white-collar man is an economic serf, misnamed in terms of elegance, because he is not occupationally dressed for the part of making ends meet—except in the matter of tearing his hair out."

"You interest me strangely," conceded his daughter, as most other men she knew were gone off to war.

More or less encouraged, her father went on: "A white-collar man is one who is frozen between the rising cost of living and the ever declining value of the wages of grinning and bearing. You can tell a so-called white-collar man by his discolored saw-edge collar, tattered shirt front, elbow-patched suit, shoestring necktie, battered old hat, pre-war topcoat, twice-soled shoes, open-tipped gloves and faded muffler."

"Ah, yes, his mispatched, much mended and re-assembled underwear," sighed her father. "This should specially be mentioned as the only thing the white-collar man has left to keep body and soul together."

"Would you go as far as to say that a white-collar man is a sort of circumstantially determined bum?" ventured Euthanasia, studying her father as if she were an investigator for a credit association.

"I would go further than that," said her genteel parent, grimly but not unkindly. "I would go as far as to say that politically controlled inflation has made a bum out of me. And now, Euthie, will you be so good as to take a run-out powder while I read what it says here about siphoning off my surplus purchasing powers?"

Holy Name Society Meets

Marmora.— The regular monthly meeting of the Marmora Holy Name Society was held on Thursday evening, May 27. Mr. James Black presided over a fair attendance. Rev. Father Farrell opened the meeting with the usual prayers. It was decided to have a Requiem Mass said on or about June 14 for two deceased members, who died on Active Service, namely Vincent Callery of the R.C.A.F. and Charles Brawley of the Merchant Marine. Father Farrell gave a splendid talk on matters of especial interest to the Society and urged all to try to increase the active membership. Vincent Lynch read a timely paper on "Mary, the Mother of God", which was much enjoyed. James Black, the president, then treated the members to a piece of poetry entitled "Rosary Time in Ireland". Tom Brady concluded the program with a splendid reading recounting the persecution of both Catholics and Protestants in Hitler's Germany. The meeting then adjourned.

Piano Recital

The music pupils of Mrs. Hertel Rennie held a piano recital in Marmora Public School on Friday evening. The following pupils took part —Patricia Clairmont, Helen Nayler, Patricia Lynch, Harold Barlow, Shirley Rennie, Anne Lavender, Patricia Brady, Doris Hannah, Mary Shannon, Iris Hannah, Betty Pritchard, Betty Bailey, Betty Grant, Joyce Potts and Audrey Burwash. Owing to illness Ivan Lavender and Jean Elliott were absent. A collection was taken realizing $15.90 which was voted by the children to the I.O.D.E. Ditty Bag fund.

Thomas E. Pritchard Elected President

Thomas E. Pritchard was elected for a third term as president of Marmora Branch of the Canadian Legion at a meeting held in the Legion Room on Thursday. A successful year's work was reported by Comrade J. W. Hickey, in giving his report as Secretary-Treasurer. The newly elected officers are:—

President—T. E. Pritchard.
1st Vice President—W. Mumby.
2nd Vice President—W. M. Regan.

GERMAN RAIDERS KILL 18 CHILDREN IN PARISH CHURCH

Other Towns in South, Southeast England Hit and Casualties Reported

BURIED IN DEBRIS

London, May 31 — (CP) — A six-foot carving of the crucifixion still hung today over a pile of rubble that was the Parish Church of a southwest England town until German raiders wrecked it Sunday, killing at least 18 children and three Sunday School teachers.

The crucifix was suspended from an archway which, besides the steeple, was the only part of the building left standing.

While rescue workers still dug in debris in search of other victims, the German radio broadcast a communique on the raid which said:—"Fast German bombers raided harbor towns on the English south and southeast coast and dropping bombs of heavy calibre on installations of military importance."

Besides the dead so far counted, 14 children were seriously injured and 10 slightly hurt. It was uncertain how many children and teachers are missing.

In other sections of the town a number of men, women and children were killed or injured as bombs from 15 Focke-Wulf raiders crashed down in the town's worst raid.

Not One in Church Escaped

Not one of those in the church—mostly children and teachers gathered for Sunday School classes — escaped death or injury.

Probably the saddest father in the town is Frank Perrott. His 12-year-old twins, Michael and Mary, went to the service dressed in their best clothes. Last night he saw Mary's body brought out of the wreckage. He was still searching hospitals and the ruins for Michael.

"I saw the bomb hit the church from my own house," said Perrott. "It must have fallen near the altar and the whole building went up."

If Michael is dead, Perrott has only one child left. One son was attending a meeting in Exeter. Otherwise he would have been in the church too, because with Michael, he was a choir boy.

The Sunday School register was buried in debris which hindered the task of identification as parents and friends clawed their way thru the rubble, some of them working barehanded, to take out little bodies.

The hardest worker was the Vicar who carried on rescue work until after midnight.

Nazis Make Claim Air Patrol Sinks Allied Freighter

New York, May 31 — (AP) — German aircraft on long-distance patrol over the Atlantic were claimed by the Nazi High Command today to have sunk a 4,000-ton Allied freighter and destroyed a four-engined British bomber in aerial combat.

The claims, unsupported by Allied announcements, were made in a communique broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press.

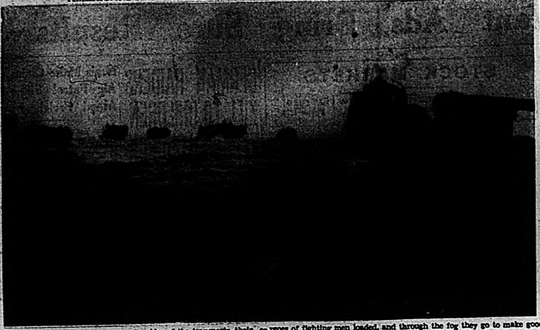
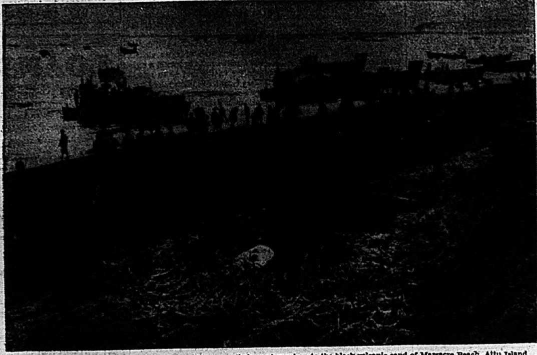
AMERICANS SLIP THROUGH FOG TO ATTACK JAPS ON ATTU ISLAND



Landing boats have been put over the sides of the transports, their cargoes of fighting men loaded, and through the fog they go to make good landing on a beach of Jap-held Attu Island. Searchlight of an accompanying destroyer cuts through the fog.



Landing boats pour hundreds of American soldiers and their equipment on to the black volcanic sand of Massacre Beach, Attu Island

Keeping Track of Our Sailors

25,000 of the British Navy Sail With Merchant Ships as Gunners — Card Index Maintained in London — Any Man Can be Reached in Few Hours.

(By J. A. McWhinnie in "Britain" Magazine)

From the windows of their eighth floor office, the clerks whose duty it is to maintain the card index, that essential part of the D.E.M.S. (Defensively Equipped Merchant Ships), can gaze over the roofs of the whole of London.

But their work takes them far beyond the River Thames, which flows within a few minutes' walk of their office. Mentally they travel in a single day from the frozen wastes of the Arctic to the blistering heat of tropical seas. Day by day they follow British convoys as far north as Murmansk, as far south as Cape Town, east to India and Australia, west to Iceland, Canada, the United States and South America.

The clerks, of whom the large majority are girls, are responsible for up-to-the-minute news and details of fifteen thousand naval gunners and ten thousand soldiers of the Maritime Regiment who sail with the British freighters, manning the defensive guns wherever the enemy may show up. These men are the lone wolves of the oceans, sailing thousands of miles away from their admirals and generals, and track must be kept of them. That's the job of the people in the eighth floor London office.

In thirty seconds any one of those D.E.M.S. girls can tell you where A.B. Bloggins is at any time. Their vast card-index system, which stretches round the world, indicates whether A.B. Snooks has recovered from his operation, to which new freighter Petty Officer Smith has been transferred, what successes Marine Jones has had against enemy aircraft and why Gunner Williams had been taken out of his ship.

How System Works

The system works like this: Wherever British steamers sail there are D.E.M.S. naval officers or officials waiting to meet the ships and collect reports about the D.E.M.S. men during the trip. Any changes are signalled back to Britain, to that eighth floor office, and the man's personal card is marked accordingly.

When a D.E.M.S. man leaves a ship, the place and date of his leaving are entered on his card. His conduct throughout each trip is indicated, and reported by the merchant navy captain under whom he serves.

Records of ship movements are given in a secret list published daily. Then, in addition to a filing system of twenty-five thousand D.E.M.S. personnel, there is a ship index. In a moment it is possible to look up S. S. Anonymous and discover how many D.E.M.S. personnel she carries, who they are, and how many changes there have been.

Suppose you want to discover the whereabouts of Smith. At D.E.M.S. headquarters they look up first his name and the latest news of his ship. There is an immediate double-check on looking up the ship's index. The daily secret list indicates where that particular ship is, either sailing or in port. If she is at sea there will be an indication when she is likely to sail into port and where. In any special emergency a signal could be sent to the man through his ship.

Navy Staff Busy

Meanwhile, what might be an overwhelming mix-up over pay is looked after by the naval staff, including 250 W.R.N.S. in H.M.S. President III, a naval shore establishment in the Home Counties. Here a duplicate of the London card index is maintained—it is far too precious to risk being bombed without such a duplicate being kept elsewhere—and here they tussle with the pay problems of 25,000 men scattered over the world's oceans.

To a certain extent the difficulty is overcome by the masters of the merchant ships being authorized to pay the naval or maritime regiment gunners and to reclaim later from the Admiralty. But a vast bookkeeping system is nevertheless necessary.

In a matter of minutes these two establishments can tell the position about D.E.M.S. men the moment it is announced that a certain freighter has been sunk. They know how many were on board, their names, how much pay is due to them—and then signals are awaited for indications of survivors.

They know it all in that eighth floor London office. Day and night, whatever is happening to the freighters at sea—bringing down enemy aircraft, being bombed themselves, fighting U-boats, or, if they are unlucky, being torpedoed—these girls' minds are out on oceans with the men they never see.

There is never a day during which less than two thousand ships are on the high seas, thousands more loading, unloading or being repaired in port. A pause in the card-indexing could create a muddle in which some lone wolves of the oceans might be temporarily "mislaid." To prevent that the work of these card-index detectives goes on.

RESCUED AFTER 39 DAYS ADRIFT

Gaunt and showing plainly that it was no picnic, two of the four survivors of a torpedoed British ship rescued by a U. S. navy patrol plane after they had been 39 days on a raft in shark-infested waters of the Atlantic are shown in their hospital beds at an American base. They are exhibiting remains of the hard-tack rations that kept them alive until found. The men were rescued by the bomber, which was on a routine patrol flight when the raft was spotted.

RUSSIAN GENERAL DIES

Moscow, May 31 (AP) — Red Star announced yesterday the death of Lt.-Gen. Fedor Kharitonov, 44, a key general in the Rostov campaign and one of the high officers to re-enter that Don River port triumphantly last February 14 after it was liberated from the Germons for the second time.

EXPEDITION TO AFRICA

London, (CP)—If British railway trains sometimes are late in it is because war traffic comes first. The allied movement to North Africa, for instance, involved the moving to ports nearly 200,000 men, more than 20,000 vehicles and 240,000 tons of stores.

5,000 MILES AND STOLEN

London, (CP) — Major H. C. Stamp went through two years of desert fighting, bombings and flights with paratroops. Always he had with him his kit, through five tousand miles of travelling. Then he brought it to London. Five minutes after he arrived here, it was stolen.

SHELTER IN PUBS

Nottingham, England (CP) — Licencing authorities here have ruled that despite any shortage of supples, licensed houses must be kept open for the convenience of the public. They'll provide shelter against inclement weather, if nothing else.

What War Means To 'Sneak-Raid' Coast

(A Reporter for The London Daily Mail visits Brighton on the South Coast of England)

There is now a Bofors gun on every stretch of well-known promenade along this sneak-raid coast. Brighton is in the middle of it all. To the east or to the west they get a warning, almost every day.

The sneak-raiders, which have skimmed over the sea at zero height, come roaring in over the roofs of the hotels and boarding houses to rake the shopping streets with cannon fire and drop bombs that bounce 100 yards or more from one road to another.

Close by the beaches where the fishermen used to mend their nets when the sea was rough, and shout "Any more for the Skylark?" when it was calm, you can watch the Bofors crews in action and get as close to the war as a civilian can.

General Sir Frederick Pile — who, after touring this coast, has ordered still more guns and revealed that radiolocation has been improved—has told the story of the sneak-coast gunners who have been the star attraction for adults and children in these towns since the Skylark went to Dunkirk.

The gunners, said Sir Frederick, were always at their posts. Sometimes they had only three or four seconds' firing time.

Mobile Bofors guns are planted every few hundred yards, and between them are lights A.A. guns, some of them manned by only two.

On the rooftops behind are other guns. Side-street sentries have their Brens.

Often they all blaze away together.

• •

When they do, the people on the front don't worry. A stray visitor may seek shelter, but the residents sit tight and watch it all.

Residents only hurry away when they are back in the shopping streets, which offer no clear view of the area and the sky— where they can't see what is going on, and where the streets may at any minute be raked with cannon-fire.

Down on the front the Bofors crews provide the most interesting show. This is the spectacle from one of the promenade seats on almost any day:

A coast convoy goes past with the ships protected by barrage balloons. Aircraft go ripping to and fro. Through a telescope can be seen the rescue floats—most of them R.A.F. floats, but some of them made in Germany—they leave them there because our men can use them too.

Sometimes, when the Americans have been out, the Flying Fortresses can be seen coming back so high in the fleecy clouds that they look like tiny silver fish in an aquarium.

The Bofors men swing their guns to the right and to the left, covering every plane that comes in low from dawn till dark. Every time they hear an airplane engine roar —sometimes they spot it through the glasses first—they swing the gun and keep the plane covered until it can be recognized as one of ours.

• •

Sitting there on the promenade seats during an alert, the civilians could see the gunners, one day dazzled by sunshine and another day hindered by cloud.

The gunners' work must have been exacting and nerve-racking, because when the alert ended the men would sometimes pitch aside their tin hats, light cigarettes, and inhale as men who have just been subjected to great strain might do.

Sir Frederick saw what the Anti-Aircraft Command is doing to stop the raiders. What happens when they get through has never been really told. Reports say half a dozen raiders attacked a south coast town, two were shot down, there were a number of casualties, material damage was slight.

In these little towns—when the visitors have been away for two or three years most of the people left behind know one another — the air raid casualties have a more personal meaning.

After every raid names of the casualties go up outside the town hall, and soon the residents know that so-and-so has lost his wife or that so-and-so not known to them, but a friend of the people next door—was killed as well.

The casualties here are not calculated in numbers of people killed and wounded, but of friends and friends of friends who are dead or hurt.

• •

An ex-mayoress was killed when a bomb hit her house. So was her housekeeper, a married woman.

The ex-mayor, away for the day, escaped. But the housekeeper's husband, working on a lorry five miles away, was dead with a bullet through the heart at the same moment as his wife was killed by the bomb.

In a street near the front a woman was recovering from a long illness. The doctor had just been to see her.

"Yes," he said, "you are very much better, and will be able to get up and go out in a day or two."

The doctor had just left the room when a cannon-shell came through the window and killed her.

In the same town a grandmother took the baby out for a walk. It was a first baby, and the father and mother, who had been married for nine years, had always longed for a child.

But grandmother escaped unhurt to go back home alone and say that the child had been killed.

"It seems hard," said the neighbors, "when they wanted a child so much and other people have five and six that never get hurt."

There are stories like that behind every sneak-raid report. That is why people all along the coast are so pleased that General Pile, ready, is sending more now that who has sent so many guns already he has been to see for himself.

A PATENT SIGN

Oakland, Calif., May 31 (AP) — All she wanted was tooth powder. So when the customer found the can contained dust, she returned it and got her money back. The store manager and Patrolman Ross Feliz examined the can and found emery dust and a tiny envelope. Inside the envelope were gold fillings worth $13.

Grain Club Elects Officers

Marmora — The boys of the Marmora District have again organized a Marmora Grain Club. This club is sponsored by the Marmora Agricultural Society, Ontario Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Production Service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The objects of the club are to demonstrate the value of good seed, the practice of good culture methods and disease control and also to focus the attention of the club member on production costs.

The plots will be scored in the field and each Agricultural Society Fair in the fall.

The officers and members of the Marmora Grain Club are as follows: Club leader, H. W. Sabine; president, Cecil Bell; vice-president, Mickey Maloney; secretary, Graham Bell.

Foggia Airdrome Twice Battered

Cairo, May 31 (AP) — Foggia airdrome, 80 miles northeast of Naples, was bombed yesterday for the second time in a week by a strong force of United States heavy bombers.

A Middle East air communique said the daylight attack was made without any loss to the raiding formation.

"A number of aircraft on the ground, including one of six engines, was destroyed and fuel dumps were set on fire," the bulletin said.

Last week's raid, on Friday, started fires in hangars, and destroyed and damaged plants on the ground.

In yesterday's raid, "hangars, barracks and living quarters sustained many direct hits and buildings were left on fire," the war bulletin said.

English Officer's Haven in Cyprus

(By Lt.-Col. Stanley Casson in "London Calling.")

About six years ago I decided that I would acquire for my own private and personal possession a plot of land somewhere in the Mediterranean where in the cold and frosty English winter I could go and warm myself in the sun, well prepared against the advance of age and the assaults of the elements. I turned to Cyprus.

Here, I remembered, lay a quiet and beautiful island, decently but not too remotely removed from the turmoils of mainland life, yet not so small as to be hopelessly insular in its outlook and mode of life. I remembered too, that Cyprus had, in fact, escaped the major ravages of almost all warfare for a period of many hundred years.

In modern times Cyprus had escaped the Balkan wars of 1912-13, had been a haven of rest of soldiers in the war of 1914-'18, and showed every sign of being not too deeply involved in any subsequent war. So I bought my patch of land—a humble two acres—and planted orange trees upon it.

Some of my friends in 1938 and after shook their heads and said: "Why, look at Mussolini! He will be after Cyprus."

I laughed at them, I remember. "If that is my only risk," I replied, "I'll take it with my eyes open. That is not a risk to take seriously."

Later, when I was serving in the Middle East and Crete fell, my friends again shook their heads. . . . "Your oranges are as good as picked," they said. "Wait and see," I replied. 'No German and no Italian can take Cyprus, and no other enemy exists. I shall eat my oranges yet—and send you the pips."

For Cyprus is so singularly placed in the Mediterranean that neither Germany nor Italy can reach it without taking fearful risks. And Germans and Italians do not take risks. They only bet on certainties.

So one day, after the war I shall visit my oranges and perhaps I shall get the nearest village builder to make me a small house in the true Cypriot tradition, with cool white rooms and gothic doorways. And I shall plant some of those exquisite Cypriot flowering shrubs round it so that in the early summer it is ablaze with bougainvillea and roses. And away in the west, behind me, I shall see that needle or rock on which stands Castle Hilarion, and to the east the purple sea.
